Second, there has been duplicate calculation. For example, if a radio receiver worth 100 yuan has been produced, the output value should be 100 yuan. However, in calculating the total industrial output value of the state, the value of the receiver is taken to be more than 100 yuan or even 200 yuan. This is because the value of the components of the radio receiver, such as transisters and loudspeakers, was already included when the output value of the factories that produce the components was calculated, but when the output value of the factory that assembled this radio receiver was calculated, the value of these components was not deducted. This caused the output value of some industries to be inflated by at least 20 percent.

Third, some products are completely devoid of any value, but have been included in calculating the total output value. Industrial production in the mainland is carried out in a a seriously blind manner and many products have become stockpiled because they are unmarketable. According to statistics, more than 20 million tons of steel products and more than billions of yuan of mechancial and electric products are now stockpiled throughout the country. Some of these products have been regarded as scrap. There are also many light industrial products stockpiled. For example, some of the ceramic products produced for export in 1965 are still in storerooms.

Besides, sometimes the CCP is particular about "political impact" and neglects economic results. At the beginning of last year, there was a loud cry raised about putting economic results first. As a result, the rate of increase in industry for the first 9 months was only about 1 percent. In October, the CCP suddenly shifted and stressed "political impact." As a result, the output value jumped by 3 percent in the last quarter and shot the annual rate of increase to 4 percent. This arbitrary practice in violation of economic laws inevitably brought about the following serious bad results:

The products of many areas and many enterprises are unmarketable and are produced only for inflating the figures about value, the result being a large number of products becoming dead stock and a lack of working capital resulting from slow turnover. Statistics show that average turnover in an enterprise was only two times, a figure much lower than the international average.

Cost accounting and the serious waste of materials and labor are neglected. More than one-third of the state-owned enterprises in the country suffered losses and the amounts of losses some provinces and municipalities suffered were rising year by year.

Excessive energy is consumed. The mainland on average turned out 50 percent less products than Japan while consuming the same amount of energy.

CHINA SAID FACING 'SERIOUS INFLATION CRISIS'

HK250432 Hong Kong MING PAO in Chinese 25 Jun 82 p 6

[Special dispatch from Beijing: "Mainland Facing Inflation Crisis"]

[Text] The State Council issued a circular in mid-May on withdrawing currency from circulation, which put forward five demands to the governments at all levels and the departments concerned: 1) Expand the withdrawal of currency from circulation. 2) Control the offering of credit facilities. 3) Strengthen control over credits and final accounting in the procurement of agricultural and sideline products. 4) Do a good job in organizing urban and rural savings. 5) Strengthen controls over bonuses. That the CCP has adopted these measures reflects the current situation in which currency in circulation greatly exceeds commodity supplies, it is impossible to withdraw the currency in circulation, and the country faces a serious inflation crisis.

According to the analysis of economic experts, the CCP has continually increased currency in circulation in the past 3 years, for three reasons: 1) Since production in agriculture and light industry has risen relatively fast, the scale of commodity circulation has expanded, and so it was necessary to correspondingly increase currency in circulation. 2) Since the rural areas have instituted various types of production responsibility systems and the urban and rural collective and individual economy has been revised and developed, the number of economic units and the number of links that are conserving cash have greatly increased in the urban and rural areas. 3) Since the numbers of employed people in the urban and rural areas have increased, the reserve funds of units and individuals have grown and the amount of currency in circulation has increased.

They pointed out that viewing the situation as a whole, there is now too much currency in circulation, and the proportion between currency in circulation and commodity supply has not reached a normal level; hence the inflation crisis exists. If we continue to put too much currency into circulation, without correspondingly increasing commodity supplies, it will be difficult to maintain "basic stability" in market prices, and it will also be impossible to consolidate the fruits of economic readjustment.

The economic experts are opposed to taking measures similar to those of the difficult period in the 1960's, when the methods applied were those of squeezing the capital supply and consumption in order to withdraw much currency from circulation, because such a move is bound to stifle the economy and affect industrial production and economic readjustment. They stressed that the imbalances in Communist China's economy and the excessive amount of currency in circulation were caused by many years of leftist errors, and a process has to be undergone in order to return to normal; this is not something that can be accomplished in 1 of 2 years. It is precisely for this reason that, although there is at present too much currency in circulation, exceeding the requirements of commodity circulation, it is not possible to simply adopt the measure of squeezing capital and consumption, and cutting back production in order to withdraw a large amount of currency from circulation. Instead, it is necessary, within the scope of the national economic and credit plans, to increase loans to the maximum extent in order to support production and construction, especially the production of daily-use consumer goods, and increase output of brand products that sell well.

It is also necessary to increase production of rural construction materials and materials for agricultural production needed by the peasants, and to promote the readjustment of the service orientation of heavy industry, and it is necessary to support the rural areas in developing grain production and diversification, so as to provide raw materials for developing the light and textile industries and supply more commodities for the markets.

Financial and economic expert Yu Guantao has published an article proposing a scheme for selling gold, to withdraw currency. He said: Apart from using it to replenish the state gold reserves, a portion of China's annual gold production can be used for domestic sale, so as to withdraw currency from circulation. He holds that the domestic gold price should be rationally readjusted according to the foreign exchange rate, and should be close to the international price. Readjusting the gold price is also an effective way to block the smuggling and outflow of gold.

He says: By selling gold on the home market, including gold coins and jewelry, we can both enrich the people's life and also sweep up the surplus wealth among the people. We can both provide the people with a method of savings and also turn it into an effective way of recouping the budget deficit, withdrawing currency from circulation, and holding down prices.

He points out, in conclusion, that if we sell gold on the domestic market, the gold will be stored by the people and remain in the country, and it can be mobilized for use by the whole country when necessary. This is a second national gold reserve.

HONG KONG EXPORTS TO PRC INCREASE BY BIG MARGIN

HK160125 Hong Kong HONG KONG STANDARD in English 16 Jul 82 Business Standard

[Excerpt] Domestic exports to China continued to grow at breakneck speed in the January to May period this year at 61 percent over the same time last year to $1.52 billion, according to latest figures on Hong Kong's external trade.

China is a major buyer of consumer electronics, providing a timely outlet for those local manufactures of transistor radios and tape recorders who have yet to upgrade their assembly lines, analysts with the Hong Kong Bank say.

Government figures show significant growth in exports of telecommunications and sound recording equipment, as well as textiles, to China.

NONALIGNED MEETING CLOSES; COMMUNIQUE ADOPTED

[Text] Nicosia, July 17(XINHUA) -- The extraordinary ministerial meeting of the Non-Aligned Coordinating Bureau wound up its discussions and closed here this evening.

The meeting decided to send a committee to Beirut on a fact-finding mission and discuss with the Lebanese Government and the P.L.O. to determine measures of concrete support and assistance to the P.L.O. and the Palestinian people. The committee will also visit the capitals of the permanent and other members of the Security Council to explain the position of the Non-Aligned Movement on the present situation in Lebanon. Then it will prepare a full and comprehensive recommendation on the problem to be submitted to the forthcoming seventh summit of the movement.

A final communique adopted this evening condemns the Israeli invasion of Lebanon as a continuation of the policy to expand Israeli territory at the expense of its Arab neighbours and to exterminate the Palestinian people. The Israeli aggression, it says, violates the basic norms of international law and the U.N. Charter and constitutes one of the most ignominious pages in the history of humanity.

It calls on all member states of the movement and all other countries to sever diplomatic, economic, cultural and other relations with Israel. It calls on all countries to refrain from giving Israel any military or material support which would allow it to persist in its aggressive and expansionist policy.

The communique condemns the misuse of the veto by the United States which impeded the Security Council from adopting an unanimous resolution against Israel. It welcomes the "positive and encouraging attitude" taken by a number of countries of Western Europe in relation to the latest developments in Lebanon.

It hails the Palestinian and Lebanese forces who, through their tenacious resistance, have prevented the execution of the Israeli plans to achieve a quick military victory. It affirms its commitment to the Palestinian people under the leadership of the P.L.O.

With regard to the present situation in Lebanon, it called on the Security Council to consult the Lebanese Government on establishing a U.N. peace-keeping force in Lebanon.

MBFR 27TH SESSION CLOSES 'WITHOUT ANY PROGRESS'

[Text] Vienna, July 15 (XINHUA) -- Delegations from 19 NATO and Warsaw Pact nations ended the 27th round of talks on armed forces reduction in central Europe here today without any progress.

During the last session of the talks, the U.S. and Soviet representatives summed up the current negotiations respectively. While engaging in mutual accusations, they expressed their willingness to carry out a balanced troop reduction in central Europe.

Representatives of the NATO countries made a proposal last week for a reduction of NATO and Warsaw Pact land and air forces in central Europe to 900,000 each, which will take place in four stages and spread over seven years.

Soviet delegation leader Valerian Mikhaylov said that the NATO proposal "violated the principle that the security of both sides would not be affected." The proposal was designed to seek "unilateral advantages" in negotiations, he added.

The 28th round of the talks is scheduled to open on September 23.

UN'S PEREZ DE CUELLAR REMARKS ON SETTLING CRISES

[Text] Belgrade, July 17 (XINHUA) -- Javier Perez de Cuellar, secretary general of the United Nations, concluded his three-day official visit to Yugoslavia today before going to Dubrovnik for his vacation where he will stay till July 19.

Perez de Cuellar was received by Petar Stambolic, president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; and Milka Planinc, president of the Federal Executive Council. He also exchanged views with Yugoslav Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Lazar Mojsov on pressing international issues and on strengthening the role of the United Nations.

Both sides deemed it necessary that the United Nations should play a bigger part in removing the hot-beds of current crises, and that the international community should adopt new measures to settle all international conflicts and disputes by peaceful means, so as to avoid the policy of the use of force, exertion of pressure. This is the way to bring about a relaxation of the present tension.

The two sides exchanged views on detente, disarmament and the establishment of a new international economic order.

UN HANGZHOU MEETING ON POWERPLANTS ENDS

[Text] Hangzhou, July 17 (XINHUA) -- A U.N.-promoted international meeting of senior experts ending here today proposed to establish a network of small hydro-electric power stations in Asia and the Pacific in an effort to upgrade the exploitation of the region's rural and regenerative energy.

Participants in the meeting also proposed that an advanced training course be run in Hangzhou in 1983 for promoting the development of such stations, and another in 1984 for technicians of average ranks.

More than 30 experts and observers attended the meeting jointly sponsored by the U.N. Development Program, the U.N. Industrial Development Organization, the U.N. Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific and the Chinese Ministry of Water Conservancy and Power.

SHULTZ' SWEARING IN AT WHITE HOUSE REPORTED

[Text] Washington, July 16 (XINHUA) -- George Shultz was sworn in as U.S. secretary of state at a ceremony in the White House Rose Garden today. President Ronald Reagan presided over and spoke at the brief swearing-in ceremony. Reagan said Shultz' testimony at Senate confirmation hearings this week had shown that he is "a man of exceptional character" and "his articulate and convincing presentation sent a strong signal to friend and foe alike."

Shultz, who succeeded Alexander Haig, said in his oath of office that he had been impressed with "the importance and the depth and the difficulty of the problems we face." He pledged that he would approach American foreign policy "in the spirit of bipartisanship and in trying to find the broad consensus."

Shultz, who now became the 60th U.S. secretary of state, was former President Richard Nixon's secretary of labor and treasury secretary. Before taking over the State Department post, he was president of the American Bechtel Group, a leading international construction and development firm.

RENMIN RIBAO BLASTS SHULTZ, GOLDWATER REMARKS

[Short commentary: "A Question That Must Be Answered in a Serious Manner"]

[Text] At the hearings held by the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 13 and 14 July, U.S. Secretary of State-designate Shultz testified on Sino-U.S. relations and other issues. Senator Goldwater, who attended by invitation, raised a series of provocative questions on Taiwan that had been carefully thought out and deliberately distorted the facts to inveigle Shultz into agreeing that the United States had never formally recognized [chengren] the PRC's "right of political rule and control" over Taiwan, and into insisting that the United States had the right to continue selling arms to Taiwan in accordance with so-called "Taiwan's defense needs." Goldwater and other leaders of the Taiwan lobby have been consistently hostile to the Chinese people, have exerted themselves to preach the separation of Taiwan from China and have tried hard to hamper and sabotage the development of Sino-U.S. relations. Their performance at these hearings fully exposed their true nature as imperialist and hegemonist elements.

People have noted that when answering Goldwater's provocative questions, Shultz gave affirmative answers agreeing with Goldwa[illegible] views, although he supplemented his answers on the question of China's "right of [illegible]al rule and control" over Taiwan by quoting the thesis that there is only one China, as spelled out in the Shanghai Communique and the communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations. Thus, he got into a position of contradicting himself.

There is only one China, Taiwan is a part of China and the PRC Government is the sole legal Government of China. This is an internationally recognized fact and principle. The U.S. Government also solemnly stated [shengming: 5116 2494] this principle in the communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations, and it was this that made possible the normalization of Sino-U.S. relations. In his recent letter to Chinese leaders, President Reagan again clearly stated that "the United States firmly adheres to the stand agreed on in the communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations." Flying in the face of the facts, Goldwater and others now have the impudence to deny the solemn promise the U.S. Government made to China, in a vain attempt to fundamentally repudiate the basis for the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations and to negate China's sovereignty over Taiwan. This is of course absolutely impermissible. At the hearings, Shultz, who was to assume the post of principal spokesman on U.S. foreign policy upon confirmation, echoed Goldwater's remarks running counter to the principles set forth in the joint communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations. This cannot but astonish the Chinese people. People will wait and see how Mr Shultz will carry out the U.S. Government's policy toward China.

The Chinese Government has consistently resolutely opposed U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, which is a grave move in violation of China's sovereignty and interference in China's internal affairs, and has put forward serious protests and solemn representations [jiaoshe 0074 3195] to the U.S. Government on numerous occasions. This is known to all. Now some people in the Senate have the impudence to say there is no need to pay any attention to China's views and that arms sales to Taiwan should continue in accordance with so-called "Taiwan's defense needs." What does this mean? If this notion is allowed to pass unhindered, does that not turn the Shanghai Communique and the communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. relations into scraps of paper and empty talk? If the U.S. Government actually goes back on its word on such a major question of principle, what will happen to the U.S. Government's seriousness in foreign policy? Sino-U.S. relations are now at a difficult moment. The remarks made by Goldwater at the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee's hearings which are hostile to China and its people show very clearly which side the difficulties in Sino-U.S. relations have come from. If matters are handled according to the views of Goldwater and others, Sino-U.S. relations would certainly be sabotaged. This is contrary to the basic interests of the people of both China and the United States. What course to follow -- that is a question the U.S. Government must seriously answer.

SENATOR JACKSON CITED ON ARMS SALES TO TAIWAN

[Text] Washington, July 18 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Senator Henry Jackson said here today that if the administration is going to provide additional arms to Taiwan, they will make a serious mistake.

When asked in an interveiw on C.B.S. "Face the Nation" program what's his reading of the issue of U.S. arms sale to Taiwan, Jackson said: "I think they're making a serious mistake by providing additional arms to Taiwan. I think it's against our national strategic interests. It hurts the whole Western position," he added.

Jackson also challenged the legal basis for arms sales to Taiwan by asking: "What if another country was sending equipment to Texas on the grounds that they were once a republic?" He stressed that he will be going to fight in the Congress against the sale of additional arms to Taiwan.

On the Iran-Iraq war, the senator said that if the impact of the war would cause a cutoff of oil from the Persian Gulf, a "collective action" should be adopted.

U.S. INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT DROP, RECESSION REPORTED

[Text] Beijing, July 17 (XINHUA) -- Industrial production in the United States fell 10.1 percent in the past 11 months ending last June in its current lingering economic recession, the eighth in the United States since the end of World War Two.

While most economic experts predicted a pickup in the latter half of this year, it is believed to be the weakest in the post-war period.

The current economic recession, when compared with previous ones, was marked by three characteristics:

One. Quick in coming. The current recession set in only one year after the previous one was over when industrial production had just topped the previous level. This was the most shortlived economic recovery since 1919.

Two. High interest rates. In normal conditions, interest rates during a recession would come down. But this time, they stay unduly-high, leaving business hard-hit financially. They have not only taken away a considerable part of profits from the business, but also impeded capital turnover. As a result, a record number of enterprises have gone bankrupt since America's great depression of the 1930's.

A total of 11,948 enterprises, or 0.8 percent of the total, went bankrupt in the first half of this year, hitting an all-time high since 1933, Dun & Bradstreet reported. Massive business failures have entailed the highest unemployment rate in the post-war period, which now stands at 9.5 percent of the work force. More than ten million people have been jobless throughout the second quarter of this year.

Three. Government hands tied. Traditionally, the U.S. Government used to augment government spending as a way to boost economic growth. This time, however, prolonged high interest rates constituted one of the major causes of the current recession and they themselves had much to do with the huge government deficits incurred. Therefore, it would be very difficult for the government to cope with the recession by way of increasing spending.

The U.S. Government recently expressed the view that the annual rate of economic growth during the rest of this year will reach four or five percent. But most economists think that this forecast is too optimistic. They put the annual growth rate in the second half of this year at two to three percent at most. The gap between the two forecasts is due to different estimates of the trend of interest rates and the effect of tax reduction. The government predicted that interest rates would drop with the slowdown of inflation.

The 10 percent tax cut beginning July 1 and the 7.4 percent increase of social welfare and insurance expenditure will add 45,000 million dollars to consumers' income, which will mainly go to market, thus stimulating the recovery of the economy.

The economists hold that the interest rates will hardly come down because the Federal Reserve Board is continuing its policy of tightening the issuance of currency and the treasury is going to borrow 90,000 million to 100,000 million dollars from the currency market in the second half of the year.

In these circumstances, most of the increased income of the consumers will become saving deposits, and the benefits the enterprises will get from tax cut will be offset by high interest rates. And the fixed capital investment of enterprises will drop instead of going up. The economists consider that even if there appears some recovery in the economy, it can only be weak and unstable.

AFP: PRC DENIES COLLABORATION WITH CIA, THAILAND

OW170837 Hong Kong AFP in English 0819 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 17 (AFP) -- China today strongly denied an assertion by Vietnam that Beijing had plotted with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to gain control in southern Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia over the next few years. An official Chinese spokesman said the article published in Vietnamese official Communist newspaper NHAN DAN was a "sheer and vicious fabrication".

The paper reported on Wednesday that the CIA and China had discussed a plot with Thailand to regain control by the year 1985 of south Vietnam, which was taken over by Hanoi in 1975, Laos and Cambodia, which both have pro-Vietnamese governments.

CAUTION URGED ON SRV BID FOR SE ASIAN MEETING

["Commentary: Beware of Hanoi's "Peace Overture' by XINHUA Correspondent Li Yongming" -- XINHUA headline]

Singing praises of the proposal, the Vietnamese authorities said that it reflects Vietnam's "consistent and sincere peace policy" and its desire to conciliate and coexist peacefully with the ASEAN member countries to restore peace and stability to Southeast Asia. However, this "song of peace" forms a sharp contrast with Vietnam's repeated attacks on the international conference on Kampuchea sponsored by the United Nations.

It can be recalled that Vietnam had condemned the international conference attended by more than 90 countries as "illegal" and "crude interference" in Kampuchea's internal affairs. Now, by proposing another international conference, Vietnam evidently aims to continuously resist the U.N. resolutions on Kampuchea and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea.

Vietnam's proposal made no mention of the crucial issue in the Southeast Asian situation -- Vietnam's occupation of Kampuchea. The root cause of the tension in Southeast Asia is Vietnam's pursuance of regional hegemonism, its invasion of Kampuchea, domination of Laos and menace to the security of Thailand and other Southeast Asian countries. Therefore, the fundamental way to restore peace and stability in the region is that Vietnam cease its aggression and expansion and immediately withdraw all its troops from Kampuchea. Vietnam's proposal for convening an international conference on Southeast Asia is aimed at diverting public attention from the Kampuchea issue to the so-called "Southeast Asian question" so as to cover its occupation of that country.

The proposed international conference, according to the "Indochina foreign ministers conference", should be attended by two state blocs -- the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN as well as some countries concerned, and the so-called "Indochinese countries" include the Phnom Penh puppet regime. It is obvious that such a conference is but another version of the "regional conference" preached by Hanoi but flatly rejected by the ASEAN states. In the past few years, Vietnam resorted to various kinds of tricks -- expressing willingness to have dialogues with ASEAN, or willingness to come into "contact" with Thailand -- to lure the ASEAN countries to sit together with the Phnom Penh puppet regime at the negotiation table, thus creating an impression of ASEAN's de facto recognition of the Phnom Penh regime. If the Phnom Penh regime could participate in the proposed international conference on equal footing with independent and sovereign states, this would amount to recognition of the "legitimacy" of Hanoi's invasion of Kampuchea, which in turn could be used to justify its "permanent" occupation of that country.

It is not accidental that Hanoi dished out at this time the "international conference" proposal. There are people in the international community who take the view that Vietnam has begun to adopt a "comparatively realistic attitude" on the Kampuchea problem and has shwon "flexibility;" they even advocate making compromise with and concessions to Vietnam. That is, to sacrifice the vital interests of the Kampuchean people in exchange for a political settlement of the Kampuchea problem. By putting forward this proposal, Hanoi meant to make use of this mood of appeasement to pass itself off as a "peace envoy" before the world public opinion, and under that cover to continue its policy of aggression and expansion.

No sooner had the proposal come out than it met with condemnation and attack from some ASEAN states. They pointed out that the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops is the only way to solve the Kampuchea issue and to realize peace in this region. Like other tricks, Hanoi's proposal of convening an "international conference "won't extricate it from its difficult position on the Kampuchea question.

MATERIALS ON SIHANOUK'S VISIT TO BEIJING

Departure From Bangkok

He was seen off at the airport by Thai Foreign Affairs Under-Secretary of State Kasem S. Kasemsri, Chinese Ambassador to Thailand Shen Ping, trade representative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Democratic Kampuchean representative to the U.N. Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific.

Samdech Sihanouk arrived here on July 3 for a three-day official visit after touring the other four ASEAN countries.

After the three-day visit, he went deep into his homeland, Kampuchea, to hold talks with Khieu Samphan and Son Sann, and inspected the areas controlled by the Democratic Kampuchean forces. He also paid a visit to a Kampuchean refugee centre at Khao I Dang in Eastern Thailand where he was warmly welcomed by his compatriots.

Airport Welcome by Huang Hua

[Text] Beijing, July 17 (XINHUA) -- Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, and Madame Sihanouk arrived here by a special flight this afternoon.

When Samdech and Madame Sihanouk drove to their residence, they were greeted by Deng Yingchao, vice-chairman of the National People's Congress Standing Committee. Presenting them with a basket of flowers, she said "the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea has strengthened your fighting capabilities against Vietnam. Samdech Sihanouk has visited his homeland and liberated areas. I extend warm congratulations to you." Sihanouk expressed his thanks for this.

Earlier, at the airport, Samdech and Madame Sihanouk were greeted by Chinese State Councillor Huang Hua and his wife. Also present were diplomatic envoys of Democratic Kampuchea, Malaysia, Thailand, the Philippines and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Talking to reporters at the airport, Sihanouk said he was very glad to come to Beijing. He said, "China is a great and faithful friend of the Kampuchean people. China, the five ASEAN countries, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and some other countries have supported Democratic Kampuchea tremendously," he added.

Sihanouk briefed the reproters on his trip to liberated areas in Kampuchea. "I have visited three liberated zones of the tripartite coalition government. I went deep into our country. We have large areas under our control," he said. He said the process of the forming of the new coalition government had gone smoothly without difficulty. "The Kampuchean patriots," he said, "will fight against the process of Vietnamizing and colonizing Kampuchea. Vietnam pretends the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible, and we will fight to make it reversible."

Asked about his schedule in next few months, Sihanouk said he will stay in China for about one week. Then he will be in Pyongyang for another week. From Pyongyang he will go to Yugoslavia and Romania. At the beginning of September he will give a speech at the U.N. General Assembly.

Banquet By Zhao Ziyang

[Text] Beijing, July 17 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zho Ziyang gave a banquet in honor of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, Madame Sihanouk and their party in the Great Hall of the People here tonight. Premier Zhao and President Sihanouk made warm speeches at the banquet.

Premier Zhao praised Samdech Sihanouk, a patriot who commands the respect of the Kampuchean people and a far-sighted statesman who has made outstanding contributions to safeguarding his country's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. He said: "The samdech has exerted great efforts to bring about the coalition of various patriotic forces in Kampuchea. We fully support the samdech's patriotic acts. We are sure that the samdech will make still greater contributions to the just cause of the Kampuchean people against the Vietnamese aggressors and in defence of peace in Southeast Asia."

Zhao Ziyang said: "Through long consultations, the patriotic forces in Kampuchea reached agreement on the establishment of a Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea and realized the tripartite unity. This conforms to the fundamental interests and aspirations of the Kampuchean people. The formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea marks a new stage of the struggle of the Kampuchean people to strengthen unity, fight against the Vietnamese aggressors and safeguard their national independence and sovereignty."

He said: "We believe that so long as the various patriotic forces of Kampuchea, under the leadership of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, further close their ranks, work in cooperation and persist in the struggle against Vietnam, they will certainly realize the sacred aspiration of the Kampuchean nation, drive all Vietnamese aggressors out of Kampuchea and win complete victory in their struggle of resisting Vietnamese aggression and defending their country."

Premier Zhao said the "partial troop withdrawal" proposed recently by Vietnam is a fraud. "Just as Samdech Sihanouk has said, the Kampuchean people will never accept the fait accompli resulting from the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea," he said.

Zhao Ziyang said: "China sincerely hopes to see future Kampuchea to be a peaceful, prosperous, independent, neutral and non-aligned country, working for the well-being of the Kampuchean people and contributing to the peace and stability in Southeast Asia."

In his speech, Sihanouk spoke of the performance of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. He said: "The formation of the coalition government took a fairly long time, because we wanted to establish a government which is consolidated and not easy to split. This government will convince the people that it is a real coalition government supported by the people."

He said the coalition government recently held its first Cabinet meeting attended by himself, Khieu Samphan, Son Sann and other members. The meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of unity. "We resolve to join hands and carry out the struggle against Vietnamese aggressors until final victory," he stated.

Speaking of his impression of his trip to the liberated areas in Kampuchea, Sihanouk said he found the atmosphere in the liberation zones "is very good and people there are united. They are determined to carry the struggle against Vietnamese aggressors through to the end and build an independent, neutral and non-aligned country."

Sihanouk discredited Vietnam's "partial troop withdrawal" as "meaningless." Vietnam is a member of the United Nations, he said. "If Vietnam respects the U.N. Charter, it should unconditionally pull out all its troops from Kampuchea and let the Kampuchean people hold free elections under U.N. supervision. Otherwise, the Kampuchean people have no alternative but fight against it."

Sihanouk paid high tribute to Kampuchean-Chinese friendship. He said: "The Kampuchean people have always enjoyed China's support in their struggle for national independence and territorial integrity."

Prior to the banquet, Premier Zhao met and had and a cordial conversation with Samdech and Madame Sihanouk.

Present at the banquet were Chinese State Councillor and Foreign Minister Huang Hua and his wife, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Wu Xueqian, member of the Coordination Committee for Defence of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea In Tam, and Ambassador of Democratic Kampuchea to China Pech Cheang and his wife.

It is a government which has the rights and duties of a sovereign and independent country. This government is here to stay.

VODK CITED URGING SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL

[Text] Beijing, July 16 (XINHUA) -- "The only way out for Vietnam is to withdraw all troops from Kampuchea in accordance with the U.N. resolutions," said radio Democratic Kampuchea in a commentary today.

It said that the Vietnamese authorities put forward the deceptive "partial troop withdrawal" proposal at a time when they suffered serious setbacks on the battlefield in Kampuchea and met with strong condemnation by world public opinion. Their proposal was aimed at justifying their aggression in Kampuchea.

It pointed out: "It is impossible for the people to believe in the Hanoi regime since they had known the vicious nature and history of deception of Hanoi. The Le Duan clique made many promises, for instance, of respecting the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Kampuchea and Laos and not intruding into the two countries. But actually they did not keep their words."

Nobody has accepted Vietnam's naked aggression against Kampuchea, it stressed, because people have come to understand that if Kampuchea is annexed by Vietnam, then other countries in the Southeast Asian region will become the next targets of the Soviet-Vietnamese strategy of expansion and aggression. They would be, as was the case of Kampuchea, intruded militarily by Vietnam and put under its occupation.

KAMPUCHEA CONFERENCE ANNIVERSARY MARKED BY VODK

[Text] Beijing, July 17 (XINHUA) -- Radio Democratic Kampuchea today called on the peace-loving and justice-upholding countries in the world to continue their diplomatic, political and economic pressure on Vietnam to make it withdraw all its occupation troops from Kampuchea.

The call was made in a commentary marking the first anniversary of the international conference on Kampuchea.

The commentary said the "declaration on Kampuchea" adopted by 90 countries at the week-long international conference on Kampuchea on July 17 last year called for the withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in the shortest possible time and the holding of free elections by the Kampuchean people "under United Nations supervision" to exercise their right to self-determination.

However, the commentary pointed out, the Vietnamese authorities have ignored the declaration and refused to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. The Le Duan clique has also resorted to various diplomatic tricks in an attempt to overthrow the relevant U.N. resolutions and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea.

RENMIN RIBAO REVIEWS PALESTINIAN STRUGGLE

[Article by Zhao Zengquan [6392 1073 3123]: "The Hard Struggle of the Palestinian People for Over Three Decades"]

[Text] In order to return to their homeland and recover their national rights, the Palestinian people have carried out more than 30 years of brave and dauntless struggle against the Israeli aggressors and expansionists.

On 14 May 1948 the state of Israel was established in Palestine in accordance with a resolution of the United Nations. The next day, Israel launched an aggressive war against Arab countries. After more than a year of fighting, Israel seized 80 percent of the land of Palestine and drove a large number of Palestinian people from their homes and turned them into refugees.

In the face of the Israeli expansionists and their cruel aggressive armed forces, who have been armed to the teeth and supported by the United States and the United Kingdom, the Palistinian people have not knuckled under. On the contrary, from the very beginning, the Palestinian people have spontaneiously demonstrated, protested and conducted guerrilla activities against the Israeli occupation army. Although the enemy often retaliated and suppressed their activities, the Palestinian people have never abandoned their struggle even for a single day.

In the course of this struggle, the palestinian people have gradually become organized. In 1955 a Palestinian armed force emerged in the Gaza Strip. In 1956 a Palestinian armed force called the "Palestine National Liberation Movement" (abbreviated to "Fatah") was founded and the "storm" shock force led by it is a major component of the Palestinian Armed Forces. The emergence of the political organization and armed forces of the Palestinian people marked the beginning of a new stage of the struggle of the Palestinian people and the end of the old stage of separated and unorganized struggle. In May 1964 a Palestine national council was held in Jerusalem, and decided to establish the "Palestine Liberation Organization. This is a united organization which has been joined by all the guerrilla forces and the representatives from all the circles of the Palestinian people. Externally, it represents the Palestinian people and internally it coordinates the united struggle of all the guerrilla organization. The national council and the establishment of the PLO greatly promoted the struggle of the Palestinian people and won widespread recognition and support throughout the world.

On 5 June 1967 Israel launched a third war in the Middle East, occupied the West Bank, Gaza Strip and old Jerusalem, trampling on all of the Palestine and increased the number of Palestinian refugees to 1.8 million. The PLO and its armed forces lost their last base in their homeland. But the Palestinian people endured the test and their armed forced recovered very quickly and further developed.

After the third war in the Middle East, the "Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine" (shortened as "Popular Front"), "Pioneers of the People's Liberation War" and its "lightning" shock forces, "Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command," "Democratic Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine" (shortened to "Democratic Front"), the "Arab Liberation Front" and other organizations emerged one by one. This marked the coming of the new upsurge of the Palestinian People's Liberation movement. On 21 March 1968, Israel sent 15,000 troops equipped with planes and tanks across the Jordan River into Jordan and attacked the base of the "storm" shock forces at Karanah City. The "storm" shock forces firmly resisted and the "Popular Front" and the Palestinian militia also joined the fighting. As a result, the Israeli army suffered severe losses, 400 Israeli officers and soldiers were killed, 17 tanks and armored cars were destroyed and 1 helicopter was downed. This destroyed the myth about the invincibility of the Israeli Army. In 1968 in order to adapt to the development of the situation of the struggle, "Fatah," the PLO, the Palestine Liberation Army, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and other organizations jointly established the preparatory committee of the new national committee of Palestinian organizations in order to coordinate the activities of all the guerrilla forces. In 1969 the headquarters of the Palestinian armed struggle was set up and in 1971 an executive committee of the headquarters was elected with Yasir 'Arafat as its chairman. All this created favorable conditions for strengthening the united struggle of the various sections of the armed forces.

In 1971 the Jordanian Army and the Palestinian guerrillas clashed. The Palestinian guerrilla forces lost their bases in Jordan, and thus the Palestinian national liberation struggle suffered another setback. The guerrilla forces had to move to Lebanon and Syria, which were far from the West Bank. This made it difficult for them to carry out a relatively large-scale guerrilla war. Under these conditions, the Palestinian guerrilla forces developed frequent small-scale guerrilla activities and attacked the Israeli occupation army by carrying out raiding, harassing, wrecking and bombing activities. Since the fourth Middle East war, the guerrilla forces have carried out their raiding and harassing activities more frequently and over a wider area. The cities controlled by the Israeli occupation army, such as Jerusalem, Haifa, Ashdod, Gaza and Even Tel Aviv and may villages and town have become targets of the attacks of the Palestinian guerrilla forces. Israeli munition factories, arsenals, oil refineries, traffic lines and ports have been blown up one by one and Israeli expansionists are in constant troubles.

While organizing and leading the armed struggle for the recovery of the lost territory, the PLO have also vigorously carried out political and diplomatic struggle to win over increasingly greater sympathy and support in the world. However, the United States stubbornly clings to its refusal to recognize the national rights of the Palestinian people. It is very clear that the brutal Israeli aggression against Lebanon this time is condoned and supported by the United States. The struggle of the Palestinian people has suffered another setback, but the history of the past 30 years has proven that the Palestinian people will surely draw lessons and sum up experiences from their struggle and carry out their struggle under the new situation. Despite the twists and turns ahead, the Palestinian people will surely achieve final victory!

FRANCE AGREES TO SEND TROOPS TO LEBANON

[Text] Beijing, July 11 (XINHUA) -- The French External Relations Ministry notified the Lebanese Government Saturday of its agreement in principle to send French troops to Lebanon under the condition that this is approved by all parties to the conflict and the United Nations. According to reports from Paris, French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson pointed out in a television interview Saturday evening that the French decision is "to separate the combatants and avoid the drama that the destruction of Beirut would be." He added that a 600-man parachute unit among the 1,300 French troops now with U.N. troops in south Lebanon could move to Beirut quickly.

But the French External Relations Ministry stressed in a message to Lebanese Foreign Minister Fu'ad Butrus that France would agree to go ahead only if the composition and role of the force and the time limit to its duty have been defined and all varieties to the conflict as well as the United Nations have approved the arrangements.

The French decision was promptly welcomed by Washington. Deputy Press Secretary of the White House Larry Speakes said that the United States had not yet received official confirmation of the French announcement, but "we would welcome such an eventuality."

On the contrary, the Soviet paper PRAVDA carried a commentary entitled "now what does Paris think?", accusing the Elysee of preparing "to put a Frenchman in uniform together with the American soldier in the occupationists' Saigon." The paper told Paris to think about "the consequences to which submissiveness to Washington's dangerous plans may lead."

The Greek Government was reported to have indicated yesterday that if requested by the PLO, Greece is prepared to send vessels to help the withdrawal of PLO troops from Beirut.

FRANCE'S CHEYSSON URGES RECOGNITION OF PALESTINE

[Text] Paris, July 13 (XINHUA) -- French Minister for External Relations Claude Cheysson said today the Middle East issue cannot be solved unless Palestine is accepted by all as a political fact.

Speaking at the press club of the "Radio France Internationale", Cheysson rejected as "groundless" Soviet criticisms of France's participation in the proposed multinational force in Lebanon. He reiterated that France will take part in the force only after it is approved by all the parties concerned and the United Nations. The Russians have undoubtedly got the impression that France is providing a cover for the Americans, which in fact, does not conform with French policies, he added.

Cheysson expressed great concern over the possible outbreak of another war between Iran and Iraq. He pointed out, "In the past few months, we have been fearing that the superpowers may possibly meddle in because of the failure to find a settlement between the parties concerned."

FURTHER COVERAGE OF BAINQEN'S XIZANG VISIT

Urges Return of Dalai Lama

[Text] Lhasa, July 18 (XINHUA) -- "Dalai and I are good Buddhist brothers and I sincerely hope that he will make a correct choice and return to China at an early date." This was said by Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain, vice-chairman of the National People's Congress Standing Committee, in addressing a recent meeting in Lhasa.

"Both Dalai and I are Buddhist disciples and successors to the venerable Tsong Kha-pa (founder of the Yellow Sect of Lamaism)," Bainqen added. He is also honorary president of the Buddhist Association of China.

During his inspection tour of Lhasa, Bainqen visited nearby farming and stockraising areas, factories and schools in the city and held religious services. He was accorded a warm welcome by the local party, government and People's Liberation Army leaders and Buddhist followers.

Bainqen said: "Today when we are discussing here how to build a new Tibet, our thoughts naturally turn to Dalai Lama and our Tibetan countrymen who are living in foreign lands far from their homes, their country and their fellow countrymen. Anyone who loves his own nation, can never bear to live like this. As a brother of the same Tibetan nationality, I have been very much concerned with their circumstances and those of Dalai in particular."

The Buddhist leader said: "We Tibetans are firmly marching forward along with other nationalities to build our motherland into a highly democratic socialist country with a high level of culture. If Dalai Lama and other Tibetan people now living abroad return to the motherland, they can also work together with us for their nation and religion."

Bainqen said: "The Tibetan nationality is a member of the great family of all nationalities of the People's Republic of China. The Tibetans should love their nation and contribute to its progress and prosperity. They can do such useful work only in their own country."

"China opens its door to all its people who love their motherland," Bainqen added.

Urges Nationality Unity

[Excerpts] Lhasa, 18 Jul (XINHUA) -- Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and honorary president of the Buddhist Association of China, emphatically pointed out, at a meeting of cadres held in Lhasa on 17 July, that to safeguard the reunification of the motherland and strengthen unity among nationalities, particularly that between the Han and Tibetan nationalities, is the fundamental guarantee for the Tibetan nationality to thrive, for the prosperity and progress of Xizang society and for the Tibetan people's happiness and peace. This is also a prerequisite for successful work in Xizang.

Attending the meeting were more than 1,000 cadres from Xizang Autonomous Region and Lhasa Municipality, including Ngapoi Ngawang Jigme, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and chairman of the Xizang autonomous regional government, as well as party, government and army leading persons in Xizang, including Yin Fatang, Yangling Duoji, Raidi, Pagbalha Geleg Mangya and Wang Hanting and the responsible person of the State Nationalities Affairs Commission, Xue Jianhua. Vice Chairman Bainqen delivered a lengthy speech at the meeting.

Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain stressed the significance of safeguarding national reunification and strengthening unity among all nationalities, particularly that between the Han and Tibetan nationalities. He said: Xizang is an inalienable part of Chinese territory, and the Tibetan nationality is an important member of this multinational nation -- China. Xizang's future is closely connected with the future and destiny of the motherland.

Dwelling on the party's policy on religious freedom, Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain pointed out: To enjoy religious freedom means that each citizen enjoys freedom to believe or disbelieve in religion. People who believe in religion and disbelieve in religion must seek common ground on major issues, while reserving differences on minor ones. They must safeguard national reunification and strengthen unity among all nationalities, work with one heart and one mind to develop the four modernizations program and make our motherland prosperous and strong. This is the common and basic interest of all the people, and thus a major issue. To believe or disbelieve in religion is the matter for the individual, and thus a minor issue.

In his speech, Vice Chairman Bainqen also stressed the role of the Han cadres in Xizang. He said: In the long history of development of all nationalities in China, the Han nationality has always played a fairly advanced role in the fields of politics, economy and culture. The cadres of Han nationality in Xizang have maintained flesh-and-blood ties with the Xizang people. They have scored tremendous achievements in Xizang's revolution and construction. The Xizang people will never forget their achievements. From now on, we still need a considerable number of cadres of Han nationality to carry out work and engage in construction in Xizang. The Tibetan people always welcome comrades of Han nationality to work in Xizang.

Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain said: The PLA units stationed in Xizang have always played a particularly important role in Xizang. They have not only shouldered the arduous task of guarding the border region, consolidating national defense and protecting the southwest gate of the motherland, but also actively participated in local construction work. Their exemplary role has won the wholehearted support and respect from the people in Xizang. The PLA has performed immortal deeds in Xizang's revolution and construction. He hoped that the PLA units stationed in Xizang would bring into full play the army's fine traditions and style of work, and make still greater contributions to this great task of far-reaching significance -- the task of safeguarding the border region and of building a united, prosperous and civilized new Xizang.

AFP: Dalai Lama Scores PRC

[Excerpt] New Delhi, July 16 (AFP) -- The Tibetans' spiritual and temporal leader, the Dalai Lama, today made a stunning attack on the Chinese Government for showing "disrespect" to Pancham Lama, who is currently on a tour of Tibet, it was reported here today.

The Pancham Lama, regarded as the second man in Tibetan Buddhist hierarchy, arrived in Lhasa on July 3 after a gap of 18 years on a "fact finding mission" that may help in bringing a rapprochement between the self-exiled Tibetan god king and the Chinese.

The Chinese decision to allow the 44-year-old Pancham Lama to visit Tibet was earlier welcomed by the Dalai Lama.

But according to a statement, issued today by the Dalai Lama's office here, it strongly criticized the Chinese for giving a "low profile reception" to Pancham Lama and said it revealed the "double standard and arrogance of the Chinese".

"The low profile reception accorded to Pancham Lama by the local Chinese officials on his arrival at the start of the first visit to central Tibet reveals the true attitude of the Chinese officials in Tibet", the statement said.

"The normal protocol would require the entire top local officials to receive him at the airport...the disrespect shown to such a senior Tibetan national leader by the local Chinese officials is to be deplored and is clearly vindicates our criticism of the double standard and arrogance of Chinese chauvinism against minorities". "It also exposes the wide gap which exists between the central (Chinese) leaders and their actual implementation at the local level", the statement said.

A Dalai Lama's official spokesman said they came to know of the alleged low profile reception from a radio Lhasa broadcast which was regularly monitored at Dharamsala, northern India.

Today's statement came as a surprise to experts who widely believe that sooner or later the 58-year-old Dalai Lama would return to his homeland. The Dalai Lama has repeatedly said he would give up his demand for an independent Tibet and may as well return if he was convinced that the majority of the Tibetans were happy under Chinese rule. Beijing decision to allow the Pancham Lama to visit Tibet was seen as a further concession by the Chinese for an understanding with the Dalai Lama. The latter had insisted that the Pancham Lama be allowed to tour Tibet and give his opinion on the conditions there.

PENG ZHEN URGES COMPATRIOTS STUDY CONSTITUTION

[Text] Beijing, July 16 (XINHUA) -- Peng Zhen, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress and vice-chairman of the National Constitutional Revision Committee, today called on compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and Overseas Chinese to discuss thoroughly the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China. The text of his statement follows:

The Standing Committee of the National People's Congress has promulgated the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China for discussion by the people of all nationalities in the country. In the past two months and more, together with the people on the mainland, compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and Overseas Chinese, have shown attention for the revision and formulation of the constitution and have enthusiastically taken part in discussions and expressed their views as masters of the house.

The constitution is the fundamental law of the land which sets forth the nature of the state and its future. The working out of a constitution which sums up the fruits of the long struggle of the people of all nationalities and fully reflects the will of the people, is of vital importance in guaranteeing the unity and prosperity of our great motherland. This conforms to the basic interests not only of the people of all nationalities on the mainland but also our compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and Overseas Chinese.

In drawing up the draft revised constitution, we have paid respects to history and present circumstances and looked forward to the future. Article 30 of the draft stipulates: "The state may, where necessary, establish special administrative regions. The rules and regulations in force in special administrative regions shall be stipulated by law according to specific conditions." Thus the basic contents of the 9-point policy announced by Chairman Ye Jianying last September are confirmed in law, providing a legal basis for the peaceful reunification of the motherland. The draft also stipulates: "The People's Republic of China protects the legitimate rights and interests of Chinese residents abroad and protects the lawful rights and interests of returned Overseas Chinese and the relatives of Chinese residents abroad living in China." The revised draft is clearer and better than former constitutions. It will guarantee that Overseas Chinese enjoy national honor together with the 1,000 million people on the mainland.

The interests of the people are supreme. All power belongs to the people. Our compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and Overseas Chinese are members of the big family of the Chinese nation and are masters of the country. We value their views highly. We sincerely hope that they all exercise their sacred right to discuss, in various forms and through various channels, the revised draft constitution and state affairs in a thorough way together with the people of all nationalities on the mainland. It is our firm belief that through concerted efforts by all the people of the country, the draft will be further improved so as to become a constitution which conforms to the present conditions of the country and its prospects for long-range development as well, and that it will help bring about an earlier reunification of the Chinese nation.

HONGQI COMMENTS ON PARTY, GOVERNMENT REFORM

HK161215 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE in Chinese 0829 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Report: "China Has Basically Completed the First Stage of the Reform of Party and Government Organizations"]

[Text] Beijing, 16 Jul (ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE) -- In an article by its editorial department carried in the 14th issue of HONGQI magazine, it is said that the first stage of organizational reform work of party and government organizations at the central level has been basically completed according to plan. Progress was smoother than anticipated.

The article said the results obtained in the first stage of the organizational reform of the party and government organizations are highly convincing. The number of ministries and commissions under the State Council, organizations directly under it and offices have already been cut down from 100 to 60. The total number of working personnel has been reduced by about one-third. According to the statistics of 30 departments and commissions, ministers, vice ministers and heads have been reduced by 67 percent in all. Among the new leading groups, newly selected middle-aged and young cadres account for 32 percent. Their average age has fallen by 6 years. The leadership system of the State Council itself has also been reformed. The number of vice premiers has been reduced from 13 to 2. The 10 newly created state councillors have improved and strengthened the day-to-day leadership of the State Council. As for units directly under the CCP Central Committee, organizations at the bureau level have been reduced by 11 percent. The total number of working personnel has been reduced by 17.3 percent. Major posts and deputy posts in the various departments and commissions have been reduced by 15.7 percent. In the leading groups, newly selected middle-aged and young cadres account for 16 percent of total cadres. Their average age has fallen by 4 years.

According to the already determined plan, China's organizational reform is divided into two stages. The Central Committee takes the first step in order to gain experience. The rest is done in the localities step by step. Similarly, Central Committee units first set up experimental points, expanding gradually. The organizational reform of party and government organizations in the various provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions will be carried on in groups in the second half of this year or next year. It was pointed out in this article entitled "Sum Up Experience; Persist in Reform," that the tasks will still be tough in the later stage and there will be a great deal of work to do. The present task is, on the basis of conscientiously summing up experiences, to enhance our vigor, advance on the crest of victory, and strive for an overall victory in reforming government structure.

The HONGQI article also hoped that young and middle-aged cadres who take up leadership posts during this reform would "spontaneously set strict demands on themselves. First, they must be humble and cautious, and not be carried away by flatter; second, they must uphold their principles and must not practice favoritism; third, they must be bold in shouldering heavy burdens, diligently carry out investigations and study problems. It is hoped that they will become good revolutionary successors with the help of the veteran comrades and will not disappoint the party and the people. New and veteran cadres must work in coordination and be united to do good work in their local units and departments to create a vivid atmosphere and bring about a new situation."

COMMENTATOR DISCUSSES HANDLING NEW PROBLEMS

[Commentator's article: "Adopt a New Viewpoint To Understand New Problems"]

[Text] We must adopt a new viewpoint to understand new things. If we obstinately adhere to old stands, we will not be able to understand new things or solve new problems.

Some of the comrades have used the viewpoint of the cooperativization period to judge the double contract responsibility system and insisted that it is individual farming. They hold that after more than 30 years of socialist education and tempering, the commune members are backward and have regressed because of their adoption of the double contract responsbility system and they are short-sighted and selfish individual farmers. Many facts have again proved this to be a very great mistake.

More than 90 percent of the production teams in the Jian Prefecture of Jiangxi are practicing the major contract responsibility system. This time, in an exceptionally serious flood of this century, the major contract responsibility system has been subjected to a severe test and has demonstrated its superiority. As long as we see such heroic feats performed by the broad masses of peasants and cadres in courageously depending the reservoirs, irrigation ditches, power stations and warehouses, and salvaging and replanting crops in the inundated fields, how can we describe them as selfish individual farmers?

We cannot use the viewpoint of criticizing "fixed output quota based on the household" of former years to judge the major contract responsibility system. Some comrades have insisted on describing it as dividing the field for individual farming and saying that it is dangerously on the verge of slipping into capitalism. They predicted these "individual farmers" could never triumph over a natural disaster, and if disaster should strike, they would scatter like birds and beasts and flee in all directions. This is an even greater mistake.

The Jian Prefecture is like many prefectures in Jiangxi and throughout the country. In implementing the rural policy of the 3d Pleanry Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the broad masses of peasants and cadres at first viewed the double contract responsibility system with suspicion. After watching from the sidelines, conducting experiments and even working in secret, and after overcoming various obstacles, rectifications and even suppressions, they made numerous comparisons and eventually decided to adopt, uphold, popularized and perfect this kind of responsibility system. They hold that this is a good responsibility system, for it not only is simple and effective, but it also possesses a powerful vitality and is suited to present actual conditions in the countryside. The major contract responsibility system has provided a good material basis as well as a lofty spiritual force in this struggle to triumph over an exceptionally serious flood. How can it be described as dividing the field for individual farming which is considered to be most elementary, most dangerous and totally lacking in vitality?

Adopting a new viewpoint means seeking truth from facts, and we must always proceed from reality, emancipate our minds and keep abreast of the situation. Old viewpoints will only restrict our thinking and fetter our limbs. Only by changing old viewpoints can we continue to discover new problems. Only by correctly understanding new problems and conscientiously solving new problems can we really make a breakthrough and triumphantly advance.

RENMIN RIBAO ON 'STRATEGY' OF HENAN'S BAIZHUANG

[Article by An Gang [1344 1511]: "Baizhuang's 'Strategy'"]

[Text] Baizhuang brigade in the outskirts of Zhengzhou Municipality in Henan Province has great strategic vision in developing its economy. They first got a sound footing by achieving stable and high grain yields, then proceeded to develop commodity economy and enter the food markets by producing milk, bean products and fruit wine needed by society, and also producing foodstuffs needed in the urban markets. Hence the brigade's economy has developed in an all-round way. Average value of output per brigade member last year exceeded 1,000 yuan.

At a time when people are discussing various strategies for developing the economy, the writer wants to call what he saw at Baizhuang brigade in the outskirts of Zhengzhou Municipality, Henan Province, "the Baizhuang strategy for developing the rural economy." Naturally, the peasants of Baizhuang have never summed up their schemes for developing production as strategic issues, nevertheless they have indeed successfully accomplished a strategic idea.

The word "bai" in Baizhuang implies being poor and blank. This is an old course of the Huang He, and it used to be a strip of white sand hills. The grain yield was less than 100 jin per mu. The brigade has 130 households comprising 637 persons, including 250 laborers. They have great strategic vision in developing the rural economy, and have successfully accomplished high grain yields and all-round development in other respects. The value of the labor day reached 3 yuan in 1980, and last year it was 3.15 yuan. The current collective assets are worth 2.6 million yuan, an average of 4.100 yuan per person. They have started to move into a reasonably comfortable life, by accomplishing "five ones," that is, average annual output per person exceeds 1,000 jin, average grain yield is 1 ton per mu, every person sells 1 pig annually, every household has 1 head of livestock, and every household lives in a new brick house.

Baizhuang started by stabilizing its 1 ton-per-mu grain land. The serious drought this year, plus several attacks by hot, dry winds, did not affect wheat growth. This is because the brigade has done a good job in agricultural capital construction. They have planted seven tree belts, build a network of water conservation facilities, and provided plenty of domestic manure. In addition they took precautionary measures against the hot, dry winds. The village has a complete set of farm machinery. Reaping and threshing of the wheat have been completed. The average yield was 950 jin per mu. With a good wheat harvest, there is all the better prospect for the autumn crops. Since the brigade has 1 ton-per-mu farmland, it does not have to eat commodity grain or buy grain at high prices, and it can also make greater contributions to the state. Baizhuang's grain delivery quota is 26,000 jin. Last year the brigade sold 40,000 jin to the state, and also had 70,000 jin in reserve. Grain is the starting point of the agricultural cycle. They devote 20 percent of their manpower to grain cultivation, and thus have the boldness to engage in many other undertakings.

Building an orchard was a move Baizhuang took with courage and insight. The brigade has 310 mu of grain land, but 400 mu of apple orchards. Why is the orchard area greater? They calculated that 1 mu of land yields 4,000 jin of apples, and more money can be made from that than from grain. It is also economical in its labor force. Only 0.1 labor force is required. They were thinking of the markets: first, they are only 10 li from Zhengzhou, where they could sell the apples; second, they could take advantage of the "time gap" caused by the fact that apples there ripen 2 weeks earlier than in north China, and also use the communications to sell their applies earlier than north China could; and third, they could use unsaleable applies to make cider. The whole country has about 1 billion jin of rotten apples. Far from abandoning them, Baizhuang has used them to make cider with good color and flavor. Fifteen provinces want this kind of drink, and people in south China like it as a beverage. Producing cider for drinking means that they have tested the temperature of the foodstuff industry market. They produce 250,000 jin of cider a year. The sales price is 0.2 yuan a jin less than for ordinary fruit wine, but they make much more money from that than from selling apples.

The cider dregs are also good pig fodder. Today many brigades have big stockpiles of white wine they have produced. But Baizhuang has been producing its characteristic wine for 5 years now, and still cannot meet demand.

Another far-sighted move was to deliver fresh milk to customers in Zhengzhou. Having investigated the milk shortage in the city, they decided to develop the raising of cows. There are now 63, roughly 1 to every 2 households, and the milk yield varies from 400 to 900 jin a day. They deliver the milk directly to the homes of their customers in the city; and their milk is 2 cents a jin below the market price. Never mind that they only deliver milk to a few people at present; they have great ambitions, and will add 20 more cows this year and raise the number to 100 next year. They use their own fodder, not fodder allocated by the state, to feed their cows. Baizhuang is determined to increase the number of cows to 200 and to set up a dairy for making butter, cheese, and milk skin. The products will be supplied to the city, and they will use the manure on their own land.

They have been particularly daring in making a big thing of beans. Everyone likes beans, but some places have considerable stockpiles. At present supplies of bean products still fail to meet demand in big cities; this contradiction occurs in the processing and business handling of the beans. Beans in the market are 0.4 yuan a jin, and it is said that if the business handling of bean products is not done well, money is lost. The peasants of Baizhuang handle 1.5 million jin of beans a year; far from sustaining a loss, they have made a net profit of 0.1 yuan per jin. In April this year they erected a 1,200 square meter workshop for making dried bean cream in tight rolls. The workshop, operating 1 shift, produces 1 ton a day. This Baizhuang product is a best seller in certain southern provinces, because much of it is first-grade, it is attractive and tender and the price is right. They make these rolls for shipment and sale away from their own locality. In Zhengzhou they sell beancurd, jellied or dried beancurd, beancurd skin, beancurd vermicelli and beancurd puffs. Eighty of Baizhuang brigade's 250 laborers are engaged in making bean products. They see that Henan is China's main bean-growing province, that slow bean sales are an artificial phenomenon, that the big cities are short of bean products and that areas that do not grow beans are also short of such products; so long as there are small profits but quick turnover, there is no need to worry about lack of markets.

In evolving its plans for beans, Baizhuang perceived the needs of the market. They said, dried bean cream in tight rolls sells slowly in some cities because they are too expensive and the quality is not good enough; it is not because the markets do not need them. So long as the quality is good and the price cheap and they can readily be stored, high-grade smoked beancurd, strong-smelling preserved beancurd, plant protein meat and so on as well as dried bean cream in tight rolls are all best-sellers in the markets. They also process bean products in order to develop agriculture. Processing 1.5 million jin of beans leaves 1 million jin of dry residue which can be used as pig fodder. Every 10 jin of this residue produces 1 jin of pork, and in this way alone they can produce 100,000 jin of pork. If the residue is used to feed the cows, it will produce 300,000 jin of milk, and if it is used to feed the beef cattle it will yield 50,000 jin of beef. Thus there is plenty of meat, milk, and also manure.

They have also boldly opened up a restaurant in Zhengzhou. It should be said that allowing the peasants to trial-operate restaurants in the city under certain conditions is a policy of the Zhengzhou Municipal CCP Committee, which has been supported by the masses. The peasants of Baizhuang have opened a restaurant on Huayuan Road, and it has some unconventional features. First of all, the restaurant is open 14 or 15 hours a day. Comrades of HENAN RIBAO can eat dinner there at night, and they say the food is better there than in most restaurants. Secondly, the restaurant operates throughout its business hours, providing breakfast, lunch and dinner. Apart from table service, there is also a carry-out business in jellied beancurd. The service staff comes from the village; their attitude is good, they run things seriously and pay attention to hygiene. The customers have welcomed this service. The peasants now urgently need to find out the trends of the city markets and the tastes and needs of customers.

Comrade Bai Xichuan, a secretary of the Baizhuang brigade party branch, is a man who thinks things out and is foresighted. There are many able hands among the leaders and members of this brigade. When you ask Old Bai what the biggest difficultry is, he will say it is the shortage of labor. I asked him if he could recruit as peasants young people awaiting employment. He said it was possible, but every person must have a special skill and possess at least one technique in agriculture, industry, or sideline production. What he wants is peasant technicians, or able specialists who understand the market economy. How about young people determined to work in agriculture and who possess a specialized skill going to Baizhuang to display their talents? How can our agricultural, commercial, and economics colleges satisfy the demands of the peasants?

Since Baizhuang has stable and high grain yields and also has ways of dealing with market trends in its industry and sideline production, it has no fear of raw material shortages or lack of orders from urban factories. Baizhuang's all-round development of commodity economy could perhaps be summarized as the following cycle:

1. Begin with stable and high grain yields, thus gaining a firm footing.

2. Products of diversification are based on market needs, and full use is made of agricultural and sideline products as the main raw materials for processing and sales.

3. They face the food markets and produce foodstuffs needed in society.

4. They get to know the needs of the city and organize flexible service trades.

5. The aim in achieving still higher output of grain, meat, milk, eggs, fruit and so on is to develop commodity economy. This is the point at which they stay.

It is essential to provide subsidies for growing vegetables near large cities, supply them with fodder for milch cows and ensure grain for them. However, there are still shortages of fruit, vegetables, milk products, bean products, soya sauce, vinegar and so on. Can Baizhuang's methods be drawn on?

HONGQI ARTICLE ON STEEL INDUSTRY PROBLEMS

["Opinion" column: "Renovation Goal of China's Iron and Steel Industry"]

[Text] HONGQI (RED FLAG) recently published an article by Zhou Chuandian, vice-minister of China's metallurgical industry, on the technical renovation of China's iron and steel industry. Excerpts follow:

China's iron and steel industry has a sound foundation and is capable of producing 40 million tons of steel a year. But out present iron and steel enterprises are still backward technically and inefficient economically. Most of their major equipment dates from the 1950's, and their profits are unsatisfactory. Their products have little variety and are poor in quality; their energy consumption is high and they suffer a shortage of raw materials.

To speed up the modernization of China's iron and steel industry, we must focus on the technological renovation of these enterprises.

In the early 1950's, our iron and steel industry was undeveloped. Then we introduced advanced technology, mainly from the Soviet Union, and technically reformed the Anshan (in northeast China) and Taiyuan (in Shanxi Province) iron and steel companies and built up new ones in Baotou (in Inner Mongolia) and Wuhan (in central China). But in 1958, these major reforms came to a halt. Now we find a large gap between China's technological level and those of other countries. To fill this gap, we need at least 15 to 20 years. Our backwardness cannot be eliminated by small scale reforms and innovations. We should, as the Soviet Union and Japan have done, make full use of the next 15 to 20 years to carry out major renovations. Only then, can we catch up with the world's advanced level.

Technological renovation mainly entails the replacement of old equipment and technology with new ones.

The iron and steel industry has its own characteristics. Most of the equipment used in ore dressing, sintering, coking, smelting, and rolling are large and heavy. Therefore, only a small amount of very outdated equipment should be replaced under China's present conditions. Renovations and new technology should be adopted in certain crucial parts of the equipment.

Two Ways

There are two ways to renovate China's iron and steel industry: One is to "reform for reform's sake," regardless of expenditure and profits; the other is to focus on obtaining better quality, more varieties, energy conservation, and a high level of efficiency, while carrying out reforms. We should aim for the second one.

Many enterprises have achieved remarkable economic benefits by doing so. Anshan pipe-welding plant, for example, used their existing equipment to carry out technological reforms. They adopted a new tecynique of continuous welding. And, as a result, their annual pipe output increased from 90,000 tons to more than 110,000 tons. The amount of products which are up to standard increased from 88 to 95.7 per cent of the total, and the cost per ton dropped by 15.7 yuan. In one year, the plant increased its profits by seven million yuan.

The key to successful technological renovation lies in self-reliance on our own technical and managerial personnel and workers, and domestic machinery and electronic products.

The new No 2 blast furnace at Beijing's Shoudu iron and steel company has adopted many new techniques in production such as bell-less top, dome combustion hot-blast stove, conveyor charging, automatic control and coal powder injection. It has become China's first modern furnace and its equipment is up to the advanced world standards, with a utilization coefficient above 2 and coke ratio under 418 kg.

Last year, converters were revamped at the Wuhan iron and steel company according to our own designs, partly with domestic equipment and partly with caluclating instruments imported from abroad. This reform has helped boost production of steel billets qualified for the 1700 cm rolling mill.

These examples show that we can rely mainly on our own efforts to renovate our enterprises. At the same time, we may import some necessary and advanced equipment and technology which suit China's conditions.

XINHUA URGES DURABLE, MARKETABLE CONSUMER GOODS

[Commentary by XINHUA reporter: "Durable Consumer Goods Must Be Durable and Marketable"]

[Excerpts] Beijing, 16 Jul (XINHUA) -- After visiting a number of grassroots commercial units and markets of manufactured goods for daily use, this reporter strongly felt that raising the quality and marketability of durable consumer goods is an important link for increasing their sales volume. With the improvement of the people's living standards, the social demand for durable consumer goods has increased in recent years. According to statistics, the sales of sewing machines, electric fans, bicycles and wristwatches in the first half of this year increased between 26.4 percent and 36.7 percent as compared with the same period for 1981. In addition, the sales of television sets, refrigerators and washing machines also increased. At present, supply and demand are balanced, except for some famous brands of products whose supply falls short of demand. Actually, many unmarketable products are overstocked.

Durable consumer goods are called "three major items" or "five major items" which are more expensive. As far as the present purchasing power of people in urban and rural areas is concerned, one has to save for several years in order to buy a "major item." For this reason, people want such goods first to be durable. Goods that are able to withstand wear and tear or are really durable are relatively marketable; on the contrary, goods that are unable to withstand wear and tear and in which people have no trust are unsalable. Therefore, to improve the quality of durable consumer goods, it is first necessary to solve the problem of their durability. Next it is necessary to pay attention to their beauty and design. If consumer goods are not durable, their prospects will be nonexistent.

Durable consumer goods, except some famous brands, have almost been sold to the saturation point on the urban market. Large quantities of durable consumer goods are now going to the rural market. This makes it necessary to increase the marketability of such goods in the countryside. For example, take various kinds of radios. At present, each urban household has more than 1 radio on the average, while for every 100 rural households there are 11. Therefore, the countryside is a vast market for radios. However, supply and marketing cooperatives in the rural areas sold only 2,356,000 various kinds of radios from January to May of this year, 43.9 percent less than for the same period in 1981. In addition to slightly blocked channels of circulation, such factors as the reception capability, the quality of radios and the fact that they cannot meet the needs in the countryside are also main reasons for the decrease in sales. Bicycles are another example. The countryside urgently needs heavy-duty bicycles. However, since producing such bicycles only makes a small profit, factories are unwilling to manufacture them. Now the output of heavy-duty bicycles accounts for only half the total output of all bicycles.

In addition to turning out durable and marketable goods, industrial and commercial departments should also strive to reduce production costs and other expenses and produce and market more low-priced, durable consumer goods such as wristwatches, which are most welcomed by people in the countryside, at a cost of 30 to 60 yuan.

Many grassroots commercial departments hold that with the increasing improvement in people's living standards, the market for durable consumer goods will become brisker and the people will be more selective in buying such goods. The improvement of the quality and marketability of durable consumer goods has become a problem calling for urgent resolution by the industrial and commercial departments. In order not to bring new losses to the state, they should take effective measures to solve the problem in the two links of production and marketing, and not delay it any longer.

COMMENTATOR ON PROHIBITING SABOTAGE OF ELECTIONS

[Commentator's article: "Strictly Prohibit Illegal Organizational Activities in the Course of Democratic Elections"]

[Text] A handful of people in Feixiang County, Hebei Province, got together in secret to sabotage the party congress elections and to deal blows at and push out leading comrades of the county CCP committee who have achieved marked success in their work. This was a serious political event. This illegal organizational activity was not the only one of its kind.

As we know, those illegal organizational activities which were carried out in a small number of places to sabotage party elections or elections of people's congresses showed the following similarities although they had different backgrounds and specific circumstances. First, the main figures who carried out illegal organizational activities were mostly people who had serious problems during the "Great Cultural Revolution," but who have not received due punishment; people who nursed a grievance because they had been dismissed from their posts since the smashing of the "gang of four"; people who have been severely influenced by factionalist ideas and have not yet come to realize their errors and those who have been blinded by greed in these few years and have violated law and discipline.

These people did not belong to the same faction during the "Great Cultural Revolution," but they share the same rotten tastes because their interests coincide. Under the new conditions, they get together in their respective interests. Second, they play the same trick of flaunting the banner of "democarcy" to sabotage socialist democracy. They carry on the intrigue pursued during the "Great Cultural Revolution." They act one way to your face and another behind your back and establish secret ties to form a clique to pursue selfish interests. They spread leaflets and put up wall posters to confound black and white and confuse and poison people's minds. They preach the narrow-minded localistic ideas and make use of patriarchal or national sentiments to conceal the selfish and facionalist activities of a small number of people. They send anonymous letters to curse cadres whom they oppose. They use "money as their horses" and "wine as their army" and adopt methods such as "offering official posts and making lavish promises" and so forth to tempt people and canvass votes. Thev even illegally compile the name list of their "cabinet members" and force other delegates to put a circle round the names of their candidates. Third, their objective is to seize power over the party and the people and to try to discredit and drive away good comrades who are supported by most cadres and masses and thrust into power those who can serve their selfish interests.

It is obvious that this is an evil practice which is against the great trend of the efforts of the entire party and people of the whole country to build a high level of political democracy of socialism. Wherever it exercises its evil influence, it sabotages the normal democratic life and tramples upon the right of the cadres inside and outside the party and the masses and their representatives to vote and to stand for election. Good cadres and good comrades will be suppressed and squeezed out by the illegal organizational activities. Those who rode to power through rebellion and those who are severely influenced by factionalis ideas and have made a practice of beating, smashing and looting and have violated law and discipline politically and economically in recent years, become very cocky and congratulate each other on the prospect of getting good appointments. Such being the case, how can we relax our vigilance against illegal organizational activities, turn a blind eye to and yield to them? Instead, we should take expeditious measures to resolutely resist and prohibit them!

The "democracy" advertised by those who are engaged in illegal organization activities in elections is entirely different from the inner-party democracy and the people's democracy which our party has persistently advocated. The democratic right to vote enjoyed by the masses inside and outside the party according to law should be respected and protected. However, we should resolutely oppose the practice of carrying out illegal organizational activities in the name of carrying forward democracy. Therefore, while considering and talking over the list of candidates and organizing elections, we should strengthen party leadership, stick to the system of democratic centralism, fully carry forward socialist democracy, be bold in taking the mass line and place the problems arising in elections on the table for settlement. In so doing, we will prevent people with ulterior motives from seizing the opportunity to sabotage democratic elections.

It is of utmost importance to carry out painstaking and careful ideological and political work in the whole process of considering and discussing the name list of candidates and organizing the elections. According to the relevant stipulations in the party constitution, "guiding principles" and electoral law, we should take a clear-cut stand to tell people explicitly what they should do and what they should not so that election work will progress along the right and healthy track. The past practice of purely discussing the name list of the specific candidates alone and neglecting ideological and political work so that elections suffered setbacks should no longer occur in the future.

We should take expeditious measures to pay particular attention to and discover and resolutely stop all acts of sabotaging democratic elections. From considering and discussing name lists of candidates to the formal elections, leaders at all levels should be bold in carrying out their work.

Weakness, laxness and the abandonment of leadership can only provide those who carry out illegal organizational activities with opportunities. If leaders fail to expeditiously solve problems after they have discovered them because of the lack of firmness in principle, they are liable to aggravate matters. In future, we should investigate, openly expose and severely criticize illegal organizational activities as soon as they occur. With regard to those who engineer, direct and actively take part in these activities, we should apply sanctions against them in accordance with the discipline of the party and government in light of the seriousness of their errors or even investigate and affix their legal responsibility. If those who are guilty of illegal organizational activities are people who have been proved to have ridden to power by rebellion, elements who engaged in the practice of beating, smashing and looting, people who have been severely influenced by factionalist ideas or those who have severely violated the law and discipline, politically and economically in recent years, we should severely punish them. Of course, with regard to some comrades who committed mistakes because they went astray for a certain period of time, we should devote our main efforts to educating them and helping them solve their problems through criticism and self-criticism and summing up experience. As long as party organizations at all levels are bold in encouraging healthy trends, they will be able to effectively enhance the enthusiasm of the masses inside and outside the party for safeguarding socialist democracy and the socialist legal system.

COMMENTATOR STRESSES TAX REVENUE CADRES' ROLE

[Commentator's article: "Reinforce and Develop Well a Contingent of Tax Revenue Cadres"]

[Text] Tax revenue is an important source of a state's financial income, as well as an important economic lever to regulate production, circulation, distribution and consumption. Reinforcing and developing a small but efficient contingent of tax revenue cadres is a necessary step in improving taxation work.

Since the founding of the PRC, our taxation workers have conscientiously carried out the party's principles and policies under the leadership of party committees and governments at various levels. They have done many jobs and made great contributions to pushing ahead with production and increasing tax revenue, and thus won the respect of the whole society. However, in the 10 years of turbulence, our contingent of tax revenue cadres was seriously weakened and their initiative was harmed due to the influence of "leftist" thinking. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the contingent of tax revenue cadres has been gradually restored to its original size. Realizing the importance of their posts, many comrades have renewed high enthusiasm for their work. In the last few years, the tax revenue task has been completed relatively well. One of the indispensable reasons for this lies in the initiative and hard work of the vast number of tax revenue cadres.

One of the most conspicuous problems at present is the shortage of taxation workers. As a result of this shortage in taxation work, many tax items are overlooked; and, as supervision and inspection over taxpayers is neglected, tax evasion becomes a rather common practice. Last year, when checking evaded and overdue taxes, we found that they amounted to 1.3 billion yuan, and there were more than 40,000 households which had not paid their due tax for a long time. In some places, most taxes such as rural fair trade tax, tax on commune and brigade run industrial and commercial enterprises, and so on, are not being collected. The number of cadres is inadequate for pilot schemes of tax system reform, making studies in taxation policies and levying taxes on foreign trades. There is always a shortage of taxation personnel and lack of experienced tax revenue cadres to take over the posts of old cadres. According to an investigation, many of the existing taxation cadres are too old, and the natural attrition rate of staff and workers is relatively high. Those personnel who are qualified only account for one-third of the total existing personnel.

In many places, field personnel are especially lacking. As the size of the tax collection and taxation administration contingent fails to meet the practical needs, regulations can hardly be implemented, tasks are performed poorly, many taxes cannot be collected, and the state suffers great loss of financial revenue. Some places have already attached importance to these problems. However, quite a few places still have not paid enough attention to this work. Therefore, some problems remain which badly need to be solved. Such a situation should no longer continue.

In carrying out taxation work, we must strictly follow policies, bear heavy workloads, and deal with a myriad of problems. Therefore, we must make up our minds to establish a revolutionized contingent of young cadres with professional knowledge. Increasing the number of taxation personnel and reinforcing the taxation work contingent is an urgent task for the present. We must collect the full amount of taxes in good time from hundreds of thousands of enterprises, units and individuals with business income. We must push enterprises to improve management and economic returns so as to achieve an increase in production and revenue. All this work requires that our taxation workers make great efforts. Nothing can be achieved unless sufficient cadres are available. There are two solutions: first, give full play to the initiative of the existing taxation cadres; and second, recruit new cadres. The State Council has already expressly provided that the taxation department may augment its staff. Since last year, the taxation departments in some places have replenished their staffs. However, in most places, the progress is slow, and the task of reinforcing and developing the contingent of taxation cadres has not yet been carried out. At present, it is very necessary to extensively carry out education on upholding the four basic principles and strengthening the working discipline of our taxation cadres, as well as to promote professional training in a planned way so as to bring up as soon as possible a large number of taxation cadres who can uphold principles, are honest in performing their official duties, devoted to their work and professionally competent.

While strengthening political and ideological work, leading people at all levels must truly show concern for the daily life of taxation cadres. Our leading people should promptly study and solve in good time the practical difficulties which taxation cadres encounter in work; seriously handle the cases of a small number of people who disregard the tax revenue policy and taxation regulations, and those incidents of jointly attacking and beating up taxation cadres, so as to ensure that taxation workers can carry out their duties as usual and more efficiently fulfill the glorious task which the party and the state has entrusted to them.

NATIONAL COAL TRANSPORTATION MEETING HELD

OW170951 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Summary] "The Ministries of Railways and Coal Industry jointly held a national conference from 10 to 15 July in Xuzhou on the coordination and operation between railway departments and coal mines."

(Qin Likui), deputy chief of the Xuzhou railway subbureau, made a report at the conference introducing the experience of the subbureau in promoting coal transportation. He said: "Railways and coal mines belong to one family. We should work in unity and cooperate with each other to promote the four modernizations."

The subbureau has been overfulfilling transportation tasks for the Xuzhou mining bureau which has also been overfulfilling state coal output plans. The cooperation experience of the Xuzhou railway subbureau and Xuzhou mining bureau can be summarized as follows:

"First of all, the subbureau and the bureau have both eliminated departmentalism and adopted an overall point of view." In the past, they failed to coordinate efforts in transporting coal, thus affecting the fulfillment of both production tasks and causing damages to the state. In the course of practice, leaders of the subbureau and the bureau have realized the importance of putting national interests above all and constantly educated the workers and cadres in adopting an overall point of view.

"Second, they have set up a sound coordinating organization from the top to the bottom and adopted an effective coordinating method." In order to coordinate the operation in transporting coal, the subbureau and the bureau have set up a coordinating committee consisting of responsible persons from departments concerned of both sides.

"Third, they have taken a scientific attitude and paid keen attention to production safety and to tapping the potentials and carrying out technical innovations, thereby ensuring the transportation of coal." The subbureau and the bureau have jointly carried out technical innovation to improve the conditions for transporting coal.

GENG BIAO, WEI GUOQING AT PLA ANNIVERSARY FORUM

[Text] Beijing, 17 Jul (XINHUA) -- This morning responsible comrades of the Central Military Commission attended a forum of writers, editors and readers held by the editorial department of XING HUO LIAO YUAN [A SINGLE SPARK CAN START A PRAIRIE FIRE] in celebration of the PLA's 55th founding anniversary.

Comrades Geng Biao, Wei Guoqing, Li Da, Li Zhimin and Li Jukui cordially joined writers, editors and readers from in and outside the PLA in the forum. In his speech Comrade Wei Guoqing said: In commemoration of the PLA's 55th founding anniversary, leading comrades of the Central Military Commission Deng Xiaoping, Ye Jianying, Xu Xiangqian and Nei Rongzhen have made calligraphic inscriptions for XING HUO LIAO YUAN journal urging us to inherit and carry forward the glorious traditions of the People's Army and do a good job in carrying out education in the traditions. We should conscientiously implement the guidelines contained in the inscriptions and pass on our party's proletarian revolutionary spirit from generation to generation.

Comrades Geng Biao and Li Zhimin spoke in their capacity as old readers and longtime writers. They said: In the past 55 years our army has defeated the powerful enemy from at home and abroad and has, in the course of this, fostered fine traditions. They are our cherished heritages with which our army has been able to vanquish the enemy. The 10-volume recently published revised collection of XING HUO LIAO YUAN is a vivid teaching aid which our army will use to carry out education in revolutionary traditions. Today, some young people who have failed to udnerstand our revolutionary history of hard struggle and have been influenced by capitalist ideology lack the great and far-reaching communist idelas. This urges us to carry out education in our glorious traditions, in patriotism and in revolutionary outlook on life. We are willing to contribute our remaining years to the education of the younger generation.

A number of young readers present expressed the determination to use XING HUO LIAO YUAN as their textbook in studying revolutionary history and to inherit and carry forward the revolutionary spirit demonstrated by revolutionaries of the older generation in making hard struggles and laying down their lives for the cause of realizing communism.

Xie Xianonai [6200 4607 6621], vice chairman of the party History Materials Collection Committee under the CCP Central Committee, and responsible persons of the PLA general departments, branches and services, including Liu Huaqing, Liang Biye, Gan Weihan, Hua Nan, Zhang Lingbin and Li Zhen, were also present at the forum.

PLA CONDUCTS PATRIOTIC EDUCATION ACTIVITIES

[Report by XINHUA reporter]

[Excerpts] Beijing, 17 Jul (XINHUA) -- By carrying out vivid patriotic education, the PLA has further aroused the revolutionary zeal of large numbers of commanders and fighters in loving the party, the country and socialism.

Carrying forward the spirit of putting the interests of the motherland above everything else and pledging to make more contributions to it, commanders and fighters have been working selflessly to defend and realize the four modernizations in order to make China strong and prosperous.

The army began conducting patriotic education in all of its units after the publication of the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC." This education has been carried out even more extensively since the beginning of this year. Guided by the call for "fostering the patriotism of putting the interests of the motherland above everything else and the pioneer spirit of selfless devotion to the motherland" issued in the "Resolution," this education involves ardently loving the CCP, the socialist motherland and the People's Army. In view of the fact that today's young people lack an understanding of the motherland, this education has been conducted vigorously in such forms as giving lectures, visiting local places, showing relevant films, giving speeches, holding forums and reciting poems which sing the praises of the motherland to introduce to young people the long history of the motherland as well as our beautiful land, rich mineral deposits and brilliant culture. Thus, young people have been given a vivid, profound education on the great beloved motherland.

In carrying out patriotic education, many PLA units have particularly stressed the study of modern Chinese history and the modern history of the revolution. Some cadres and fighters said that their ideas were straightened out through the study. Thus, they have a firmer faith in communism and the party's correct leadership, and are fully confident of the beautiful future of the motherland.

In the face of bourgeois ideological influences and material temptations of various kinds, PLA fighters guarding the special economic zones in Guangdong and Fujian have guarded against corruption by bourgeois ideology and never allowed themselves to be contaminated by it, thus retaining the true qualities of the People's Army characterized by plain living and hard struggle.

[Excerpts] Beijing, 17 Jul (XINHUA) -- The graduate school of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences today held a ceremony in the small auditorium of the Great Hall of the People here to award its first master's degree certificates to 317 postgraduates who completed studies last year. Being a science, Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought reflects the requirements of the law of historical development. We firmly believe in Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought because of our trust in the law of historical development and our belief in science. This has been attested by China's history of the past century or so and will be further attested in the future.

Deng Liqun continued: I hope that you will further deepen your understanding of the law of historical development and strengthen your belief in science. Despite the many hardships and serious setbacks in the course historical development, history will go on by conquering them. OW161316 Beijing XINHUA in English 1244 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 16 (XINHUA) -- One thousand people from various walks of life in Beijing gathered in the Capital Theater today to mourn over the death of people's artist Jin Shan. This prominent actor, director and drama educator died of cerebral hemorrhage at the age of 71 on July 7.

Jin Shan was a member of the National Committee of the China Federation of Literary and Art Circles, vice-chairman of the Chinese Dramatists' Association, council member of the Chinese Film Artists' Association, president of the Central Drama Institute, and chairman of the television play committee under the Ministry of Radio and Television. He was also a member of the National Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference.

Jin Shan, who began his dramatist career five decades ago, starred in or directed around 50 plays and 10 films, and wrote or adapted 15 plays and screenplays. He was also the author of a number of treatises on performing art.

At the memorial meeting, Xia Yan, vice-chairman of the China Federation of Literary and Art Circles, said Jin Shan was a people's artist who made unremitting efforts to explore new ideas in arts, following realism while drawing on the traditional theater.

In the early 1930's Jin Shan took an active part in the progressive cultural movement in Shanghai and joined the China Anti-Imperialist League and the left-wing Dramatists' League. He became a member of the Chinese Communist Party in 1932. Despite difficult conditions, he often went to factories to organize workers drama groups.

After the outbreak of the war against Japanese aggression in 1937, he led a resistance drama troupe to tour many parts of the country, and later led a troupe to Southeast Asia, where they performed among Overseas Chinese plays showing the Chinese people in the fight against Japanese aggression. He returned to Chongqing in 1942. Afterwards, apart from working to develop revolutionary drama and films Jin Shan also did other work for the Chinese people's cause of liberation.

Jin Shan held the posts of vice-president and general director of the Chinese Youth Art Theater after the founding of the People's Republic. As president of the Central Drama Institute, he had devoted his recent years to passing his rich stage experience to the students. He also proposed the formation of an art committee on television plays, which have become a new art form in China.

Today's memorial meeting was presided over by Zhu Muzhi, minister of culture. FIRST HALF CAPITAL CONSTRUCTION SUCCESSES NOTED

[Text] Beijing, July 18 (XINHUA) -- A new coal mine with an annual capacity of 90,000 tons and power generating units were among the 16 big and medium-sized capital construction items completed in the first half of this year.

In capital construction, the state is putting chief emphasis on the energy industries, communications and transport and light and textile industries.

The 900,000-ton coal mine is located in Handan, a rising iron and steel center in Hebei Province. The other projects completed in the first half of this year include a thermal power generating unit of 200,000 kilowatts for a power plant in Fulan Ergi, northernmost Heilongjiang Province; another power generating unit of 125,000 kilowatts at the giant Gezhouba hydroelectric power station on the Yangtze River; and a tyre cord factory in Pingdingshan of Henan Province with a designed annual output of 13,000 tons.

The first stage of work was completed for the Meishan iron smelting base near Shanghai with an annual iron ore output of 1.5 million tons.

A petro-chemical plant in Anqing, Anhui Province, a cotton mill in Foshan of Guangdong Province and five sugar refineries in three southern provinces and the Guangxi region are also among the newly completed projects.

Smooth progress has been made in building all the 50 big and medium-sized construction items planned for this year. Construction of new wharves and other harbor facilities at Qinhuangdao and Shijiusuo has proceeded on schedule. Construction has made headway in building the 280-kilometer Beijing-Qinhuangdao railway and the 300-kilometer Yanzhou-Shijiusuo railway which, together with the harbor facilities, are designed to speed up the transportation of coal to China's southern provinces and for export.

Sixty percent of the work involved in installing three sets of imported equipment for the second stage of construction on the Shanghai general petro-chemical works has been finished, and the entire installation work is expected to be finished by the end of this year.

Construction of a workshop for the Yizheng chemical fiber plant in Jiangsu Province and the installation of a set of synthetic ammonia equipment at a chemical fertilizer plant of the Zhejiang oil refinery are under way.

New housing projects with about 1.7 million flats, covering a total of 88.2 million square meters of floor space, were under construction in China's cities and industrial centers in the first half of this year. This was 18 percent more than in the corresponding period of last year.

During the current readjustment of China's national economy, state investment in capital construction has been reduced while spendings on education, public health, scientific research and people's housing projects increased. The 1982 investment in capital construction, although bigger than that for 1981, is one third less than in 1978, the year before the readjustment started. But more concentrated use of funds and materials and improved management has resulted in faster progress of key capital construction projects. The number of large and medium-sized capital construction projects being undertaken this year is two-thirds less than in 1978.

EXPORTS, IMPORTS IN FIRST HALF REPORTED

[Text] Beijing, July 16 (XINHUA) -- The total value of export handled by organizations under the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade reached 10,200 million U.S. dollars in the first six months of this year, 10.2 percent over the same period of last year, according to figures released by the ministry.

Total import value was 7,800 million U.S. dollars in the first half of the year, 19.7 percent less than in the period of last year.

A breakdown of figures shows the export of petroleum increased by 15 percent, and that of machinery and equipment by 19 percent. Rolled steel, raw silk, cotton-polyester cloth, garments, bicycles, sewing machines, jute and ambary, peppermint oil and pig bristles also registered increases in varying degrees. But the export of shelled peanuts, tung oil, cotton cloth, cotton knitwear, rabbit hair, cashmere, drawnwork and pearls decreased.

Among the import commodities, chemical fertilizers, insecticides, timber, refined sugar, chemical materials and medicinal herbs all registered considerable increases in the first half of 1982.

However, the import of complete sets of equipment and instruments decreased by 43 percent, and that of rolled steel, cooper and other metals decreased by 23 percent; imports of cotton, chemical fibers and durable consumer goods all decreased in varying degrees.

The lowering of international market prices for many of the imported products was another important factor for the decrease in the total value of import.

EXPANDED AGRICULTURE AIDS INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION

[Text] Beijing, July 16 (XINHUA) -- Both production and marketing of agriculture-related manufactured goods have shown sharp increases in China since the beginning of the year, according to figures provided by the State Statistical Bureau.

By the end of June, production of most industrial goods originating from farm and animal products had risen to varying degrees. Output of cotton yarn increased by 9.2 percent, cotton cloth by 8.8 percent, silk fabrics by 16.5 percent, knitting wool by 37.3 percent, sugar by 12.6 percent, cigarettes by 15.2 percent and beer by 20.7 percent in the first six months this year over the same 1981 period.

Apart from an ample supply of cereal grains, edible oils, pork, eggs and other farm produce for the urban market, agriculture also provides the textile and light industry with raw materials. The amount of major materials it supplies such as food grains, cotton, oil-bearing crops, milk, hides, tobacco, silk cocoon, jute and ambari all increased to varying degrees. China's cotton output amounted to 2.96 million tons in 1981 an increase of 33 percent over 1978. Oil-bearing crops nearly doubled the output of 5.21 million tons in 1978 to 10.2 million tons in 1981. With a 51 percent rise in the sugar cane and beet output in the last three years, the country's sugar industry went up at an average annual rate of 11.7 percent.

Meanwhile, expansion of the rural economy has resulted in a vast rural market to absorb industrial products including chemical fertilizers, farm machinery and tools. The number of walking tractors provided for the peasants was up 40.3 percent between January and May over the same 1981 period. Around 30 percent more small tractors and rubber tired carts and 49 percent more pumps were sold to the countryside in the first five months this year as compared with the same 1981 period. Sales of sewing machines and bicycles to villages were up 70 to 50 percent respectively during this period than in the same 1981 period.

To meet the needs of the expanded rural economy, effective measures are now being worked out in all parts of China to facilitate the supply of more industrial goods to the country's rural areas.

MEDIA VIEWS SHULTZ' APPOINTMENT, ATTITUDES

CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO Article

[Article by Chen Yu-ching: "Shultz and New U.S. Diplomatic Posture"]

[Excerpts] Haig has now resigned as secretary of state, and Shultz, former President Nixon's secretary of the treasury, has succeeded him in taking charge of the Department of State. Although conservatives in the Republican Party regard the change of personnel as a change in form, not in essence, Shultz is a middle roader in the Republican Party and inclines towards the liberals. Shultz is a team player, but has no set views on foreign policy. Thus, he will be able to effectively implement President Reagan's foreign policy. Hence, the change of secretary of state by Reagan will at least make it possible for the United States to assume a new posture in its international policy.

As far as today's different American attitudes towards foreign policy are concerned, Haig is among those who advocate "unity with the allies against the Soviet Union." He advocated that, in taking any measures against the Soviet Union, the United States should coordinate with Western Europe and enlist its sympathy and support. In other words, he regarded the maintenance of the alliance more important than confrontation with the Soviet Union. However, he denied that he was soft on U.S. policy to the Soviet Union. He told columnist Safire: History will prove me to have been a hardliner towards the Soviet Union. He denounced the lifting by the United States last year of the embargo against the Soviet Union on food grain as the biggest mistake in Reagan's foreign policy. He did not deny that there were differences between the Department of State and the White House on China policy. When Safire pointed out to him that the White House was fairly insistent on arms sales to Taiwan, Haig asked him to read a short article written recently by Nixon, stressing that Taiwan's security depends on the strengthening of U.S. relations with the Chinese Communists. That means that, in being excessively accommodating to, and compromising with, the Chinese Communists, Haig aimed at forming a strategic relationship with them, taking Taiwan's security into account. When he (the State Department) held talks with the Chinese Communists, he did not inform the White House of some of the results of those talks, no matter how harmful they were to Taiwan's rights and interests. According to a report by U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT, the White House had a strong aversion to such practice, which was also a main reason for his dismissal from office.

Now Shultz has succeeded Haig as secretary of state. President Reagan and other American officials in Washington maintain that U.S. foreign policy, which has a certain continuity, will remain unchanged. However, new personnel often come up with new policies. The personality and basic world outlook of the secretary of state are bound to have a bearing on the formulation and implementation of U.S. foreign policy. Therefore, Shultz' taking over the Department of State will at least bring about a change in the U.S. diplomatic posture.

First, the day he was nominated as secretary of state, Shultz earnestly stated that he had known President Reagan for a long time and that they knew each other very well. Therefore, he will not challenge the President's anticommunist ideology -- which will be the basis for future U.S. foreign policy.

Second, U.S. confrontation measures against the Soviet Union, including disarmament talks, will certainly be based on U.S. interests and strength and will not be restricted by her Western allies.

Third, on the Middle East issue, the United States will adopt a balanced attitude to promote the realization of peace there.

Fourth, the United States will pursue a good-neighbor policy to enlist sympathy and cooperation from Central and South American countries.

Fifth, the United States will continue to strengthen its relations with the Chinese Communists, but not at the price of infringing on Taiwan's rights and interests and will ensure the integrity of the Taiwan Relations Act.

Views on Arms Sales Noted

OW190637 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Station commentary on U.S. arms sale to Taiwan]

[Text] Secretary of State George Shultz has pledged that the United States would continue to sell defensive weapons to the Republic of China. Senator Barry Goldwater announced that the embassy in Peking [as heard] has been instructed to notify the Chinese Communists to this effect. People of the Republic of China on Taiwan breathed a sigh of relief at this news. They have heard that the State Department was proposing a new Shanghai communique with the Chinese Communists that would have phased out the weapons sales for the defense of Taiwan. This text apparently went to President Reagan, but was then returned to the State Department. With Secretary Shultz at the helm, it may not be heard of again.

The Chinese Communists have been making so much noise that many people may be unaware of what is involved in this weapons sale. Peking said that Taiwan is Chinese Communist property and that the United States has no right to sell armaments for its defense. On the contrary, the Chinese Communists have no title to Taiwan. They have never held the island province, which was returned to the Republic of China by Japan in 1945.

The Shanghai Communique did not extend a condition to the Chinese Communists, let alone forbid the sale of weapons to the Republic of China. President Jimmy Carter extended the recognition to the Chinese Communists as of 1 January 1979, but in derecognizing the Republic of China, he did not accept the Chinese Communists' claim to Taiwan. He merely said that the United States acknowledged the claim. Richard Nixon had done the same in 1972. Congress subsequently passed and President Carter signed the Taiwan Relations Act. This set up an elaborate system of unofficial recognition symbols and offices, called upon the United States to supply weapons for the defense of Taiwan and obligated the United States to regard any move against the island as a transgression of the peace.

The intention of the Congress is not to find a solution of the China problem against the Republic of China and the people of Taiwan. Ronald Reagan spoke angrily to Mr. Carter at the time of Taiwan's derecognition. He even said that, under a Reagan presidency, the United States would upgrade relations with free China. Secretary Shultz has now returned U.S. policy to the point at which the Taiwan Relations Act was made law of the United States. The Chinese Communists' claim has again been rejected. Their protest against the supply of defensive weapons to Taiwan has been dismissed. This is a valued and important new assurance to the people of the Republic of China. Although the free Chinese people hope for the reunification of China under the condition of freedom and democracy, they have no intention of using U.S. weapons for that purpose. China's schism will be healed by the Chinese people under peaceful auspices. It is ridiculous to think that the few weapons supplied by the United States would be sufficient to attack a subcontinent of 1 billion people. For the last 2 years, the Chinese Communists have been desparately trying to persuade the United States to get out of the way so Taiwan could be taken and communized. The reason is clear. The Republic of China in Taiwan is one of the most successful developing countries in the world. The mainland has been going from bad to worse. It couldn't modernize or allow even the smallest increment of human rights and liberty. Quietly but firmly and more and more frequently, the mainland people are asking why the Chinese Communists cannot do as well as the Nationalist government on Taiwan. The only possible answer is that communism provides too insurmountable an obstacle. In their heart, the communists know that if Taiwan and the Republic of China are not liquidated, their own existence will be increasingly jeopardized. The United States has provided a new hope that the China problem can be settled by the Chinese people themselves peacefully and within the foreseeable future.

CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO ON PRC ARMS SALES ULTIMATUM

["Exclusive Dispatch" by special correspondent Fu Chien-chung]

[Text] Washington, 9 Jul -- American conservative personages disclosed the ultimatum sent by the Chinese Communists in early April to the Reagan administration regarding their stand against U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. In the ultimatum, the Chinese Communists threatened to downgrade Peiping's diplomatic relations with Washington if the United States ignored their stand against arms sales to Taiwan.

[Garry] Jarmin, executive chairman of the American Council for Free Asia, said yesterday that the Chinese Communists' ultimatum was the reason President Reagan sent letters to Chinese Communist leaders and dispatched Vice President Bush to visit Peiping.

At a press conference, (Wei-Jui-Ke), chairman of the organization of American leagues, said yesterday that, in his talks with former Secretary of State Haig on U.S.-Chinese Communist relations, he found Haig to have an "extremely improper fear" of the threat by the Chinese Communists to downgrade relations.

Conservative personages, such as Jarmin and (Wei-Jui-Ke), regarded the Chinese Communists' clamor for downgrading relations as vociferous intimidation. They said that, even if U.S.-Chinese Communist relations were downgraded, it would not harm the United States, because the Chinese Communists need the United States far more than the latter needs the former.

The Chinese Communists' "embassy" in Washington was following very closely a series of activities by leaders of the conservatives in support of the Republic of China. The Chinese Communists' "embassy" sent three of its "officials" to attend yesterday's press conference held by conservative personages. Two XINHUA correspondents were also present and asked Jarmin: Why have conservatives launched a movement at this time to interfere in "China's internal affairs"?

Jarmin unhesitatingly told the Chinese Communist correspondents that the Chinese Communists have no sovereignty whatsoever over Taiwan because the land, people and government of Taiwan are not under their control. Jarmin said: In fact, today's China is a country in which there are two governments which rule Taiwan and the mainland respectively, just as in the status quo of East and West Germany and that of South and North Korea.

After being lectured by Jarmin, the Chinese Communist correspondents were not amused and raised no more questions.

U.S. TAIWAN LOBBY, KUOMINTANG 'CONSPIRACY' HIT

HK180738 Hong Kong HSIN WAN PAO in Chinese 18 Jul 82 p 2

["New Talk" column: "Beijing Denounces Taiwan Lobby Leaders"]

[Text] An item of news came out of Taipei a few days ago to the effect that Beijing was preparing to launch an armed attack on Taiwan in 1985 or 1986. This news was given out by Hsia Tian, the Kuomintang "deputy minister of national defense." The Taipei press did not give detailed reports on this news, which was passed on by foreign agencies.

Clear-sighted people can very easily judge that this is a move of the Kuomintang, in coordination with the Taiwan lobby, to force the White House to sell arms to Taiwan. As everyone knows, Beijing has by no means excluded the possibility of using force to liberate Taiwan, but has made very little mention of this point in recent years; on the contrary, Beijing has in every respect expressed its desire and sincerity for reunification through peaceful negotiations. An example was the nine-point scheme proposed by NPC Standing Committee Chairman Ye Jianying last year. Article 30 of the draft constitution, stating that "the state may, where necessary, establish special administrative regions...." has provided still more of a legal basis for the nine-point scheme.

At a time when calls for peaceful reunification are daily growing louder and are being supported by people both at home and abroad, there are two types of people who become most flustered: first, the power-holders of the Kuomintang on Taiwan, and second, the Taiwan lobby leaders in the United States, such as Goldwater. These two types of people have been very active lately and could be described as coordinating with each other. At the same time Hsia Tian was clamoring in Taipei that Beijing would launch an armed attack on Taiwan in 3 or 4 years, Goldwater, in the Senate, was inveigling Shultz into agreeing that the United States have never formally recognized [chengren] the PRC's "right of political rule and control" over Taiwan and into insisting that the United States had the right to continue selling arms to Taiwan in accordance with "Taiwan's defense requirements."

The Kuomintang on Taiwan and the Taiwan lobby in the United States echo each other; both events occured on 13 and 14 July. Obviously this was a carefully schemed conspiracy.

Beijing has responded to this conspiracy in the past 2 days. First, Peng Zhen called on the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and the Overseas Chinese to discuss in depth the draft constitution, pointing out yet again: The stipulation in Article 30 of the draft legalizes the basic contents of the nine-point principle and policy put forward by NPC Standing Committee Chairman Ye Jianying last year and sets down the legal basis for the peaceful reunification of the motherland. Second, RENMIN RIBAO carried a short commentary on 18 July denouncing Goldwater for being consistently hostile to the Chinese people, exerting himself in advocating the separation of Taiwan from China and trying hard to hamper and sabotage the development of Sino-U.S. relations; the short commentary also pointed out: "At the hearings Shultz echoed Goldwater's remarks running counter to the principles set forth in the joint communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations. This cannot but astonish the Chinese people."

The Kuomintang and the Taiwan lobby are taking advantage of the change of U.S. secretary of state to engage in rabid activities. Beijing's attitude is clear and firm. First, there is only one China, Taiwan is part of China, and the PRC Government is the sole legal Government of China; second, the Chinese Government has consistently and resolutely opposed U.S. arms sales to Taiwan; third, "people will wait and see how Mr Shultz will carry out the U.S. Government's policy toward China."

WEN WEI PO SCORES 'TWO CHINAS,' SOFTBALL TOURNEY

[Article by Kuan Chien-Tzu [4619 6015 1311]: "The United States and Taiwan Play 'the Dog Wags Its Tail'"]

[Text] The world women's softball championships, which has almost been forgotten by people, has been held in Taipei and has also wound up in Taipei.

The Taipei newspapers have loudly "trumpeted" that thousands of people "waved the national flay" and "sang the national anthem." They do not appear to be covering the world women's softball championships, but seem to be reporting a Kuomintang celebration, the celebration of a so-called Kuomintang political victory.

Yes, they are celebrating a victory. Are they celebrating the winning of the championship? No, the Taipei women's team was the runner-up. This of course is also something to be happy about. We are also Chinese, and on hearing the news of the women of our Taiwan Province winning second place, we are naturally just as happy as the Taiwan compatriots.

However, the Taiwan authorities are not celebrating the winning of second place by the women's team. For at the beginning of the game, they had arranged for thousands of people to "wave the national flag" and "sing the national anthem." They are celebrating the opening of the "two Chinas' farce which the American Don Porter, secretary general of the International Softball Federation [ISF], has directed by taking advantage of this world women's softball championships.

The Taiwan authorities are not going to admit tht they are a party to the "two Chinas" conspiracy. They will say: We have only one China and that is the Republic of China. However, the question is that Porter is carrying on the "two Chinas" policy. The ISF originally accepted the People's Republic of China as a member state. Moreover, it has eliminated the membership of the so-called "Republic of China" and replaced it with the Chinese Taipei Softball Association. It has also stipulated that the flag and song must be changed. Now the American Don Porter, secretary general of the ISF, deliberately allowed Taiwan to use its former "national flag" and "national anthem" and also agreed in May for the Taiwan side to send invitations from Los Angeles to various member states in the name of the "Republic of China." Is this not plainly an overt manufacture of "two Chinas"?

Naturally, certain people in Taipei are only the performers on the stage. The director is Porter and his bosses are diehards, the old imperialist elements and the new hegemonist elements in America, some of whom wield power and hold office in the present U.S. administration. Every injustice has it perpetrator and every debt has its debtor. The United States is in this case both the perpetrator and debtor. There is a saying in English that "the tail wags the dog." This is the metaphor for a lackey leading its master by the nose. The present "two Chinas" farce is a typical case of the "dog wagging its tail."

For example, the United States is selling arms to Taiwan in order to encourage and support the Taiwan authorities to oppose the peaceful unification of the motherland so that they will always run their own kingdom and also always remain the "property of the United States" and become the "unsinkable aircraft carrier" of the United States. Moreover, the matter of the sale of arms to Taiwan is of course not approved or handled by any congressmen or people of any conservative organization. It is approved and handled by the U.S. Government!

According to the latest information, George Shultz, the candidate for secretary of state of the U.S. Government, openly declared in the Senate: I support the continued supply of arms to Taiwan if they are used for the purpose of defense.

Defense against who? Please explain clearly, Mr Shultz! Why does Taiwan Province, which is Chinese territory, require your U.S.-made arms to defend itself against China? Whatever form China uses to exercise its sovereignty over Taiwan Province, what right has the United States to defend it? If this is not violating China's sovereignty and interfering in China's internal affairs, what do you call it? If you say this is not directed against China, then who is it directed against" Please explain clearly once more! Do you dare?

PRESS CALLS FOR STUDY OF DRAFT CONSTITUTION

WEN WEI PO Editorial

HK180256 Hong Kong WEN WEI PO in Chinese 18 Jul 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Everyone Should Join in the Discussion on the Constitution"]

[Text] The motherland has called on the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and the Overseas Chinese to actively take part in the discussion on the draft constitution and to be concerned about the revision and drawing up of the constitution. This call was made by Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee. The call was the sole purport of his talk on 16 July. Such earnestness and concern suffice to show the motherland's care for and expectations of the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and the Overseas Chinese.

Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao will not be fully implementing the new constitution for a certain period of time; however, this certainly does not mean that the constitution is none of our concern. In a broader sense, as Chinese, every activity and achievement of the motherland has a direct or indirect effect on us, and fills us patriots with a sense of common weal and woe. This was the case with the turmoil of the Cultural Revolution, and also with the current four modernizations drive. Now the motherland is revising its constitution, which will make clear and specific stipulations regarding the basic principles for establishing the state, the state and political systems, citizen rights and duties, and the future line and orientation; it will become the legal basis for all action. As Chinese, and as compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao, how can we ignore this fundamental law?

In a specific sense, certain clauses of the constitution will be directly linked to the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and the Overseas Chinese. In his talk, Peng Zhen quoted two articles of the constitution, namely, those concerning "the establishment of special administrative regions" and "the protection of Overseas Chinese" and "returned Overseas Chinese and relatives of Chinese residents abroad living in China." These both concern us. The central authorities have repeatedly explained that the article regarding the protection of Overseas Chinese is applicable to the Hong Kong and Macao compatriots. As the motherland builds its four modernizations, there are closer economic and trade links between Hong Kong and Macao and the mainland, with continuous comings and goings. How to protect the legal rights and legitimate interests of the Hong Kong and Macao compatriots will become an issue requiring consideration in the course of revising the constitution. As this issue is closely tied to our interests, we should do well in exercising our duty to speak, to ensure that the constitution can fully express public opinion of all sectors.

The Hong Kong and Macao compatriots abound in patriotic traditions. When Mr Sun Yat-sen was working for the democratic revolution, Hong Kong and Macao became his prop at one stage, from where he organized forces, collected funds and directed the struggle. During the wars against Japan and Chiang Kai-shek, Hong Kong and Macao and the interior beat the drums together and stimulated the arrival of the high tide of revolution. After the establishment of new China, large numbers of cadres and workers went back to the interior to take part in revolution and construction. Now that the motherland has entered a new era of building the four modernizations, entrepreneurs and intellectuals in Hong Kong and Macao have taken the lead in responding, by investing in construction, promoting trade, and importing advanced technology and knowledge. They have made fine contributions. This surging patriotic fervor of the Hong Kong and Macao compatriots expresses the fine traditions and national spirit of the Chinese nation. It is a very precious thing that should be further developed.

Please, throw this patriotic fervor into the revision and formulation of the constitution. Adopt all forms and use all channels to state the views of the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and the Overseas Chinese on the draft constitution, and pool the wisdom of the masses, so that the constitution can better reflect public opinion and the national reality, and thus further promote China's democracy and legal system, prosperity and strength, and accomplish the great ideal of reunifying the motherland.

TA KUNG PAO Editorial

[Editorial: "Discuss the Constitution in a Penetrating Way; Look Forward Together to Reunification and Prosperity"]

[Text] Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and the committee for the revision of the constitution, made a speech recently, calling on the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and those residing abroad to study the "draft of the constitution of the PRC" in a penetrating way. According to our understanding, the words "in a penetrating way" are especially important.

The NPC Standing Committee decided in the last 10 days of April this year to make public the "draft of the revised constitution of the PRC" for discussion by the people of all nationalities in the country. The committee for the revision of the constitution will, in the light of the opinions and suggestions from the nationwide discussions, make further revisions and then submit the draft to the Fifth Session of the Fifth NPC, which will convene by the end of this year, for examination and approval.

Over the past 2 months or so, together with the mainland people, and taking an attitude of being masters of the country, the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and those residing abroad have shown great concern for the drafting and revision of the constitution, taken an active part in the discussion and aired their views. Since the promulgation of the draft of the revised constitution, our paper has also carried a number of reports and articles in this respect.

The compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and those residing abroad have always shown great concern for the reunification and prosperity of the motherland. The 1 billion Chinese people and the overseas compatriots have been longing for a unified and prosperous motherland. Their desire should be reflected in the constitution, which is the fundamental law of the country, because this constitution is in the vital interests of the Chinese people of all nationalities -- not only those on the mainland, but also those in Taiwan, Hong Kong, Macao and other countries as well.

For this reason, every Chinese, whether he is at home or abroad, has the right and is dutybound to discuss the draft of the revised constitution in a penetrating way and actively offer opinions so that, on the one hand, the fourth constitution of the PRC can become more perfect, and on the other hand, to gain a better understanding of the draft as well as the ideals and future of the state.

While calling for further discussion of the draft of the revised constitution, Vice Chairman Peng Zhen also put forth the principle of "respecting history, respecting reality and looking forward to the future" and mentioned two provisions in the draft which concern the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and those residing abroad.

The first provision he mentioned was Article 30 of the draft of the revised constitution which says that "the state may, where necessary, establish special administrative regions. The rules and regulations in force in special administrative regions shall be stipulated by law according to specific conditions." This has legalized the basic contents of the nine-point policy elaborated by Chairman Ye Jianying last September and provided a legal basis for the peaceful reunification of the motherland. Since its promulgation, the nine-point policy has been attracting widespread attention from those who concern themselves with the reunification of China.

Another provision mentioned is Article 47 of the draft of the revised constitution. It says: "The PRC protects the legitimate rights and interests of Chinese residents abroad and protects the lawful rights and interests of returned Overseas Chinese and the relatives of Chinese residents abroad living in China." This is more clear and perfect than the previous constitutions. It is a guarantee for the large number of Overseas Chinese compatriots to share national pride with the 1 billion people living on the motherland.

The compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and those residing abroad are members of the big family of the PRC and the masters of the country. Therefore, everyone who concerns himself with the future of the motherland will certainly take delight in further discussing the draft of the revised constitution and look forward together to the reunification and prosperity of China.

HSIN WAN PAO VIEWS U.S. GRAIN SALES TO USSR

["Evening Talk" column by Yang Chu [5017 2612]: "U.S. Grain, Russian Rubles"]

[Text]

Agreement Expires in September

The U.S. agreement on grain sales to the Soviet Union will expire on 30 September, 2 and 1/2 months from now. Does the United States want to continue selling grain to the Soviet Union? Does it want to negotiate a new agreement? This has become a subject of heated debate in official circles in the United States.

A Call for an Extension

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has proposed that the Reagan administration negotiate a new agreement with the Soviet Union, or extend the existing agreement by 1 year In other words, he favors continued grain sales to the Soviet Union. It is predicted that the Soviet agricultural crop this year will also be poor. This will be its fourth bad year. In the coming 12 months, it will allegedly have to import 42 million tons of grain.

Those Not in Favor

A fairly large number of people in the administration have voiced disapproval. One of the reasons is that since the United States has urged Western Europe not to cooperate with the Soviet Union in building the Siberian natural gas pipeline and Japan not to cooperate with the Soviet Union in opening up the continental shelf oilfield of Sakhalin, how can it have the audacity to go ahead with the grain sales? Those who argue in favor of the sales say that these are two different things and cannot be lumped together.

Strange Arguments

How can these be two different things? They say that the Soviet Union must pay for grain in hard cash, thereby reducing its expenditures on arms expansion and war preparations — as if this was a big contribution to the cause of peace. On the other hand, Western Europe's help to the Soviet Union in building the natural gas pipeline enables the Soviet Union to export natural gas to earn money!

Naturally Interested

Those people in the United States who consider "the export of grain as a contribution to peace" may have failed to realize, or pretend not to realize, that Soviet troops, including those aggressors in Afghanistan, must be fed before they can fight.

On Thursday, the U.S. administration will debate this problem of grain sales to the Soviet Union. Europeans and the Japanese will perhaps be interested in this debate.

U.S. FIRMS DEALING WITH PRC OFFERED INSURANCE

HK100120 Hong Kong SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST in English 10 Jul 82 Business News p 1

[By Julie Auyeung]

[Text] American firms dealing with China are now being offered 20-year coverage against investment risks by the U.S. Government-backed insurance corporation in what is seen as a demonstration of confidence.

Previously, some private firms had offered terms of two to three years, the head of the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC), Mr Craig Nalen, said.

Since April, when OPIC's board authorized the move, it has issued insurance policies to three companies: American President Line, AMF (manufacturer of sporting goods) and Caterpillar. A number of other companies have applied, and once their arrangements with the Chinese Government are complete, OPIC is likely to give them insurance, Mr Nalen told Business News. They cover light industries, food processing and energy projects. "They will add to the existing hundreds of millions of dollars worth of projects, and they are in various stages of discussion."

U.S. firms which have already established business with China are not entitled to the insurance coverage. But if they start new businesses or extend present operations, the new portion can be insured by OPIC.

Americans still have "hang-ups" about the political stability of China, Mr Nalen acknowledged, but "that can only be improved over time." He said the Chinese Government is "very distrustful" of U.S. businessmen -- a result of a long period without any dialogue -- but that, too, would improve.

Mr Nalen, president and chief executive officer of OPIC, said the American "old Yankee trader" spirit is beginning to reawaken. With aggressive programs to help develop Third World countries' economies, they expect "positive benefits" to be brought to the U.S. economy eventually.

Having come to Asia to convey the message from President Reagan that the administration supports U.S. private-sector economic participation in emerging countries, Mr Nalen said he would take back a hope that "unrealistic" practices acting as "roadblocks" to U.S. businessmen investing overseas will be eased. He particularly pointed to double taxation -- an issue of great concern to U.S. businessmen investing in China.

"I will report to President Reagan that we should continue our program of supporting U.S. companies in investing in Third World countries in general and China in particular."

Formed in 1969 by act of congress, OPIC is a government insurance company that protects direct American investment overseas against inequitable expropriation, currency inconvertibility, war damage, revolution and insurrection.

Mr Nalen was invited by China International Trust and Investment Corporation. After meetings with CITIC officials, he said he was "very impressed" by their "entrepreneurial spirit," their experience in doing business and their work attitude. He had been asked by Chinese officials to explain the little U.S. investment in China so far, and whether the pace could be quickened.

He said: "If nothing changes in China and there is the same red tape and difficulty in doing business, I can't be overly optimistic about the future. However, over a period of time, with new attitudes adopted and certain restrictions relaxed, I would say that investment potential in China is unlimited."

PRC, HONG KONG COOPERATE ON COMPUTER TECHNOLOGY

HK160209 Hong Kong SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST in English 16 Jul 82 Business News p 1

[By Julie Auyeung]

[Text] China is adopting a more aggressive stance in marketing its computer technology which, its technicians believe, has vast potential in view of the country's available manpower and expertise.

In an ambitious bid to upgrade its computer industry and to market computer hardware and software internationally, a joint venture has been established, based in Hong Kong. One spin-off may be a filling of the gap in local computer staff. Sino On-Line, with registered capital of $1 million, has 42.5 percent of its shares held by the Beijing Computer Industry Corporation and the Beijing branch of the China Electronics Import and Export Corporation, 42.5 percent held by Chartered On-Line and the rest by Hong Kong Chai Luk International Trading.

The scope of the new venture, according to the director and general manager of Chartered On-Line Ltd., Mr Brian Bennetts, includes producing competitive product designs for hardware to be manufactured in China and marketing of China-made hardware abroad; purchasing computer accessories, components, spare parts and other materials to assist the development of China's computer industry; and setting up a maintenance organization for computing hardware within China and training Chinese technicians in modern computing techniques.

An executive of China Electronics Import and Export Corporation, Mr Zhang Jin, told Business News that the association with Hong Kong partners reflects China's confidence in developing its long-term economy.

"China is not just setting up companies within the country, but gradually moving operations overseas. The computer industry is not a short-term development, but a rather long-term investment. This proves that China would like to see a steady growth in its industries and trading, eventually improving its economy," Mr Zhang said.

An executive of the Beijing Import and Export Administration Commission, Miss Chen Suiting, acknowledged that computers are still not yet widely used in China, although "we have achieved a certain standard in production techniques."

Computers have been used for medical purposes, in the textile industry, sewage treatment, [word indistinct] and hotel management, railways, banking, and aviation. Chinese cities such as Shanghai, Tianjin and Shenyang and some ministries have also used computers and are making their own hardware and software.

It is difficult to give an overall figure for the number of people involved in the computer industry in China. Miss Chen stressed that efforts are being made to train university graduates, who are said to be keen in learning the technology. Computer experts from China say they have mastered most computer languages, although they still need more training in some areas -- especially COBOL -- before they can become commercial programmers.

As far as manufacturing goes, the general manager of Sino On-Line, Mr Eddie Liu, described China as an "attractive and inexpensive production source" for Western manufacturers.

"There is no reason to suppose China could not produce the level of sophisticated equipment currently being manufactured in Romania and Hong Kong on behalf of Western principals." Enquiries have been received from the United States and Europe.

A group of 10 Chinese computer experts are to come to Hong Kong in the initial stages of the joint venture to work for, or be trained by, Sino On-Line. The total number will depend on approval by Hong Kong's Immigration Department.

RENMIN RIBAO ON U.S. AGRICULTURAL SALES TO USSR

Report on Farm Products Sales

[Report: "The United States To Sell the Soviet Union More Farm Produce Than Last Year"]

[Text] As the U.S. Department of Agriculture predicted, the USSR's grain imports will amount to 46 million tons, which is a "record-breaking figure," as this year the Soviet Union faces its "fourth successive year of poor harvests." Therefore, the amount of U.S. farm produce sold to the Soviet Union will exceed that of last year.

According to reports, the USSR grain production will amount to 185 million tons this year, much lower than the annual target which has been set at 238 million tons. Therefore, the Soviet Union will have to make up "the shortage of food" by expanding imports. On 8 July, at the UN Economic and Social Council, the U.S. representative Jose S. Sorzano pointed out that "the Soviet Union alone accounts for 40 percent" of the increased amount of grain purchased on the international market in the last 10 years. The Soviet Union's serious shortage of grain, he said, has placed the world balance of grain supply and demand in an "imminently dangerous situation."

The United States is the major grain supplier for the Soviet Union. In 1979 imports from the United States accounted for 23 percent of the USSR market of imported farm produce. This percentage was reduced to 8 percent in the last 2 years due to the U.S. grain embargo on the Soviet Union as a response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1980 (the embargo was lifted in April last year). In 1982 the amount of U.S. farm produce sold to the Soviet Union will exceed that of last year or will even break the record of $2.86 billion witnessed in 1979. At the hearings before the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 13 July, the newly appointed Secretary of State Shultz said that he objects to negotiating with the Soviet Union on signing a new 5-year agreement on grain sales. But, he also said that he "cannot rule out" the possibility that the United States will continue to sell grain to the Soviet Union. On the same day, the U.S. special trade representative William E. Brock also stated that the present contract "is likely to be prolonged" after its term expires on 30 September, although it is hardly possible for the United States to reach a new long-term agreement on grain sales with the Soviet Union in the near future.

On Grain Pact Extension

HK200716 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 17 Jul 82 p 7

[Report: "Congressmen From U.S. Agricultural States Ask Reagan To Extend the Grain Sales Agreement With the Soviet Union"]

[Text] President Reagan convened a Cabinet meeting on 15 July to settle the difference in policy concerning the extension of the grain sales agreement with the Soviet Union.

According to reports, Reagan's agricultural advisers are appealing for opening the negotiation for a new agreement. However, his foreign policy advisers oppose this appeal because Poland has not yet lifted military control.

Among those advisers who support the expansion of the grain sales, Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block is the most vociferous. Block's opinion won support on 24 June: The Senate adopted a resolution subject to no restrictions, asking Reagan to resume negotiations with Moscow in order to extend the term of the agreement. Congressmen from those states where agriculture is the major source of revenue also went to the White House in throngs to exert pressure on Reagan, warning that the government would suffer loss in the mid-term election this autumn unless the president decided to prolong the grain sales agreement with the Soviet Union.

The present agreement on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union will expire on 30 September.

OBSTACLES TO PRC-U.S. RELATIONS VIEWED

HK200858 Beijing BAN YUE TAN No 13, 10 Jul 82 99 12-13

[Article by Zhou Cipu [0719 1964 2883] "What are the Obstacles to the Development of Sino-U.S. Relations?"]

[Text] Not long ago, the Chinese Government and the NPC Standing Committee, respectively met two important guests from the United States: Vice President George Bush and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, Jr.

Mandated by President Reagan, Mr. Bush requested a visit to China. He was invited to come to Beijing by the Chinese Government. As a vice president, there is no doubt that he is one of the important decisionmakers of the U.S. Government. Mr. Baker, who has been a senator for 17 years and is now holding an important position as the Senate majority leader is, of course, one of the influential figures in the United States.

What was the purpose of these two important U.S. figures in coming to China one after another? The answer was quite simple. They came to China mainly to discuss Sino-U.S. relations. U.S. arms sales to Taiwan have adversely affected and severly obstructed Sino-U.S. relations. Sino-U.S. relations are now at a crossroad. Whether they will progress or retrogress has become one of the most important topics attracting worldwide attention. Bush and Baker came to China at this critical juncture to discuss the relations between the two countries with the Chinese leaders.

Just as people expected, their visits did not effect any breakthrough in Sino-U.S. relations and the Taiwan problem is still a stumbling block hindering the progress of the relations between the two countries. However, this does not mean that their visits did not yield any results at all. The Chinese and U.S. leaders had a frank exchange of views and further understood each other's stand on the Taiwan problem. This was beneficial to probing methods for ironing out differences.

The Taiwan problem is created by the United States itself. With the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries, the Taiwan problem -- a big knot in the history of Sino-U.S. relations -- should no longer exist. This is because in the communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries, the United States affirms[queren 4292 6126] that the People's Republic of China is the sole legitimate government of China and that Taiwan is part of China's territory. However, it is a matter for regret that after the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations, the United States adopted the so-called "Taiwan Relations Act" which violates, through a series of problems, the principles affirmed by Sino-U.S. joint communique. Thereafter, Sino-U.S. relations have been covered by dark cloud. The sale of U.S. arms to Taiwan constitutes only one of the problems brought about by the "Taiwan Realations Act."

While meeting with Bush and Baker, the leaders of our country explicity said: With regards to the problem of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, China has ho option, because it is not a matter of just selling weapons, but involves a problem of principle concerning whether the United States respects China's sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The problem is quite clear. Since the United States recognizes [chengren 2110 6126] that Taiwan is part of China, it goes without saying that the Taiwan authorities are only a local government of China. U.S. arms sales to Taiwan mean that the United States arms a local government of China to oppose the central government. It is obvious that this is a severe violation of China's sovereignty, a wanton interference in China's internal affairs and a sabotage of the sacred cause of the Chinese people for unifying their motherland. Of course, a country which has sovereign rights and is determined to guard its dignity will never tolerate this.

In talking with Bush and Baker, the Chinese leaders expressed their ideas explicity. China attaches importance to the development of Sino-U.S. relations and is unwilling to see the stagnation or retrogression of Sino-U.S. relations. However, China is a country which adheres to principles. Sino-U.S. relations can only develop under the conditions that both sides respect various principles affirmed in the communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations and on the basis that both sides respect each other's sovereignty and territorial integrity and refrain from interfering in each other's internal affairs.

While Bush was in Beijing, he conveyed the desires of the Reagan administration for solving the Taiwan problem. He believed that through his visit, he further understood China's position of the Taiwan problem and promised to report this to President Reagan to try to seek ways to solve the disputes. After Bush returned to the United States, the Chinese and U.S. sides would continue their talks.

Senator Baker, who formerly opposed the severing of U.S.-Chiang relations, said that he had learned a lot of things during his visit and that one of them was that there is only one China in the world.

At present, it is difficult to predict the development of Sino-U.S. relations. The knot is tied by the United States and the obstacles to Sino-U.S. relations are also raised by the United States. It is the United States which should resolve to untie the knot and clear the obstacles.

People have paid attention to the fact that the soul of Dulles doctrine, which is stealing out the rubbish heap of history, still has supporters among certain figures in U.S. political circles. The fallacy uttered recently by veteran U.S. Senator Goldwater in Taiwan was a clear proof. This is the thing that people should guard against.

SOVIET WEEKLY'S CHARGES AGAINST ASEAN REBUTTED

OW200831 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1657 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Short commentary by XINHUA correspondent: "Who Goes Against Reason ?"]

[Text] Moscow, 17 Jul (XINHUA) -- Of late, Moscow has unceasingly attacked ASEAN, which smacks of superpower high-handedness. A new case in point is a long article published in the Soviet weekly NOVOYE VREMYA denouncing the foreign policy of the ASEAN countries.

This weekly listed a host of "charges" against the ASEAN countries, the main one of which being "intensely hostile to the three Indochinese countries." The article denounces the governments of the ASEAN countries for "infringing on the interests of their own people..., simply going against reason, participating in the conspiracy regarding the so-called 'Kampuchea issue,'" "welcoming" the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, and so on. The article continues menacingly to say: "For this, they should bear the grave responsibility for the possible consequences arising from this development."

This argument by Moscow that stands facts on their heads is nothing new. What should be pointed out is that the allegation of "going against reason" is actually applicable to Moscow itself. The whole world has seen that it is Vietnam, with Soviet support, that sent troops to invade Kampuchea and has forcibly occupied that country for more than 3 years, despite condemnation by UN resolutions and world opinion. This has posed a serious threat to the security of the ASEAN countries. In this situation, the ASEAN countries, for the sake of justice, have spoken out to condemn Vietnamese aggression, to express sympathy for the antiaggression struggle of the neighboring Kampuchean people, to welcome the coalition government formed by the tripartite Kampuchean patriotic forces and to call for Vietnam to withdraw all its occupation troops from Kampuchea. This is both natural and right. According to NOVOYE VREMYA'S preposterous logic, it would not have been Hitler who committed aggression against the Soviet Union in World War II, but those countries and those people sympathetic with the contemporary Soviet struggle against aggression. According to this logic, is it not justifiable for Israel to have invaded Lebanon today, and are the Arab and other countries which have condemned the Israeli aggression not "intensely hostile to" Lebanon and participating in the "conspiracy" against it? Obviously, it is not the ASEAN countries but Moscow that is so infatuated as to go against reason.

It is no coincidence that while Moscow is brandishing its big stick toward the ASEAN countries, Hanoi is putting up a "smiling face" toward them. Hanoi is making the gesture of "withdrawing some of its troops" from Kampuchea, and at the same time has sent its foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, to go canvassing in the ASEAN countries in an effort to make known its so-called "realistic and modest attitude" of willingness to "iron out the differences" between it and the ASEAN countries. This is aimed at creating the illusion that Hanoi's "attitude has softened." Is the peremptory allegation of "going against reason" by Moscow, Hanoi's backstage boss, not an excellent annotation for the hypocritical performance of its proxy in Hanoi?

U.S. OFFICIAL CITED ON SRV TROOP PULLOUT

[Report: "U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs John Holdridge Says Vietnamese Partial Troop Withdrawal Has Not Touched the Crux of Kampuchean Issue"]

[Text] Washington, 16 Jul (XINHUA) -- In his report to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 15 July, John Holdridge, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, said that Vietnam's plan of a partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea has not touched the crux of the Kampuchean issue.

In his report, Holdridge pointed out that "obviously, Hanoi's economic depression and political isolation" and the establishment of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea have prompted the proposal of this new plan by Vietnam. However, Vietnam's plan "has not touched the crux of the issue, namely, military occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnam and its refusal to grant the Khmers any decisionmaking rights."

Holdridge added that the United States will join with the ASEAN countries to "strive for a complete Vietnamese withdrawal from Kampuchea and the building of a neutral and independent Kampuchea."

AUSTRIA'S PAHR COMMENTS ON SRV'S KAMPUCHEA STAND

[Text] Bangkok, July 19 (XINHUA) -- Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr left here for Rangoon this afternoon at the conclusion of his three-day visit to Thailand. During his stay here after a visit to Vietnam, Pahr met Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon and had discussions with Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila.

Pahr told the Thai foreign minister during a briefing that Vietnam had "softened its stand" on and shown "new flexibility" over the Kampuchean problem. But Sitthi told reporters afterwards that many points in the Vietnamese position relayed to him by Pahr had yet to be clarified in details. "In fact, we would rather wait to hear it directly from Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach himself," he said.

Pahr's remarks were immediately denied by Vietnam. According to the VIETNAMESE NEWS AGENCY, Vietnam still sticks to its earlier preconditions for the withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea.

Pahr, in the name of the international conference on Kampuchea (ICK), met Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, who was on his way to Hanoi, in Bangkok on July 13. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese at 1611 GMT on 19 July transmits a report on this meeting that renders the previous sentence as follows: "On his way to Hanoi, Pahr, in the name of the international conference on Kampuchea, met with Sihanouk in Bangkok on 13 July."] He told reporters after the meeting that he welcomed the formation of the Kampuchean coalition as a "positive element" in the Kampuchean conflict. But, he stated earlier that he had been "skeptical" about the benefits of the coalition of the three Kampuchean resistance forces. Asked about the positions of Austria and Thailand on the Kampuchean problem before his departure from here today, Pahr said: "We are both bound to the resolution of the international conference on Kampuchea."

Sources here pointed out that as chairman of the international conference on Kampuchea, Pahr should adhere to the principles of the resolutions adopted at ICK and the United Nations General Assembly, which demand an immediate withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, but not otherwise. Following the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, the sources noted, Vietnam was using new tricks to hoodwink and divide the countries which oppose its invasion of Kampuchea.

YUGOSLAV STATEMENT ISSUED ON KAMPUCHEA COALITION

[Text] Belgrade, July 13 (XINHUA) -- Yugoslavia's Foreign Ministry issued a statement here today saying the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is conducive to political solution of the Kampuchean issue.

The statement said a political settlement in line with the U.N. General Assembly resolutions and the position of the Non-Aligned Movement means the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Kampuchea to ensure the respect of Kampuchean sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and its position of neutrality and non-alignment.

A spokesman of the Foreign Ministry who issued the statement stressed that the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is expected to be helpful for the Kampuchean people to win their right to decide their own destiny, including the establishment of an independent and non-aligned Kampuchea. It will also be helpful to the stabilization of the situation in Southeast Asia and for the Southeast Asian countries to engage cooperate on equal footing.

VODK CITED ON SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL PROPOSAL

OW200314 Beijing XINHUA in English 0251 GMT 20 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 20 (XINHUA) -- Radio Democratic Kampuchea in a commentary today calls on the Kampuchean people and the world community to heighten their vigilance against the socalled "partial troop withdrawal" of the Vietnamese from Kampuchea.

While advertising "partial troop withdrawal", the commentary says, the Vietnamese authorities dispatched reinforcements of about 4,300 men to Siem Reap Province and western Kampuchea from June 20 to July 13, and about 20,000 men to Kampuchea last May.

The commentary stresses that by deceiving the international community through the claim of "partial troop withdrawal", the Vietnamese authorities are trying to extricate themselves from their plight on the Kampuchean battlefield and from their isolated position in the world.

MATERIAL ON BURMESE FOREIGN MINISTER'S VISIT

13 Jul Banquet Speeches

BK141635 Beijing in Burmese to Burma 1130 GMT 14 Jul 82

[Text] Chinese State Councillor and Foreign Minister Huang Hua hosted a banquet yesterday evening in honor of Burmese Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing and his delegation. Both Minister Huang Hua and Minister U Chit Hlaing addressed the banquet.

In his address, Minister Huang Hua said: In recent years, the Burmese Government and people have tried to develop the national economy and culture on the basis of self-reliance, and have attained important achievements. Only recently, the Third 4-Year Plan was also implemented successfully. Today, they are striving to build Burma into an industrial country based on agriculture. We note these events with great pleasure and satisfaction.

The Burmese Government has pursued an active and independent foreign policy and has stepped up its friendly relations with neighboring countries. It has upheld justice and opposed aggression and expansion in international affairs. Burma, therefore, he said, has won the praise of the world.

Minister Huang Hua added: Both China and Burma are developing countries and in order to build their countries actively, they need a peaceful and stable environment. Hegemonist aggression and expansion have created an intense situation in Asia, gravely threatening the independence and security of various countries. Confronted with this situation, all peace-loving countries in this region must proceed from their respective positions to strengthen unity and cooperation and make common efforts to defend peace and check aggression. In this just cause, the Chinese Government and people will firmly stand with other Asian countries and make common efforts with them.

Minister Huang Hua then said: Not only are China and Burma friendly neighboring countries, our two peoples are also kindred. Friendly cooperation between our two countries in the fields of politics, economics and culture has constantly developed. The friendship between China and Burma is a friendship carefully cultivated by our leaders, a friendship that has stood the test of time. The Chinese Government and people greatly cherish this friendship and will continue to make sincere efforts to enhance the friendly relations and cooperation between the two countries.

In conclusion, Minister Huang Hua said: Minister U Chit Hlaing's current visit will definitely contribute to further strengthening the mutual understanding and friendship between our two countries.

In his address, Minister U Chit Hlaing said: Burma and China are two neighboring countries enjoying close and cordial relations since time immemorial. Today, thanks to the keen foresight of and patient nurturing by the leaders of our two countries, our traditional friendship has reached the kindred stage.

Whenever issues arose between us, our two peoples have been able to overcome them in a spirit of good will, understanding, sympathy, friendship and mutual accomodation. For this reason, we firmly believe that the friendship between our two countries will continue to be doubly strengthened in the years ahead. Burma is resolved to do its very best to enhance the existing relations between the two countries.

Minister U Chit Hlaing added: In the process of strengthening this traditional good will and amity, there have been frequent exchanges of visits not only between the leaders of our two countries but also at various other levels. To recount such exchanges in this decade, we are happy to note that our party chairman U Ne Win, in his capacity as president of the country, visited the People's Republic of China in 1980 while Premier Zhao Ziyang also visited Burma in 1981. We believe that these exchanges of visits have further consolidated the bonds of friendship between our two countries. My good-will visit is also to strengthen this noble goal.

Minister U Chit Hlaing said: I visited China once in 1960 as member of a defense delegation. Our delegation was then given the opportunity to visit all parts of China to study the Chinese people's implementation of the state's construction tasks which were then beginning to gain momentum. I am indeed very happy to visit China again after more than 20 years. I am very pleased that this time around, I will have the chance to observe and study the all-round modernization tasks carried out by the Chinese people. At this point, allow me to conclude my speech by saying that I, as a very close friend who hopes for China's well-being, extend my good wishes for the success of China's modernization tasks.

Present at the banquet were delegation member and Deputy Minister for Information and Culture U Aung Htay and Burmese Ambassador to China U Aung Win and his wife. Also present on the Chinese side were Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, Deputy Chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army Wu Xiuquan, Vice Minister of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade Jia Shi, Vice Minister of Culture Lu Zhixian and Chinese Ambassador-designate to Burma Huang Mingda.

Minister U Chit Hlaing and his delegation left by train for (Xin De) Mountain summer resort this morning.

Referring to the present international situation, Deng Xiaoping said: "More and more troubles are occurring in the world. Although a big war has not broken out, the danger still exists, and small wars and disorder are taking place constantly."

He said: "The situation in Asia is also not stable. The countries in this region who are upholding justice should strengthen unity and hold consultations and fulfill their international responsibility to safeguard peace and security in Asia and Pacific regions."

[Beijing in Burmese to Burma at 1130 GMT on 16 July carries a report on this meeting which adds the following: "He said our new policy currently being practiced calls for concerted efforts in the two modernization tasks. However, to do so, it is necessary to have a peaceful international environment which lasts. China will never act as a hegemonist. Friendly relations among neighboring countries must be maintained as they contribute not only to the development of countries, but also to peace in Asia."]

The two leaders also discussed Sino-Burmese relations. Deng Xiaoping said: "There exists a lengthy, friendly relationship between China and Burma. Article on PRC-Burma Contacts

[Unattributed article: "May the Friendship Between the Peoples of China and Burma Last for Generations"]

[Text] As Burmese Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing pays a good-will visit to China, we recall verse from a poem entitled "For Burmese Friends" composed by a former Chinese vice premier, the late Zhen Yi:

To foster good-neighbor relations and loving friendship,
We shall diligently work.
A loving friendship that does not fade,
Like the lush and verdant mountain
Like the ever-flowing river.

During his visit to Burma last year, Premier Zhao Ziyang said at the banquet given by the Burmese Government that friendship became more valuable as it grew. His words have deep meaning. Since the birth of new China and Burma's achieving independence, China and Burma have stepped up relations as good neighbors should. Burma was one of the first countries to establish diplomatic relations with the new China. Both China and Burma were among those countries which led the way in presenting the five principles of peaceful coexistence.

The friendly relations and cooperation between our two countries have become stronger due to the frequent exchange of friendly visits by leaders and persons in various fields of China and Burma over past years. Chairman U Ne Win has paid 11 good-will visits to China, bringing with him the Burmese people's immense love for the people of China. These visits have contributed greatly to the friendship between Burma and China. Premier Zhou Enlai visited Burma nine times. Vice Chairman of the NPC Standing Committee Deng Yingchao and Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping have also visited Burma. Soon after his appointment, Premier Zhao Ziyang made his first overseas visit to Burma. These visits have all further promoted the friendly relations between Burma and China. Relations between the two countries in the fields of economy, trade, culture and sports have also grown.

Now the people of China warmly welcome the good-will visit of Burmese Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing. We also extend our good wishes for the success of Minister U Chit Hlaing's good-will visit to China, the promotion and strengthening of China-Burma friendship and cooperation, and hope that China-Burma friendship will last for generations.

Newsletter on Friendly Ties

BK151428 Beijing in Burmese to Burma 1130 GMT 15 Jul 82

[Unattributed newsletter: "Developing Friendly Relations With Its Neighbors"]

[Text] The Burmese Government, while pursuing an independent policy, has firmly safeguarded and maintained the basic principles of state-to-state relations in international affairs. It opposes aggression and interference and makes efforts to have smooth, good relations with neighboring countries as well as developing good-neighbor ties.

During his visit to Singapore in April this year, Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing said although Burma has withdrawn from the Nonaligned Movement it strictly adheres to nonaligned principles.

For many years, Burma joined hands with other nonaligned nations to preserve and maintain world peace while contributing to the strengthening of the unity of Third World countries.

In September 1979, when the sixth nonaligned summit meeting was held in Cuba, some countries, acting in accordance with the wishes of some big nations, abolished the right of Democratic Kampuchea to attend the meeting by leaving the Kampuchean seat vacant. The Burmese Government, in order to uphold justice and safeguard the principles of nonalignment, fought against that move which violated the objectives of the Nonaligned Movement, and also withdrew from the Nonaligned Movement.

The Burmese Government firmly adheres to the five principles of peaceful coexistence and opposes the use of force to threaten or commit aggression against another country. Issues between Burma and its neighboring countries are solved through friendship and mutual understanding.

In 1979 Burma concluded a boundary agreement with Bangladesh, and in 1980 it signed a maritime boundary demarcation of the Andaman Sea with Thailand. The existing bonds of friendship between China and Burma have constantly developed further. In October 1980 Chairman U Ne Win once again visited China, and Premier Zhao Ziyang, after assuming the post of the premier, made his first visit to Burma last year. China and Burma have also extended their cooperation in the economic, trade, culture and sports fields. Burmese Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing's visit to China this time around is indeed a very happy occasion for the growth of the friendship between the two countries. We believe that this visit will definitely contribute to further development of mutual understanding and friendship.

Details about the exact location and the scale of the war game, which involve ground and air units and military commands, are not available.

MAJOR PARTY SHAKEUP IN POLAND REPORTED

[Text] Warsaw, July 16 (XINHUA) -- A major shake-up of the leadership of the Polish United Workers' Party took place during the two-day ninth plenum of the party Central Committee ending today. Upon a proposal of the party Politburo, the plenum elected through secret ballots Stanislaw Kalkus (member of the party Central Committee and a worker from a Poznan machine-building plant) and Marian Wozniak (former alternate member of the Politburo and Warsaw provincial party first secretary) Politburo members; elected Jan Glowczyk (alternate Politburo member) and Manfred Gorywoda (head of the economic advisers to the prime minister) secretaries of the Secretariat of the party Central Committee.

The plenum accepted resignations from the following party leaders: Hieronim Kubiak resigned from his post as party secretary and would continue to be Politburo member and would engage in scientific research work; Stefan Olszowski resigned his post as party secretary while keeping his membership of the Political Bureau and taking up a post in a government organ; Marian Wozniak resigned from his post as secretary because he is holding the office of party secretary of Warsaw Province; Jan Labecki (first party secretary of the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk) resigned his post as Politburo member. The plenum elected three new members to the party Central Committee. They are Stanislaw Bejger (who was also elected alternate Politburo member at the plenum), Manfred Corywoda and Wladyslaw Jonkisz (who is also first party secretary of the Czestochowa Province). Deputy Defense Minister Jozef Baryla was elected alternate member of the party Central Committee.

The two-day plenum mainly devoted to the youth problem. According to the Polish press, the younger generation's belief in the party's political line has been shaken. They are taking a "cold attitude towards it". This problem has become particularly obvious since the August industrial unrest in 1980. Since the beginning of this year, the overwhelming majority of the people involved in the street demonstrations were young people.

At this plenum, party leader Wojciech Jaruzelski read a report of the Politburo entitled "With Youth and With an Eye to Youth". The report says that young people make up half of the country's population. Their tendency is "a very serious problem". "We must make them understand that Poland cannot go against historical trend and must not sail to the west coast." He said that "although we have made mistakes", "socialism still remains the only way that can guarantee development of our country."

He stressed that his party would stick to economic reform and political renewal line in political life. He pledged that the party would take a series of measures to secure healthy growth of the youth and to gradually solve their moral and material difficulties both.

The plenum discussed the report and adopted a resolution on the youth problem.

SFRY'S MOJSOV SUBMITS FOREIGN POLICY REPORT

OW160845 Beijing XINHUA in English 0721 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Text] Belgrade, July 15 (XINHUA) -- Yugoslav Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Lazar Mojsov today appealed to the international community to take "decisive measures to finally put an end to the aggressive and arrogant policy of Israel," according to a TANJUG report. The appeal was made in a foreign-policy report submitted to the parliament this morning.

Mojsov assessed the crisis in the Middle East as the most dangerous in the world. He said that the extremely dangerous development in the Middle East served as the "most serious warning" that the interests of international security make it necessary to "proceed as soon as possible, by political means and in a just manner, to the elimination of the hotbeds of crisis in Asia, the Middle East, the Mediterranean, southern Africa, and Central America." He pointed out that the present situation in the world was extremely disturbing and that it was seriously jeopardizing the already unstable peace.

Mojsov pressed for the soonest possible termination of "the tragic war between Iran and Iraq, which has already inflicted great damage to both countries, and to the Non-Aligned Movmement as a whole."

He spoke highly of the contributions made by the Non-Aligned Movement in checking the further development of the international situation in a negative direction. "We expect the seventh summit to confirm once again the fundamental joint approaches and proposals for resolving all the major world problems, ranging from the question of development, the establishment of a new international economic order, the demand to halt the arms race and finally initiate the process of disarmament, to the elimination of the focuses of crisis and of the last remnants of colonialism and the taking of measures for improving the efficiency of the United Nations in carrying out its historical mission," Mojsov emphasized.

He pressed for a resolute course to the establishment of new international relations, above all through global negotiations in the United Nations.

He also warned of the growing confrontation of different factors on the international scene in the struggle to expand their influence and gain advantage and superiority.

Mojsov urged closer cooperation among the Mediterranean countries in order to transform the region into a zone of peace, security and cooperation.

Due to its geographic position, its socialist system based on self-management and its place and role in the Non-Aligned Movement, "Yugoslavia is exposed to intensified attempts to exert pressure and take advantage of its present economic difficulties," Mojsov stressed.

But those wishing to eliminate the recognized international role of Yugoslavia's foreign policy would never succeed in their plans and Yugoslavia will continue actively and consistently pursuing its independent and non-aligned policy, he stressed.

'NO PROGRESS' IN TALKS ON ENDING LEBANESE CRISIS

[Text] Beirut, July 16 (XINHUA) -- Some 10,000 Lebanese took to the streets today to protest Israeli economic blockade of west Beirut as negotiations on the Lebanon crisis were going on. The demonstrators marched from the Islamic Center in west Beirut to Prime Minister Shafiq al-Wazzan's office, handing over a letter assailing Israel's crimes.

Israeli troops have blockaded west Beirut for two weeks and cut off flour, fuel and medicine supply for the estimated 500,000 residents, which resulted in a great shortage of food and fuel.

Outside Al-Wazzan's office, one demonstrator shouted into a loudspeaker: "Unless the invaders ease this blockade, we shall resort to arms to fight for our dignity and needs."

Lebanese President Ilyas Sarkis and Prime Minister al-Wazzan today again discussed with U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib the removal of the Israeli blockade.

The sixth ceasefire reached on July 11 was holding despite sporadic fightings in south Beirut, but there has been no progress in talks on the Lebanon crisis. The key point is where the Palestinian fighters will go after their withdrawal from besieged west Beirut.

Syrian Foreign Minister 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam, now attending a non-aligned conference on Lebanon in Nicosia, reaffirmed today that his country would not accept the Palestinian fighters, but Lebanese and Palestinian sources here believe the Syrian position is negotiable. They pin hopes on talks between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Saudi and Syrian foreign ministers next week.

Al-Wazzan was optimistic after talks with Habib today. He said they discussed "some initiatives" to find another place as an alternative if the Syrians finally refuse to accept the Palestinian fighters. Yesterday Al-Wazzan met the PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat. He said the PLO's attitude was positive.

MUBARAK URGES ARABS TO AGREE ON LEBANESE ISSUE

OW151950 Beijing XINHUA in English 1854 GMT 15 Jul 82

[Text] Cairo, July 15 (XINHUA) -- Egyptian President Husni Mubarak appealed today that the Arab countries buty their differences and agree on a common policy to solve the Lebanese problem.

Speaking at a press conference he gave jointly with the visiting West German Foreign Minister Genscher following their meeting here today, Mubarak said the situation in Lebanon was extremely serious. It is high time for the Arabs to iron out their differences and agree on one line to be followed to resolve the Lebanese problem, he said.

The Egyptian president said he was prepared to go to any place of the Arab world provided that the Arabs abandon their differences and agree on a common policy. He underlined that the exit of Palestinian troops from Beirut by no means provides a solution for the Lebanese problem. He added that the Palestinians' right to self-determination was inevitable.

In a toast at a dinner last night in honor of Genscher, Egyptian Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister 'Ali said that the key to the Middle East crisis is the Palestinian people's right to self-determination. After complete Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, negotiations should start for a solution to the Palestinian issue, he added. 'Ali welcomed the declaration of the ministerial council of the EEC of June 29 condemning the Israeli invasion and calling for an early Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

Genscher said in a reply speech that no peace can prevail in the Middle East until the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination, were taken into account. He called for a stoppage of the slaughter in Lebanon and for sincere efforts toward a comprehensive Middle East settlement.

Genscher left here for home this afternoon after a two-day visit to Egypt.

QADDUMI SAYS NO PLO WITHDRAWAL FROM LEBANON

OW171542 Beijing XINHUA in English 1530 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Nicosia, July 17 (XINHUA) -- Head of the Political Department of the Palestine Liberation Organization Faruq Qaddumi declared here this morning that the PLO guerillas would not withdraw from Lebanon. Talking to reporters before attending the morning session of the Non-Aligned Coordinating Bureau meeting, he said: "Our homeland is occupied by Israel and if we have to withdraw from Lebanon, we will go to Gaza. Israel should withdraw first from the occupied territories." Qaddumi pointed out that the Palestinians are not isolated because all the peace-loving countries stand by them. He condemned the United States for providing Israel with all kinds of modern weapons. He expressed the hope that the current meeting of the Non-Aligned bureau could bear positive results and that individual countries apply sanctions against Israel.

DEVELOPMENTS IN IRAN-IRAQ WAR DISCUSSED

Iran Rejects UN Resolution

OW131952 Beijing XINHUA in English 1847 GMT 13 Jul 82

[Text] Tehran, July 13 (XINHUA) -- Iranian Prime Minister Mir-Hoseyn Musavi today rejected the United Nations Security Council resolution calling for a peaceful solution to the Gulf war. The resolution called for a ceasefire in the Gulf war, an immediate end to all military operations, withdrawal of forces to international borders and sending U.N. observers to oversee the ceasefire and the withdrawal.

In a press interview, Musavi said Iran does not want the stationing of foreign troops on its border. "If the Security Council issues 10 more resolutions, we cannot drop our legitimate demands," he stressed. He reiterated the demands that Iraq withdraw its troops from Iran unconditionally, pay war reparations and that the war criminals be tried. "In this case the war will end," he added.

Further Report

[Text] Beijing, July 14 (XINHUA) -- The Iraqi Military High Command declared in a communique today the Iraqi forces had stopped the Iranian advance, according to a radio Baghdad report.

The communique said Iran had "violated our international borders in the Basra sector on a front 10 km wide and to a depth of 10 km." It said the Iraqi forces "at first light today were able to stop the advance of the enemy," and from 10:00 this morning (0600 GMT) "began a counterattack on the enemy forces." "The Iranians were now retreating, leaving behind large numbers of dead and wounded. Hundreds of Iranians had been taken prisoner," and "the Iraqi forces were now pursuing and attacking the escaping Iranian troops," the communique added.

According to radio Tehran this afternoon, Iran claimed to have annihilated two Iraqi divisions (the Third and Ninth) and destroyed the 26th Iraqi Armored Brigade in the initial stage of its latest offensive started last night. Several thousands of Iraqi soldiers were killed, wounded or taken prisoner and a large quantity of military equipment is captured. The operation had broken two Iraqi defense lines on the Iraqi territory in the southern front, the radio asserted.

An Iraqi military spokesman, quoted by radio Baghdad, said that the Iraqi Air Force had attacked "Iranian economic targets" in the cities of Ilam, Kermanshah and Khorramabad; the air raids were carried out in retaliation for the Iranian air attacks against civilian and economic targets in the Iraqi cities of Basra, Al-Faw and Abu al Khasib. He warned Iran that "any Iranian aggression" against Iraq "would incur a firm and forceful counterattack."

Radio Tehran said four Iraqi planes were downed in Iranian Khuzestan Province.

RENMIN RIBAO Commentary

OW200746 Beijing XINHUA in English 0700 GMT 20 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 20 (XINHUA) -- The PEOPLE'S DAILY today carries a short commentary calling once again for a ceasefire between Iran and Iraq. The commentary, entitled " A New Word of Advice to Iran and Iraq", says that the escalating Iran-Iraq war has further complicated the tensions in the Middle East, causing deep worry among all peace-loving countries and people of the world. "The international community and public opinion always hold that the war between the two Islamic countries is disastrous to them both", the commentary continues: "Two months ago, when Iran recovered Khorramshahr and largely regained its pre-war positions, it was hoped that the two countries would cease fire and negotiate peace. But unfortunately that hope was not realized." In face of the current Israeli invasion of Lebanon, the Arab and Islamic countries are required to shelve their differences and take urgent and concerted actions against the Israeli aggression to support the struggle of the Palestinian people. "We sincerely hope that Iran and Iraq would treasure the interests of the Middle East as a whole and the long-term interests of their own, so as immediately to end their war and settle their dispute through peaceful negotiations. Only in this way will they give no chance for the enemy to knock down the Middle East countries one by one," the commentary stresses.

COMPATRIOTS URGED TO DISCUSS CONSTITUTION

[Commentator's article: "Enthusiastically Exercise the Sacred Rights of Masters of the Country"]

[Text] Since the "draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China" was promulgated and submitted to the people of the whole country for discussion by the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress over 2 months ago, the broad masses of Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad, together with the people of various nationalities on the mainland of the motherland, have enthusiastically participated in the discussion and aired their views in various ways. This is a manifestation of the sons and daughters of the Chinese people thoroughly exercising the rights of masters of the country. The NPC Standing Committee treasures the views of the compatriots very much. In order to revise our country's constitution so that it may conform with our country's reality and meet the needs of long-term development in the future, Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and vice chairman of the Committee for the Revision of the Constitution, made an important speech on 16 July calling on Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad to further discuss in a deepgoing way the draft of the revised constitution. He has expressed the cherished desire of the people of the whole country.

The constitution is the country's fundamental law. It stipulates the nature and future of the country, the rights and duties of citizens, and so on. It concerns each individual of the whole country. The draft of the revised constitution was formulated on the basis of summing up our country's experience over the past 30 years or more. Its promulgation, approval and implementation are a result of the protracted common struggle of our country's 1 billion people, including Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad and reflects the common will of all the people. It is a distinctive mark showing that our country's economy is developing, its political situation is stable and its legal system is being perfected with each passing day.

Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad have the glorious tradition of loving the country and showing concern for the major affairs of the country. However, before the founding of new China, they were not able to enjoy the rights of masters of the country.

Taiwan had been under the oppression of imperialism for a long time. Since the founding of new China, it has again been completely cut off from the motherland's mainland. The democratic rights of the broad masses of Taiwan compatriots are not legally protected and much less have they the chance to participate in managing the major affairs of the country. In September last year, NPC Chairman Ye Jianying announced the nine-point proposal for peaceful reunification, which points out that after the country's reunification, Taiwan may become a special administrative region, and so on. Article 30 of the draft revised constitution stipulates: "The state may, where necessary, establish special administrative regions. The rules and regulations in force in special administrative regions shall be stipulated by law according to specific conditions." Thus, the basic contents of the nine principles and policies are established in a legal form, providing a legal basis for the motherland's peaceful reunification and reflecting the fundamental interests of the people on the motherland's mainland and in Taiwan.

The broad masses of overseas Chinese suffered strict discrimination in the past. Since the founding of new China, the international position of Chinese people has become more and more important and the overseas Chinese have felt elated and exultant. However, in the decade of turmoil, the lawful interests of Chinese residents abroad, returned Overseas Chinese and relatives of Chinese residents abroad living in China were not protected. At present, "protecting the legitimate rights and interests of Chinese residents abroad and protecting the lawful rights and interests of returned overseas Chinese and the relatives of Chinese residents abroad living in China" has been written into the draft of the constitution.

This has been more clearly and completely expressed than in the previous constitution and will ensure that the broad masses of overseas Chinese will share national glory with the 1 billion people of the motherland.

Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad are members of the big family of the Chinese people and are masters of the country. There are representatives of Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and returned overseas Chinese on the Committee for the Revision of the Constitution. They are participating in revising and formulating the constitution. Now, NPC Vice Chairman Peng Zhen has also made a speech earnestly hoping that the broad masses of Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad will discuss the draft revised constitution in a deepgoing way. This shows more clearly the boundless confidence of the people of the motherland in them. We deeply believe that the broad masses of Taiwan compatriots, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and Chinese residents abroad will treasure even more their sacred rights, further enthusiastically participate in the discussion of the draft revised constitution and dedicate their wisdom and talent to formulating a more sound constitution.

ZHAO ZIYANG'S REMARKS AT ENTERPRISE FORUM

[Text] Beijing, 19 Jul (XINHUA) -- When briefed on a national forum on enterprise consolidation, Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council, pointed out: Leading cadres of all areas and departments should be firmly determined to grasp major problems in enterprises and consolidate enterprises effectively and successfully.

The forum, convened with the approval of the State Council, opened on 10 July and ended on 17 July. Responsible persons from various localities and the central ministries and commissions concerned, as well as from some enterprises, exchanged experiences in enterprise consolidation work, analyzed the current situation and existing problems and made arrangements for the work of enterprise consolidation in the latter half of this year.

When briefed on the forum, Zhao Ziyang said: Doing a good job in the all-round consolidation of enterprises is of the utmost importance in achieving better economic results, increasing financial revenues and bringing about a radical change for the better in the national economy. At the same time, this will lay a solid foundation for the vigorous future development of our economy.

He pointed out: It is most important to overcome weak leadership in order to successfully consolidate enterprises. The leadership must have the determination and courage to set about solving major problems in enterprises. Consolidating enterprises is aimed at resolving the principal contradiction. If one does not dare to touch the principal contradiction of an enterprise and takes an evasive attitude to acute problems, then, enterprise consolidation will inevitably turn out to be a mere formality. Enterprise leaders should have the courage to assume responsibility and take the initiative in solving relatively outstanding problems in enterprises, such as the problems of leading bodies, labor organizations, muddling along and "sharing food from the same big pot" by state and big collective enterprises, as well as closing down enterprises or temporarily stopping their production, amalgamating them with other enterprises or converting them to other products. This is also a test of whether enterprise leaders have fighting capability. No doubt there will be many difficulties and obstructions in tackling such problems. But we should also note that the broad masses of workers and staff members urgently call for solving such problems, thus conforming with the trend of the times and the common aspirations of the people. As long as we resolutely tackle such problems in a down-to-earth manner, the cadres and masses will enthusiastically support us and then many difficulties will be readily solved. The streamlining of the party Central Committee's departments and state organs, carried out earlier, has proved this point. If the leadership is irresolute and hesitant, obstruction will mount and enterprise consolidation will inevitably turn out to be a mere formality.

The current all-round consolidation of enterprises is aimed at tackling problems in a comprehensive way. This is a constructive consolidation which should be carried out together with the conduct of investigations and reforms. We should persist in, and improve, reforms carried out earlier which have proved effective. We should seriously study, and gradually solve, problems cropping up in the new situation. We must not return to the beaten track once we encounter problems. For example, instituting the economic responsibility system and the financial practice of "eating food cooked in separate kitchens" [fen zao chi fan 0433 3501 0676 7391] has indeed aroused the enthusiasm of localities, workers and staff members, promoted the development of production, tapped new financial resources and reduced our difficulties. However, this has also given rise to such problems as decentralization of financial powers. It is necessary to take correct measures, according to the new conditions, to appropriately concentrate the country's financial resources more in the hands of the central authorities, to ensure the needs of the country's key construction projects and to better display the superiority of the socialist planned economy. But we should also see to it that things are not done too rigidly, so as not to dampen the enthusiasm of local authorities, enterprises, workers and staff members.

Zhao Ziyang stressed: Enterprise consolidation should be aimed at achieving better economic results. In carrying out enterprise consolidation, one should not do things in a flashy manner or merely engage in empty talk, nor should one make a lot of suggestions but let the outlook of the enterprise remain the same. Whether an enterprise is consolidated well is to be finally judged from the fact of whether its economic results have been raised. Although our enterprises bear heavy burdens, they also waste a lot and still have great potential. Now the consumption of raw materials and fuel and the reject rate are high, and many products are of poor quality, high-priced and unmarketable. Thus many such products are overstocked. Enterprises should put a stop to waste, tap production potential and increase income by improving management, undertaking technical transformation and raising the scientific and technical level of their workers and staff members. Through the consolidation, enterprises should achieve beneficial results and produce good-quality, low-priced, newly designed and marketable products to satisfy the needs of society.

Dealing with how to arouse enterprises' initiative, Zhao Ziyang said: It is essential to give enterprises necessary decisionmaking power and let them have a certain amount of room to maneuver in order to arouse their initiative and achieve better economic results. Only in this way will it be possible for the enterprises to have a motive force in developing production. Because of economic readjustment, many enterprises have not been given sufficient production tasks over the past 2 years. Through their own efforts, they have improved the quality of their products, increased the variety of colors and designs, reduced production costs and improved their service attitude, thus finding a market for their products and developing production. One is wrong if one fails to see that the carrying out of reforms has aroused enterprises' initiative. However, we must definitely foster the point of view that an enterprise should achieve economic results through its own efforts and should not do so by retaining a larger portion of profit or getting what should belong to the state. We should set reasonable demands on enterprises to bring certain pressure to bear on them in order to propel them to improve management and achieve better economic results. Reform is aimed at giving enterprises due economic benefits according to their contributions to the country. They must not always "share food from the same big pot" or be "ensured stable yields despite drought or excessive rain." Our policy and method is to award the hardworking while penalizing the lazy. Enterprises which have made greater contributions through hard work toward the improvement of management are entitled to greater economic benefits; those which do an average job will be able to get by; and those poorly managed will naturally be denied economic benefits or even penalized accordingly. Only in this way will we be able to build up a large number of well-managed enterprises, train a large number of entrepreneurs skillful at management and greatly raise the level of our enterprise management.

Vice Premiers Wan Li and Yao Yilin and State Councillor Zhang Jingfu also attended and spoke at the briefing.

BEIJING REVIEW ON QUESTIONS OF PARTY BUILDING

HK161501 Beijing BEIJING REVIEW in English No 28, 12 Jul 82 pp 16-20

[Text] Editors note: On the occasion of the 61st anniversary of the founding of the Chinese Communist Party, our correspondent interviewed a leading comrade of the Organization Department of the party Central Committee about readers' questions concerning the building of the party. Following is the text of the interview. [end editor's note]

Question: How many members does the Chinese Communist Party have? Will it continue to expand its organization?

Answer: The Chinese Communist Party was established in light of the needs of the Chinese people's revolution. During the 61 years of revolutionary wars and construction in China, the Chinese Communist Party has grown in size and strength. It began with some 50 members and now it has more than 39 million. Along with the development of revolution and socialist construction, it is bound to continue growing and developing.

Question: Who are qualified to be party members? How about the procedures?

Answer: The Chinese Communist Party is the vanguard of the Chinese working class, the faithful representative of the interests of the Chinese people of all nationalities, the core of leadership of China's socialist cause. It uses Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought as the guide for action. This characteristic decides that not anyone can be a party member. Only those who meet the requirements of the party can be admitted.

Who can apply for party membership? Any Chinese worker, peasant, soldier, intellectual or any other revolutionary who has reached the age of 18 and who supports the party programme and accepts the party constitution , is willing to join a party organization, work actively in it, carry out the party's decisions and pay membership dues on time, can apply for membership in the Communist Party of China. A party member should study hard, serve the people wholeheartedly, play an exemplary vanguard role in work, be truthful and honest to the party, observe party discipline, put the party's interests above everything else, be ready to sacrifice everything he or she has and strive all his or her life for the realization of the communist cause.

Applicants for party membership must go through the procedure for admission, which includes: An applicant must be recommended by two full party members who should earnestly brief a party branch on the applicant, and the applicant must be examined by the party branch which should seek extensive opinions inside and outside the party. The applicants may become a probationary member after being accepted by the general membership meeting of the party branch and being approved by the next higher party committee. Before approving admission for an applicant, the higher party committee must appoint someone to talk with the applicant and carefully examine his or her case. If he or she is qualified for party membership, the committee should give its approval.

The party constitution stipulates that the probationary period of a probationary member is one year. The purpose is mainly to make further efforts to educate and observe him or her. During this period the party organization concerned should further observe the member and set right his or her motives to join the party, so as to exclude those who are not qualified to join the party and ensure the quality of party members.

Question: Can a member withdraw from the party?

Answer: Yes. The party constitution stipulates that party members have the freedom to withdraw from the party. If a member does not want to fulfil the duties of party members, he or she may withdraw from the party. Moreover, members who seriously violate party discipline can be punished by party disciplinary measures, including expulsion from the party. The party constitution states that a member whose revolutionary will has degenerated, who refuses to fulfil the duties of party members and no longer meets the requirements for a party member and remains unchanged despite repeated education, should be persuaded to withdraw from the party.

Question: How does the party play its leading role in the period of socialist construction?

Answer: The Chinese Communist Party is the ruling party. To uphold and improve the leadership of the party and to steadily raise the party's militancy is the basic guarantee for our socialist modernization drive and for realizing the reunification of the motherland and defending our country's independence and security. The party does not exercise leadership by issuing orders or using mandatory administrative means, but by using Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought and its correct propositions and actions to educate and influence other organizations and people to conscientiously support the party, have faith in the party, accept the leadership of the party and to work hard for the realization of the party's propositions.

Specifically speaking, the party's leading role is exercised through different ways. First, leading organs of the party must formulate and implement a correct line, principles and policies. Second, through the work of its organizations at different levels, the party co-ordinates relations in various fields and unites all forces under its line and goals. Third, the party relies on all its members to play backbone and exemplary roles in political and social life.

Question: Are all the leading posts in government organs, public undertakings and enterprises held by party members?

Answer: The Chinese Communist Party is the core of leadership of the Chinese revolution and construction. One of our basic principles is adhering to the party's leadership. But the Chinese Communist Party is not a party seeking its own gains. It unites with as many non-party people as possible to carry out the revolution and construction. Therefore, not all leading posts are held by party members. Party committee posts at various levels and posts in charge of the party affairs are held by party members. As to posts (including leading posts) in government organs, public undertakings, enterprises and mass organizations, they can be held by party members and non-party personages.

Question: Is the party still emphasizing the mass line?

Answer: The mass line is the party's basic line for work. Having faith in the masses, relying on the masses and respecting the masses constitute the basic guarantees for carrying out our revolution and construction and winning success in these fields. Our party has always adhered to the mass line -- during the war years and the period of construction after the founding of new China. The third plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee held in December 1978 decided that there would be no more turbulent political movements. This decision was made for the purpose of shifting the focus of work to the four modernizations. Since construction needs the efforts of the masses, the party continues to emphasize the mass line.

The party heeds the opinions of the masses through many channels:

1. Party members working in grass-roots organizations of every trade are acquainted with the opinions of the masses and will forward them to the leading organs of the party.

2. Cadres of the party at various levels, including high-ranking ones, often go among the masses, exchange views and discuss problems with them and listen to their opinions. The party's important policy decisions are made after consulting with the masses in accordance with Comrade Mao Zedong's teachings of "from the masses, to the masses" and centralizing the ideas of the masses and persevering and carrying them through among the masses.

3. The party heeds the opinions and demands of the masses through such mass organizations as the Communist Youth League, trade unions and women's federations and helps solve their problems.

4. The party obtains opinions and suggestions from the masses through the delegates to party congresses and people's congresses at various levels.

5. The party pays attention to the people's letters and visits.

The people have faith in the party and are concerned with the party. When they identify problems in the party's work or in any members of the party or when they have suggestions which require the attention of the party's leading organs, they write letters to the party Central Committee or its chairman. People also visit the party's leading organs to submit their opinions and demands. The party's leading organs at various levels must conscientiously study and solve problems identified by the people and notify them of the results. At the same time, the party maintains close ties with various democratic parties in China and listens to their opinions in consultation sessions.

Question: Are leading organs of the party also being restructured? Are younger cadres being promoted to leading posts in the party?

Answer: Restructuring is necessary to eliminate bureaucratism, raise work efficiency, and strengthen and improve the party's leadership. At present, apart from the central state organs, the leading organs under the party Central Committee are being restructured. Organs directly under the party Central Committee have been working on this since January and much progress had been made by mid-May.

The numbers of bureaus and departments have been cut by 11 per cent and 10 per cent respectively. The total number of staff members has been reduced by 17.3 per cent. Head and deputy heads of each leading body at the ministerial level have been restricted to 3.5 people, a cut of 15.7 per cent. Their average age has been reduced from 64 to 60. Head and deputy heads at the bureau level are now generally composed of 2.3 people, a cut of 14 per cent. Their average age has been reduced from 58 to 54.

Middle-aged and younger cadres have been promoted to leading bodies. They constitute 13 per cent of the leaders at the ministerial level and 16 per cent at the bureau level. The cultural level of the leading bodies at the ministerial and bureau levels has all been raised. Initial results have been made in lowering the average age of leading comrades. This constitutes a satisfactory step forward towards leading organs composed of revolutionized and better educated cadres with professional knowledge. In the future, we will continue to promote capable middle-aged and younger cadres and do a good job in making arrangements for retired veteran cadres. We will continue the streamlining programme, train cadres in rotation, improve the work methods and efficiency.

Question: Why is emphasis being placed on consolidating the party's work style at the present time?

Answer: The Communist Party of China is a ruling party. As Vice-Chairman of the CPC Central Committee Chen Yun pointed out, the style of work of a ruling party is a matter of life-and-death importance.

During the revolutionary war years, everyone who joined the Communist Party was willing to bear hardships, take risks and, if necessary, sacrifice his or her life. Things have changed since the revolution succeeded. The people showed gratitude to us and the bourgeoisie came forward to flatter us. It is very easy for people within our party to become arrogant and begin to seek pleasure. Some opportunists and careerists may have wormed their way into the party, taking advantage of the party's position to line their pockets. The 10 chaotic years of the "Cultural Revolution" clearly proved that a ruling party would become divorced from the masses if it does not maintain its good style of work and does not follow the principle of democratic centralism. Conspirators and careerists will be active and the party may face the danger of changing its character and political colour.

After years of efforts, the party's style of work has begun to take a turn for the better. But this does not mean that a fundamental change has taken place. For instance, an extremely small number of party cadres doubt the line of the party Central Committee, with some publicly singing different tunes. A number of party members have grown individualistic. An extremely small number of them, corrupted by capitalist ideas, have become criminals. Some party organizations have forfeited their role as fighting bastions.

Since the third plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee, the party has been following a correct line. Its implementation, however, calls for a good party style of work. Therefore, we urgently need to improve the party's work style and work for a fundamental turn for the better in this respect.

Question: How will party members be educated in the future?

Answer: According to our experience in building up our party over the past decades, the party's power does not depend upon the number of members, but the quality of the party members. We have always emphasized the importance of ideological building to the party's development. Half of our present members joined the party after 1966 when the "Cultural Revolution" began. When Lin Biao and the gang of four were holding sway, innter-party life was extremely abnormal. These comrades had no chance to receive party education. They lack the experience of strict party life. Many of them do not fully understand the basic knowledge of the party, its rules, discipline, fine traditions and style of work. In the meantime, some of those who joined the party much earlier have become lax and are not strict with themselves.

At present, our party is leading the people of all nationalities in building socialist ethics and material civilization. The new historical task has set new and higher demands for all Communist Party members. Therefore, strengthening the education of the party members to raise their political quality becomes a very important task of our party. In accordance with historical experience and the task confronting us, we will continue to organize the party members to study Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the People's Republic of China, Guiding Principles for Inner-Party Political Life and other documents. Education will be carried out in the following fields.

1. Education in the basic theory of Marxism-Leninism and the four fundamental principles -- keeping to the socialist road, the people's democratic dictatorship, Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought, and the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party. We should educate party members to firmly believe in Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought and have confidence that the cause of our party will be victorious.

2. Education in the great communist ideal. We should educate party members to foster a world outlook of struggling for communism throughout their life, to link this great ideal with their jobs, to heighten their revolutionary spirit, and to contribute their all to the party's cause.

3. Education in the proletarian party spirit and basic knowledge of the party. We should educate members strictly to conduct themselves according to the standards of a party member, to display exemplary, backbone and linking-the-party-with-the-masses roles in various fields of work and to strive to be qualified Communist Party members.

4. Education in opposing the ideological corruption of capitalist ideas. It is imperative to help party members develop a sober understanding of class struggle under the new historical conditions, maintain sharp vigilance and conscientiously resist the corrosion of capitalist ideas and way of life.

Our party will convene its 12th national congress this autumn. The reports and resolutions passed at the congress will be the major contents in the education of the party members for a fairly long period to come.

AFP: DALAI LAMA NOT TO RETURN TO PRC-RULED XIZANG

OW200926 Hong Kong AFP in English 0734 GMT 20 Jul 82

[By Dilip Ganguly]

[Text] New Delhi, July 20 (AFP) -- The spiritual and temporal leader of Tibet, the Dalai Lama, today announced he would not return to Tibet as long as it was under Chinese rule. The Tibetan god-king's stand on a rapprochement with the Chinese Government hardened following the reported statement of his former deputy, the Panchen Lama. A statement published on Sunday by the NEW CHINA NEWS AGENCY (NCNA) quoted the Panchen Lama as saying from the Tibetan capital of Lhasa that poverty had been overcome in the mountaneous roof of the world, and that the Dalai Lama should return to his homeland from where he fled to India in 1959.

A spokesman of the Tibetan government-in-exile in Dharamsala, north India, accused the Chinese of using the Panchen Lama to deceive "the world and confuse the basic issues concerning Tibet."

Panchen Lama, regarded as the second man in Tibetan Buddhist hierarchy is currently on a "fact finding tour of Tibet."

Meanwhile, the Dalai Lama's office here also expressed doubt that the 44-year-old Panchen Lama had really made the statement attributed to him by the official Chinese news agency. "We have reasons to believe that the latest statement attributed to Panchen Rinpoche (Lama) regarding the invitation to his holiness the Dalai Lama to return to Tibet and the improved conditions in Tibet are distorted and quoted out of context," the statement said.

The Panchen Lama is now vice-chairman of the Chinese National Peoples Congress (NPC).

Claiming that the Lhasa statement was either fabricated or distorted, the statement here said the Panchen Lama would never address the living Buddhist deity as "Dalai" as reported by NCNA. "The Panchen Rinpoche always refers to his holiness the Dalai Lama as 'tham che khempa' (the all knowing) and will not use the term Dalai as quoted in the statement...this is the term normally used by the Chinese mass media," the release here said.

The Panchen Lama was quoted by NCNA as saying "Dalai and I are good Buddhist brothers and I sincerely hope that he will make a correct choice and return to China at an early date."

"One also wonders how Panchen Rinpoche would have said that poverty has ended in most parts of Tibet when he has just begun his tour and has not so far seen the conditions of the countryside where poverty is most serious," the statement said.

The statement also accused the Chinese Government of preventing Tibetans from freely meeting the Panchen Lama. "We have reports from reliable sources that the Chinese authorities in Tibet have in fact sternly warned the people prior to Panchen Rinpoche's visit that they should not openly welcome him or meet him individually during his stay in Tibet or otherwise the offenders would forfeit one month's rations and punishment for disobeying the order.

"In view of this it is doubtful that if Panchen Rinpoche will really be allowed to have free and frank talk with ordinary people to assess the real conditions in Tibet during his visit," the statement said.

The developments confirmed earlier reports of growing distrust between the Dalai Lama and the Chinese Government which had earlier showed signs of improvement, experts said. The rapprochement moves between them which started with the first contact in 1979 made some advances. The Chinese allowed the Panchen Lama to visit Tibet as part of an understanding early this month after a gap of about 18 years. The move was welcomed by the Dalai Lama here. But relations soured when the Dalai Lama made a stunning attack on the Chinese last week for showing "disrespect" to his former deputy when the latter arrived in Lhasa early this month.

SPEECH BY WANG RENZHONG AT EDUCATION FORUM

[Article by Wang Renzhong: "Bringing Up Communist Successors" -- speech delivered at the forum sponsored by the CCP Central Committee Propaganda Department on ideological and moral education among teenagers and children]

[Text] The party Central Committee has attached great importance to the education among youngsters and children, as the quality of this work has a bearing on the rise or decline of our nation. All of you have taken a very positive attitude toward this matter and presented many good ideas.

Ideological and moral education among primary school students must be discussed well as some good ideas can be absorbed through discussions.

In order to carry out ideological and moral education in primary schools, teachers should have teaching materials. These materials could be compiled in the course of instruction. However, it will be much better if they are compiled in an organized way. Teachers who have done well in carrying out ideological and moral education can be brought together to compile a textbook by supporting each other's weak points.

Ideological and moral education for children cannot be carried out with empty theory. Even university students are not interested in empty talk, to say nothing of primary school students. Some university students have said that they do not like lessons in political education. As a matter of fact, they do like the lessons, and if they do not, it is only because the teaching materials are not vivid and lively. Why do the students of the Beijing Teachers College like to attend lessons by Lecturer Li Yanjie? I think we must train a group of teachers like Li Yanjie in the country. The training can be carried out in a short 2-week course during vacations.

Some primary school teachers are good at ideological work. We can bring some of them together to exchange their experiences and compile teaching materials. However, in my opinion, there must be a textbook, to the extent possible, based on nationally unified basic teaching materials. There may also be supplementary teaching materials from one's region or province.

We must have two demands for our children: that they grow up both in good physical health as well as mental health. We must broaden their knowledge under this condition. The amount of homework for children must be strictly controlled. Some primary schools assign so much homework to students that they hardly have time to play on Sundays. When teachers and parents educate children, they must be good at inspiring and guiding them and educating them in a scientific manner.

Ideological and moral education among youngsters and children must center around communist ideology. This is, of course, without question. During the period of the new democratic revolution, we communists made use of such communist ideals to educate revolutionary fighters and the people. Now we are working hard for socialism and are engaged in socialist construction. We are working for the goal of communism. The saying that "communist ideals are something belonging to the future and they are unattainable" is wrong. We are now marching step by step toward the magnificent goal of communism. The steps we are taking and all the work we are doing are part of the great communist ideal. In the initial stage of communist society, public ownership of the means of production, nonexploitation and remuneration according to work are something having communist characteristics. Therefore, how we now approach society, relationships between one thing and another and our work must be different. Carrying out education with communist ideals should not be divorced from reality. The demands of communist ideology will change in pace with social development and with the deepening of people's political understanding. Demands will change under different conditions. And the demands on party members and nonparty personages are also different.

The work of the Young Pioneers is very important. The song of the Young Pioneers is a very pleasant one. But I know nothing of the song of the CYL. (At this moment, Zhou Pengcheng, secretary of the CYL Central Committee chipped in with: "The CYL does not have a song yet.") I think there must be a song for the CYL. Our party's song is "The Internationale." The Young Pioneers' song proclaims that we are communist successors. It is quite meaningful. The CYL has a name for communism, so it must profess faith in communism and fight for it.

We must look at problems from all sides and consider, analyze and report them to the higher levels. Youngsters and children are apt to absorb capitalist ideas and the vestiges of feudal ideology. Feudal ideology in society still exerts a great influence on youths and children. For instance, during a visit to Shaanxi Province I found boys and girls in one middle school who dared not associate with each other. Later, I noticed the same problem in Beijing. Of course, I do not mean that feudal ideology now prevails over our country. But we must pay adequate attention to its baneful influence. Particularly, it is necessary to combat feudal ideology by force of communist ideology. During the Cultural Revolution, under the impact of leftist ideas, students revolted against, beat up and humiliated teachers. This is absolutely wrong. We are now encouraging students to show respect for their teachers. This is quite correct. But on the other hand, we must prevent the emergence of a situation in which all that is said by the teachers is accepted as true. We must encourage children to dare to argue with parents and reason things out with teachers. Teachers play a leading role in schools while students mainly learn from them. If students display something good in mentality or moral character, should not the teachers learn from them too? The exchange of making up what others lack in teaching and learning is a correct attitude. Professors may not be able to answer all questions put forward by students. Can teachers in primary schools answer all questions raised by their pupils? I think it is impossible. They teach children to be honest; they too must be honest. If you do not know something, you must say so. Do not pretend to know when you do not. Only by so doing will teachers have prestige among students. Students like teachers who can really identify with them and treat them as equals. Teachers have self-respect and also expect respect from their students. But students usually have a stronger sense of self-respect. Parents and teachers should not casually wound children's pride, but should respect it. You should even learn the merits and progress of mischievous children. Otherwise, if you do not often point out their merits or progress, and if you dishearten them, they will not get along with you at all. We must imbue children with braveness and creativeness from childhood. In the past, we criticized the viewpoint of demanding that a student get a full mark for every course and act in passive obedience. This is really a wrong viewpoint. Now, when we are bringing order out of chaos, we must be careful not to go to extremes; that is to say, we do not want children to act with blind obedience again.

In the past we stressed that priority should be given to enable students first to develop intellectually. Before the Cultural Revolution, Chairman Mao once criticized and said that the burden of students was too heavy. At that time, a doggerel rose among students saying: "Sunday is not a holiday for us but a busy day of rushing to finish homework. If this continues, we can hardly live over 21." This criticism sounded quite right. The students would then take an examination like a surprise attack; no stress was made on feedback or discussion in the teaching work. Now we must adopt a heuristic and thought-provoking method, not a simple cramming method in teaching. Of course, we can force-feed students a little, but heuristic and thought-provoking methods must be used for the most part. I think outside reading can be suggested to pupils in primary 4 or 5. But if lessons and homework keep students too busy and they have no free time, then we will be unable to give full play to their initiative and individual character and will fail to meet their interests and requirements.

Pupils are full of energy, so we must organize healthy extracurricular activities for them. Is it possible to set up two activity centers in every residential subdistrict? I do not think it would be difficult to do so. In Guangxi, I found that one neighborhood office had used 2 and 1/2 rooms in a house as an activity center for children, containing a TV set, slide show and books. Children usually gather here on holidays. The center is quite useful for educational purposes. The sites for children's extracurricular activities must make do with whatever is available. It is impossible for the state to spend much money to build many children's palaces overnight. Schools can also be turned into activity centers on holidays or during vacations. But if children are far from their schools, they can go to activity centers in their residential subdistricts.

We must intensify education among youngsters and children in various forms. We have accumulated much experience in promoting ideological and moral education among the youngsters and children. Now the key to success lies in popularizing the experience. Party committees, people's governments, women's federations, CYL organizations, trade unions and other organizations at all levels must attach importance to and strengthen this work. Organs in the field of propaganda, literary and art circles, radio and TV stations, popular entertainment troupes and other literary and art organizations must truly provide children and youngsters with nourishment for their minds and for the healthy development of their moral characters. They must seriously promote the work of strengthening ideological education among the children and youngsters. Since the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee is in charge of this affair, it must carry it through to the end.

To grasp well ideological and moral education among children and youngsters, we should first start with the adults. If grandparents, parents and teachers are bad in thinking and moral character, they will create a very bad influence in the eyes of children. Therefore, those who educate others must first educate themselves, set a good example and consciously be models for children and youngsters.

ARTICLE DISCUSSES ECONOMIC STRUCTURAL REFORM

HK150807 Shanghai SHIJIE JINGJI DAOBAO in Chinese No 90, 28 Jun 82 pp 1, 2

[Report: "State Structural Reform Committee and State Council Economic Research Center Hold Mobilization Meeting for Discussing Theory of Economic Structural Reforms"]

[Text] Chinese economic workers and theorists in the past few years have held enthusiastic discussions on theoretical questions concerning economic structural reform. Many academic meetings of this nature have been held in Beijing and in various provinces and municipalities. Many academic articles and ideas have been published. The general objective is to find a Chinese way to reform the economic system, in a way that is based on Marxist principles, that reflects the experiences and lessons in the socialist economic construction of our country and other countries and that is suited to China's conditions. In order to further develop discussions on these significant theoretical questions, the State Structural Reform Committee and State Council Economic Research Center recently held a mobilization meeting. Xue Muqiao, Yu Guangyuan, Zhou Taihe and others spoke at the meeting. Excerpts of these three comrades' talks follow:

Xue Muqiao: Since 1979, enthusiastic discussions on theoretical questions concerning economic structural reform have been held and the general orientation of these discussions is correct. The mainstream is good and achievements are the main aspect. These discussions have played an important role in promoting experimental work in economic structural reform. Economic structural reform is a very complicated change. No country in this world is clear about this question. Our experience is not sufficient either. Therefore, it is inevitable that incorrect or one-sided views have been put forward in the theoretical discussions. The purpose of mobilizing the broad masses of economic workers and theoretical workers to carry out further and deeper discussions and research on theoretical questions of economic structural reform at present is to further make clear those theoretical questions concerning economic structural reform and overcome certain one-sidedness in theory in a truth-seeking manner.

It is also aimed at increasing our understanding together and on the basis of summing up the experience of structural reform of our country in the past 30 years, in particular in the past 3 years, making clear the orientation of structural reform and making full preparations and providing scientific grounds for formulating a general plan for economic structural reform.

At present, there are many theoretical questions concerning economic structural reform that need discussion and research. There are two which are most important: one is the planned economy and the market; the other is the relationship between vertical and horizontal management or between departmental management and local management or between centralization of power and division of power.

Regarding the question of the planned economy and the market, what needs further discussion is:

1. The relationship between the commodity economy and the planned economy. Some comrades hold that the commodity economy and the planned economy are not opposites. Although the nature of the socialist economy is a planned economy and not a commodity economy, we cannot say that no commodity production or commodity exchange exist in socialism or that no commodity economy exists in it. Achieving a correct understanding needs discussion and research.

2. Concerning regulation by planning and regulation by market mechanism. We often talk about the combination of regulation by planning and regulation by market mechanism and making full use of the role of regulation by market mechanism under state guidance, or the combination of regulation by planning and regulation by market mechanism with regulation by planning as the dominant factor and regulation by market mechanism as a supplement. Can we say that this formulation is basically correct? In the past 3 years, our country's planned economy has been pounded. Has regulation by market mechanism been the cause? Or is it because we have not used economic levers at the same time to ensure the fulfillment of state plans? What is the relationship between a planned economy and regulation by planning? Can we only mention a planned economy without mentioning regulation by planning? Some comrades hold that regulation by planning in its narrow sense means that the state regulates the production, purchase and marketing activities of enterprises by means of mandatory planning, and regulation by planning in its broader sense includes regulation of the state by means of economic levers and the law of value. Only free production which is not brought into the orbit of state plans and which is regulated spontaneously by the law of value is regarded as being regulated by market mechanism. Is this view correct? Can mandatory planning be reduced or discarded? How should we understand this question?

3. On the difference between market, market economy and regulation by market mechanism. A planned economy is not a market economy but it must have a market. Planning should not be set against the market. We still cannot engage in a planned economy without a market. The shortcoming in our economic work is not excessive utilization of the role of the market but not being good at utilizing the role of market. Market, market economy, regulation by market mechanism, planning, planned economy and regulation by planning are all different in meaning. It is necessary to restudy whether many past formulations are accurate or not.

Many theoretical questions concerning vertical and horizontal management need studying. In our country's economic management structure, there is the contradiction between vertical (departmental) management and horizontal (local) management. Can we gradually replace "ownership by departments" and "ownership by localities" with various forms of integration and get rid of separation resulting from vertical and horizontal management in order to resolve this contradiction? Can we separate administrative divisions from economic divisions? This is a question worthy of studying and solving. May we say that it is necessary to reduce unnecessary state administrative intervention in enterprises? But socialist enterprises can only have relative decisionmaking power and cannot have absolute decisionmaking power. After all, they have to be put under the leadership of either localities or departments. How then should we handle the mutual relationship between departmental management and local management?

There are many other questions that need studying besides the two major ones mentioned above. For example, the question of the structure of socialist ownership and diversified economic components and multiple management methods. To what extent should semisocialist and nonsocialist economic components be developed?

In order to further properly carry out the discussion of theoretical questions concerning economic reform, we should pay attention to the following. 1) During theoretical discussions, we should allow people to put forth certain erroneous, one-sided or wrongly expressed ideas. We should not settle old accounts, nor should we settle new ones. In particular, we should not ascribe a certain view to someone in absolute terms and then criticize it willfully. We should not repeat past practices of seizing hold of somebody's mistakes, using the big stick and elevating somebody's minor mistakes. 2) As long as we adhere to the four basic principles and uphold planned management of the national economy, our general orientation will be correct. That different views are put forth during discussions is normal and necessary. 3) We should uphold the scientific attitude of seeking truth from facts, establish a good style of upholding truth and correcting mistakes and should not regard ourselves as being always correct. 4) In our discussions, we should apply theory to practice, take Marxism-Leninism as our guidance, proceed from our country's actual conditions, sum up the positive and negative experiences in structural reforms at home and abroad and properly integrate theory with practice and orientation with methods.

Zhou Taihe: Correct theory is our guidance in carrying out economic structural reform. All structural reforms in East European countries proceeded from theory and had good theoretical preparations. When Hungary set about structural reform in 1964, for example, 11 theoretical groups were set up to carry out study on specific questions. We cannot depend on just a small number of people to carry out economic structural reform. We must depend on numerous cadres and the masses to carry out the reform together. Without the participation of thousands upon thousands of cadres and the masses, it will be difficult to carry out economic structural reform.

Yu Guangyuan: The socialist economic structural reform is an important event in contemporary world history. We may regard this event as another reform with historic significance to the relations of production in the socialist countries after the socialist transformation of the ownership of the means of production.

We should make clear the range and nature of the questions to be studied and discussed. We should distinguish between two different concepts: one is the socialist basic economic system common to all socialist countries that lasts throughout the entire historical period of socialism, that is, the public ownership of the means of production by the society, the practice of distribution according to work and the existence of socialist commodity production. Socialist economic structures vary in different socialist countries or in different historical periods of the same socialist country but they are all concrete economic relations set up on the basis of the basic socialist economic system. We can only uphold and perfect the basic socialist economic system and we cannot reform it; whereas we can and should reform the socialist economic structure and make it more rational in order to meet the needs of development.

The study of the theory of economic structural reform is aimed at summing up one aspect of the historical experience of socialist economic construction. In speaking of world experiences, all experiences since the October Revolution are background material for our reference in studying theoretical questions of economic structure. The 30 years' experiences of Yugoslavia since the beginning of the 1950's when Yugoslavia started workers' self-government are more direct material for study in this respect. Speaking of China's experiences, there are two kinds of material -- the 33 years' experiences since the founding of the country and the 4 years' experiences since the economic structural reform was put forth.

In such an important question of theory and practice concerning the socialist economic structural reform, there are bound to be differences of principle and questions will occur as to which are Marxist views, which are not Marxist views or even which are views that oppose Marxism. Under these circumstances, we should adopt a careful attitude towards to question of which are Marxist and which are not Marxist views and let various views be put forward for discussion. Conclusions should be drawn through discussion and even be drawn through practice.

The socialist economy is a planned economy and planning is the basic feature of the socialist economy. The socialist economic structural reform should strengthen planning and not weaken it. The question is how to strengthen planning. Of course, the planning should first of all be scientific and at the same time, there should be a set of methods to ensure planning and to strengthen planning.

GUANGMING RIBAO ON SUPERFLUOUS ASSISTANTS

[Article by Xia Shuzhang [1115 2579 4545]: "The Role of Assistants Viewed in Light of the Draft of the Revised Constitution"]

[Text] The draft of the revised constitution embodies the spirit of the reform of the administrative structure. Its stipulations on the role of assistants are a case in point. Apart from provisions in the organizational law, there are three stipulations on the role of assistants in the draft of the revised constitution. They carry significance in terms of principle and as examples. For instance, the vice chairmen of the NPC Standing Committee will number "a few." No clearcut figure is given for the numbers of vice chairman of the PRC (which may be interpreted as there being one vice chairman). "Two to four" vice permiers of the State Council are provided for. As far as the post of vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and that of vice premier are concerned, the nature of their work is different and there should be different stipulations. To clearly spell out the number of assistants in an administrative organ (or the number of staff members) helps guard against an excessive number of assistants. The reduction of the number of assistants is an important part of the effort to reform the administrative structure.

Assistants referred to here mean assistants to leaders of administrative organs. It does not include assistants in other organizations, or the academic and professional titles of assistant professors, assistant research workers, associate doctors of philosophy, deputy chief engineers, assistant editors, and so forth.

As the name suggests, an assistant serves the person ranking above him. As such, he should not be kept idle. His post should not just exist in name with nothing to do. Still less should it be a hindrance to normal work. For various reasons the title of a job holder with an assistant under him can be an "honorary" with no actual work involved (as is the case with the presidents of certain colleges abroad). The assistant in such cases assumes all the duties in practice. It is also common for an assistant to play an acting role, or take over as successor, if the need arises.

The creation of the position of an assistant is nothing new and has been known through all ages at home and abroad. The problem is whether it is necessary to create the post of an assistant and how many assistants there should be. Generally speaking an official of a high rank should have assistance from someone. But he should not have too many assistants. An official of medium rank can have no assistant, depending on actual conditions. If at the basic level or in the smallest unit, the posts of assistance are created and also in great numbers, then that is highly unnecessary. Some people argue that as far as the army is concerned, there are also deputy squad leaders. This is a fact. However, even in times of war, the number of deputy squad leaders and squad leaders in the army does not exceed that of fighters. This is also a fact. Now, in the administrative departments, it is not strange to find more deputy section chiefs and section chiefs than staff members under them. A most outstanding case known to the author is the labor bureau of a certain county. It has 8 directors, including deputy ones, with only one ordinary cadre under them.

For some time it was common practice to extensively install assistants or have more of them at all levels on all fronts throughout the country. In some cases there were just too many of them. There even appeared the trend of more and more assistants being assigned. Things assumed proportions so serious that people freely asked for assistants or randomly added to the number of assistants. This of course resulted in discussion. Amidst the call for the reform of the administrative structure, this has especially become a subject of discussion. The resolution of the party Central Committee and the State Council to change this situation is very firm. We must properly solve the problem of awareness. Only in this way can we wholeheartedly support this decisive measure.

The situation of too many posts of assistants existing was not created in a day. Its causes are very complicated. Let us first look at some superficial causes and then at the actual situation. Then we will discuss what are the "side-effects" of the existence of too many assistants.

The "reasons" for greatly increasing the number of assistants in the past generally had to do with one of the following arguments:

1. To strengthen leadership and improve efficiency. Having assistants in a number beyond reasonable limits would only produce results different from what was expected and even produce opposite results. This means weakening leadership and reducing efficiency. Given more assistants, work is classified into more categories. Power of control over matters is dispersed and action is likely to be slow. This also obstructs efforts to give unified orders and to make timely arrangements. Experience shows that having more assistants is a far cry from strengthening collective leadership.

2. To develop an enterprise and meet the needs of work. As far as this is concerned, there is an effective way to judge. We must check whether the number of assistants added is rational in proportion to relevant conditions concerning an organ in all fields and especially the actual amount of work itself. We must check whether these posts are created for the purpose for which they are intended, or whether they are created just to exist in name and to enable their holders to idle away their time.

3. To train cadres as prospective successors. Even if this really is the case, there is no need to have too many assistants. If they exceed the number needed it only leaves people with the impression that the jobs are being created under various pretexts or under false pretense, as everyone knows that they are not really needed. Moreover, given a superfluity of assistants, everyone is assigned work which actually overlaps that of the responsible person of the department in charge. If a person pays no attention of another, then in his post he actually has nothing to do. That being so, still less can the claim about training prospective successors be justified.

4. To give people a higher position by way of encouragement. A change in position and the question of rewards and penalties are important parts of the personnel (cadre) management system. A promotion may have an encouraging effect, but what should be chiefly considered is whether it contributes to our work. If a promotion is justified just by the factor of encouragement, then there would be no end of promotions. Even if there are plenty of vacancies for assistants, there is after all a limit.

5. Given a big family and a great cause, it is harmless to have more assistants. Our country still has a very weak foundation and is short of technical personnel in various fields. We must make every cent count in our budget for expenditures on employees and cannot be careless about our money. If so many assistants are not needed, would it not be better to direct superfluous manpower to posts where they are really needed? This is the case to say nothing of the superfluity of assistants being a hindrance to work performance.

The above arguments for the excessive number of assistants are inevitably far fetched. The following conditions giving rise to a superfluity of assistants are more convincing.

1. Administrative rules and regulations are not perfect enough. Some organs have no organizational laws or rules to follow as a basis and are quite free in creating the posts of assistants. Even if there is a basis for guidance, there is also the problem of the degree of awareness and of interpretation and enforcement. For instance, the clause "the post of an assistant can be created, if necessary" (refer to article 39 of the organizational laws for regional people's congresses at all levels and regional people's governments at all levels of the PRC), the number of assistants allowed is not given. Also, the expression "a certain number" of posts of assistants can be created (refer to the same article) allows for such great flexibility in interpretation that people are almost given the power to take charge of things themselves. As regards past individual clearcut rules setting down a limited range for the number of assistants, there is also room left for the choice of a greater over a smaller number.

2. There is a given historical background. In the 10 years of internal disorders, many existing leading cadres "stepped aside" or got involved with "the great reshuffle." With chaos turned into order and the relevant policies carried out, those reinstated combined with those in their existing positions of course constituted a great number. Given a long interruption in the normal process of promotion, some deserved promotions are given, adding further to the number. The assignment of new personnel also has a chain reaction. As units rank people according to seniority and have no place for newly assigned persons, there can hardly be a "balance" between the number of workers supplied and the actual number required. Therefore, the addition of assistants to leaders at all levels is considered a "way out."

3. Both the system and the accepted practice are to blame. Though there is no relevant clearcut stipulation, lifetime tenure for leadership cadres actually existed for a time. Unless dismissed because of unusual mistakes or serious offenses against the law, cadres generally could only climb up the ladder rather than slip down and could only be accepted rather than expelled. No matter what the conditions of a new work department, transferred cadres had to be assigned and graded as before. In the past, such methods as making veteran cadres retire and retreat to the second line were not made clear enough. As a result, many old, weak and frequently stick cadres (including assistants) remained in their leadership posts despite their failing health. Therefore, the number of assistants was continuously increased to provide help for these cadres. Thus, there have been more and more assistants.

4. The number of assistants is inevitably matched at higher and lower levels. If there generally exist many assistants in leadership posts in various units, then a unit concerned must go along and increase its number of assistants accordingly. If a leadership department under it will, if it does not have assistants in leadership posts or too few assistants, have an especially hard time of it. At the higher levels, heads get in touch with heads. The lower levels also turn to higher-level heads. That which is within the province of a given department in its internal and external affairs is often referred to the leadership at a higher level for "personal attention," instructions" and "guidance," in order to stress the importance attached to it. In addition, exchanges between fraternal units follow the traditional pattern of "matching soldier with soldier and general with general." If the number of assistants is not increased, things become unmanageable.

As to the superfluity of assistants, only if we deeply realize the defects of this practice can we resolutely correct it.

1. This practice helps make for a staff larger than is needed. Given an excessive number of assistants, we must assign work to them. Sometimes, several assistants share in the control of a unit under them. In some cases, "there are more officers than soldiers," or there are even "department heads with no department under their control," or "commanders existing only in name." This calls for "recruiting men and horses" to swell the ranks, in order to avoid losing "face" and spoiling the "appearance." There are also units which originally had a relatively large number of departments. These departments act upon each other, causing a vicious cycle and leading to an ever larger staff.

2. Administrative efficiency suffers. Given a large number of assistants at various levels, documents for circulation must go through many levels and wait longer. More meetings are also held and each take longer. Meetings are also often postponed because some people are away on business or sick, or because there are other intervening factors. If work is not properly divided up, people of the same unit may split up and each concern himself with his own affairs, passing the buck to each other and letting things slide. All matters, important or unimportant, are thus referred to the higher levels for instructions. As they are likely to be held up, how can efficiency not become still lower?

3. This practice interferes with the normal progress of work. That which causes too large a staff and reduced efficiency interferes with work performance. But the superfluity of assistants does more than interfere with work. Given an excessive number of assistants, job-holders whom they serve must spend time and energy coordinating relations between assistants and maintaining contacts. The least lapse in attention will cause overattention to one thing and the neglect of another and give rise to contradictions. Those things involving the whole situation and being of significance must still be taken care of by these job-holders in charge. Certain assistants become redundant links in between. Sometimes they are more hindrances than helpers.

4. This practice causes waste in various forms. The waste of time and energy caused by a superfluity of assistants as mentioned above is obvious. The waste of manpower and financial and material resources also reaches quite alarming proportions. There is a considerable increase in the budget for their expense, the number of personnel assigned to them, housing allotted and other allocations to them.

5. The practice does not help the growth of cadres. Given too large a number of assistants and the classification of work into many categories, a deputy director (much less two leadership assistants sharing the control of a unit under them), who is only put in charge of a department, cannot play an effective role at both higher and lower levels, with nothing actually being done at either level. It is also likely that, as the duties are not clearly defined, the higher level will take over and the lower level will depend on the higher level.

The above situation is a great obstruction to the realization of our fundamental tasks, and the concentration of forces on socialist modernization. Therefore, this forms part of the reform of the administrative structure which the central authorities are determined to make. The reflection of the situation in the draft of the revised constitution is not accidental. We do not just want to take the actual needs and actual results into consideration. There should not be too many assistants. Because the administrative organ works in a down-to-earth manner, anything that interferes with efficiency should be given up.

FIRST HALF PIG, EGG PROCUREMENT INCREASED

[Excerpts] Beijing, 18 Jul (XINHUA) -- A XINHUA reporter has obtained the following news from the Ministry of Commerce: The total quantities of pigs and fresh eggs procured by the state during the first half of this year increased significantly over the same period last year. Some 62.42 million pigs were procured during the first half of this year, an increase of 2.95 million over the same period last year, and some 1,075.5 million jin of fresh eggs were procured during the first half of this year, an increase of 64.4 million jin. The increase was due to the implementation of the state policy of encouraging pig and poultry raising and guaranteed procurement in various localities.

In December last year, the State Council approved and promptly transmitted the decision of Anhui Province to vigorously promote pig raising because there was a downward trend in pig raising. Most provinces, municipalities and autonomous region implemented policies on allocating fodder land and providing feed to encourage peasants to raise pigs. Various localities have stopped the practice of forcing down grades and demanding lower prices, while forbidding the practice of forcing up grades and prices. As a result, the peasants have enhanced their enthusiasm for raising pigs and reversed the downward trend.

The supply of fresh eggs in Beiging, Tianjin and Shanghai during the first half of this year increased by 22.2 million jin compared with the same period last year.

ASEISMIC BUILDING METHODS PROMOTED IN NORTH

OW161301 Beijing XINHUA in English 1236 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 16 (XINHUA) -- Aseismic reinforcement of some industrial, commercial and residential buildings has been completed in the last few years in the major cities of northern China, Beijing, Tianjin, Dalian, Xian, Baotou, Hohhot, Taiyuan and Datong, according to a conference on earthquake-resistant construction in northern China that closed here today.

Beijing, China's capital, has reinforced most of the buildings housing water works, power plants and communications facilities as well as bridges on trunk highways. Apartment houses are being reinforced by stages, the conference was told.

China is one of the world's seismically most active countries. Delegates attending the conference said that reinforcement of existing buildings has proved to be an effective way of reducing earthquake damage.

To ensure the safety of the people and of property, the Chinese Government has, since 1977, allocated 840 million yuan for reinforcement work on 115.3 million square meters of industrial, commercial and residential buildings. In addition, local governments, departments and enterprises have raised another 300 million yuan for such work, according to a report at the conference.

The five-day conference was convened by the newly established Ministry of Urban and Rural Construction and Environmental Protection and attended by officials in charge of aseismic work from eleven of China's northern provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions and from departments under the State Council.

The report said that 24 million square meters of buildings, 545 highway and railway bridges, nine large and medium-sized reservoirs and large numbers of chimneys and water towers were reinforced in China in 1981.

Conference delegates urged local authorities to continue to put prevention first and study how to strengthen urban aseismic capability while working out plans for urban construction and renovation that incorporate earthquake-resistant methods. They said that any new construction must meet state standards for earthquake resistance, villages in highly seismic regions should be given advice about safe construction methods, they added. Delegates agreed that scientific research in this field should be strengthened.

FUJIAN ADOPTS RESOLUTION ON FINANCIAL WORK

[Resolution of the Standing Committee of the 5th Fujian Provincial People's Congress on further strengthening financial work, adopted by the 16th session of the 5th provincial people's congress standing committee on 29 June 1982]

[Excerpts] The 16th Session of the 5th Fujian Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee heard and examined the "Report on How the 1982 Budget Was Implemented From January to May" made by Chang Tingxiang, deputy director of the provincial financial department, on behalf of the provincial people's government. The session held: After the convocation of the fourth session of the fifth provincial people's congress, the people's governments at all levels and various financial departments conscientiously carried out the guidelines laid down by the fourth session of the fifth provincial people's congress and did a great deal of work in developing the national economy. However, in the course of instituting the budget, new factors leading to reduced revenues and increased expenditures were discovered. Deficits were further enlarged. The standing committee of the provincial people's congress is extremely concerned over this situation. The people's governments at all levels and various departments concerned must rapidly adopt effective measures to correct the abnormal situation under which production is increased while revenues remain the same and expenditures are expanding while revenues are dropping.

To strive to develop production and increase social wealth is the foundation in solving financial problems. Efforts must be made to attain better economic results and arouse the masses to develop various activities in increasing production and practicing economy in order to increase revenues while stepping up production.

It is necessary to adhere to the principle of seeking truth from facts and acting according to our capabilities. We must strictly control new expenditures and carry out capital construction projects according to our plans and on the basis of the proper procedures.

We must strengthen our supervision over financial affairs and strictly enforce financial and economic discipline. It is necessary to pursue the liability of and seriously deal with those who violate financial and economic discipline. Those who are involved in serious cases must be punished by law.

It is an honor for me to visit you. He urged veteran cadres to continually give play to their role after their retirement. However, the most important thing is to take advantage of their strong points to conduct investigation and studies and participate in more social activities. Educating the youths and juveniles is an unshirkable duty of veteran cadres. Therefore, veteran cadres should make friends with the youths to understand them. Veteran cadres should also teach the youths by their own examples in the light of the youths' ideas in order to pass on their experiences.

The retired veteran cadres pledged to make new contributions to the party and the people as far as possible in order to repay the party Central Committee for its warm concern. SHANDONG URGES STRUGGLE AGAINST ECONOMIC CRIMES

SK150931 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 14 Jul 82

[Excerpt] According to our reporters, the Shandong provincial work conference on dealing blows at serious economic crimes concluded in Jinan Municipality on 12 July. The conference urged party organizations at all levels to regard the struggle against serious economic crimes as their key task, to study anew the related documents and the guideline of instructions issued by the CCP Central Committee and to upgrade their understanding and strengthen the party's leadership over the struggle to carry forward the struggle to the end.

Zhao Lin and Li Zichao, secretaries of the provincial CCP committee, attended and addressed the conference.

The conference held: Since the first half of 1982, our province has waged an all-out struggle against economic crimes, has made an initial breakthrough in the struggle and has scored marked achievements. However, the development of the struggle remains uneven. The party organizations in some localities have not waged the struggle in a thorough manner due to a lack of full understanding of the struggle's significance.

The conference held: It is imperative to deal with criminal cases with high quality and efficiency. According to legal procedures, concentrated efforts should be made to handle key and serious cases. In dealing with cases, it is necessary to adhere to the party's policies to strictly distinguish between the two different types of contradictions. Efforts should be made to draw a clear line of demarcation between faults in work and the violation of law and discipline, between malpractices and economic crimes, and between smuggling, trafficking in contraband goods, embezzling and receiving bribes on the one hand and problems arising in implementing the new open-door policy for rejuvenating the economy due to incomplete provisions on the other. Through correctly implementing the party's policy, efforts should be made to orientate the struggle to a sound track.

The conference held: The key to whether we can carry forward the struggle to the end lies in leadership. The party committees at all levels must regard the struggle as their key task and strengthen their leadership over the struggle in a down-to-earth manner.

YANGCHENG WANBAO ON SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE ISSUES

HK221443 Guangzhou YANGCHENG WANBAO in Chinese 16 Jun 82 p 2

["Discussion on Special Zones" column article by Shen Shi [3088 4258]: "Views On a Number of Issues in Building the Special Economic Zones"]

[Text] Running special economic zones as an experiment in our country refers to a few localities on socialist soil where we implement some systems and policies different from those in the hinterland and where we develop economic cooperation with foreign funds. They are different from other localities in the country, but they should not depart from the general policy of the socialist state. They exist and develop under the conditions of both cooperation and struggle between the socialist and capitalist economic systems. They are experimental bases for serving socialism by means of capitalism. Therefore, on the one hand the special zones should really be "special" in the utilization of capitalist funds, science and technology and advanced management methods and on the other, they should resolutely be "unspecial" in the basic principle concerning socialism. It is necessary to comprehensively and dialectically apply these two aspects and adhere to them in the various tasks of building special zones.

First, in building special economic zones we rely chiefly on absorbing and utilizing foreign funds. For a considerable period of time, the socialist economic sector will not hold an absolutely dominant position in the special zones. However, there will probably be an economic structure in which various economic sectors coexist under the leadership of the socialist state with state capitalism being the main sector. At the initial stage, because of the lack of basic facilities and imperfection of various types of legislation in the special zones, most of the foreign funds we have absorbed are in relatively low forms, such as processing imported materials, processing parts according to pattern, assembling imported spare parts and compensation trade. With the gradual development of the various conditions for absorbing foreign funds, joint ventures and cooperative ventures of a relatively higher degree which are in a position to absorb large amounts of foreign funds will develop to a great extent and hold a major position. Such joint enterprises are a joint-venture of investment and operation between the socialist economy under the system of ownership by the whole people and the collective ownership system, and foreign funds. It is state capitalism within the socialist state. As to independent operation by foreign firms, that is also an important form of absorbing foreign funds and it operates within the scope permitted by the relevant laws, decrees and regulations of the state and the special zones. If the special zones do not rely mainly on the utilization of foreign funds, they violate the original purpose of running the special zones.

We rely mainly on the utilization of foreign funds in the special economic zones, but this does not mean that the socialist economy is of little importance. In the special economic zones, the socialist economy is closely linked with the whole superstructure of socialism. The workers and most of the management personnel of the enterprises are our staff and workers. The various economic tools are chiefly in our hands. So long as we [illegible] them well, we shall be able to control the economic activities in the special zones [illegible]

Second, the products of the enterprises in the special economic zones absorbin[illegible]eign funds are for export in principle and [illegible]e restricted by the relations between sup[illegible]y and demand in world markets. The production and sale of these products are therefore chiefly regulated by the economic mechanism of the market and the law of value plays a dominant role in various aspects of production, supply and marketing. The value of the commodities manufactured by these enterprises should be recognized through exchange on the world market. Otherwise, it will be impossible for them to be competitive or even enter the world market. In view of the fact that the enterprises which absorb foreign funds will become a major economic component in the special zones, it is therefore necessary for the special zones to pay more attention to regulation by market mechanism than other localities. The scope and extent of the law of value and the law of activities by international capital also play a greater role. Therefore, constantly raising the competitiveness of the export commodities on the world market is an important task for the economic activities in the special zones.

In this respect, the special zones also have many favorable conditions. First of all, by cooperating with foreign businessmen in running enterprises, the special zones have a relatively great number of channels of economic contacts and are relatively well informed in scientific and technological and economic information and in market information. This makes it possible for the special zones to constantly adopt new technology and, by reacting flexibly according to the needs in world markets, produce readily marketable commodities. Second, becauseof the fact that the costs of land and labor are relatively cheaper, it is possible for foreign investors to make considerable profits and thus give full scope to their initiative in the operation. So long as we are good at handling our relationship with foreign investors on the principle of equality and mutaul benefit, the special zones are in a more favorable position than other localities to renovate equipment, import new technology and adopt advanced methods of operation and management. Furthermore, it is also necessary to make a proper appraisal of the patriotic enthusiasm of the Overseas Chinese and the compatriots from Hong Kong and Macao and conscientiously utilize it as a favorable factor in absorbing foreign funds and in cooperation enterprises.

It is necessary to strictly control the sales of products of the special economic zones in the domestic market. However, if the products are technologically needed in the hinterland, are in short supply in the domestic market and have to be imported from abroad, and if the products of the special economic zones are also satisfactory in both quality and price, it should be permissible to sell them in the domestic market after paying taxes according to the regulations. Naturally, it is necessary for the unit purchasing the commodities to obtain an import permit beforehand from the department concerned at the higher level so that they can be included in the state allocation plan. However, the products of the enterprises in the special economic zones absorbing foreign funds should not be sold principally in the domestic market. The dumping of commodities from foreign investment in the hinterland will undermine the national economy and damage the socialist economy.

The enterprises in the special economic zones absorbing foreign funds are geared to world markets and basically subject to regulation by the economic mechanism of the market. This does not mean that the planned economy is impotent or dispensable. Macroscopically speaking, the economy of the special zones is a component part of the socialist planned economy. It should conduct its activities under the guidance of the planned economy. Moreover, in various aspects such as overall planning, the distribution of various trades and professions, the scale of absorbing foreign funds and technology, the utilization of funds, the supplies of commodities, the arrangements of labor force and the exploitation of intellect, the state plan, in fact, plays a role in the special zones. We should fully understand that ours is a planned economy based on the system of public ownership and in which regulation by market mechanism plays a supplementary role. We should also recognize that in the special economic zones state capitalism will become a major economic sector. Thus we should be able to appropriately handle regulation by planning mechanism and regulation by market mechanism in the special economic zones as well as the relationship between them. Not only should we note the guiding role of the planned economy on the economy of the special zones; we should also take into account the special features of the special zones with regard to plan system and management methods and adopt different methods to readjust the economic forms of the different systems of ownership. It is necessary to bring the economy of the special zones into the orbit of the planned economy of the whole province and the whole country. However, it is impossible to demand that the entire economy of the special zones should be brought into line, some can only be brought into line in part or to a certain extent, and some cannot be brought into line. It is necessary to deal with different economic sectors in different ways.

Third, since in the special economic zones we must adhere to the principle of relying mainly on utilizing foreign funds and of relying mainly on the sale abroad of products produced by enterprises in the special zones absorbing foreign funds, it is necessary for us to be more open in our policy toward foreign countries and to strive to make the special economic zones more appealing in every respect in order to effectively face competition from other countries and areas. The proximity of the Shenzhen and Zhuhai Special Zones to Hong Kong and Macao is a favorable condition for absorbing foreign funds. However, if we fail to have a set of economic laws and regulations suited to the needs of absorbing foreign funds and earnestly put them into effect, the investors will possibly take a wait-and-see attitude. At the same time, foreign businessmen tend to pay attention to the investment environment. Aside from the stability of the political situation, which is a basic condition, other conditions such as telecommunications, communications, banking, insurance, means of consultation, reduction or exemption from customs duties, exit and entry formalities and work efficiency also exert an influence on the investors. The most important point is that the capitalists always aim at making a profit. If they fail to make a profit, they will not come. If the special zones do not adopt a more open policy toward foreign countries, give preferential treatment to foreign investors and provide them with various facilities, they will have no appeal. Naturally, all these measures should be strictly restricted within the scope permitted by the laws and policies of our country.

Fourth, the special economic zones are not an isolated economic entity divorced from the socialist system, and so it is necessary to handle well the relationship between the special economic zones and the whole province and country. Our special economic zones are a component part of the great socialist motherland. Not only should we consider the overall planning and the imported projects of the special zones from the angle of building newly emerging modernized frontier cities; we should closely link them, from the macroscopic angle, with the needs of building our national economy and export needs. This makes it necessary for the special economic zones to do a good job of "absorbing foreign funds" and "maintaining internal links." Maintaining internal links is aimed at obtaining the extensive support of the whole province and the whole country, strengthening the power for exploiting the special economic zones, strengthening the capacity for absorbing foreign funds and digesting advanced technology and, at the same time, constantly delivering to the whole province and the whole country advanced technology and experience of demonstrated effectiveness and capable people for construction who have grown through practice. At present, the various departments and localities in the hinterland are very enthusiastic in investing in the special zones (particularly in Shenzhen), but this should not depart from the state plan and, at the same time, should be brought into the orbit of the overall planning and planned management of the special zones.

Fifth, the special economic zones also present new problems to the party's ideological and political work because we mainly have dealings with international capital and implement a series of special open-door policies different from other localities in the country. We should likewise uphold the four basic principles in the special economic zones and, in accordance with the special features of the special zones, adopt various flexible forms to carry out the four basic principles in the political, economic, ideological and cultural activities of the special zones. We should face up to the side effects generated by the implementation of the open-door policy and conscientiously strengthen ideological and political education among cadres and the masses. It is necessary for the special economic zones to vigorously step up the building of socialist spiritual civilization, resist various harmful effects, prevent cadres from being morally degenerated and ensure the health of civilization in the ideological sphere. We can cooperate with capitalism economically but, politically and ideologically, we should by no means accept decadent capitalist elements. We should wage a thoroughgoing and protracted struggle against them. We should make a full appraisal of the difficulties in our work, but we should also not lose our confidence. So long as we can do a good job of educational and management work, the party organizations at various levels in the special zones can genuinely give full play to their role as a strong fighting bastion and the party members in the special zones can genuinely play an exemplary role and we shall be able to consolidate the socialist ideological position in the special economic zones, build the special economic zones into a showcase of socialist material and spiritual civilization and imbue them with socialist spiritual civilization and social features.

They must grasp the work of investigating and handling major and important cases as the cardinal link in deepening the struggle, and tackle this work really well. They must certainly not treat investigation as a gust of wind and handle the cases in a perfunctory way, nor may they use "the policies are unclear and the cases are not easy to handle" as a pretext for delaying action and leaving matters unsettled. Still less are they permitted to give unprincipled protection to, indulge or connive with malefactors. It is essential to attach importance to investigation and study, seek truth from facts and fully display the power of the policies in dealing steady, accurate and hard blows at all criminals who seriously sabotage the economy. It is also necessary to vigorously protect and support the activists in the struggle.

HK021421 Lhaza Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 0000 GMT 2 Jul 82

[Summary] In order to implement the spirit of the circular of the central authorities on examining work concerning intellectuals and give full play to the role of the intellectuals in the region in the course of building a new socialist Xizang, responsible comrades of the Xizang Regional CCP Committee recently invited intellectuals of various circles to two forums. The intellectuals who were invited to the forums are intellectuals of Tibetan and Han nationalities on all fronts.

Responsible comrades of the regional CCP committee and the regional people's government, including Yin Fatang, Yangling Duojie, Raidi, Song Ziyuan, Yang Dongsheng, (Peng Ze), Pagbalha Geleg Namgyai and Xuekang Tudengnima, attended the forums. They seriously listened to the views of intellectuals coming from all fronts and sincerely held talks with them.

The comrades attending the forums unanimously held: "In recent years, in the course of implementing the important instruction of the central authorities on work in Xizang, the regional CCP committee has paid attention to giving play to the role of the intellectuals and seriously implemented the party's policy on intellectuals. We are very happy that the party has shown concern for and cherished the intellectuals." Many of them put forth many good suggestions on building new socialist Xizang, training scientific and technological workers and stabilizing the force of intellectuals in our region.

At the forums, Yin Fatang, first secretary of the regional CCP committee, spoke, affirming the important role and function of the intellectuals in the cause of the revolution and construction in the region. He said that since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the region has recruited some 1,500 party members from among intellectuals. Since 1980 the region has assessed and fixed the technical titles of some 5,900 people. Over the last few years, the region has promoted some 500 intellectuals to leadership posts at all levels and employed some 90 intellectuals who were unemployed. He said: "All this has clearly shown that the party's policy on intellectuals has been gradually implemented. However, we must clearly understand that many problems still exist in the course of implementing the policy on intellectuals. Some leading comrades have so far not eliminated their prejudice against intellectuals." He pointed out: "Leaders at all levels must fully inspire the enthusiasm of the intellectuals, give full play to their role and ensure that they know their subordinates well enough to assign them jobs commensurate with their abilities and enable them to realize their full potential. We must show concern for their work, study and livelihood. We must really solve their practical problems." In conclusion, he encouraged intellectuals of Tibetan, Han and other nationalities to unite as one, learn from each other, cooperate and make even greater contributions toward the objective of struggle to achieve a small change within 3 years, a medium-size change within 5 years and a big change within 10 years.

[Text] Beijing, 17 Jul (XINHUA) -- On the eve of the 1 August Army Day, activities for supporting the army and cherishing the people are being conducted enthusiastically in the urban and suburban areas of the capital. Moving scenes of army-people relations being as close as fish and water can be seen everywhere.

The Beijing Municipal CCP Committee and the municipal people's government recently issued a "circular on commemorating the 1 August Army Day and carrying out activities in supporting the army and giving preferential treatment to the families of armymen and martyrs." In the circular, the municipal party committee and people's government made specific arrangements for carrying out activities in commemoration of the 1 August Army Day in the municipality and called for all units to check up on the implementation of the policy of supporting the army and giving preferential treatment to the families of armymen and martyrs and the policy of giving special care to disabled servicemen and to family members of revolutionary martyrs and armymen and to make proper arrangements for retired soldiers and those who have been transferred to civilian work from active service, especially for sick, wounded and disabled retired soldiers. On the eve of Army Day, cadres and workers of the Liudian food management station, an advanced unit in supporting the army and giving preferential treatment to the families of armymen and martyrs in Pinggue County, visited such families in order to ascertain what kind of food grain they needed. They obtained rice, flour and millet for 16 households of martyrs' elderly dependents and disabled soldiers and organized vehicles and personnel to deliver the food to their houses.

On the eve of Army Day, commanders and fighters of the PLA units stationed in Beijing are doing good turns and carrying out activities in support of socialist construction. The 3d Company of a certain PLA engineer unit sent a group of good technicians to do a crash job of constructing a building for the Beijing No 3 leather shoe factory, thus making it possible for the factory to increase its capability of making leather shoes for children by 20 percent. This will further increase the variety of colors and designs of children's shoes in the capital's market. PLA units under the Beijing Garrison command have participated in all major activities in clearing up "dirty things, disorder and things falling short of standards" in the municipality. In addition, they have also often sent learn-from-Lei Feng teams and service teams of young people to carry out activities with a view toward benefiting and making things convenient for people, thus doing the latter many good turns.

Decision on Activities Passed

[Text] Beijing, 19 Jul (XINHUA) -- The Beijing Municipal CCP Committee and the municipal people's government today passed a decision to launch week-long activities among the people in Beijing, to cherish and learn from the army from 26 July to 1 August.

The decision called on all organizations to carry out education among the broad masses, particularly the young people, to cherish the CCP, the socialist motherland and the people's army. Efforts must be made to give publicity to the tremendous achievements of the PLA in safeguarding the motherland, the four modernizations program and the interests of the people. It is also necessary to give publicity to the PLA's role as the principal force in promoting the "five stresses and four beauties" activities and developing socialist spiritual civilization and to learn from the PLA's superior moral qualities and fine traditions.

The decision pointed out: In addition to the report meetings and soirees organized under the unified administration of the municipal government, the party, CYL, trade union and women's federation organizations at the grassroots level should also sponsor report meetings or forums inviting veteran Red Army members, old cadres and army heroes to introduce the army's glorious traditions. It is essential to launch varied and colorful activities to support the army and give preferential treatment to military dependents.

The Beijing Municipal CYL Committee is prepared to sponsor, prior to the 1 August Army Day, a forum and summer soiree of the representatives of advanced youth and army heroes.

In close connection with their own conditions, all basic-level units must also organize youth service teams and learn-from-Lei Feng groups to do repair work or deliver merchandise to serve the PLA units stationed in Beijing, bereaved families of martyrs and military dependents. During this "week to cherish and learn from the army," rural communes and brigades must check how the policy of giving special care to disabled servicemen and to family members of revolutionary martyrs is being implemented.

OW162020 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Mandarin 1704 GMT 15 Jul 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 15 Jul (XINHUA) -- The Beijing Municipal CCP Committee and the municipal people's government today issued a circular concerning a serious case involving Wang Xingkuan, Wang Guiyi and other commune members of the Jisi production brigade in Huairou County, who reviled and beat up three women teachers. It pointed out: This case is extremely serious. The main troublemakers, Wang Xingkuan and Wang Guiyi, and the other commune members violated the penal code and should be punished by law. It criticized the Huairou County CCP Committee and the county people's government for failing to realize the seriousness of the case and promptly handling it and for being weak in leadership. It called on all district and county CCP committees to further study and implement the party's policy on intellectuals and to protect the lofty social status of the people's teachers.

In issuing the circular, the Beijing Municipal CCP Committee and the municipal people's government also published a report from the Huairou County CCP Committee and the county people's government on investigating and handling the Jisi production brigade incident. The report said: The county CCP committee and government feel profoundly responsible for having allowed such a serious incident to take place in Huairou County and for not promptly handling it in good time. Bureaucracy prevailed in work. Not enough attention was paid to this case. Redtape in handling official documents delayed the investigation of this case. The lessons learned from this case by the county CCP committee and people's government are profound.

Recently, with the approval of the Huairou County Procuratorate, the county's public security bureau placed Wang Xingkuan and Wang Guiyi under arrest according to law. The county CCP committee's discipline inspection commission decided to expel Wang Xingkuan from the party. Investigation is also being conducted on other troublemakers, who will be seriously dealt with separately. In this connection, the county CCP committee and people's government also held a countywide meeting attended by cadres of three levels. They educated the cadres of the various levels to deeply respect teachers, to realize the significant role of middle and primary school teachers and to firmly implement the party's policy on intellectuals.

HEBEI HANDLES SABOTEURS OF COUNTY PARTY CONGRESS

OW162220 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 2230 GMT 15 Jul 82

[Text] According to a report by a RENMIN RIBAO reporter and our station reporter, some people of Feixiang County, Hebei Province, have been seriously dealt with for undermining elections at the county party congress.

When the party congress was held in Feixiang County in January this year some people, using illegal measures, created serious political incidents to undermine democratic elections. Leading comrades at the central level expressed profound concern about this matter when they heard about these incidents. They instructed the Hebei Provincial CCP Committee to investigate and seriously deal with these cases.

Right after the Feixiang County CCP Committee made arrangements for the elections, Wang Haibo, assistant manager of the county's cotton and jute company; Lu Guotai, deputy head of the county; and others secretly collaborated with each other in undermining organizational discipline with measures used during the Cultural Revolution. They made use of big-character posters to reverse right and wrong and mix up black and white in order to smear responsible comrades of the county CCP committee whom they disliked. They also wrote letters to personally attack these responsible comrades. When the congress was in session, they invited people to dinner from time to time in order to win more votes for those individuals they supported. After the election, they again wrote big-character posters to attack those successful candidates whom they disliked. The main troublemakers involved in these serious incidents were persons who thrived during the Cultural Revolution, who refused to take their defeat lying down after the smashing of the gang of four, whose factionalist thinking remained serious and who had been unhappy about the disciplinary actions taken against them for making use of their power to seek selfish interests.

When, on 12 May, the Feixiang County CCP Committee announced to all party members and cadres the decision of the Hebei Provincial CCP Committee and the Handan Prefectural CCP Committee to initially handle the five people who had tried to undermine the democratic elections, including Wang Haibo and Lu Guotai, it received warm support from the party cadres and the masses.

HEILONGJIANG'S YANG YICHEN VISITS HARBIN STORE

[Text] The Heilongjiang Provincial CCP Committee has strengthened leadership over enterprise consolidation by treating the consolidation task as the keystone of work in all fields. Principal leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee have gone into the realities of life to give specific guidance to streamline the consolidation of enterprises throughout the province. Overall consolidation of enterprises is now being carried out step by step throughout the province.

In the course of enterprise consolidation, the provincial CCP committee and its standing committees have established their own contact points where they go periodically to study the prevailing conditions and help enterprises solve problems which they cannot handle by themselves. For Yang Yichen, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee, the Songhuajiang department store in Harbin was his contact point. He visited the department store on three different occasions to study the actual conditions there and gave lectures on the party to workers and staff members. There has been a change in the workers' mental outlook and the appearance of the department store after a 5-month orientation on enterprise consolidation. A total of 37 advanced customers and 508 efficient sales persons, or 49.2 percent of all sales persons working in the department store, have emerged. Compared with the same period of last year, the sales volume in April increased by 142,000 yuan. As a result, this department store has become an advanced unit in consolidation on the commercial front in Heilongjiang Province.

Governor Chen Lei also visited his own point of contact, the Harbin ballbearing plant, on a number of occasions to study the prevailing conditions there. Together with the investigation team of the plant's CCP committee working at the grassroots level, he studied and discussed matters concerning developing new products and improving economic results. Since the beginning of this year, this plant has been fulfilling the state plans month by month and the amount of profits delivered to the state has accounted for 50 percent of the annual plan.

In the meantime, leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee are also busy with personal visits to survey the actual conditions in various areas. For example, Comrades Yang Yichen and Chen Junsheng visited four cities and over a dozen counties on three different occasions to investigate and study. They personally summed up the experience of Linkou, Hulin and Mulin Counties in consolidating enterprises thereby giving direction for consolidating industrial enterprises in a timely manner. As a result, enterprise consolidation advanced with giant strides.

As compared with the same period last year, during the first half of this year, the total industrial output value in the whole province increased by 7.4 percent; profits within industrial enterprises increased 18.9 percent over previous estimates; and profits delivered to the state increased 36.1 percent.

SK110245 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 10 Jul 82

[Excerpts] According to our sources, after a 15-day duration, the Jilin provincial export trade fair successfully concluded today. Thanks to direct guidance and concern given by the provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government and vigorous support by various localities, departments and units concerned, remarkable achievements have resulted from the trade fair. There are over 190 categories of commodities which have been sold during the fair by signing contracts with foreign businessmen. These are worth over $75 million. Foreign businessmen are so interested in our province's commodities that they are constantly trying to strike a bargain with our firms. In addition, our province has signed a number of technical cooperation agreements and import contracts with foreign business representatives, such as processing goods with materials or patterns supplied by foreign customers, assembling equipment with parts supplied by foreign plants and exchanging compensatory trade.

Attending the export trade fair at the invitation of our province were over 700 business representatives from Japan, Thailand, Singapore, Pakistan, Italy, Canada, France, Britain, Switzerland, Syria, the United States, Macao and Hong Kong. Through business transactions during the export trade fair, our province has further strengthened its economic relationships with foreign countries.

The provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government also attached great importance to the export trade fair. During the preparatory period for the trade fair and following the opening of the fair, leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee and the people's government arrived at the fair site on many occasions to hear briefings. Qiang Xiaochu, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee, gave important instructions on doing a good job in the fair and visited the fair to offer advice.

During the export trade fair, some traveling traders also toured places in Changchun, Jilin and Siping Municipalities and visited production units.

JILIN CONDUCTS STRUGGLE AGAINST DROUGHT

SK091030 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 8 Jul 82

[Text] On 7 July the provincial CCP committee and government issued an emergency circular on mobilizing the party and the people to carry the struggle against drought through to the end.

The circular urges party committees and people's governments at all levels throughout the province to lead the broad masses of people of the province to overcome the drought with a death-defying spirit and to reduce the losses resulting from the drought to the minimum. The circular set forth the following tasks for combating drought:

1. All areas plagued by drought should regard combating the drought as an overriding central task for rural areas at present and should concentrate leadership forces, laborers, materials and financial resources on the struggle against drought.

2. The party, the people, all trades and professions should excert concerted efforts to do well in combating drought. We should utilize all facilities for combating drought, irrigate as many areas as possible and lose no time in making artificial rain in the areas where conditions permit. All trades and professions should do their best to support the struggle against drought. Power departments should give first priority to supplying electricity to combat drought.

3. In the summer we should attend to weeding, plowing and banking soil to the growing crops. We must not lose our confidence because the seedlings grow badly due to drought and abandon weeding, plowing and banking soil to the growing crops. We should continue to weed, plow and bank soil if the drought is not alleviated.

4. We should continue to prepare seeds of late crops. We should rush-plant late crops whenever there is saturating rain. We should plant more Chinese cabbage and radishes.

5. We should persistently implement responsibility systems, bring all functions of the responsibility systems into full play and mobilize the masses to join the struggle against drought.

6. Communes and brigades not suffering from drought should strengthen field management and measures for increasing production with a view to reaping a good agricultural harvest to compensate for losses caused by drought.

7. In order to score a victory in the struggle against drought, party organizations at all levels should strengthen the political and ideological work in rural areas to give the masses confidence and increase their fighting will to carry the struggle against drought through to the end. We should sternly guard against all rumormongering and feudal superstitious activities to smoothly conduct the struggle against drought.

ABOLISHING OF STRIKE RIGHT IN CONSTITUTION VIEWED

HK121336 Shenyang LIAONING RIBAO in Chinese 30 Jun 82 p 3

["Explanations of the Draft of the Revised Constitution" by Zhang Guoan [1728 0948 1344]: "Why Should the 'Freedom To Strike' Be Abolished?"]

[Text] Citizens' "freedom to strike" was stipulated in the 1975 and 1978 Constitutions of our country. This stipulation has been abolished in the draft of the revised constitution. People might ask: Freedom to strike is often stipulated in the bourgeois constitution; since ours is a socialist country, why should we abolish it?

We all know that in capitalist countries, means of production belong to capitalists, and workers, who own nothing, are ruthlessly exploited and oppressed. To achieve their economic interests and political rights, workers frequently stage strikes and stop production so that capitalists suffer property losses. In so doing, capitalists might be forced to make necessary concessions. Striking is an effective means of struggle. In a capitalist society, it is absolutely necessary for workers to adopt the means of striking to carry out their struggle against capitalists. The fact that the freedom to strike is stipulated in the bourgeois constitutions is precisely the result of the struggle of the working class.

Ours is a socialist country and laboring people are the masters of their own country. They are not allowed to adopt means of striking to stop production, sabotage the national economy and harm the people's interests. Some people think that a strike might punish the bureaucracy. This idea is wrong. There are many and varied methods for dealing with the bureaucracy. We can solve this problem thorugh normal ways such as exposure, accusation, complaints, appeals and so forth. Article 18 of the draft of the revised PRC constitution stipulates: "Workers and staff members of the state enterprises participate in the management of their respective enterprises through the congresses of workers and staff members and other channels, in accordance with provisions of the law." Article 19 stresses: "Units of the collective economy practice democratic management according to provisions of the law; their managerial personnel shall be elected and removed and decisions on major issues concerning enterprise management shall be made by the entire body of their workers and staff members." Such being the case, why should we adopt the means of striking? In the meantime, if we adopt the means of striking to solve a problem, we are liable to intensify contradictions, or bad people might even take advantage of the situation. This will seriously harm our country and people. However, the interests of the real bureaucrats will not be affected. In our country, the system of exploitation of man by man has been eliminated and the fundamental interests of laboring people coincide. Generally speaking, the contradictions between bureaucrats and ourselves are contradictions within the ranks of the people. They should be solved through criticism and self-criticism, but not through the means of striking, which will harm our economy. The "freedom to strike" stipulated in the 1975 and 1978 Constitutions was obviously not in accord with our country's socialist system. Therefore, it is perfectly reasonable for us to delete this stipulation in the draft of the revised constitution.

Citizens in our country enjoy extensive democratic rights. The draft of the revised constitution stipulates that there are 17 fundamental rights for our citizens. This is rarely seen in the constitutions of various countries in the world. In our country, citizens enjoy the right to the management of their own country and enterprises. These are the fundamental rights of our citizens. Citizens of capitalist countries are not entitled to such rights. This reflects the superiority of our country's socialist system.

The fact that the "freedom to strike" has been deleted in the draft of the revised constitution does not mean the shrinking of our citizens' fundamental rights. On the contrary, it shows the truthfulness of their fundamental rights. The stipulation of workers' "freedom to strike" in the constitutions of capitalist countries is merely a showcase of bourgeois "democracy." Since capitalists have the right to fire workers at will, it is impossible for laboring people to enjoy democratic rights. The nature of our constitution is entirely different from that of capitalist constitutions. Although the "freedom to strike" has been stipulated in the constitutions of the bourgeoisie, this does not mean the expansion of their citizens' rights. Even though this stipulation has been deleted in the draft of our revised constitution, this does not mean the shrinking of our citizens' democratic rights.

LIAONING OPENS MEETING ON ECONOMIC RESEARCH

SK160747 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 15 Jul 82

[Text] According to our sources, at today's provincial meeting on economic research, Li Huang, permanent secretary of the provincial CCP committee, said: The work on economic research is an important part of socialist construction. If we pay no attention to the work at present, economic construction will undoubtedly suffer from losses. He urged various CCP committees, people's governments and economic management departments to list this work as an item on their daily agenda. The meeting on the work of economic research convened by the provincial economic research center in Shenyang is the first one in our province.

Li Huang noted in his speech: We should uphold the principle of integrating theory with practice, advocate the policy of letting a hundred schools of thought contend and make use of economic research achievements to help leading departments in making decisions.

Zhu Chuan, standing committee member of the provincial CCP committe and vice governor of the province, delivered a mobilization report at the meeting. He urged all economic researchers to strengthen coordination and tackle key problems conscientiously in order to make a breakthrough in the province's economic construction.

Attending the meeting were comrades of economic research units in the province, of various universities and colleges and departments concerned directly under the provincial authority, totaling 150 persons.

SHAANXI FIRST HALF INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION VIEWED

HK140338 Xian Shaanxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 0500 GMT 13 Jul 82

[Summary] A station reporter visited the provincial economic committee on 9 July to ask about the province's industrial production in the first half of the year. A comrade of the committee said: "During this period the province's total value of industrial output was 5.48 billion yuan, 50 percent of the year's quota and a 7.1-percent rise over the same period last year. This included increases of 3.8 percent in light industry and 10.9 percent in heavy industry. Thus, heavy industry has risen from its decline last year, while the growth rate of light industry is slightly lower than last year. Certain light and textile industry products are not selling well."

On the reasons for this situation, the responsible comrade said: "The main reason is that after several years of readjustment, heavy industry has continually expanded its service scope. It has actively organized the production of fuel, raw material and equipment needed in agriculture, light industry and the technical improvement of existing enterprises, together with export products. In particular, it has taken advantage of the province's favorable conditions and produced metallurgical and chemical products urgently needed by the whole country. As a result of all this, heavy industry production has risen rapidly. By the end of June, the national defense, petrochemical, metallurgical, machine-building and coal departments had all overfulfilled their quotas for the first half of the year, all with growth rates higher than 10 percent.

"The production capacity of the light industry system has continually increased in recent years as a result of technical improvements and other measures. In the first half of this year the growth rate of value of output in the No 1 light industry system exceeded the average growth rate for all industry in the province. The textile and No 2 light industry systems managed to record new growth despite a big shortfall in output of polyester cotton cloth, and the many types and categories of daily-use articles and fierce competition in the markets. Growth rate in key products such as bicycles, television sets, chemical fibers, beer and milk products was over 50 percent. Sewing machines, cigarettes, plastic goods, synthetic wash powder, detergents and so on increased by over 15 percent.

"However, the growth rate in Shaanxi light industry lags behind the national average. The main reasons are: Last year the province's agricultural production declined because of natural disasters. This has had a relatively great effect on cotton processing, oil and fats, and the foodstuffs industry. In accordance with the demand of the plan, certain textile enterprises have restricted production of polyester cotton cloth. Quality of certain light and textile products is low, while their prices are high. They lack market competitiveness and so pile up."

In view of the current new situation, the provincial economic committee has demanded that workers on the light and textile industry front work hard to improve quality and variety and make their products sell better. "They should first strive to achieve a steady and healthy economic development growth rate. Second, they should do a good job in market surveys and forecasts, find out the rules governing the changes in the markets, and organize production according to social needs. They must do a good job in product renovation and improvement and the trial output of new products."

The provincial economic committee demanded: "The heavy industry departments should further expand their scope of service amid readjustment, and serve the development of agriculture and light industry, and the markets and exports."

TAIWANESE URGED TO DISCUSS DRAFT CONSTITUTION

OW181406 Beijing in Mandarin to Taiwan 0400 GMT 18 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "Taiwan Compatriots Should Exercise Their Right As Masters of the Country"]

[Text] Compatriots! The constitution is the fundamental law of our country, which sets forth the nature of the state and its future. This conforms to the basic interests of not only the people of all nationalities on the mainland, but also our compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and overseas Chinese. In the past 2 months and more since the promulgation of the "draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China," the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and overseas Chinese have offered many constructive opinions in various forms and through various channels. This forcefully shows that as masters of the country our compatriots are concerned about the fundamental law of our great motherland.

Vice Chairman Peng Zhen's statement calling on compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and overseas Chinese to thoroughly discuss the draft revised constitution is precisely intended to ask our compatriots to exercise their right as masters of the country in a still better way and to participate more in discussing the fundamental law of our country.

The draft revised constitution unequivocally points out in its preamble: Taiwan is part of the sacred territory of the People's Republic of China. To accomplish the great task of reunifying the motherland is the sacred duty of the entire Chinese people, including our compatriots in Taiwan. This embodies the common aspiration and demand of the people of the whole country.

On 30 September 1981 Chairman Ye Jianying further expounded on the principles and policies concerning Taiwan's return to the embrace of the motherland and peaceful reunification. His explanation has deepgoing and widespread influence at home and abroad.

Article 30 of the draft revised constituion stipulates: The state may, where necessary, establish special administrative regions. The rules and regulations in force in special administrative regions shall be stipulated by law according to specific conditions.

Thus, the basic contents of the nine-point policy announced by Chairman Ye Jianying are confirmed in law and provide a legal basis for the peaceful reunification of the motherland, just as Vice Chairman Peng Zhen pointed out in his statement.

Compatriots! If you have any opinions or suggestions, please act as masters of the country and express your opinions or suggestions through various channels in order to perfect the constitution.

Taiwan compatriots! After discussion and further revision by the people of all nationalties in the country, the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and overseas Chinese and after formal adoption by the National People's Congress, the revised draft constitution will become the fundamental law of the Chinese people in the new period. This is an important event in the political life of our country.

Compatriots! Exercise your right as masters of the country and take part in discussions of the revised draft constitution!

BEIJING RADIO ISSUES CALL FOR REUNIFICATION

OW191413 Beijing in Mandarin to Taiwan 1500 GMT 18 Jul 82

[Excerpts] Recently articles on the reunification of the motherland have been appearing frequently in Taiwan newspapers and journals.

The articles point out that reunification of the motherland is the common aspiration of the people of the whole country. They also express strong national sentiments, an intense sense of the responsiblilities of the times and the longing for reunification. In view of what the people are longing for, how can the reunification of China be postponed indefinitely?

The reunification of China is also an urgent task which brooks no hesitation in view of the interests of our country and our people. At present, wars are frequently among nations. There must be someone who covets China's fertile land or wants to fish in troubled waters. Our experience tells us that the imperialists and hegemonists always seek proper opportunities and other's weak points to make a breakthrough. Is it not precisely for the purpose of meeting their imperialist need that they are making every effort to obstruct the progress of the Chinese people's task of reunification? Moreover, how many storms can Taiwan stand in light of its economic dependence on foreign countries and its lack of natural resources?

Thinking back, we find that the situation of the Taiwan Strait has gradually been relaxed in the past several years, making people feel that everything is ready, except what is crucial. The people's call for reunification and peace is daily becoming louder and more pressing. Chairman Ye Jianying's nine-point proposal has drawn a blueprint for the peaceful reunification. Chairman Hu Yaobang's invitation has again shown the sincerity of the Chinese Communist Party. Various departments on the China mainland have made many preparations for reestablishing postal links, trade relations and air and shipping services between Taiwan and the mainland.

Nevertheless, the conditions must be created by both sides. Things cannot be done well if only one side displays sincerity and enthusiasm and makes efforts while the other side simply shows indifference and suspicion. Things will become much easier if the other side thinks more of the interests of the country and the people, dispels some doubts, fears and conjectures and adds some sincerity and trust.

TAIPEI PAPER ON PROMOTING U.S.-TAIWAN RELATIONS

[Report by Yang Hsi-han: "The Way to Strive To Promote Sino-U.S. Relations"]

[Excerpts] A qualified diplomatic official yesterday pointed out two aspects in the way to strive to promote Sino-U.S. relations in light of the tense and delicate state of relations between China and the United States.

First, it is necessary to present objective facts and emphasize the importance of democracy and freedom to the Free World and the value of free economy and help the policymakers and the people of the United States realize that it is rather doubtful that they can effectively contain the Soviet Union by wooing the Chinese Communists.

Second, it is necessary to strive to win widespread friendship and support among the American people, especially the leaders in various strata. As to U.S. congressmen and professional diplomatic officials in the State Department, regardless of their attitude towards us, we must try our best to contact and make friends with them on the basis of traditional Chinese faithfulness, forgiveness and kindheartedness.

These two aspects in our long-term efforts to promote Sino-U.S. relations may be put in two words, "close contact." In other words, we must directly or indirectly maintain a smooth channel of contact in promoting our relationship with the United States.

The senior diplomatic official yesterday used the expression "reining in on the brink of a precipice" to describe President Reagan's negative attitude to the document drafted by the State Department on "the question of selling military equipment to Taiwan" or the so-called "Shanghai Communique No. 2" which has been much talked about and was on the verge of being made public.

The senior diplomatic official said: It was lucky that one of our friends learned of this matter and promptly informed us and also let President Reagan know his opinion in an appropriate manner. As a result, President Reagan has taken a clear-cut position on this matter.

A senior diplomatic observer also pointed out: In promoting Sino-U.S. relations, our staff members in the United States, including all our citizens visiting the United States, should establish the thinking that "the relationship can be changed." He said, at present or in the furutre, all our working personnel in the United States must be efficient and capable diplomatic workers who can perform tasks in a positive, active and enthusiastic manner.

WEN WEI PO EDITORIAL SLAMS SHULTZ' CHINA POLICY

[Text] On 8 July 18 conservative organizations in the United States issued a joint statement on Sino-American relations. They extolled the "Taiwan authorities" and preached the "two-China" policy. On 13 and 14 July, at the hearings of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Secretary of State-designate George Shultz also masterminded schemes for the Reagan administration's pursuit of the "two-China" policy. An adverse current against China thus emerged both inside and outside the U.S. Senate.

Perhaps the antics of several contemptible scoundrels can temporarily affect the trend of U.S. foreign affairs, but they can never stop the Chinese people from advancing forward. Shall China be split up forever just because you are trying to create "two Chinas"? Can you obstruct the historical trend of the reunification of China by continuing arms sales to Taiwan? Please recall the history of the birth of new China. U.S. arms have never been a serious obstruction in China's advance. China is looking forward to reunification through peaceful channels. It is also able to realize reunification by military force. History will be the best witness.

It seems that George Shultz knows very little about the character of the Chinese nation. He thinks that the Chinese people can tolerate interference in their internal affairs by foreign powers and the long-term split of their country. China's modern history since 1840 is a history in which the Chinese people opposed imperialist interference and invasions. Even during the time when China was ruled by a traitorous government, the Chinese people fought heroically for national independence. Now that China has already won independence and achieved initial prosperity and the United States is on the decline from the period of full bloom and has been plunged into passivity in the contention for world hegemony, how can China yield to foreign powers and allow itself to be trampled upon? Unfortunately, the China policy preached by George Shultz at the hearings seems to know nothing aout this.

Shultz said that U.S. relations with China is "a question of vital importance," but at the same time "the 'Taiwan Relations Act' must be faithfully followed." How ridiculous and deceitful it is to cover up the contradictions in this diplomatic conception and to carry out such a foreign policy! The statement of the Chinese Government and leaders as well as the four articles embodying the spirit of China's U.S. policy are a categorical response: Whether insisting on U.S. arms sales to Taiwan and letting the boat of Sino-U.S. relations strike a reef, or revising or abrogating the "Taiwan Relations Act" and continuing to promote the normalization course of Sino-U.S. relations, the U.S. Government must make a choice between these two and give a serious answer.

Shultz declared unblushingly that "the United States has never recognized [chengren] the PRC's political jurisdiction and domination power over the Taiwanese people and authorities in power." This would not be strange if the United States were still China's overlord. However, China has long been independent of U.S. control. Whether it "recognizes" [chengren] or not, it can never change China's stand and stop China from exercising sovereignty over its localities. As a matter of fact, it was clearly written in the "Shanghai Communique" that "the PRC is the sole legal Government of China" and that "there is only one China and Taiwan is a part of it." A line was thus drawn between "legal" and "illegal," "central" and "local." To our surprise, Shultz is so muddleheaded as to brazenly cast aside the principle of the "Shanghai Communique": However, the American people will surely make their own choice.

There was something correct in Shultz' statement at the hearings. Namely, that the differences between the two sides of the Taiwan Strait "must be solved by the Chinese people." According to this logic, there will certainly be no interference in China's internal affairs. However, Shultz turned quickly in his statement and expressed the "willingness and determination to provide Taiwan with defensive arms," which "will not be restricted by any time limit." With the selling of arms, he was encouraging the Taiwan authorities to refuse and resist reunification. These contradictory remarks have laid bare the deceitful nature of the imperialist diplomatic activities.

The China policy preached by Shultz was based on various contradictory elements. Seeking a balanced treatment of the two sides of the Taiwan Strait can only result in the destruction of normalization of Sino-U.S. relations and damage to the global interests of the United States. We can predict that although Shultz has embarked on his political venture and has become U.S. secretary of state, the future of U.S. foreign affairs will be full of brambles.

WEN WEI PO ON TAIWAN'S 'PERILS AND DOUBTS'

[Special feature by Yuan Ping [5913 5689]: "Taiwan 'Shaken by Perils and Doubts'"]

[Text] Mr Chiang Ching-kuo reappeared in public last month after a prolonged illness. He spoke at the KMT general meeting in a very miserable tone. He said: "Since the PRC stated its goal of 'peaceful reunification,' we have been at a great disadvantage. Our country is shaken by perils and doubts and is in a very difficult situation." He called for the KMT members to "take a firm stand, overcome all obstacles and open up new avenues."

It has been a long time since Mr Chiang Ching-kuo "spoke with intense sorrow". Thus, people cannot help but "look at him with new eyes." At the same time, people cannot help asking: Why should Taiwan be "shaken by perils and doubts"? To analyze the situation, we should start with the "crisis of the three letters." The "crisis of the three letters" is a term commonly used by Taiwan for attacking the mainland. We might as well borrow it to look at the "crisis of the three letters" in Taiwan.

Taiwan's "crisis of the three letters" is the three letters U.S. President Reagan sent to Deng Xiaoping, Hu Yaobang and Zhao Ziyang through Vice President Bush during his visit to Beijing in May. In the three letters, Reagan seriously reaffirmed to the Chinese leaders the principle of the "Shanghai Communique" that there is only one China and that Taiwan is a province of China. He expressed his desire to see the mainland and Taiwan succeed in carrying out negotiations for peaceful reunification.

It was these three letters of Reagan's that aroused perils and doubts in Taiwan. They shook Mr Chiang Ching-kuo and his fellow officials. The general trend of the times is not too encouraging.

Viewed from the principle reaffirmed in the three letters, the major thing is that the United States agreed to peaceful negotiations for the reunification of China. This is a change in Reagan's China policy. Since the reunification of Taiwan through peaceful negotiations is the internal affair of China, the United States has no right to interfere. Furthermore, China will not pay attention to U.S. interference. However, from Taiwan's point of view, the Reagan who was elected for his promise to oppose communism and who is famous for his "respect" for the "traditional friendship" with Taiwan has now changed his attitude. Taiwan cannot but panic. It seems that the only backer is now unreliable. This has resulted in "more arduous diplomatic work."

Following the "three letters" is the rumor that a "Shanghai communique" No 2 is being prepared and the "Taiwan Relations Act" will be amended. The rumor was so rampant that reporters of KMT newspapers stationed in Washington had to analyze the issue of the amendment in great detail and announce that the communique would not be amended. This is to clear the rumor and boost their courage.

U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater, who is famous for his pro-Taiwan and anticommunist stance, just went to Taiwan. When he met Chiang Ching-kuo and Sun Yun-hsuan, his eyes were brimming with tears, as if he was too embarrassed to speak. The reporter in Taipei described it as "a moving scene." People said Goldwater himself knew that Taiwan was in a difficult situation. Therefore, as "an old friend," he was carried away by emotion. After his return to Washington, although Goldwater tried his best to speak for Taiwan and opposed the amendment of the "Taiwan Relations Act" and demanded that the United States continue to sell arms to Taiwan, he must have had good reason to cry.

Meanwhile, the Senate majority leader, Senator Howard Baker, visited Beijing. As an observer, he reported on his impression of China to Bush. He admitted that the Taiwan issue played an important role in the relationship with China. "The seriousness of this issue depends in large part on how we handle the arms sales to Taiwan and on the degree of positiveness China is ready to adopt with regard to the existence and continuation of the Taiwan Relations Act."

Viewed from the situation of its foreign relations, Taiwan is enveloped in dark clouds, and as far as the domestic situation is concerned, there is also an ill omen. Mr Chiang Ching-kuo's serious eye diseases made him realize that he is already in his last years. The frequent appearances of his sons and their taking up of important posts reflect the fact that Chiang Ching-kuo has made arrangements for events after his death. Meanwhile, he complained that "a small number of Taiwan people are antagonistic to the government" and "have been used by the CCP to disrupt internal work," and he warned that people should "consider the serious consequences" of possible "sabotage to rule by law." This was the first occasion in a long while on which Chiang Ching-kuo openly rebuked the opposition party. He would have tried to cover up and urge the whole party to unite to fight against foreign things if the factional struggle and scramble for power were not so complicated and serious.

The other thing that merits attention is that in his speech on "the problem of China and Chinese reunification," "President of the Executive Yuan" Sun Yun-hsuan mentioned the timeframe for reunification. He said reunification should be achieved "in the course of continuously bridging the gap between the two sides," "conditions will gradually mature," and "by that time the obstacles to reunification will naturally be reduced," "reunification should be achieved through peaceful competition but not by threats or force."

There were responses to Sun Yun-hsuan's speech. The New York TIMES and Washington POST held that "Taiwan's policy has changed," and "there is a possibility of reaching an agreement with Beijing." Perhaps these responses elicited reproaches in Taiwan and Sun Yun-hsuan was forced to make another declaration, putting forth the demand that the CCP "abandon the four upholds," and recognize "uniting China with the three people's principles" as the prerequisite for negotiations. Thus, he corrected his previous speech.

No matter how Sun Yun-hsuan corrects his speech, all indications are that Taiwan is being "shaken by perils and doubts." As time goes on, Taiwan will be faced with more and more economic difficulties that "will not be easily solved." We are going to publish another analytical article regarding this.

In short, "worries" are created in a situation of "perils and doubts." Taiwan flaunts the banner of the three people's principles; however, Professor Huang Tien-chung of Tan Chiang University pointed out in an article that Taiwan youth simply does not believe in the "three people's principles." The three people's principles put forth by the KMT have been pigeonholed and are a "big crisis" of the KMT. It is ironic to put forth "uniting China with the three people's principles." Even Tai Pai-chuan, who always sincerely believed in the three people's principles, has left Taiwan and emigrated to the United States. From this, we can affirm that the atmosphere in Taiwan is full of perils and doubts.

UNESCO CULTURAL POLICIES CONFERENCE HELD IN MEXICO

PRC Delegation Attends

OW210919 Beijing XINHUA in English 0820 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, Jul 21 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese Government cultural delegation led by the Minister of Culture Zhu Muzhi left here by air this morning for Mexico City to attend the second world conference on cultural policies. Sponsored by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the conference is to be held between July 26 and August 6.

Chen Xinren, deputy delegation leader and advisor to the ministry, left for Mexico last week. Another deputy leader, Chinese Ambassador to Mexico Wang Ze, is already abroad. Situ Huimin, vice-chairman of the Chinese Film Association, advisor to the Chinese delegation, also left this morning.

Seeing the delegation off at the airport were Vice-Ministers of Culture Zhou Weizhi, Lu Zhixian and Ding Qiao, Vice-Foreign Minister Han Xu, and vice-president of China's National Commission for UNESCO, Yang Yunyu. Also present were Mexican Ambassador to China Eugenio Anguiano Roch and Charge d'Affaires A.I. of the Colombian Embassy in China Ricardo Samper.

Interview of Delegate

[Text] Beijing, Jul 21 (XINHUA) -- Art and scientific knowledge are "common assets of the world that should and can be shared by all in spite of the difference in social system and ideology among nations." Chen Xinren, advisor to the Chinese Ministry of Culture, said this in an interview to XINHUA before he left for Mexico City last week to attend the UNESCO-sponsored world conference on cultural policies.

"Art both has boundaries and has none," added the deputy leader of the Chinese Government cultural delegation to the conference to be held between July 26 and August 6.

Once Chinese ambassador to Finland, Iran, the Netherlands and the Philippines, Chen Xinren said that the People's Republic of China had been carrying out cultural exchange "as part of its efforts to develop relations with other countries."

China has cultural agreements with more than 70 countries covering culture, art, science, education, health, sports, journalism and other fields, and maintains contact with more than 2,000 cultural institutions abroad.

"China's open policy has given rise to an unprecedented expansion of cultural exchange in recent years", he said. Cultural groups from China or to it in the past four years number 3,000, involving 40,000 artists and writers. Around 400 sports groups with 6,000 people are exchanged each year.

Since 1978, China has sent 13,000 students and graduate students abroad on government programs, in addition to 4,000 who went to study in other countries on their own. Some 50 Chinese universities and colleges have established relations with 80 institutions abroad. During the same period, China has accepted 1,300 students from more than 70 countries.

Chen Xinren said that China's attitude towards foreign culture is "to make foreign things serve China." Art exchange has stimulated Chinese literary and art workers and enriched the cultural life of the Chinese people. At the same time, he said, China has also contributed something to the world culture.

Performances of Peking opera and national music abroad, as well as exhibitions of painting, sculpture and arts and crafts, help people understand the long history of Chinese culture. China's cultural relics have also been exhibited in dozens of countries and seen by millions.

In the past four years, China has taken part in more than one hundred international film festivals and film delegations have exchanged visits and held film weeks with dozens of countries. The Chinese film studios have dubbed over 1000 foreign films since liberation.

Chen Xinren said: "China will continue planned effort to present its ancient culture and the success of socialist culture." He stressed that cultural exchange should be conducted on the basis of equality, mutual benefit and mutual respect. China wants to learn whatever is helpful in foreign culture and hopes that other countries assimilate whatever is useful to them from Chinese culture. But, he noted, China would never impose its culture on others. On the other hand, it is only natural that there are discussions and different opinions of foreign culture among our people.

Chen Xinren stressed that China wants cultural exchange with all countries that have the same desire on the basis of the five principles of peaceful coexistence, "especially with other Third World countries. With a history similar to China's, many Third World countries have long national cultural traditions." Chen Xinren said he expects the Mexico meeting will provide the opportunity to exchange experience in protecting and developing national culture and discuss the possibility of expanding cultural exchange.

BREZHNEV'S PRAVDA INTERVIEW ON LEBANON REPORTED

[Text] Moscow, July 21 (XINHUA) -- The most urgent matter at present is to lift "the siege of Beirut by the Israeli troops," said Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in an interview with PRAVDA yesterday. "We are not against that the forces defending west Beirut and the Israeli troops be disengaged as the first step towards that," he added.

"With this aim use could be made of the U.N. force, the more so that contingents of the U.N. interim force are already staying in Lebanon," he said. "We, of course, will further categorically object against the appearance of American troops on the Lebanese soil," he added.

The interview was published in today's PRAVDA The Soviet leader also said: "The events in Lebanon are permanently in the focus of attention of the Soviet leadership." He declared that his country "will continue giving aid and support to those who are not bowing before the aggressor", but he did not mention what kind of "aid and support" the Soviets would give.

Brezhnev stressed: "A key significance in the present, to be frank, acute situation, is assumed by the unity of the Arabs."

Finally, he reiterated the proposal put forward by the Soviet Union before on the convocation of an international conference to solve the Middle East question. "The Soviet Union is ready to work practically in that direction," he said.

VIETNAM SEEN OPPOSING KAMPUCHEAN COALITION

Nguyen Co Thach in Singapore

OW220250 Beijing XINHUA in English 0105 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach left Singapore for Burma today, failing to bring the two countries any closer on the Kampuchean issue, according to news reports received here. Nguyen Co Thach had paid a 4-day visit to Singapore on the first leg of a 4-nation Southeast Asian tour.

"We are just as far apart," Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan told pressmen after holding four hours of negotiation with the Vietnamese foreign minister on July 19 on the Kampuchean issue. He noted that "there was absolutely no sign of flexibility" on the part of Vietnam. "It is quite clear now that Vietnam is not prepared to seek a solution to the Kampuchean problem," he added.

During the talks, Dhanabalan said, Nguyen Co Thach "didn't say anything new". "He just repeated his country's position which we all know." Dhanabalan said that the Vietnamese foreign minister made it clear that Vietnam is not going to change its present attitude but will be "slogging it out". Nguyen Co Thach indicated "there will be no withdrawal from Kampuchea until China signs a non-aggression pact with Vietnam."

Dhanabalan said that Nguyen Co Thach accused the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) of backing the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government, which, the Vietnamese foreign minister claimed, constituted "an interference in the affairs of the Indochinese states." In an open threat against the ASEAN nations, Nguyen Co Thach said Hanoi is going to see its dispute with the ASEAN nations continue for another five or even 20 years. He threatened that if the confrontation between the ASEAN and Vietnam continues, Hanoi would retaliate for what he claimed ASEAN had done to Indochinese nations.

Dhanabalan said that Nguyen Co Thach also stated that "Hanoi is prepared to face up to any other possible developments", including "going to war directly with China."

Thach's Press Conference

["International Jottings" by He Jiang [0149 3068]: "No Place To Hide"]

[Text] Nguyen Co Thach threatened the ASEAN nations by saying in Singapore that if ASEAN continued to oppose the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea, Vietnam would be hostile to them for 20 years and make reprisals or even establish guerrillas within their territories. When this remark was disclosed, there was a public outcry. At a loss as to what to do, this hegemonist clown held a press conference 1 day ahead of schedule at which he vigorously denied this news, saying it was "an out and out fabrication" in an attempt to retract the fox' tail.

Neverthesless, a tail exists objectively. Just when Nguyen Co Thach tried to retract it, the tail was nevertheless exposed. It was Nguyen Co Thach himself who insisted at the press conference that Vietnam still reserved the so-called "right to take reprisals for the purpose of self-defense." We would like to ask this foreign minister of the Hanoi regime if it is the army of ASEAN nations attacking the frontier area of Vietnam, or the Vietnamese army in Kampuchean territory invading the Kampuchean-Thai frontier areas! At whom are you directing your "self-defense" action? You have invaded and occupied Kampuchean territory in the name of "self-defense." That is not enough. Now, are you going to invade the ASEAN nations from Kampuchean territory again in the name of "self-defense"? This so-called "self-defense" is actually the threat of sending troops. Nguyen Co Thach has fully shown his hostility toward the ASEAN nations by using the ferocious word "take reprisals." That also provides that his denial is but another exposure.

RENMIN RIBAO on Withdrawal 'Trap'

[short commentary: "Hanoi's Trap"]

[Text] After announcing their so-called "partial troop withdrawal" from Kampuchea, the Vietnamese authorities immediately sent out their foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, on a tour of Southeast Asian countries. Before his departure, they made a great fanfare about their "partial troop withdrawal" announcement and even alleged that their troops would "completely withdraw from Kampuchea" once Vietnam no longer faced the "threat from outside," or from the armed forces of Democratic Kampuchea. This gesture, struck up by Vietnam, surpringly enough, has been praised by some people as a "very positive," "new position." This only serves to show that confronted with the new situation following the formation of the coalition government by the resistance forces of Democratic Kampuchea, the Vietnamese authorities are trying to take advantage of such people's mentality for compromise to play their new trick of "partial troop withdrawal."

How can the Vietnamese scheme to eliminate the "threat" from the armed forces of Democratic Kampuchea by described as a "very positive," "new position"? Everybody knows that Democratic Kampuchea's armed forces constitute the main strength of resistance to Vietnamese aggression on the Kampuchean battlefield and form an important component of the new coalition government. For over 3 years, the Vietnamese authorities have tried their utmost to eliminate these patriotic forces. However, they have never succeeded. Instead, they themselves have received heavy blows. The Vietnamese have sunk deeper and deeper into the quagmire of Kampuchea. Should we not support and encourage such "threat" to the Vietnamese aggressors rather than eliminate it? The Vietnamese are trying to fulfill their scheme of eliminating the armed forces of Democratic Kampuchea at the negotiation table through a "political settlement." They have even uttered the threat that without the elimination of Democratic Kampuchean Armed Forces, the Vietnamese troops would never be withdrawn from Kampuchea. This shows that Hanoi has not the slightest sincere desire to give up its occupation of Kampuchea and its hegemonist designs against Southeast Asia, not to mention any intention to completely withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. Is it not clear enough? Is such a scheme truly "positive?"

After arriving in Singapore, Nguyen Co Thach expressed his ideas even more undisguisedly. It has been reported that he clearly said: "There will be no withdrawal of troops from Kampuchea until China signs a nonaggression pact with Vietnam." This is absolutely ridiculous. Having sent several hundred thousand troops to occupy Kampuchea, the Vietnamese authorities now want China to sign a nonaggression pact with them as a condition for their troop withdrawal. Is it China that has forced Vietnam to invade Kampuchea? Can there be any possible inevitable link between China signing such a pact and Vietnam withdrawing its troops from Kampuchea? Nguyen Co Thach's words can only be interpreted as a threat to make China stop giving support to the Kampuchean people in their struggle against Vietnam and let the Vietnamese authorities carry out aggression and expansion at will not only in Kampuchea but also throughout Southeast Asia. With such wishful thinking, the Vietnamese authorities have spread fairytales among the ASEAN nations, such as "threat from China" and so forth to show discord between China and the ASEAN nations in order to fulfill their scheme of the so-called "political settlement". However, when Nguyen Co Thach failed to peddle his ideas, he looked thoroughly ferocious.

Nguyen Co Thach also reportedly said that Vietnam is ready to confront the ASEAN countries for "5 or even 20 years" and to even "strike back" or retaliate against ASEAN if it fails to achieve its objectives. This is a habitual practice of the Vietnamese authorities. While crying about China "threat" in front of the ASEAN nations, they shake their fist threateningly. All of this shows that the threat against Indochina and Southeast Asia is coming not from China but from Vietnam. It is ridiculous and a pity indeed for someone to call such an indecent act in international politics a "new flexibility."

The complete and unconditional withdrawal of aggressor troops from Kampuchea as demanded by the UN General Assembly resolutions and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea is the only way to a reasonable solution of the Kampuchean question. The fact that the Vietnamese authorities have put forth unreasonable conditions of one kind or another with regard to the problem of troop withdrawal only shows that their position of stubbonly resisting the UN resolutions and refusing to withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea has remained unchanged. It is not difficult for soberminded people to see the hidden intent of the Hanoi authorities. The Vietnamese authorities who are trying to take advantage of ideological trends in the world for compromise are doomed to failure.

MATERIALS ON SIHANOUK'S VISIT IN BEIJING

Meeting With Deng Xiaoping

OW220852 Beijing XINHUA in English 0758 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 22 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Communist Party Central Committee Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping said here today that China hopes that the Kampuchean people, after driving the Vietnamese aggressors out of their country, will build Kampuchea into a peaceful, neutral and non-aligned country.

Deng Xiaoping made the statement in talks with visiting Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, and Madame Sihanouk in the Great Hall of the People.

China's support for a tripartite coalition among the patriotic parties in Kampuchea, Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping said, is not a short-term tactical move. "Even after the Kampuchean people's complete victory in the anti-Vietnamese struggle, the three parties will [words indistinct] to continue to work together to build Kampuchea into a peaceful, neutral and non-aligned country," Deng Xiaoping said.

Sihanouk thanked China for supporting the Kampuchean people's just struggle.

After the meeting, Deng Xiaoping gave a luncheon in honor of Samdech Sihanouk and Madame Sihanouk. Present were State Councillor and Minister of Foreign Affairs Huang Hua, Vice-Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, member of the Coordination Committee for defense of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government in Tam and Democratic Kampuchean Ambassador to China Pech Cheang.

CPPCC Meeting

[Excerpt] The CPPCC National Committee held a solemn meeting at the CPPCC auditorium this afternoon, inviting Samdech Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, to make a speech.

Liu Lantao, vice charman of the CPPCC National Committee, was the first to speak. He said: Brutal Vietnamese aggression has brought about a life-and-death crisis for the Kampuchean nation. To safeguard their fatherland's independence and national existence, the Kampuchean patriotic forces have formed a coalition after full consultation. This is an important event in the Kampuchean people's struggle for unity and against Vietnamese aggression. He said:

The formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) symbolizes the the beginning of a new stage in the just struggle of the Kampuchean people against foreign aggression and for national independence and sovereignty. The Chinese people are very happy about this event and wish to extend their congratulations.

Liu Lantao said: We believe that Samdech Sihanouk will make still greater contributions to the strengthening of Kampuchea's national unity, to complete victory in the struggle against Vietnam in defense of the country and to the realization of the sacred aspirations of the Kampuchean people.

Address to CPPCC

[Excerpts] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- "The Kampuchean people will surely drive all the Vietnamese aggressors away," declared Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, here today. He expressed this conviction when he was addressing a mass meeting here this afternoon sponsored by the National Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference.

Samdech Sihanouk said that since its formation, the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea has won the warm support of all patriotic Kampuchean citizens at home and abroad, and the support of all justice-upholding and freedom- and peace-loving countries.

This is because, he said, firstly it symbolizes the sacred unity of various Kampuchean patriotic forces and the Kampuchean nation's determination against Vietnamese colonialism and the Heng Samrin-Hun Sen puppet regime; secondly, the cause the coalition government is defending is a sacred one aimed at the restoration of freedom and independence of Kampuchea and the inalienable right of self-determination of the Kampuchean people; thirdly, the people, the armed forces and the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea have through their unremitting struggle made heavy sacrifices and concrete contributions in defending the inviolable rights of the people of other countries subjected to aggression and bullying by unjust forces.

Talking about his impression of his recent inspection tour in Kampuchea, Sihanouk said that he saw the rapid growth of the tripartite armed forces and the obvious expansion of the Kampuchean liberation zones.

"Hence, I'm convinced that although the Vietnamese aggressors have played the bully everywhere and boasted never to give up the choice meat of Kampuchea, they will sooner or later be overcome by our people and chased out of Kampuchea," he said.

"There are obstacles and traps on our road ahead, and only after a protracted struggle shall we see the end of our nation's misfortune," he continued. The Kampuchean people have never surrendered to foreign aggressors and occupiers. The coalition of the three parties will continue to survive until Kampuchea is liberated. "This is because we put the supreme interest of our country above that of parties and individuals. After the liberation of Kampuchea, our people will freely choose their leaders and government system." Sihanouk pledged that he will remain loyal to his motherland and his people and work till his last breath for the independence of Kampuchea.

Sihanouk also gave the lie to Vietnam's "partial troop withdrawal" and the "policy of peace and friendship" to the ASEAN and other countries. He condemned the Vietnamese aggressors for slaughtering Kampucheans with poisonous gas and chemical weapons. Sihanouk refuted Vietnamese authorities' allegation that China poses a "threat" to Indochina and the ASEAN. He said: "As a Kampuchean, I testify that the People's Republic of China has never threatened nor invaded any country, and China always supports the just struggle of other peoples." He said: "The threat to Southeast Asia comes from Vietnam and the Soviet Union. It is Vietnam and the Soviet Union that have illegally occupied Laos and Kampuchea and are colonizing them. They have the same expansionist designs on the Southeast Asian countries."

Sihanouk expressed his thanks to China, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the ASEAN and other friendly countries for their support to the just struggle of the Kampuchean people.

Sihanouk's speech drew warm applause from the audience.

More than 1,000 people attended the meeting. Among them were Vice-Chairmen of the CPPCC National Committee Hu Ziang, Rong Yiren and Dong Qiwu; State Councillor and Foreign Minister Huang Hua; Vice-Mayor of Beijing Wang Xiaoyi; and Vice-President of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries Hou Tong, as well as Standing Committee members of the CPPCC National Committee now in Beijing, members from democratic parties, non-party democrats and people from all walks of life in Beijing.

Also present were member of the Coordination Committee for Defence of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea In Tam, Ambassador of Democratic Kampuchea to China Pech Cheang and private advisor to Sihanouk Pung Peng Cheng.

Interview with Beijing Radio

BK211220 Beijing in Cambodian to Kampuchea 1030 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Station correspondent's interview with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, at the samdech's residence in Beijing on 21 July -- recorded; correspondent's questions in Mandarin with Cambodian translation]

[Text] [Question] Samdech Sihanouk, what is your view of the role of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] in the anti-Vietnamese struggle of the Kampuchean people?

[Answer] The establishment of the CGDK is of great significance. The most significant thing is that it makes the whole world fully aware that all Kampuchean people who love the nation, independence and freedom do not consent to be the satellite of Vietnam or the Soviet Union at all, and that they have simultaneously risen up -- all of them in whatever faction -- and are uniting as one body in the great family of the Kampuchean nation to wage a resolute struggle until victory over the Vietnamese aggressors in order to recover the nation's independence and rebuild an independent, peaceful and nonaligned Kampuchea with its territorial integrity as desired by our Kampuchean nation and people. After hearing of the existence of a formally proclaimed tripartite coalition government, all patriotic Kampucheans of all nationalities have expressed their joy and enthusiasm. Many of my compatriots, including intellectuals and citizens from all social strata and professions both inside and outside the country, sent telegrams, messages and letters to me, to His Excellency Vice President of Democratic Kampuchea Khieu Samphan and to His Excellency Prime Minister Son Sann, expressing their satisfaction at and resolute support for the CGDK and for the program of action of this new government to liberate our country, to defeat the Vietnamese aggressors and to force them to unconditionally withdraw their troops from our country in conformity with the just and correct resolutions of the United Nations and interntional conference on Kampuchea.

[Question] Recently, Samdech, you visited anti-Vietnamese support bases. What were your impressions of these support bases?

[Answer] Recently, I visited three major bases of our tripartite coalition of Democratic Kampuchea. I was welcomed by tens of thousands of people, combatants and leaders of the three parties in all the bases that I was lucky enough and honored to visit. I stayed for a long moment in a joyful reunion with my compatriots. I received a very warm welcome. I saw that my compatriots, be they civilians, military personnel or leaders, are in harmony and maintain strong solidarity with each other. They resolutely pledged to struggle and to make all kinds of sacrifices to liberate their fatherland and to defeat the demons, that is, to inflict a decisive defeat on the Vietnamese aggressors in the future. Moreover, I saw that the liberated zone of our Kampuchea is not small. I goes deep into the interior of Kampuchea. There are other distant liberated zones in Kampuchea at present which I did not visit. There are many of them, and the number is growing. Each of them extends deep into the interior of our country where the people help us to successfully work for liberation. I traveled not only by car. There are roads for cars and trails. I even had an elephant ride, such as the trip I made with Vice President Khieu Samphan to visit the interior. I saw that agriculture in our liberated zone is developing and the arrangements to prevent Vietnamese attacks are well made. Moreover, I saw that agriculture and social affairs are well organized and that our people in the liberated zone are happy and enjoy security. This shows that the activities of our Democratic Kampuchea in liberating the country are making rapid headway. There is no way that the Vietnamese will defeat us in the future.

[Question] Recently, it was announced that a part of the troops would be withdrawn from Kampuchea. What is your comment on this?

[Answer] This is a deception. The Vietnamese are very good at deceiving world public opinion. They will not really withdraw their troops. They do not want to see Kampuchea regain its independence. They continue to occupy and interfere in the internal affairs of the Kampuchean nation. To my knowledge, they did withdraw some troops, but they withdrew only those who had refused to fight against the Khmers because they thought that it was not reasonable to fight against their Khmer brothers.

Thus, the Hanoi Le Duan authorities were not happy with these good-hearted Vietnamese brothers. They would not accept it and ordered the withdrawal of these dissidents. Another reason is that the majority of the Vietnamese soldiers are sick. They do not have the strength to fight. Many are plagued with malaria and other diseases. Therefore, it is necessary to withdraw them. Further information reveals that the Vietnamese have sent fresh troops to replace them. In the past few days, they sent in thousands of new soldiers. Therefore, the claim about troop withdrawal is merely a lie to deceive public opinion. It is regrettable that some countries -- that the circles in some countries -- are taken in by the Vietnamese and believe that they want to settle the Kampuchean question. In fact, they do not want to settle the Kampuchea question at all. Hanoi's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, who has been visiting some ASEAN countries for the past few days, was very arrogant. He said that he would not accept Kampuchea's regaining its independence. This is the truth.

[Question] The international community is paying keen attention to the formation of the CGDK. What is your view on the future prospects of the Kampuchean question in the international arena?

[Answer] The future prospects will be good. It is true that the road we are taking, though correct, is strewn with obstacles and difficulties. This is because the enemies are numerous. There are many of them in the international arena. The countries which love justice, peace, freedom and independence, however, are in the majority. Therefore, the majority of countries in the world, in the United Nations in particular, are pleased with the successful formation of this CGDK. These countries have praised, encouraged and supported us. They have congratulated us and expressed their support for us. In particular, such countries as the PRC and ASEAN countries have been assisting us most actively. We would like to take this opportunity to thank our Chinese and ASEAN brothers as well as our brothers in the DPRK and other countries in the world who cherish peace, justice, freedom and independence and who firmly support us. Thanks to international support, the support of the overwhelming majority of the countries in the world, and thanks to the support of the people whether they are with Heng Samrin or the Vietnamese puppets in Phnom Penh, we are greatly optimistic about the future. In the international arena, despite obstacles and difficulties placed by the enemies who are striving hard to oppose us, we are confident that we will surmount all obstacles on the road to victory.

[Correspondent] Thank you, samdech.

EEC PROTESTS U.S. EMBARGO ON SOVIET PIPELINE

OW161902 Beijing XINHUA in English 1844 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Text] Brussels, July 16 (XINHUA) -- The European Economic Commission has made a formal protest against the recent extention of the U.S. embargo on technology for the Soviet natural gas pipeline, an EEC spokesman confirmed here today.

It said that the U.S. decisions, even though adopted as interim measures, have already had damaging effects on the community's industries. The political strains which result from them cannot enhance the stability and cohesion of the Western world, the protest said.

The community calls on the U.S. Government to modify them in accordance with the foregoing considerations, the protest said.

On June 22 the Reagan administration enlarged the ban on sale of U.S. oil and gas equipment to Moscow to cover European subsidiaries of American companies and to firms producing such equipment under license. The U.S. sanctions could deprive the firms of vital parts and force them to delay the gas pipeline project, the reports said.

RENMIN RIBAO ON U.S.-EUROPEAN GAS CONTROVERSY

[Article by Zhang Zhenya [1728 2182 0068]: "The Worsening Contradiction Between the United States and Europe"]

[Text] In June, the Reagan administration made a decision to further block the West European-Soviet natural gas deal. In early July, the 10 nations of the Common Market held a meeting to oppose such interference. After that, a West German bank consortium headed by the Deutsche Bank signed an agreement directly with the Soviet Union in Leningrad on 13 July to offer $1.6 billion in loans to the latter to build 3,500 miles of natural gas pipelines from Siberia to West Europe. The general manager of the Deutsche Bank also issued a statement that companies of West Germany were determined to participate in the gas pipeline project regardless of various obstacles resulting from the U.S. sanctions.

Following 6 years of talks, West European nations eventually reached agreement with the Soviet Union in October last year. Several main West European nations were to provide the Soviet Union with funds and technology and the latter in return would supply the former with natural gas to pay the debts. From the beginning, the United States opposed this deal because it believed that West Europe would become completely reliant on the Soviet Union for energy. In the late 1980's, the Soviet Union might be able to obtain hard currency amounting to $10 billion every year from its export of natural gas to West Europe. This would also be beneficial for the Soviet Union to obtain technology from the west and increase its military strength. However, the United States has not been successful in using such argument to convince its West European allies.

Recently, as the Reagan administration threatened that it would further intervene in the deal, the tense situation on both sides of the Atlantic has been aggravated. Just as the Washington POST reported, to counter the U.S. efforts to hinder the deal, almost "every important leader of the U.S. allies in West Europe has openly become involved in this escalating dispute." French President Mitterrand, British Prime Minister Thatcher and West German Chancellor Schmidt have opposed President Reagan's efforts to launch "economic warfare" against the Soviet Union. Just at this critical juncture, West German bankers took the lead in reaching a loan agreement with the Soviet Union. Particularly, this was a direct challenge to the Reagan administration.

The reason the United States and West European nations have adopted entirely different attitudes toward the Soviets' Siberian natural gas pipeline project is obviously because of important economic interests. The abrogation of this deal means that several big West European companies will lose orders amounting to at least $11 billion and the number of unemployed workers will increase by tens of thousands of people. At the same time, they will also lose a new channel of energy supply. It has been reported that the Mannesmann and Thyssen steel plants of West Germany will suffer a loss of $800 million because of the cancellation of orders of large-caliber steel tubes. The (Nuovo Pinong) Company of Italy will lose orders of turbines and gas compressors valued at $700 million. Other companies such as er si tong da xi yang [7093 1422 2448 6639 1129 6007 3152] and ke lu suo luo ya er [0344 7627 2792 5012 0068 1422] of France and John Brown of England will also suffer great losses. At present, a great number of enterprises in West Europe have gone bankrupt and the number of unemployed his increased drastically. They will naturally resist any act forcing them to give up the deal nearly in their hands. Otherwise, they will land in a predicament.

However, those who will suffer losses are not just big companies of West Europe. Some famous U.S. companies such as General Electric, Caterpillar Tractor Company, (Dreiser Company) and (Cooper) Company and so forth will also lose big business. The losses of General Electric alone will amount to $200 million. Therefore, the largest organization of U.S. enterprises -- The American Chamber of Commerce -- wrote a letter directly to President Reagan on 14 July, compalining that the "sanctions against the Soviet Union will unfairly harm the interests of U.S. enterprises."

The Washington authorities are in conflict with leaders of West Europe on the problem of the natural gas deal. This is actually attributed to their big differences in policy in addition to their commercial interests. In spite of the fact that the Soviet Union has been stretching its devil's talons everywhere in the world, West European nations have still tried to use trade to pin down the polar bear to pratically maintain the relaxation of tension in the European region and obtain their economic interests. However, proceeding from its global strategy, the United States is unwilling to turn a blind eye to any increase in Soviet military strength. The United States holds that it should implement a tough "club" policy toward the Soviet Union concerning the problem of trade, whereas West European nations prefer the softer "carrot" policy. As a result of their differences in geopolitics and economics, the United States and its West European allies have revealed their contradictions in policy toward the Soviet Union. At the same time, an acute trade war has also erupted on both sides of the Atlantic because of the problems of iron and steel, agricultural and textile products. This has been beneficial to Soviet efforts to utilize the contradictions of the West to stir up trouble. It is obvious that Shultz, the new U.S. secretary of state, who has just assumed office, is encountering formidable difficulties in dealing with U.S.-West European relations.

BELGIAN DEFENSE MINISTER WARNS OF NUCLEAR DANGER

[Text] Brussels, July 15 (XINHUA) -- Belgian Defense Minister Freddy Vreven warned Wednesday that the danger of a nuclear war still remains, according to the Belgian newspaper LA DERNIERE HEURE today.

Speaking before the External Affairs and Defense Commission of the Chamber of Representatives, Vreven pointed out that since the massive Soviet deployment of SS-20 missiles and the production of long-range Backfire bombers, the existing disequilibrium of medium-range nuclear weapons will certainly not serve the maintenance of peace. Referring to the possible deployment in Belgium of 48 cruise missiles, Vreven said if Belgium makes a final decision on this, it sould not be seen as a sign that Belgium will use these weapons at any cost. On the contrary, he said, it should be regarded as the only way out to prevent a conventional war from erupting.

He added that at present, the Warsaw Pact organization possesses 1,245 nuclear warheads, while the North Atlantic Treaty Organization does not have enough weapons to match them. He continued that it still requires the same old principle to avert war: Only by reliable deterrence can Europe be ensured of peace.

The Belgian Government favors the 1979 NATO dual decision on the deployment of 572 Pershing-II and cruise missiles in Europe from 1983 and negotiations with the Soviet Union on limiting nuclear weapons in Europe. However, Belgium is yet to make a final decision on whether to deploy cruise missiles on its territory.

FRANCE DENIES SECRET PACT WITH SOVIET UNION

[Text] Paris, July 16 (XINHUA) -- French Government today "categorically" denied that it had concluded a secret agreement with the Soviet Union alleged to have undermined American attempts to limit Western trade credits to Moscow.

An External Relations Ministry spokesman described today as untrue the allegations made by a senior U.S. Defense Department official in a report published yesterday that France had signed a secret agreement when former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was in power.

The U.S. official, who asked not to be named, said that the United States was "stunned" when it learned of the agreement shortly before last month's summit of seven industrialized nations in Versailles. The agreement, he said, had substantially weakened U.S. leverage with its industrialized partners at the summit in limiting preferred interest trade credits to Moscow. "The French pulled the rug out from under us," he noted.

The French spokesman said: "It is distressing that an anonymous personality, described as responsible at the Pentagon, should have spread inaccurate allegations." "A financial protocol was signed with that country (the Soviet Union) in 1980 and the facts were communicated forthwith to the OECD (Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development) and, consequently, to the United States," he explained.

Meanwhile, the office of former President Giscard d'Estaing issued its own denial, calling the report by the senior U.S. Defense Department official as "fantastic and irresponsible." Observers here believed that the incident indicated the economic, trade and financial relations between France and the United States have seriously retrograded recently.

SAUDI, SYRIAN MINISTERS HOLD TALKS IN WASHINGTON

[Text] Washington, July 20 (XINHUA) -- Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Sa'ud al-Faysal stressed today "the withdrawal of the aggressor Israel" from Lebanon is the "primary concern" of the Arab world in ending the crisis in Lebanon. He made the remarks after he and Syrian Foreign Minister 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam met with President Reagan here at the White House as representatives of the Arab League to present their views on the situation in Lebanon.

"The issue from our point of view is the issue of the independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon," he said. "Within that context the primary concern is the withdrawal of the aggressor Israel."

After such a withdrawal, he said, the Lebanese Government and the Lebanese people will decide whether the Palestine Liberation Organization should withdraw from Beirut. But he said: "We were able to convey to the President the seriousness and the willingness and the decision of the Arab countries to bear their their responsibility."

It was reported that in the White House meeting the three leaders discussed the PLO's withdrawal from Lebanon. Afterwards a senior U.S. Government official said that during the meeting they exchanged views and "some new ideas" which are going to "form the basis of further discussions."

In addition to the discussions of Lebanon, the official said, they discussed "the overall Palestinian issue." Reagan renewed U.S. "commitment in the light of the situation in Lebanon within the framework of the Camp David accords," the official said, while the Arab foreign ministers "reiterated their well-known concern on the Palestine issue in the context of Lebanon and beyond."

The Syrian and Saudi Arabian foreign ministers met with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz yesterday. Speaking to reporters yesterday, Sa'ud charged that Israel wants to disperse the Palestinians around the Middle East so that it could assert there is no longer a Palestine issue. "This is what is refused by the Palestinians. This is what is refused by the Arab countries," he said.

"It is important," he said, "to find out if the United States agrees to self-determination by the Palestinians and (that they) are not just a group of people who will be taken from Lebanon and sent somewhere in order to provide another pretext for Israel to attack that country."

Sa'ud said that the United States must clearly define its Middle East policy if the Arabs are to believe American guarantees for Palestinian safety and self-determination. He charged that the United States is providing Israel with sophisticated equipment to attack Arab countries. "The United States has an obligation to prevent this action by Israel," he said.

The Syrian foreign minister yesterday also urged the United States to "put an end to the Israeli invasion of Lebanon." "The Palestinians must under no circumstances be subjected to a forced exodus," he added.

ARMY PAPER STRESSES VIGILANCE AGAINST ESPIONAGE

[Text] Beijing, 21 Jul (XINHUA) -- JIEFANGJUN BAO on 21 July published a commentator's article entitled: "Observe Party Discipline, Keep Party Secrets." The article points out the current importance of observing party discipline and keeping party secrets.

The article says: Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the socialist construction in our country has entered a new period. With the implementation of an open-door policy and the constantly increasing economic and cultural exchange with foreign countries, more and more foreigners from various countries and from all walks of life are visiting our country. The majority come to our country to promote true friendship and economic and cultural exchanges. However, we should soberly see that foreign intelligence organizations and enemy spies are also making every effort to take advantage of this opportunity and disguise themselves as legal visitors to gather and steal our secrets. It is particularly worth our attention that these intelligence organizations and enemy spies are taking advantage of a few weak elements in our ranks who worship and have blind faith in foreign things. They tempt them with bourgeois thinking and way of life in order to gain access to our ranks and recruit them, and thus create opportunities and conditions to steal our secrets. They even attempt to recruite some voluntary "agents" from among our ranks. This must arouse our high vigilance.

The article points out: In recent years, many comrades have blunted their sense of keeping secrets. They indulge in exaggerations everywhere. Some of them brag about the secrets they know. That is absolutely wrong. Some comrades make serious metaphysical mistakes due to the influence of the 10 chaotic years. When struggle is stressed, they regard everyone as the enemy. When friendship is stressed, they regard everyone as a friend regardless of nationality and lose their vigilance when dealing with foreigners. They wantonly discuss party, state and army secrets with others no matter what the occasion or to whom they are talking. This is very dangerous.

The article demands: All PLA commanders and fighters should fully understand the seriousness of the struggle between those who steal secrets and those who defend them. The commanders and fighters should strengthen their sense of keeping secrets, strictly observe security rules and resolutely adhere to regulations. The leading cadres at all levels and the staff members of important departments should be even more careful in guarding secrets because they have more opportunities to know secrets and handle highly classified material. The more a cadre is entrusted with responsibility, the more he should set an example, consciously observe party discipline and keep party secrets. We should not discuss party or state secrets with our former superiors, old comrades in arms, friends, wives and children. We should not commit the mistake of liberalism. The departments concerned should strengthen ideological education for staff members who hanlde classified materials. They should improve the management of documents and information, strictly enforce rules and regulations and build a strong defense ideologically, oganizationally and systematically to safeguard party, state and army secrets.

In conclusion, the article says: Our party is leading the people of the whole country in a New Long March under the new circumstances. Its burden is heavy and the road is long. All the communists, cadres and fighters in the army should learn from Comrade Zhou Enlai, follow his example, strengthen the sense of organization and discipline, inherit and carry forward the fine traditions of our party and our army and be revolutionary fighters who consciously observe discipline.

VETERAN MARSHALS REPORTED 'FULL OF VIGOR'

OW220548 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] This year, 1982, marks the 55th anniversary of the founding of the PLA. In 1955 the NPC Standing Committee conferred on 10 high-ranking military officers the title of marshal of the PRC for their outstanding services in founding and leading the people's armed forces and in leading army groups in major battles.

After the abolition of military ranks, people continue to address Zhu De and other comrades as veteran marshals. Among the veteran marshals who are still living, Ye Jianying, Liu Bocheng, Xu Xiangqian and Nie Rongzhen are full of vigor. The 22 July WEN HUI BAO has recent photos of these four veteran marshals on its front page.

PLA CONDUCTS ATOMIC WAR DEFENSE EXERCISE

["Newsletter: By XINHUA Reporter Sun Maoqing 'On the Trail Blazed by the Older Generation -- On Young Deputy Corps Commander Li Lianghui'" -- XINHUA headline; date, place of military exercise not given]

[Text] Beijing, 20 Jul (XINHUA) -- Airplanes swept through the blue sky, leaving behind one parachute after another. A large paratroop contingent soon amassed in the sky for a large-scale jump exercise. The paratroopers were converging toward a red parachute being used by Li Lianghui, a 43-year-old deputy corps commander of the airborne unit of the air force.

Big, tall and strong with bright eyes and heavy eyebrows, Li Lianghui looks very soldierly. Right after he became deputy corps commander he silently admonished himself: "Although I have become a deputy corps commander, I must not take off my jump boots. I am determined to advance the cause pioneered by the older generation."

The airborne unit of the air force is a special force unit which can parachute and fight. As the deputy corps commander Li Lianghui still wears jump boots and constantly works at troops units and lives with the paratroopers. When he saw some new recruits with swollen ankles caused by day-long parachuting practice, he encouraged them: "Just think of those of the older generation who held their ground at Sanggamnyong [in Korea]. We should pluck up our courage and trample all difficulties underfoot...." Then he ascended a 2-meter-high platform to demonstrate to them how to leave the airplane, jump and land. When the paratroopers returned to barracks with heavy tread at nightfall, he told the medical personnel to take them some camphor alochol which helps alleviate swelling. He also told company cadres to have the kitchen prepare hot water for soaking swollen feet. Some new fighters were afraid when they first boarded the airplane for the parachute jump. Li Lianghui, carrying a colored parachute on his back, usually led some backbone jump instructors to board the plane ahead of the new fighters. When the airplanes reached the landing zone, the more than 1,000 new fighters saw their deputy corps commander bail out first and watched his parachute open. They all felt inspired.

The young deputy corps commander, wearing jump boots, took part in drill in formation in the hot sun. His legs also repeatedly became swollen just as the fighters' legs did. In order to temper the paratroopers, he led the troops in long rapid marches in the darkness. On a cold and windy winter night he led his troops in tactical ground training and camped out on a river bank. Moonlight was shining over him and the troops. A fighter put his blanket over Li and wittily said: "We don't need 'air-conditioners' here. We can enjoy the cool on this river bank tonight." Li Lianghui said with a smile: "The river bank is our bed and the cloud and fog are our mosquito net. Isn't it nice to live the life of the old Eighth Route Army man?" Early next morning the troops rushed towards "combat" zone 40 li away. Li Lainghui waded across rivers and climbed mountains just as the fighters did. He did not leave the fighters ranks although the jeep was right behind him.

During the difficult jump training program Li Lianghui was always the first one to jump in the first group. It is very difficult to perform low altitude jumps because it could be dangerous if the main parachute fails to open and the parachutist cannot rapidly open his reserve parachute before he lands. Li Lianghui always took the lead in trial jumps.

The plane was flying at high speed now. When the needle of the altimeter pointed at the specified low altitude, Li bent his body, embraced the parachute and jumped out of the plane. Following him, all the paratroopers who took part in the training floated down from the plane one after another. All the paratroopers soon achieved a new jump altitude.

Under Li Lianghui's leadership, the young paratroopers have flown to high, cold mountains, to the vast woodlands, to the boundless Gobi Desert, to rivers and lakes and to the most dangerous and rugged terrain to practice their jumps and toughen their combat skills.

Li Lianghui had lofty ambitions and dared to initiate new things when he was battalion, regiment and division commander. In 1979 when the corps party committee decided to appoint Li concurrent chief of staff of the headquarters, all the four deputy chiefs of staff of the headquarters at that time were Li's superiors. Li respected these veteran comrades, humbly learned from them and paid attention to giving play to their roles. But when differences arose on matters of principle, he dared to uphold the correct opinions. When Li realized that the party committee of the headquarters was somewhat weak and lax, he immediately took decisive steps to improve the party committee's organizational life and to reinstate the principle of putting the cadres under the party's leadership, and had heart-to-heart talks with dozens of comrades. When he found the principal leading comrade in charge of headquarters administration could not concentrate on building the headquarters because of his busy daily routine, he discussed with several deputy chiefs of staff the setting up of a special office to handle daily routine so that the principal leading comrades could concentrate on doing what he needed to do. With the support of the air force's leading organization, the office was set up to take charge of the busy daily routine.

Certain departmental chiefs of the headquarters were aged and weak and could not efficiently handle the work of this special service of the airborne corps. But many morally and professionally competent comrades among the staff who were in the prime of their lives could not be promoted to the leadership posts. Li therefore pointed out at the corps party committee that the troops' modernization could not be achieved if outmoded ideas about promotion according to seniority and being unwilling to step down were not eliminated. Realizing this young leading cadre's courage to solve the longstanding problem in the party's interest, the corps party committee actively supported him in selecting outstanding qualified personnel among the cadres. Li, after scrutinizing the performance of the staff and extensively soliciting the masses' opinions, finally recommended five young departmental chiefs to the corps party committee. At the same time, following an in-depth investigation of the work of various headquarters, Li Lianghui also recommended that the corps party committee promote a number of young and capable staff members to be regimental chiefs of staff. Now, after 2 years, the work of various headquarters has been vigorously carried out, and Li is lauded by the corps party committee for his foresight and boldness.

Li Lianghui once said: "To be a commander of a new generation, one must be able to shoulder two burdens. Not only must one inherit and carry forward the fine traditions fostered by the older generations, but one must also study hard, be bold in searching, and leading troops to scale the heights of modernization."

When we visited his simple dormitory, we found that by his bedside there were military works by revolutionary teachers and foreign military works, as well as such Chinese military classics as "Strategy of Sun Zi" and "Biography of Zhuge Liang." While these are what he often reads at night, his knowledge reaches far beyond.

Li is also quite knowledgeable about the range of different types of artillery pieces and the capabilities of different types of tanks of the ground force and the tactical capabilities of the different types of airplanes of the air force as well as the capabilities of different types of naval vessels. He maintains that a commander is not qualified to command in modern warfare if he does not understand various services and arms. For this reason, Li Lianghui has studied a great deal about modern military science and has thus broadened his view and become more methodical in directing troop training.

One night in early summer, Li Lianghui was comparing information about foreign troops with the notes he wrote after participating in military exercises and was thinking how to organize the division and regiment commanders to carry out an exercise to test the troops' capabilities. When a departmental chief stepped into Li's office to see why it was still lit up at that late hour, he saw Li was concentrating on writing up an exercise project and there was an unfinished slice of bread beside him. He found that Li was so engrossed in the project that his visit was totally unnoticed.

The next day, after interviewing some veteran paratroopers, Li Lianghui "dissected" some foreign countries' airborne missions with comrades of the headquarters, and then analyzed the information about his own unit's various airborne exercises. After more than 1 month of research, Li finally produced a fairly creative exercise plan of more than 20,000 characters. He also directed the staff members to apply the overall planning method in drawing up a series of schemes of the exercise.

A realistic military exercise began. Li Lianghui, like a stage director, directed the troops to act their parts in a magnificent "lively drama" of modern airborne operations according to plan and actual combat requirements.

It is in such a way by incessantly exploring and creating new things, that Li Lianghui, who has studied in an advanced military academy and accumulated rich experience in practice, has become a competent commander in directing a modern airborne operation.

On an early autumn day at the well-hidden command post behind a forest of pine trees, weathermen periodically supplied Li Lianghui with data concerning changes in weather conditions. From all types of transmitters came strong radio waves, relaying instructions from Li Lianghui to other ground and air radio stations.

All of a sudden, our fighter planes flew over the "war zone" as quick as lightning and established air superiority. They were immediately followed by bombers which took turns in bombing the targets. Carrying "troops from heaven" and all kinds of artillery pieces and ammunition, the transport planes began their airdrop from different altitudes...

Li Lianghui had issued an order: "Stop 'enemy' tanks!" Olive-green helicopters came one after another, rapidly laying down strips of mines against the tanks.

A loud explosion followed the flash of a fireball in an open area. The billowing mushroom clouds emitted intense shock waves. That was an atomic bomb dropped by the "enemy." Several seconds later, wearing protective clothing, the paratroopers passed the contaminated area and charged towards the enemy positions...

Li Lianghui methodically directed various arms of the services according to the "combat situation" and won in all the actions, just like a proficient chess player making his move. A former corps commander happily said: "We need not worry about successors to the commanders of this here unit of ours in the future!"

POPULATION CONTROL, FARMLAND PROTECTION STRESSED

[Commentator's article: "An Important Item of Ideological and Educational Work"]

[Text] In the "minutes of the national meeting on rural work" approved and transmitted by the CCP Central Committee, it was pointed out: "our country is overcrowded. Population control and farmland protection are our main policies. How population control and farmland protection work is carried out is closely linked to the future development prospects of the rural areas. It will also have a profound effect on the progress of our country's four modernizations. Conscientiously grasping these two items of work is an important task facing leaders at various levels in the rural areas."

At present, quite a few localities have already started paying attention to strengthening population control and farmland protection work. However, some localities still have not paid enough attention to this work. Although some have grasped it, they have stopped short at the appeal stage. Although some localities have sprung into action, they still lack meticulous ideological and educational work. If, toward problems emerging in the course of work, we rely solely on administrative methods and economic measures and "make forced corrections," this will create tension between cadres and the masses and affect the actual results of our work. In the course of implementing population control and farmland protection work, the Kaihua production brigade in Jinhua Municipality, Zhejiang Province, has both a thorough and feasible plan and has meticulously done a good job of ideological and educational work. It has implemented the family planning program and housing construction program on the basis of doing a good job of ideological and educational work. This experience is worthy of study by all localities.

In the past 2 or 3 years, since the establishment of the responsibility system in the rural areas, some peasants, plagued by various anxieties, have been reluctant to accept family planning guidance. When improving their living conditions, some peasants seek to make their houses larger, even to the extent of appropriating farmland. There are many reasons for this. One important reason is that, all too often, peasants are acquainted only with "family conditions," and not with "national conditions," and thus cannot understand and deal with problems in the larger perspective of the whole country. The Kaihua brigade proceeded from the actual conditions prevailing in their oocality and used the method of comparative accounting with which the masses are familiar. It has made the peasants realize the serious consequences which the violation of family planning and of planned residential construction has already caused and will continue to cause for the locality and the state. It has thus broadened its horizons. Starting with only the knowledge of "family conditions," it has come to understand "national conditions." The people of the brigade now understand the correctness and urgency of the state policies on population control and farmland protection. After penetrating deep among the commune members in carrying out this kind of education, the brigade has managed to overcome blindness in problems concerning child bearing and appropriating land for residential construction. It has smoothly formulated and implemented population plans and residential construction and speeded up the development of agricultural production.

The practice of Kaihua brigade proves that the peasant masses are reasonable and that they are imbued with socialist consciousness. In the course of our population control and farmland protection work, as long as we persist in presenting the facts, reasoning things out, carrying out meticulous ideological education and explaining the truth, the peasants will be glad to accept the guidance of the state. With these two items of work done, our vast rural areas will definitely be much improved.

COORDINATION IN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT DISCUSSED

["Opinion" column from economic information]

[Text] In recent years, economic coordination among various areas has developed greatly all over China. In 1981 the total fund for material coordination reached 3.3 billion yuan, an increase of 10 percent over the year before. The scope of coordination is still expanding.

Tianjin is carrying out 365 economic and technical coordination projects with 27 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions; Shanghai, 110 projects with 17 areas; and Yunnan has signed 178 projects with Shanghai, Tianjin, Sichuan, Hubei and Guangdong.

Economic coordination is an important method for developing China's economic and an inevitable trend in modernized large-scale production. Under conditions of uneven distribution of resources and unablanced economic development, coordination is of special importance.

First, coordination can give full play to the economic strengths of the various districts. With implementation of an open foreign policy together with the enlivened economy at home, the funds and materials under the control of districts and enterprises have gradually increased.

In 1981 funds possessed by districts and enterprises amounted to more than 50 billion yuan, which was about half of the national budgetary expenditure. Coal, rolled steel, timber and cement in their possession were 50, 30, 40 and 70 per cent respectively of total national resources. They also hold a considerable portion of light industrial, agricultural and sideline production.

Mutual Help

Economic coordination can help districts and enterprises supply each other's needs. For instance, Shanghai, a seaboard city, carried out technical coordination with the inland city of Yichang's textile industry for three years. The result was that Yichang's output value doubled, profit increased 150 percent and the average profit from each spindle rose from 35 to 100 yuan.

Shanghai also helped Luoyang sewing-machine factory in Henan raise the output and quality of its products so that the factory's annual loss of five million yuan was turned into a profit of the same sum.

Second, coordination can help solve the problem of insufficient fuel, raw materials and funds within the state plan. For example, Zhejiang through coordination imports annually large quantities of raw materials, including more than 1.5 million tons of coal, a third of the province's total industrial coal consumption. Jiangsu imports six million tons of coal in the same way.

Third, coordination helps accumulate idle funds so that they can be used for construction urgently needed locally and by the state. For example, Zhejiang accumulated 250 million yuan, so that the state coal and chemical departments could build new bases and supply these raw materials, of which the province is very short.

Shanghai, Liaoning and the state chemical department jointly invested more than 20 million yuan in Guizhou for the mining of phosphorus. Beijing and Tianjin jointly invested in Inner Mongolia to build bases for producing sugar, beef and mutton. Shanxi and Inner Mongolia are consulting other provinces and municipalities about accumulating funds for building railways to solve the problem of coal transportation.

BAN YUE TAN ON PARTY LEADERSHIP IN ENTERPRISES

HK220917 Beijing BAN YUE TAN in Chinese No 13, 10 Jul 82 pp 6-8

[Article by BAN YUE TAN political editorial office: "Strengthen and Improve Party Leadership in Enterprises"]

[Text] The key to running socialist enterprises well lies in strengthening and improving party leadership.

By strengthening party leadership in enterprises, we do not mean that it is necessary to restore the former system requiring the party committee of an enterprise to take all matters of the enterprises into its hands and to directly command production. This system is disadvantageous to the modernization of enterprise management and may easily lead the party committee of the enterprise to get bogged down in routine production and administrative work, thus preventing the party committee from pooling efforts to grasp major problems. This may even give rise to the situation in which "the party does not take care of party affairs."

Recently, the CCP Central Committee promulgated two sets of provisional regulations governing the work of primary party organizations in industrial enterprises and financial and trade enterprises. These regulations are of vital significance in overcoming some chaotic conditions in enterprises at present, strengthening and improving party leadership enterprises and developing our country's socialist construction.

At the present stage, the industrial enterprises and financial and trade enterprises of our country are practicing a leadership system of separating party leadership from administrative work in accordance with the basic principles of collective leadership by the party committee, democratic management by the staff and workers, and administrative command by factory directors (managers). The enterprises practice the system of responsibility of factory directors (managers) and the system of congress of staff and workers under the leadership of the party committee.

The party committee (and the party general branch or party branch of an independent accounting unit; the same below) is the core of the leadership of an enterprise. It exercises unified leadership over the administrative organization responsible for production (business), the congress of staff and workers and other mass organizations, such as the trade union, the CYL and the militia, of the enterprise. It discusses and decides upon major problems. However, it no longer exercises direct command over production and takes charge of all administrative matters. Its chief task is to seriously implement the party's line, principles and policies, to make the enterprise follow the socialist orientation, to grasp party building and ideological and political work and to do a good job of educating and supervising the party members and cadres.

Under the leadership of the party committee of the enterprise, the factory director (manager) independently gives unified command over production and administrative work. The party committee only acts as a supervisor or inspector. Usually the party committee secretary does not take the post of factory director (manager), and the factory director (manager) also does not take the post of party committee secretary or deputy secretary. The production and administrative work of the workshops, sales departments, warehouses and other units under an enterprise are put under the charge of the leaders of these units under the unified command of the factor director (manager). The party general branches or party branches of these units should guarantee and supervise the production and administrative work of these units.

The congress of staff and workers is the basic form of practicing democratic management in an enterprise. It is the organ of power through which the staff and workers participate in decisionmaking and management and supervising the cadres. The party committee leads the congress of staff and workers chiefly in ideological and political work and in the implementation of the party's principles and policies. It should explain to the congress of staff and workers the party's line, principles and policies and, through the activities of party members who are also delegates to the congress, turn the party's principles and policies into the conscious action of the masses.

It should continuously heighten the sense of responsibility of the staff and workers as masters of their own affairs and support and organize the staff and workers to correctly exercise their democratic rights as masters of the house. It should do a good job in harmonizing the relationship between the factory director and the congress of staff and workers. It should teach and lead the staff and workers and their representatives to correctly handle the relations between and interests of the state, the enterprise and the staff and workers. Through the party members' role as vanguards and models, it should guarantee implementation of the resolutions adopted by the congress.

With this leadership system put into effect, the load on the party committee of an enterprise has not been lightened, but instead has become heavier. The party committee should strive to develop the party ideologically and organizationally and increase the fighting capacity of the party organizations.

The party committee of an enterprise should regularly educate the party members in Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, in the party's line and principles and policies, in the current situation and tasks and in the ideal of communism and teach them to be good communists. It should give the cadres intensive training and establish and improve the system of examining the cadres. It should supervise the work of democratically electing a workshop leader or a factory director in line with the plan drawn by the leading organ of a higher level.

In an enterprise, a party congress or a general meeting of party members must be held in line with the party constitution and must also be held on schedule. The party committees at all levels must be reelected on schedule. The party congress and the party committee must realistically defend the party members' rights. The party committee must uphold the principle of democratic centralism, and exercise the system of combining collective leadership with the division of labor and individual responsibilities. All major problems must be discussed and decided upon by the party committee. Persons should be specially assigned for carrying out the decisions which have been made. Regular activities of party organizations in an enterprise should be carried out according to the "three-meeting and one-lecture" system: meetings of committees of party branches should be held whenever necessary, general meetings of party members should be called on a quarterly basis by a party branch, and democratic life meetings should be called at least once every quarter by a party group; party lectures should be given monthly or bimonthly by responsible persons of party organizations. The party organizations should be thoroughly familiar with the basic conditions of each party member and his performance in production and other work and help him solve his ideological problems and other actual problems. They should promptly commend the advanced party members and educate and punish other party members who have committed mistakes or are passive and lagging behind in their work.

Doing ideological and political work well is the main task of the party organizations of an enterprise. During the new period, ideological and political work should center around the four modernizations, and the party's fine traditions should be restored and carried forward so that ideological and political work may be carried out more scientifically. 1) Effort should be made to integrate ideological and political work with economic work and with the policy of to each according to work, so that ideological and political work may infiltrate all fields of production and distribution. 2) The policy of enlightenment and persuasion should be upheld and the contradictions among the people be handled correctly. Disciplinary action should be taken by the administrative authorities of an enterprise against the handful of staff members and workers who have seriously violated discipline, so as to crack down on unhealthy tendencies. 3) Ideological education should be conducted in varied forms and by flexible methods, with emphasis on commending and encouraging the advanced. Close attention should be paid to actual results, and formalism should be discarded. Education for young workers should be conducted in a lively atmosphere according to the characteristics of the young people and integrated with their activities. 4) Ideological and political work should be combined with productive, technical and managerial work and with the sparetime activities of the staff and workers. 5) The system of the political work conference should be set up.

The leading cadres should take the lead in doing ideological and political work and the party and CYL members should prove themselves backbone elements in doing ideological and political work. All staff members and workers should be mobilized to do ideological and political work.

To strengthen and improve party leadership, we must improve our style and method of work. We must uphold the principle of seeking truth from facts, go deep into realities to make investigations and sum up experience, and continuously study new conditions and solve new problems. We must closely combine general calls with concrete guidance. We must firmly follow the mass line, fully develop democracy and wholeheartedly rely on the staff and workers to run the enterprises well. We must show a high sense of responsibility for the party and the people, consciously carry out the responsibility systems of various forms and resolutely overcome bureaucracy. Leading cadres at all levels must set examples by honestly performing their official duties, being the first to bear heardships and the last to enjoy comforts, seeking no personal privileges and resolutely combating unhealthy tendencies.

Once the leadership system of an enterprise has been improved and perfected and the party leadership of an enterprise strengthened and improved, it will be possible to further raise the levels of leadership and management of an enterprise, to improve the political quality and raise the technical level of the staff and workers, to attain better economic results in the realms of production, construction and circulation, and to make still greater contributions toward the state's socialist modernization.

IMPROVING CONDITIONS FOR INTELLECTUALS STRESSED

[Editorial: "Gradually Improve Working and Living Conditions for Middle-Aged Intellectuals"]

[Text] The work of checking on the implementation of policies on intellectuals is now underway throughout the country. At present the check should be focused on middle-aged intellectuals. There is a lot of work to do in implementing the policies on these persons, but judging by present conditions the most urgent task is to get a good grasp of gradually solving difficulties in their working and living conditions.

China currently has about 5.77 million middle-aged intellectuals, if we apply as criteria the possession of an educational level at and above secondary technical school level, and age between 36 and 55. All these more than 5 million persons were cultivated by the party itself since the founding of the state. They form the hard core and the backbone force on all fronts now and for a time to come and play the role of carrying on and initiating things in the four modernizations drive. At present their work and household burdens are, relatively speaking, the heaviest, but their pay, remuneration and housing conditions are relatively low and poor. This not only limits the effort to bring their role into play; in addition, more and more of them are physically declining, and in many units there has appeared the phenomenon of a higher death rate among middle-aged intellectuals than among older ones. It cannot be denied that this is a great problem facing our country. The intellectuals in the departments of production, research, education and management (including administrative, science and technology, and economic management) represent the most valuable wealth of all industrialized countries. An important reason for the rapid economic recovery of Japan and West Germany after the war is that they preserved a number of backbone forces of this type and also brought their role into full play. In order to attain the vast goal of the four modernizations, we too must first have a healthy force of intellectuals whose role can be brought into full play. We must therefore be resolved to solve the practical problems of middle-aged intellectuals regarding low pay and cramped housing. "Good steel is used on the blade of the knife." Improving the working and living conditions of the middle-aged intellectuals should also be regarded as an item of "capital construction," and moreover of "basic capital construction." It is worthwhile suitably increasing investment in this respect. We must realize that higher pay for those with higher educational levels than for those with lower, and who work with their brains rather than their hands, accords with socialist economic laws.

If we do not do this, our science and technology cannot advance, our productive force cannot increase, and it will be difficult to rapidly improve the masses' living standards.

Since the smashing of the "gang of four," the party and government have restored the reputation of the intellectuals and have also made positive efforts to improve their material treatment. Due to the limits on the state's finances, in the previous few years we concentrated on implementing policies among the old intellectuals. Although some of the problems of material treatment for middle-aged intellectuals have been solved, not nearly enough has been done in light of the actual needs. Now the Central Committee and State Council have paid attention and attached importance to this problem, and in the next few years they will be giving priority to gradually improving the working and living conditions of middle-aged intellectuals. The leading comrades of party committees and government at all levels must profoundly understand the importance of this central policy decision and, in accordance with its intention, seriously check on the working and living conditions of middle-aged intellectuals in their own units. They should hasten to solve as far as possible the existing practical difficulties.

For the new to supersede the old is an irresistible law of nature. Our cadre force is at a crucial moment of transition from old to new, so the status and role of the middle-aged intellectuals are all that more important. The central authorities have repeatedly stressed selecting and promoting outstanding young cadres and employing them in important posts. This is a major strategic policy decision. The main candidates for cadre selection and promotion are outstanding middle-aged intellectuals. We should also consider the situation in 5 or 10 years time. By then large number of intellectuals now middle-aged will be going on from their "golden years" to "old age." We will suffer a lot and make great mistakes if we still fail now to hurry to bring into full play their role as a backbone and a bridge!

Focusing the check-up and solution of problems on middle-aged intellectuals naturally does not mean that no problems exist anymore in implementing policies on high-ranking old intellectuals. We must continue to pay attention to and solve their special difficulties. Neither does it mean that young intellectuals working on all fronts are unimportant or that there are no problems in implementing policies for them. We must, similarly, seriously and gradually solve a number of common problems among them too. Still less does it mean that the only problems to be solved for intellectuals are those of pay and housing. In fact the following problems exist in varying degrees among all intellectuals, old, middle-aged and young, senior, medium-grade and junior: renovation of knowledge; how to unify duties and titles, rights and powers, and responsibilities and obligations; and how to rationalize the structure of the rank of intellectuals, together with the problems that correspondingly arise of orientation and mobility of talented people. There is also the question of the ideological self-remolding of the intellectuals and so on. And all these problems reflect from different angles a central issue in implementing the policies on intellectuals, and that is: in the new historical period, how should the role of China's intellectuals be brought into still greater play, and how can we set about doing that? Apart from questions of policy, there are also questions of the system involved here; there are problems for the leaders and also problems for the intellectuals themselves. The concept that implementing the policies on intellectuals has already "gone too far" does not match reality and is a muddled notion. The leaders of party committees and government at all levels must seriously deal with such an important, urgent and complex issue, carry out investigation and study in depth, and also immediately get to work themselves to solve a number of practical problems for the middle-aged intellectuals. The intellectuals must also understand and be concerned for the overall situation, show good sense, take part in studying this issue together, and take the initiative to cooperate with the party and government at all levels, and first, with the personnel, organization, labor and cadre departments, to gradually solve the problems. In this way our current check on work concerning intellectuals will be carried out in a thoroughgoing and not a superficial way.

SECOND OIL WELL DRILLED IN EAST CHINA SEA

[Text] Beijing, July 22 (XINHUA) -- Testing of a 4,200-meter-deep oil exploratory well in the East China Sea Basin, the deepest ever drilled by the Ministry of Petroleum Industry at sea, was completed July 15, the ministry said. According to tests, the area around the "Donghai No 1" well has favorable oil bearing and storing conditions as it consists mainly of continental sedimentary formations with high temperatures below the sea bottom. The well, the second drilled for geological survey, is about 400 kilometers southeast of Shanghai, China's biggest city, where the water around averages 77.7 meters in depth. Drilling started February 24 and was completed June 22.

A year ago, the first deep exploratory well was drilled by the Ministry of Geology and Minerals in another part of the East China Sea Basin.

With an area of 460,000 square kilometers, the East China Sea Basin is the largest of the six oil and gas bearing basins that have been discovered off China's coast, according to Chinese petrogeologists.

STATE COUNCIL CIRCULAR WARNS OF ACCIDENTS

[Text] Beijing, July (XINHUA) -- The State Council has issued an urgent warning regarding industrial accidents, which it said have risen sharply in the first five months of this year in some enterprises, industrial departments and areas. In an emergency circular issued earlier this month, the State Council urged governments and leaders at all levels to take "resolute measures" to improve working conditions in factories and curb accidents under the guiding principle of "safety first" in production.

It mandated special task forces to be organized as quickly as possible to inspect safety measures in key enterprises and workshops. Attention must be paid especially to coal mining, railways and communications enterprises, where the rank-and-file should be mobilized to carry on the safety drive, the instructions said.

Meanwhile, the State Council message said, education of workers in the importance of safety in production and the use of safety devices and techniques should be stepped up. All industrial and mining enterprises must, in the near future, rotate their workers and staff through training session of safety measures, the circular ordered. Exercises simulating accidents should be held for workers on dangerous jobs -- jobs liable to cause fire or explosion -- so that they will acquaint themselves with emergency procedures.

The circular stressed the importance of educating young workers in safety. Apprentices and other new workers must pass safety tests arranged by their factories, workshops and shifts before they are assigned jobs, the circular continued.

The circular attributed the rise in industrial accidents to poor industrial management and dereliction of duty on the part of leading cadres. Another reason, said the circular, was the lack of scientific knowledge on the part of the rank and file, or, in some cases, plain foolhardiness.

National figures for industrial accidents are unavilable, but a recent train accident 43 kilometers outside the northeast China industrial city of Shenyang caused the death of three persons and injured 147 others. The PEOPLE'S DAILY and other leading newspapers reported the accident that happened on May 28, 1982 when a passenger train jumped the track in Liaoning Province. The direct cause of the accident was found to be a dereliction of duty and violation of labor discipline by railway maintenance workers.

SCHOOLS WORK-STUDY PROGRAM EXHIBITION HELD

[Text] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Education Minister He Dongchang and the ministry's Communist Party committee Secretary Zhang Chengxian visited an exhibition on work-study program in Chinese primary and secondary schools here this afternoon.

Sponsored by the Ministry of Education, the exhibition opened today for a four-week run with more than 5,000 exhibits, video tapes and photos from 28 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions.

The exhibits include electronic appliances, foodstuffs, teaching instruments, garments, chemical products, arts and crafts.

Statistics for 1981 provided by the ministry are:

-- More than 430,000 primary and secondary schools, out of the country's total number of one million, were engaged in the work-study program.

-- There were over 41,000 school-run factories, while school-run farms covering 240,000 hectares yielded more than 188,000 tons of grain.

-- The program gave the schools a net income of 570 million yuan, equivalent to eight percent of the state appropriations for the primary and secondary schools.

"We should carry forward the spirit of running schools through thrift and hard work for a long time to come," He Dongchang said. "The work-study program and the integration of education with productive labor are our two long-standing policies."

Zhang Chengxian said: "We should implement the party's educational policies though the work-study program. Integrating education with productive labor helps students with their moral, intellectual and physical development."

He urged the schools to make full use of local conditions and their intellect potential to improve school facilities.

The exhibition is being held at the Beijing No 35 middle school with each province occupying one classroom.

A white Mongolian yurt erected in front of the school building is the product of students in Inner Mongolia. Visitors were invited by a Mongolian girl into the spacious and cool tent to taste the cheese and butter the students made themselves.

The work-study program varies according to the conditions in different localities. A village primary school in northern Shaanxi Province organizes the pupils to do farming and plant fruit trees. For 14 years they paid neither tuition nor book fees. These costs are covered by the work program earnings. For four years running, the pupils have even been given clothes by the school.

In the industrial city of Shanghai, one thousand school-run factories earned 25 million yuan last year in their work-study program, equal to 14.1 percent of the state appropriations for the schools.

A rural primary school in Yunnan Province has for 22 years financed free-schooling by collecting wild medicinal herbs and growing tobacco. Ninety-seven percent of the school-age children are enrolled in the school and nearly all young people and adults in the village can read and write.

ANHUI'S ZHOU ZIJIAN AT ECONOMIC CRIME MEETING

OW210549 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Text] To implement the central authorities' directive on dealing resolute blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field and to deepen this struggle, the Anhui Provincial CCP Committee held a meeting from 15 to 18 July on handling major or serious cases. The meeting was attended by the secretaries of various prefectural and municipal committees.

The meeting heard reports by principal responsible comrades of various prefectural and municipal party committees and the party committees of departments directly under the provincial authority. Comrade Zhou Zijian made a summary report at the meeting.

After analyzing the situation in the struggle against serious economic criminal activities in the province since mid-May, Comrade Zhou Zijian pointed out: In this period, various prefectures, municipalities and counties have done a lot of work and made progress in the struggle, thus scoring tremendous achievements. The major problems now are: A slack mood now prevails in some party organizations and among some leading comrades, and some localities and units have failed to make vigorous efforts to grasp major or serious cases. As a result, the processing of such cases has progressed very slowly. These problems merit our close attention.

On what should be done, Comrade Zhou Zijian emphatically pointed out: Party committees at various levels, especially their principal responsible comrades, must strengthen their leadership over this struggle. They must gain a clearer understanding of its importance, remove all ideological obstacles and overcome all interference. Leading cadres at various levels should lead and participate in this struggle. They should personally investigate and deal with major or serious cases and do so thoroughly from level to level. This is the key to deepening the struggle. Marked achievements must be made in investigating and handling major or serious cases in July and August. In deepening the struggle, attention should be paid to studying policy limits to ensure the sound development of the struggle. It is necessary to make overall plans and take all factors into consideration. All units concerned should coordinate closely and tackle problems in a comprehensive way. The struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field should be combined with the checkup on the observance of financial and economic discipline and the consolidation of enterprises. It should also be combined with party consolidation, the rectification of work style, education on anticorruption and development of production and all other work. In a word, we must resolutely implement the guidelines set forth in the central authorities' relevant documents and unswervingly carry this struggle through to the end.

ANHUI PROVINCE POPULARIZES AGRICULTURAL SCIENCE

[Excerpts] As the implementation of the system of responsibility for agricultural production is basically stable in Anhui, the party committees, governments and agricultural departments at all levels in the province have, in a timely manner, shifted the stress of their leadership over agricultural production to science and technology. They have brought about a new atmosphere of agricultural science and technology. In the first 5 months of 1982, Suxian, Huizhou, Anqing, Xuancheng and Chuxian Prefectures organized 352 mobile technical report groups. Some 875,000 persons listened to their reports.

According to incomplete statistics, the agricultural departments at various levels in the province conducted rotational training for some 1.65 million management cadres and technical cadres in the first 5 months of 1982.

The province has held academic discussion meetings on soybean production, the cropping system and agricultural development in areas north of the Huai He. Some 150 papers have been presented.

In 1982 the province plans to popularize 53 major agrotechnical projects, including seeds of superior strain.

Comrade Wu Hongxiang emphatically pointed out at the opening ceremony of the meeting: The Federation of Returned Overseas Chinese is an important mass organization in our province. It represents several million returned overseas Chinese and relatives of overseas Chinese. It is a bridge between our party and the broad masses of overseas Chinese, returned overseas Chinese and relatives of overseas Chinese. It is also our party's assistant for publicizing and implementing various principles and policies. All localities must attach importance to the role of the federation and bring its role into play. All localities must unite with the broad masses of overseas Chinese, returned overseas Chinese and relatives of overseas Chinese and make more contributions to the adoption of special policies and flexible measures and to the acceleration of the four modernizations in Fujian Province.

Comrade Xiang Nan said at the closing session: At present the bulk of our work in implementing the policies concerning overseas Chinese affairs deals with the issues of houses of overseas Chinese. We should persistently struggle against and never concede to the evil practice of unreasonably, illegally and forcibly occupying overseas Chinese houses.

Comrade Xiang Nan pointed out: Great progress has been made in the handling of overseas Chinese affairs in Fujian as compared with several years ago. Nevertheless, we are basically still working on eliminating chaos and restoring order in this respect. We have not yet made a breakthrough.

He called on the cadres handling overseas Chinese affairs and the cadres of the Federation of Returned Overseas Chinese in the province to inspire revolutionary enthusiasm, do a good job and make a breakthrough in the handling of overseas Chinese affairs in the new period. He urged the party committees at all levels to strengthen their leadership over overseas Chinese affairs. He instructed that a prefectural or county party committee should put a leading comrade in charge of overseas Chinese affairs if the prefecture or the county is the home town of large numbers of overseas Chinese.

The meeting also discussed and approved a report made by (Wang Hajie), president of the Fujian Federation of Returned Overseas Chinese, on the work of the federation since the second session of its second provincial committee and on its plans for future work.

ZHEJIANG'S TIE YING ON GRASSROOTS PARTY BUILDING

OW290602 Hangzhou Zhejiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1030 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Excerpts] The forum of representatives of outstanding party members and advanced party organs at the grassroots level, called by the Zhejiang Provincial CCP Committee, began yesterday with 24 outstanding party members from all fronts throughout the province attending. First Secretary Tie Ying and responsible comrades Zhang Jingtang, Wang Yaotang and (Zhang Jintang) of the provincial CCP committee paid a visit to the comrades attending this afternoon.

Comrade Tie Ying delivered an important speech at the forum, calling on party members throughout the province to play an exemplary vanguard role in developing socialist spiritual and material civilization. Comrade Tie Ying said: It is very significant for the provincial CCP committee to invite the representatives of outstanding party members from all fronts on the eve of the 61st founding anniversary of the CCP to discuss how CCP members should play an exemplary vanguard role in developing socialist spiritual and material civilization and strive for the realization of communism.

Comrade Tie Ying pointed out in his speech: The core question in developing spiritual and material civilization is to build our party effectively; the CCP Central Committee has always attached great importance to this question. We must safeguard and carry forward our party's main characteristics formed during the protracted period of revolution and construction: 1) The CCP is a Marxist political party of the Chinese working class and its supreme guiding principle is the realization of communism. One cannot be a communist if one does not accept this supreme guiding principle, dedicate one's whole life to it and let communist ideology guide all one's actions. We must raise aloft the communist banner, uphold the four fundamental principles, conscientiously study and apply the scientific theory of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, solve new problems cropping up in our practical work scientifically and transform the objective and subjective world in a coordinated way. 2) We must serve the people wholeheartedly. The party must always share weal and woe with the masses, maintain the closest ties with them and safeguard the people's democratic rights. No party member should be allowed to place himself above the people. Every party member, especially a cadre who is a party member, must play an exemplary vanguard role and serve the people wholeheartedly. 3) We must have a strict sense of organization and discipline. We must ensure that the party's resolution is implemented quickly and efficiently. We must constantly and earnestly carry out criticism and self-criticism, continue to overcome shortcomings and correct mistakes and put our strong points to work. Comrade Tie Ying pointed out: These three points represent the main characteristics of our party and the party's guiding thoughts in work.

Comrade Tie Ying said: Party organs at all levels must do well in the following areas during the second half of this year:

1. Carry out ideological education among all party members. This work must be tackled as a cardinal matter during the second half of this year. It must be done well and in earnest to achieve results.

2. Embark on activities to set up more advanced party branches and to strive to become outstanding party members. Leading comrades at all levels must be daring in commending the advanced and helping those lagging behind, so that good persons and good deeds are publicized and bad persons and bad deeds are dealt with accordingly.

3. Consolidate party organs at the grassroots level in a planned manner with guidance and strengthen the leading groups at the grassroots level. This work must be given serious attention to ensure that the party's line, principles and policies are properly implemented by party organs at the grassroots level.

NANFANG RIBAO ON INSPECTING INTELLECTUALS WORK

[Article by Jia Yi [6328 4135]: "Don't Be Superficial in Checking Up"]

[Text] Not long ago, while talking about checking up on the work concerning intellectuals, responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee pointed out: Some localities and units adopted formalist methods and did their work superficially. This reminds me of a friend in intellectual circles. We works very hard, although he is already over 50. He and his wife live in two separate places. This has brought a lot of trouble into their lives. When I met him a few days ago, I asked him whether his problem would be solved after the inspection of the results of implementing the policy toward intellectuals. Beyond my expectations, he was at first stunned by my question, and then said with regret: "I did not even know about the 'inspection.'" The inspection work has been carried out in the entire province for 3 months, but some people have known nothing about it. This shows that the criticisms of the responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee tally with facts. This is something that merits our attention.

We should affirm that a number of units and departments have achieved good results in their inspection work. They have proceeded in a down-to-earth manner, conscientiously handled problems arising in the implementation of policy and done their best to help intellectuals solve their difficulties in work and life. However, some units and departments have not attached importance to or done well in carrying out the inspection work. Although some of them have done some inspection work, they did so in order to report to the leadership. They did not solve the existing problem well and even hurriedly presented their reports before making a thorough investigation. They were preparing to call off the battle. It is not strange at all that people are greatly disappointed with such units and departments.

Some people might think that we have talked about the implementation of policy toward intellectuals for many years. All mishandled cases have been redressed and most intellectuals have returned to their work and have been promoted provided that they are entitled to. To them, all problems have almost been solved. Therefore, inspection work is no longer essential.

It is true that since the party's third plenary session, we have done a lot of work and achieved marked results in implementing the policy toward intellectuals. Today no one regards intellectuals as "stinking ninth" [the lowest class of people] or says that "those who have more knowledge are more reactionary." However, have certain people completely erased their prejudice against intellectuals? Do all people completely trust and rely on them? Have the broad masses of intellectuals brought their enthusiasm into full play? It is obvious that the answer is no. The phenomenon of discriminating against and excluding intellectuals still exists and we should continue to eliminate the "leftist" ideological influence. We still have a lot of work to do in order to improve working and living conditions of intellectuals. One thing which we should particularly mention is that middle-aged intellectuals are the backbone of all trades and services and are a connecting link between the predecessors and successors. They are shouldering heavy loads and encountering enormous difficulties. To bring their enthusiasm into full play, we should actively help them solve some practical problems and minimize their trouble at home. Therefore, we should understand that the present inspection work is absolutely necessary.

Some comrades said that they knew of the practical problems of intellectuals, but it was beyond their power to solve them. Of course, our country is encountering difficulties and it is impossible to solve every problem overnight. Intellectuals show understanding for this. However, leaders of units and departments should realize that the present inspection work has reflected the party's concern and loving care for intellectuals, and is in our strategic interest. Therefore, we should adopt an active attitude and do our best to solve problems that can be solved. With regard to some problems that cannot be solved for the time being, we should explain this to the intellectuals.

Actually, as long as we have a clear objective, adopt an active attitude and proceed in a down-to-earth manner, we can carry out the present inspection work well. In this respect, we should learn from the experience of the Haizhu district committee of Guangzhou Municipality. Leading comrades of this district committee and the inspection groups went to the basic-level units concerned to listen to the opinions raised by more than 500 middle-rank medical and engineering as well as technical personnel through forums, private talks and family visits. More than 90 percent of the medical and engineering as well as technical personnel aired their opinions through these activities. Moreover, leading comrades of this district and the inspection groups solved problems while carrying out their inspection. With regard to some problems which remained unsolved for a long time because of the "leftist" ideological influence, they adopted firm measures to remove the obstacles to solve them properly. We should learn from the serious and conscientious attitude, the spirit of seeking truth from facts and the painstaking and careful work style of the Haizhu district committee. In so doing, we will effectively carry out the present inspection work from start to finish.

YANGCHENG WANBAO ON 'NO INTEREST IN LEARNING'

hk141254 Guangzhou YANGCHENG WANBAO in Chinese 7 Jul 82 p 2

[Article by Cao Xun (2580 6598): "The Problem of 'No Interest in Learning' Urgently Needs To Be Solved"]

[Text] At present, when discussing the existing problems in middle school education, the problem of one-sided pursuit of a higher proportion of students entering shcools of a higher grade is often mentioned by people. True, the problem of one-sided pursuit of a higher proportion of students entering schools of a higher grade must be resolved. But in my opinion, the problem of "no interest in learning" existing among middle school students is a prominent one which urgently needs to be solved.

The problem of one-sided pursuit of a higher proportion of students entering schools of a higher grade usually exists in key middle schools. However, the key middle schools constitute only a minority, and not all of them one-sidedly pursue a higher proportion of students entering schools of a higher grade. If there is such an erroneous tendency, it is not difficult to correct. What is more widespread and more serious is the problem of "no interest in learning" which causes a malignant circle in every aspect and interferes with the overall implementation of education policies and the construction of the motherland's four modernizations. It is not at all easy to correct it.

It is true that since the smashing of the "gang of four," there has appeared a new mood on campus, order in teaching has already been established, and the enthusiasm of the teachers has been aroused in general. Many young students study hard and some top students with good scores have appeared. This is the main aspect, which is gratifying. Nevertheless, we must also see the ungratifying side. Going to school every day does not mean that the students study hard. Some middle school students just kill time by going to school. They think everything will be all right after graduation and they can find outlets themselves. As a result, classes are chaotic in some schools and the students talk, doze off and behave improperly when attending class. This is in conformity with the saying: "Earnest teaching brings scornful reaction."

According to statistics on entrance exam results of new enrollees in Guangzhou in recent years, primary school graduates with very low marks were enrolled by some junior middle schools, while junior middle school graduates with even lower marks were enrolled by some senior middle schools. Because of the bad results, low starting points and the great disparity in the levels of students, some students are unable to keep up with the teaching pace of the class and did not understand what was taught. They have a hard time in classrooms. To them, days drag by like years. Only 4 percent of all senior middle school graduates can enter universities and colleges. The remaining 96 percent have to work in different posts on various fronts in any kind of trade. A low cultural level is not conductive to the construction of the motherland's four modernizations.

It must be pointed out that "no interest in learning" should not be purely and solely regarded as a phenomenon connected only with the problem of intellectual education. As a matter of fact, it is also closely connected with the problem of moral education. We must admit that some of the students who achieve good results are bad ideologically and morally. Nevertheless, they only constitute a minority. As for the case of "no interest in learning" leading to ideological and moral degeneration, it is very common. Students who have no interest in learning are usually those who have no great ambitions, lack mental and spiritual ballast, lead a bored life, cheat on examinations and do not abide by discipline and rules. Some young people embark on the road of commiting crimes from the starting point of "no interest in learning." Therefore, whether the problem of "no interest in learning" can be resolved or not is something concerning the overall implementation of the party's educational policies and the remolding of morality in school and the society, as well as the building of material civilization and spiritual civilization in the future, and should not be looked down upon.

There are many reasons for the emergence of "no interest in learning," which many educational personnel are still exploring. Some hold that it is the pernicious influence of the 10 years of chaos as well as a new reflection of the fallacy that "there is no use in learning" under the influence of "everything is for money." Some hold that it has to do with assignment after graduation and the recruiting system. Some even hold that the present syllabus is too difficult for those students of medium and low ability, who are unable to follow it. Whatever the main reason, these are but objective reasons. We must, from the angle of school education, find out more subjective reasons so as to provide comprehensive treatment and solve the problems completely.

Leaders of some schools blame all this on objective reasons, saying: "Education is not omnipotent." This saying is not wrong, but education is not useless either. There is an ancient saying: "A new world appears at the very end of the mountain. Talented people appear in hard times." We are facing many difficulties, which force us to be determined and find more methods. Students are taught by others and they are malleable mentally. The key lies in the leaders and teachers. After exchanging ideas with some comrades in the educational field, I am advancing some suggestions for reference.

1. It is necessary for the education departments and school leaders to grasp the problem of "no interest in learning" as a prominent one at present in the overall implementation of the party's education policies. They must do thorough and practical work in investigation and research, and analyze the source and discover effective methods. They must go all out and mobilize the teachers, staff and workers of the whole school to offer advice for the solution of these problems.

2. Taking education as a whole, work must be started at the primary school stage. At the middle school stage, work must be started from junior middle school. As for grades, work must be started from grade 1. This is a basic method to eliminate the vicious circle.

3. At present a low-level syllabus is being used in some schools. This is a good method. If it is difficult to compile another syllabus, we can, on the basis of the general syllabus, start teaching from the easiest part regardless of normal progress. In daily teaching and learning, we may lower the standard of giving marks. We must praise and encourage mainly those students whose foundation is extremely low. Everything must be done in accordance with practice. What can be understood and accepted by students is a good syllabus. Improving students' understanding step by step is a good teaching method.

4. We must strengthen the cultural and physical activities outside class to improve the middle school students' boring and dull life. It is necessary to keep them active both mentally and physically, to broaden their knowledge, and ensure they care for the collectives and love their schools, and thus develop morally, intellectually and physically.

5. We must earnestly strengthen the building of the contingent of teachers. Comrade Hu Yaobang has set high demands on people's teachers: "They must have a wide range of knowledge. They must understand educational science. They must have noble integrity." So long as every teacher tries to attain this objective, the party's educational cause will have hopeful prospects.

6. Spiritual and material rewards must be offered to those schools, cadres, teachers in charge of classes and ordinary teachers for rapidly changing the status of "no interest in learning." We must help them sum up experiences and spread them instantly. There are many awards in many fields, such as awards for science, literature, inventions, and novels, hundred flowers awards for films, and gold cups in sports, but no award for education. It is unfair to treat it differently. I would like to take this opportunity to add a few words to draw people's attention to the cause of education.

It all depends on human efforts. There are many methods. We believe that the situation of "no interest in learning" will certainly be changed and our educational cause will become more prosperous than ever before.

LIU JIE AT HENAN MEETING ON CIVILIZATION DRIVE

HK120214 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Summary] A Henan provincial symposium on the "five stresses and four beauties" drive concluded on 11 July. The meeting, which opened on 29 June, was attended by comrades responsible for propaganda work in all parts of the province. Provincial CCP committee First Secretary Liu Jie and Secretary Zhang Shude made speeches. Song Yuxi, member of the standing committee of the provincial CCP committee and director of the propaganda department, outlined arrangements for propaganda work in the second half of the year.

"The participants seriously studied important speeches of leading central comrades on building the two civilizations and strengthening ideological and political work. They inspected progressive typical examples in the 'five stresses and four beauties' drive in Luoyang and Zhengzhou Municipalities, summed up and exchanged experiences and achievements in launching this drive, and emphatically studied the questions of how to step up education in communist ideology and further promote the 'five stresses and four beauties' drive, to make it a regular and systematic affair."

Leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee Liu Jie, Dai Suli, Li Qingwei, Zhang Shude, Yu Yichuan, Li Baoguang, Han Jingcao, Song Yuxi, Wang Bingzhang and Guo Tan attended the concluding session on 11 July. Comrade Liu Jie made a speech. He said: The province has made new progress in building socialist spiritual civilization focused on the "five stresses and four beauties" drive. Notable success has been scored in dealing with the problems of dirt, disorder, and poor service. Liu Jie made the following demands on conducting education in communist ideology and building spiritual civilization in the future:

"1. Education in communist ideology must be closely linked to current socialist practice. We must make long-term plans and short-term arrangements by carrying out investigation and study, and continually put forward new demands and aims. Thus this activity should gradually advance from a low to high level.

"2. Actively and correctly apply the method of education by typical examples and launch an extensive drive to learn from and catch up with the progressives.

"3. It is necessary to stress education and guidance for young people, and help them to strengthen their faith in communism, so that our party's glorious traditions can be passed on from generation to generation.

"4. Party committees at all levels must regard the building of spiritual civilization as a regular main task, strengthen leadership over it and combine the forces of all sectors to fight a general battle."

The meeting demanded that the party members, cadres and masses encourage an upsurge in learning from the communist fighter Zhao Chune. This drive should be patterned on the activities to learn from Lei Feng and Jiao Yulu. "During July and August we must launch concentrated education for party members in opposing corruption by bourgeois ideology and upholding communist ideology. During the activities to mark Army Day, we should conduct education in patriotism for the people throughout the province. In the second half of this year, we must continue to do a good job in solving problems of bad service quality and attitude. In August we should launch a summer patriotic public health drive in the urban and rural areas. Among young people and juveniles, we must continue to launch the activities to learn from Lei Feng and establish new styles." Around National Day, the province should carry out activities to tidy up and preserve social order. "The province should achieve a further turn for the better in solving the problem of disorder."

HUNAN PARTY GRASSROOTS REORGANIZATION MEETING

HK210607 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 20 Jul 82

[Text] The Organization Department of the Hunan Provincial CCP Committee recently held a forum of responsible comrades from various prefectural and municipal CCP committee organization departments and the provincial and prefectural economic committee financial offices. The forum urged all places to do a better job of rectifying the grassroots party organizations. The forum conveyed the spirit of the forum of the Organization Department of the CCP Central Committee on rectifying the grassroots party organizations, and summed up the province's work in rectifying the grassroots party organizations in the preceding stage.

The meeting held: At present, the province has obtained certain results in rectifying the grassroots party organizations and has obtained and accumulated preliminary experiences. Most of our province's grassroots party organizations are good or relatively good. However, different ideological political and organizational problems exist in some grassroots party organizations. In addition, the state of laxness and weakness is serious in certain grassroots party organizations. A small number of grassroots party organizations are in a state of paralysis and semiparalysis, and some individual grassroots party organizations have already become rotten. Thus, further rectifying the grassroots party organizations by exercising leadership in a planned way is an urgent and important task of party organizations at all levels at present. Party committees at all levels must include this important task in their daily agenda, work in close connection with production and other kinds of work, and practically do a good job of rectifying the grassroots party organizations.

The meeting stressed: In rectifying the grassroots party organizations, it is necessary to uphold the principle of attaching major importance to ideological rectification and stress education. We must take grasping the party members' ideological education as a step toward grasping the central unity of rectifying the grassroots party organizations. We must work in connection with the actual ideological situation of the party members, strengthen education in communist ideals and morality among the party members, carry out education in the party's line, principles and policies, carry out education in opposing bourgeois ideology, remnant feudal ideology and corruption by other nonproletarian ideologies, and carry out education in the party's basic knowledge. On the basis of improving their knowledge, we must lead the party members to carry out criticism and self-criticism with the spirit of rectification and strive to become qualified Communist Party members with good communist ideology.

The meeting pointed out: The key to rectifying the grassroots party organizations lies in rectifying and building a good leadership group. In the course of rectification, the leadership group of the grassroots party organizations must take the lead in correcting their ideology and work style. It is necessary to readjust and equip the leadership groups according to the principle of maintaining a simple structure and to the demands for revolutionary, young, learned and professional personnel. We must seriously promote the practice of dividing work between the party and the government, and overcome the phenomena in which party organizations are preoccupied with administrative affairs and not minding the party's affairs. We must adopt a cautious attitude toward organization.

In rectifying the grassroots party organizations this time, we are not going to adopt the method of promoting mass campaigns. However, we must seriously follow the mass line and seriously take the advice and criticism of the masses. We must maintain a high standard in rectification, and the general sign of a good rectification is that the leadership role of the party committees, the role of the fighting force of the party branch and the exemplary roles of the party members are brought into play.

During the meeting, Comrade Zhao Chuqi, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, attended and spoke.

PROGRESS IN BORDER AREAS IN XIZANG REPORTED

[Text] Lhasa, July 5 (XINHUA) -- More than 170 million yuan has been allocated since 1979 by the government of the Tibet Autonomous Region to aid production in the border areas and improve the living standards of the people, according to financial authorities in the region.

Speed of development of production in Tibet's border areas, which are sparsely populated and hardly accessible, has caught up with and in some cases surpassed other of the region's areas in the last two years. Average per-capita income in 18 of the 22 border counties topped that of the region as a whole last year.

The average per-capita income in Gar and Rutog Counties in the western border section reached 463 yuan and 451 yuan, ranking first and second among all counties in Tibet.

Peasants and herdsmen in the border areas have adequate grain, meat and edible oil, and most of them wear neat and warm clothing. Many families have personal savings.

The improved living standards have drawn more and more Tibetan people back from abroad. Fifty-four families totaling 169 persons have come back to settle down in Zhongba County in the past three years. The local government follows the policy of protecting their property, returning original property to the owners and making appropriate arrangements for those who formerly had no houses or property.

The autonomous region has adopted a series of measures to give more preferential treatment to people in the border areas to boost the development of the economy and culture. Special and flexible policies are pursued and residents there have more autonomy.

The period of exemption of agricultural and animal husbandry taxes, which began in 1980, has been extended to the end of 1985 and that for collective or individual industrial and commercial taxes to the end of June of 1984, one year longer than in non-border areas. Tax rates will be lower than in other areas when they are collected in the future. Peasants and herdsmen in border areas may have more private plots and animals than in other areas.

People in the border areas enjoy free medical care and free film shows. Prevention and control of plant and animal diseases and insect pests is financed by the government. Children's school fees including food, clothing and board are paid by the state, and subsidies are given to peasants who build their own houses.

The transportation system, small hydropower stations, and cultural and health facilities are gradually being built by the state. Now 21 of the 22 border counties and 83 percent of the communes have motor roads, and 135 small hydropower stations have been built. Every county has its own hospital.

The people in border areas are encouraged to use local resources and develop a diversified economy and sideline production.

Barter trade along the border has been resumed to help the economy. This trade amounted to 3.66 million yuan in 1981, averaging 33 yuan per person, according to statistics from nine border counties.

BRIEFS

YUNNAN PREFECTURE'S GRAIN PROCUREMENT -- Despite natural disasters, Yuxi Prefecture reaped a bumper harvest of spring-harvested crops and commune members actively sold grain and oil-bearing crops to the state. By 20 June the whole prefecture had stored 30.6 million jin of spring-harvested crops in granaries, fulfilling 95.6 percent of the quote for grain procurement. The prefecture had procured 20.8 million jin of rapeseed, overfulfilling the quota base for procurement by nearly 200 percent. Jiangchuan and Yimen Counties have fulfilled their quotas for procurement of spring-harvested crops and oil-bearing crops. BEIJING CCP COMMITTEE URGES ECONOMIC CRIME FIGHT

HK220410 Beijing City Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 13 Jul 82

[Text] In order to wage the struggle of thoroughly dealing severe blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field, the Beijing Municipal CCP committee has demanded that the CCP committees at prefectural and county levels in the whole municipality further enhance their understanding, overcome laxness and give priority to investigating major cases. Leading officals of the CCP committees must personally take care of the key cases and strive to score significant results in investigating major cases in July and August. This demand of the municipal CCP committee was put forth at the meeting of leading cadres of all party members in the municipality held yesterday [13 July]. Municipal CCP committee First Secretary Duan Junyi attended and spoke.

The meeting pointed out: Since the municipal CCP committee held a municipal discipline inspection work conference on 20 May, laxness in work has been changed and the leadership of the CCP committee has been strengthened. However, a small number of units have not thoroughly overcome laxness in work. The meeting emphatically pointed out: The key to overcoming obstruction, laxness in work and waging the struggle in a thorough manner lies in having the leading officials of the CCP committees at all levels personally be responsible for the matter and assign special personnel to take care of major cases and carry out investigations. In order to strengthen leadership, the municipal CCP committee has divided the work for the first secretary and the standing committee members so as to directly investigate and handle the major cases. The meeting demanded that the departmental and committee offices of the municipal people's government and the leading cadres at the prefectural, county and bureau levels also divide up the work and share the responsibility, organize the masses and adopt effective measures to fulfill the task within a fixed period of time.

The meeting demanded that the CCP committees at all levels and the discipline inspection departments sum up the work of dealing severe blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field in the past 6 months, find out where they have lagged behind, enhance their understanding and put forth plans for the future so as to wage the struggle in a thorough manner.

BEIJING RADIO ON ANTICORRUPTION EDUCATION

[Station commentary: "We Must Have a Firm and Good Grasp of Anticorruption Education and Always Maintain the Purity of Party Members and Communism"]

[Text] Recently the Beijing Municipal CCP Committee decided to launch an extensive ideological and education drive among all party members in the municipality to oppose capitalist corruption and uphold communism. This is not only an important step for further implementing the CCP Central Committee's decision on dealing severe blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field, but is also an effective measure to completely enhance the communist political consciousness of all party members and also enhance their ability to fight against corruption and to strengthen party building. At present, since our country is implementing the policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy, some lawless elements have seized the opportunity to carry out activities that sabotage the socialist economy, while those who are weak-willed are corrupted. This is a major manifestation of the class struggle in the economic field. All party members who dedicate their lives to the struggle for communism must not lower their guard in the face of the new situation in the class struggle.

What merits our attention is that some party members do not have a profound understanding of the seriousness of and harm caused by the existing criminal activities in the economic field. Furthermore, they do not have a clear understanding of the necessity, urgency and protracted nature of preventing peaceful evolution and opposing degeneration. Some people mistakenly say that the criminal activities in the economic field are the consequences of the policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy. Some other people hold that if we have done a good job in economic work and if the people's standard of living improves, then the people's political consciousness will naturally be enhanced. It is obvious that such views are erroneous. The ongoing ideological and educational drive to oppose capitalist corruption and uphold communism is to guide the broad ranks of party members to integrate the actual situation with the studies of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, to carry out lively and specific ideological education among party members, to completely enhance the communist political consciousness of all party members and to strengthen their ability to prevent degeneration and corruption so that they will not become perturbed or become covetous in the face of money and material temptations, and will uphold the party's basic purpose of serving the people under all circumstances, will always bear in mind the lofty communist ideal, will set good examples for the masses to follow, will seriously implement the party's principles and policies, will uphold the socialist orientation and will strive to do a good job of building the capital and realizing the four modernizations of the motherland.

Most of our party members are good. Experiences have proved that our party will move one step forward after a large-scale ideological and education drive. If the CCP committees at all levels seriously grasp the ideological and education drive and carry out meticulous work, we are sure that the expected results will be achieved.

BEIJING WRITERS CALL FOR STUDY OF MARXISM

[Excerpt] Beijing, 19 Jul (XINHUA) -- At a meeting held recently, the professional writers in Beijing Municipality said: As a writer, to develop socialist spiritual civilization one must earnestly study Marxist theories, incessantly improve oneself ideologically, strengthen self-cultivation and set good examples in developing spiritual civilization. The Beijing Municipal Federation of Literary and Art Circles and the Beijing chapter of the Chinese Writers Association recently sponsored a study and discussion meeting of professional writers. Nearly 30 writers assiduously studied the 15 letters written by Comrade Mao Zedong to the people in the field of literature and Comrade Chen Yun's speech entitled "On the Question of Two Tendencies Among the Party's Literary and Art Workers" and related documents. All the writers attending the meeting exchanged their experiences and conducted discussions in close connection with the actual situation. An important theme under discussion was how to help writers improve themselves ideologically and strengtehn their self-cultivation.

Many writers pointed out: The party and people have imposed stringent demands on and placed high hopes in writers. During the new historical period, the writers have shouldered the arduous task of developing socialist spiritual civilization. They must have a fine spiritual outlook. To raise our political and ideological level and strengthen our self-cultivation in all fields is an important task confronting us. They said: We must realize that the pernicious influence of the "leftist" fallacies has not been completely eliminated in the literary field, and bourgeois liberalism still prevails among some individuals. Some people have shown complacency and sought privileges. In their speeches, many writers emphatically pointed out: In order to improve themselves ideologically, the writers must strengthen their efforts in the study of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought. At the study and discussion meeting, all the writers also offered many useful suggestions on how to combat liberalism, factionalism, sectarianism and the tendency of scholars to scorn each other. They pointed out: The key lies in combating and overcoming individualism. The principal method is to conduct criticism and self-criticism.

BEIJING WANBAO ON LI DIAN, 'THREE KINGDOMS'

HK161028 Beijing BEIJING WANBAO in Chinese 6 Jul 82 p 3

["Words of a Hundred Schools" column by Yu Sui: "The Style of Li Dian"]

[Text] Li Dian, a general under Cao Cao, was both brave and wise. In "Three Kingdoms" he was praised as a general with the same matchless courage as Zhang Liao and Xu Zhu, but he displayed his unique work style and broadmindedness in always being willing to be a subordinate and to play a supporting role and in always being a man of foresight and sagacity. After Cao Cho wiped out Yuan Shao and annexed Jazhou, Cao Cao ordered Cao Ren and Li Dian to garrison in Fancheng and make preparations to attack Jingzhou and Xiangyang. At that time, Liu Bei was an appendage to Liu Biao and garrisoned in Xinye. Cao Ren attacked Xinye and suffered severe losses. He discussed with Li Dian the way to seek revenge. After a careful study of the situation, Li Dian explained to Cao Ren the principle of "a general who knows both the enemy and his own troops never loses a war" and expressed his objection to taking reckless actions. Cao Ren rejected Li's advice and called Li "a coward." Li remained calm and still obeyed the order of launching attacks. However, because he deeply knew the strength of the enemy, he once more suggested that the attacks be stopped and expressed his worries about Fancheng. He was nearly put to death by Cao Ren for the offense of "lowering the morale of the troops" because of his honest advice, circumspection and foresight. When Cao Ren personally led the attack and suffered serious defeat, he began to believe in Li Dian's penetrating insight. However, he again refused to listen to Li's advice and clung to recklessly attacking the enemy garrison at night. As a result, almost his entire army was wiped out and the principal garrison at Fancheng was lost. Facts proved that Li Dian was correct. Adhering to the principles and seeking truth from facts and at the same time working hard without being upset by criticism and disregarding his personal safety and interests was one aspect of what we call Li Dian's work style.

After Cao Cao was defeated at Chibi, he ordered Zhang Liao, Li Dian and Yuejing to garrison Hefei and counter Sun Quan. Zhang and Li hated another. Zhang Liao felt depressed because he lost Fancheng. At that time, Sun Quan came with his main forces to attack Hefei. This made Zhang resolutely decide to take the initiative and launch an attack. Seeing that the generals under him were apprehensive of the enemy, Zhang Liao angrily shouted that he would go alone and "fight a life and death battle" with Sun Quan. At that time, Li Dian stood up and generously said: "Since you are so resolute, how can I forget my duty because of personal enmity? I am willing to obey your command." He gave tremendous support to the commander in chief at this critical juncture. As a result, the troops defeated the superior forces of the enemy and achieved a great victory. Taking the whole situation into account, acting selflessly, forgetting an old hatred against his colleague in fighting against the common enemy is the second aspect of Li Dian's work style.

In "Three Kingdoms," the small number of paragraphs that describe Li Dian's modesty, prudence, magnitude and constant devotion to his duty as a subordinate are very vivid. According to the history book "History of the Three Kingdoms," Li Dian never pursued fame or gain; on the contrary, he thought that he himself "was not wise or brave enough and had achieved few merits, but had received too much distinction and favor." The book comments that he "was fond of learning and inquiring into things, valued learning and accomplishments, refrained from contending for merits, respected scholars, and was always modest, as if he had not done enough things in performing his duties. Therefore, he was called 'an elder' by the troops." The book also praises him especially for "forgetting personal enmity in performing his duties." In fact, Li Dian, who was called "an elder," died when he was only 36. This proved that he had great ability of self-control at an age when ordinary people are not regarded as being mature. Li Dian's work style provides us with something to think about and learn from.

LIN HUJIA VISITS HEILONGJIANG DAIRY FARM

SK220222 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] According to HEILONGJIANG RIBAO, during his inspection tour in Anda County, Lin Hujia, minister of agriculture, animal husbandry and fishery, paid a special visit to (Liu Xiwu's) home. He had signed a contract for specialized jobs and fully affirmed the household's achievements scored in becoming prosperous through labor and engaging in specialized production.

Accompanied by (Ma Lin), secretary of the Anda County CCP Committee, and other personnel, on 7 July Comrade Lin Hujia happened to meet (Liu Xiwu), who was herding his milk cows beside the highway while the delegation was on their way to visit him. After hearing his briefings on the experience gained by the household in becoming prosperous through labor and raising milk cows, Lin Hujia intentionally encouraged him that he could rest assured in boldly doing work and that he should never be slack. His family, which has signed a contract for specialized jobs, should take the lead in succeeding in raising milk cows to contribute as much milk to the state.

(Liu Xiwu) is a commune member of (Shuben) brigade in (Dongben) Commune, Anda County, and of the 8-member family. Several years ago, his family was one of the households which were heavily in debt and had a 2,000-yuan deficit. In early 1979 he borrowed some money to buy a black-white milk cow which produced 7.5 tons of fresh milk in 1980, from which he amassed over 2,000 yuan of net income. Last spring his family signed a 3-year milk cow raising contract with the brigade authorities and took five cows from the brigade.

Also attending the meeting on invitation were Yang Shoushan, responsible comrade of the Central Patriotic Sanitation Campaign Committee, deputy majors of 15 big cities including Beijing and Shanghai, and responsible comrades of the patriotic sanitation campaign offices of 24 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions in the county.

The participants earnestly studied the important directive of the party Central Committee on the building of a spiritual civilization and heard reports delivered by the leading comrades of the Central Patriotic Sanitation Campaign Committee and the provincial government and reports introducing the experiences of Harbin and other provinces and municipalities in carrying out patriotic sanitation work in urban areas.

Li Jianbai, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and chairman of the provincial patriotic sanitation office, set forth concrete demands on our province's patriotic sanitation work at today's closing ceremony. He said all localities must earnestly implement the guidelines of the minutes of the summing-up meeting on the all-people civility and courtesy month campaign, actively study and promote the experiences of Harbin and other fraternal provinces and municipalities. While mobilizing the masses to participate in the regular sanitation activities, we must stress the disposal of garbage. All 12 municipalities in the province must fulfill their daily trash removal work, strengthen night soil management, completely remove night soil pits in the urban areas and solve the problems of open-air lavatories.

Efforts must be made to repair ruined streets and lanes and, within a short period of time, rebuild all dirt roads near the central district as soon as possible. We must further improve the appearance of urban areas, shops, factories and schools and improve the sanitary conditions in downtown areas and tourist spots.

We must do a good job in planting trees, beautifying the environment and reducing environmental pollution, actively eliminating the four pests and dealing with the breeding places of flies and mosquitoes in order to reduce the incidence of infectious diseases.

QIANG XIAOCHU AT JILIN ECONOMIC CRIME CONFERENCE

SK180440 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] According to JILIN RIBAO, on the evening of 16 July the provincial CCP committee convened a telephone conference on deepening the crackdown on serious crimes in the economic field. The conference urged party committees at all levels in the province, especially the principal leading comrades of party committees and leading party groups of the various municipalities, prefectures and the provincial level organizations, to take personal charge in investigating and dealing with major, key cases and to further carry out the crackdown in depth.

Li Diping, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, spoke on behalf of the provincial CCP committee. He examined and summed up the crackdown on economic crime in the province during the past half year and put forward suggestions on ways to further carry out this struggle in depth.

Qiang Xiaochu, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee, spoke at the conference.

The provincial CCP committee held that the crackdown on economic crime has developed on a sound basis in the past half year and great results have been achieved. However, this still falls far short of what the party Central Committee has demanded of us and many problems remain. To implement the guidelines of relevant central instructions and further carry on the crackdown in depth and on a sound basis, party committees at all levels must study anew the relevant documents issued by the party Central Committee and State Council, enhance their understanding of the great significance of this struggle, overcome barriers and remove all obstacles, step up their leadership in earnest and put it high on their agenda.

A successful crackdown on serious economic crimes is of great importance to the party. Every uni , regardless of its level, must attend to it. From the provincial CCP committee down to party committees and leading party groups at all levels -- especially their number one men -- must step up leadership over the investigation of major, key cases. They should strive to overcome barriers and remove obstacles to speed up the investigation of major, key cases.

Efforts should be made to introduce the three-fix and one-guarantee system. The three-fix means fixing leadership responsibility, personnel and a time limit; and units assigned the job must guarantee its success. We must score some achievements in a short period of time to further push forward this crackdown.

Those involved in economic crimes must be thoroughly investigated, no matter who they are. Those who erect obstacles must be resolutely struggled against and severely punished. We must not let criminals and those who violate law and discipline get away with it. Moreover, we should closely integrate the crackdown on serious economic crime with the consolidation of the party's style of work, the consolidation of enterprises and the improvement of our work. With the crackdown on economic crime as a breakthrough, we should strive to rectify the party's style of work, take the lead in promoting social morality, improve public security and promote production as is called for in the work outline for 1982 adopted by the provincial CCP committee.

Yu Ke, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, presided over the meeting. Mu Lin and Chen Mong, standing committee members of the provincial CCP committee, and Cha Minqiao, vice chairman of the provincial CPPCC committee, attended the meeting.

JILIN VIEWS CRACKDOWN ON ECONOMIC CRIMES

SK190022 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Excerpts] During the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic sphere, leading comrades of the prefectural and county party committees in Baicheng Prefecture have personally grasped major and important cases and expedited the regional struggle against economic crimes by adopting the method of assigning leaders and personnel to take charge of the work, meting out measures and setting time limits for handling cases.

Prior to 1 May, five counties and cities held open trials to give lenient punishment to 7 criminals and severe punishment to 14. To date, 120 criminals in the prefecture have surrendered themselves, confessed their crimes openly and returned to the state illegal gains valued at 121,095 yuan and illicit money totalling 89,071 yuan. This struggle is making headway in the region and has shown noticeable success. By early June, Baicheng Prefecture as a whole had exposed 565 economic cases, of which 26 cases were involved in illegal gains valued at over 1,000 yuan. Illegal transactions and gains of individuals valued at 5.9 million yuan were recovered, of which 750,000 yuan came from the individuals' illegal gains obtained through embezzlement, bribery, profiteering and swindling. This prefecture has investigated and completed handling 80 cases, of which 46 cases were involved in illegal gains worth some 1,000 yuan. Twenty-one criminals were arrested according to law. Eleven persons were sentenced to prison terms and 430,000 yuan of illicit money was recovered.

LIAONING MEETING ON HANDLING ECONOMIC CRIMES

SK211223 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 20 Jul 82

[Text] In Donggou County from 16-18 July the provincial people's procuratorate held an on-the-spot meeting on handling major and important economic cases. It was attended by the procuratorial organs in the province. The meeting studied and analyzed the situation of the provincial procuratorial organs in dealing blows at economic crimes and in handling the major and important cases and set forth demands on the work of the next step.

The meeting held that for the first half of this year, the situation of the provincial procuratorial organs in dealing blows at economic crimes and in handling major and important cases is good. During the January-June period, our province placed 1,350 cases on file for investigation and prosecution, handled 600 major and important cases, and investigated and dealt with a number of criminals who have committed serious crimes. All localities, through handling cases, have recovered illicit money and illegal gains valued at 1.7 million yuan.

The meeting held that the current struggle against economic crimes is just in its initial stage and our work still falls short of the demands of the central authorities. All localities must do a good job in investigating and handling major and important cases and must guard against the mentality of "just about right" and the mood of relaxation. In addition, we must strictly distinguish between what is a crime and what is not. In investigating and handling cases, we must see to it that all the facts are at hand, the evidence is verified and has not been exaggerated and that it can stand the test of history. We must make a contribution to winning a success in the struggle against economic criminals.

NINGXIA PEOPLE'S CONGRESS SESSION CONCLUDES

Li Xuezhi Speech

HK100618 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 2 Jul 82 pp 1, 3

[Speech by Li Xuezhi at closing ceremony of Fourth Session of Fourth Ningxia Regional People's Congress]

[Excerpts] Deputies, comrades: The Fourth Session of the Fourth Ningxia Regional People's Congress is concluding today. Deputies, building a high degree of socialist material and spiritual civilization represents two great targets of endeavor in building China into a powerful modern country. Proceeding from these two great targets, our central tasks today area: to continue to implement the spirit of the sixth plenary session, seriously carry out the 10 guiding principles on economic construction, grasp the building of material civilization with one hand and the building of spiritual civilization with the other, and achieve relatively satisfactory results in building these two civilizations. Specifically speaking, apart from promoting economic work centered on readjustment, we must concentrate on four main tasks:

1. Reform the administrative structure and the systems. The reform, amalgamation and readjustment of the central party and government organs is now initially complete. Our main task is to carry out investigations and studies and strive to produce by yearend a relatively mature readjustment scheme suited to the region's characteristics, in preparation for carrying out reforms next year. We must brace our spirits, work with ease of mind and stay firm at our posts throughout the entire process of reforming the administrative structure. This is also a big test for everyone.

2. Hit at serious economic crime. This is a severe class struggle. The party and government at all levels must attach a high degree of importance to this struggle and strengthen leadership over it. We must further organize the cadres and masses to study and comprehend the "urgent circular" of the central authorities, the "decision" of the CCP Central Committee and State Council, and the "decision" of the NPC Standing Committee. The first of these is the outline program guiding us in launching the struggle, and the latter two are effective legal weapons. We must personally work to grasp the key points and concentrate on hitting at serious economic crimes such as smuggling and peddling contraband, engaging in bribery and corruption, profiteering and swindling, and theft of state and collective property. We must concentrate on investigating and handling certain major cases and cases involving leading cadres, and solve them as quickly as possible.

3. Launch the "five stresses and four beauties" drive and promote the building of socialist spiritual civilization.

4. Rectify the party and its work style, and strengthen and improve party leadership. This is the key main task. Today is the 61st anniversary of the founding of the CCP. It is all the more significant and important to talk on this issue today, a day of commemorative meaning.

In the past half century and more, our party has engaged in arduous pioneering and heroic struggle in leading the Chinese people to continually advance from one victory to another. It enjoys very high prestige in the country. During the "Great Cultural Revolution," the party's image was damaged, its combat effecgiveness was weakened and its work style was ruined. Hence the most fundamental thing is strengthening and improving party leadership is to rectify the party and its work style and revive and carry forward the party's fine traditions and work style.

The seventh party congress stipulated the party's three great work styles of linking theory with reality, keeping close ties with the masses and practicing criticism and self-criticism. These are the concentrated expression of the party's fine traditions and work style, and must be revived and carried forward. We must regularly conduct for the party members, especially the leading cadres at all levels, education in Marxist theory, in party spirit, discipline and work style, in opposing corruption by capitalist ideology, in opposing corrosion and degeneracy, and in avoiding "peaceful evolution," so as to enhance the party's level of ideological theory and maintain the party's proletarian nature and its progressiveness and combat spirit, and the purity of the party members.

Party building, armed struggle and the united front are the three great magic weapons by which our party persists in struggle and carries out revolution. We can never discard them. Party leadership determines everything in our country. Party building is related to the future of the state and the accomplishment of the four modernizations. The party organizations at all levels must strengthen ideological and organizational building and do a good job in building our party. Here I want to stress the question of party unity. This is an extremely important question. Unity is strength, unity is victory, unity is more important than anything! We must strengthen party unity and cherish it as we cherish our own lives. This is the fundamental guarantee for victory in revolution. Of course, this unity is built on the foundation of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and on the principles of revolution. It is unity on the basis of the line of the third plenary session and the "Resolution" of the sixth plenary session. It is not unprinciplied unity. Comrades must trust and support each other and strengthen unity. We must pursue great unity and shun factionalism. We must strengthen party spirit and the sense of organization and discipline and overcome individualism and the trend of bourgeois liberalization. We must continue to eliminate the influence of the ultraleftist ideology of Lin Biao and the "gang of four," enforce the law impartially, promote the public interest without any thought for our own, give no thought to personal gains or losses or allow ourselves to be swayed by personal feelings, overcome all non-proletarian ideas, correct the party work style and promote party unity. The old comrades must do well in passing on their experience, giving help and setting an example in this respect. Armed struggle is another great magic weapon in the victory of China's revolution. Our party has always attached great importance to the building of the armed forces. Since the third plenary session, under the leadership of the Central Military Commission and Vice Chairman Deng, the commanders and fighters have stepped up political and military training and greatly enhanced their political and military qualities. This point was also evident from the recent combat exercise with live ammunition staged by the units at a certain place in Ningxia. We must continue to carry forward the glorious tradition from the war years of the army chreshing the people, the people supporting the army, and the army and people being as close as fish and water, do a thoroughly good job in supporting the work of the PLA units in every respect, strengthen army-government and army-people unity, do a good job in supporting the army and giving preferential treatment to its dependents, promote militia work, and ensure that our army smoothly advances along the orientation of revolutionization, modernization and regularization. As for the question of the united front, the central authorities clearly pointed in their circular on the publication of the "minutes of the national united front work conference": "The united front remains a magic weapon of our party in carrying out the three great tasks of the 1980's and throughout the entire new historical period of building a powerful modern socialist country." Every comrade must firmly embrace this viewpoint in his mind. This matter should arouse still greater attention in Ningxia, an autonomous area where the Huis are the main nationality. For many years the democratic parties and the non-party figures, patriotic religious figures and intellectuals, experts and scholars have made beneficial contributions to the people's cause and established profound friendship with our party. We must cherish this friendship and contribute our strength to accomplishing the three main tasks for the 1980's and building a modern socialist motherland. We must seriously study and implement the central authorities' "minutes of the national united front work conference," "basic viewpoints and policies on religious issues in our country during the socialist period," and the circular on inspecting work concerning intellectuals, correctly implement the party's policies on the united front, nationalities, religion and intellectuals, develop the excellent situation of stability and unity, and build Ningxia into a united, harmonious, prosperous and civilized autonomous region.

The Central Committee pays great attention to and is very concerned about construction in Ningxia. A leading central comrade recently instructed us to consolidate and develop the fruits of our rest and buildup of strength, and plant trees, grass and shrubs on a large scale. He also pointed out that this is the most important item of capital construction in the economic transformation of Ningxia. He also said that if production is promoted, everything will sound good. We must seriously implement this, and work to promote production.

SHAANXI LIFTS TRACTOR PURCHASE BAN — Having cast off the influence of "leftist" thinking, the Lintong County CCP Committee and Government have now lifted the ban on the purchase of tractors by individual commune member households. By early July, the number of small tractors bought or jointly bought by individual households in the county exceeds 500, which accounts for one-third of the total number of small tractors in the county. In the past, many restrictions were imposed on private tractor purchases. No license was issued, and no fuel or spare parts were supplied for any private tractor. Last year, the county CCP committee and government carried out an investigation among commune member households and found that the old practice had seriously harmed commune members' initiative in production since the situation had been changed after the implementation of various forms of the responsibility system. Therefore, they decided to lift the ban on tractor purchase and to take appropriate measures to provide maintenance service to small-tractor owners. SHULTZ' CONFIRMATION STATEMENTS EXAMINED

[Article by CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO Washington special correspondent Fu Chien-Chung: "Sino-American Relations As Seen From Shultz Hearings"]

[Text] After 2 full days of public hearings, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has unanimously endorsed Shultz, who was nominated by President Reagan to succeed Haig, who stepped down as secretary of state. In any likelihood, Shultz' appointment will be approved by the full Senate today. As soon as he is sworn in, Dr Shultz, the 61-year old financial expert, will become the 60th secretary of state since the founding of the United States of America.

An unprecedented crisis in the relations between the Republic of China and the United States has emerged since the early part of May when U.S. Vice President Bush visited Peiping and released three letters from President Reagan to the Chinese Communist leaders. Before he left the State Department, Haig also tried to give others something to remember by suggesting Reagan limit both "qualitatively" and "quantitatively" future U.S. arms sale to Taiwan.

It goes without saying that the people from all strata in our country were very much worried when they heard the news. Even those friends in the United States supporting the Republic of China, especially conservative leaders, were indignant and demanded President Reagan repudiate Haig's proposal.

It was against this background that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee called a public hearing on the appointment of Mr Shultz. Thousands of people in the country would attach great importance to the viewpoint and stand taken by this future secretary of state with regard to China policy. In response to separate questioning by Senator Goldwater and Helms, Shultz presented rather clear views and gratifying answers on the future relations between the United States and the Republic of China, particularly with regard to the arms sale and the Taiwan Relations Act. The essence of Shultz' answers to questions raised by Gold[illegible]r and Helms in the past 2 days may be summed up as follows:

1. That arms supplies to Taiwa[illegible] be stopped after a certain limited period of time in the form of a "joint st[illegible]signed with the Chinese Communists.

2. That arms sales to Taiwan will be determined entirely on the basis of the provisions emoodied in the Taiwan Relations Act and Taiwan's defense needs and will not be interfered with by the Chinese Communists.

3. That in accordance with the U.S. Constitution, the portion of the Taiwan Relations Act that comes under U.S. law will be fully safeguarded and all provisions thereof will be faithfully fulfilled.

4. That the United States would sell aircraft to Taiwan if it is determined by the United States that they were needed for defensive purposes and that the secretary of state would propose to President Reagan the approval of the extension of the agreement to coproduce F-5E fighter aircraft in Taiwan as soon as possible.

5. That Shultz would consent to the fact that the United States did not formally recognize, in the "Shanghai Communique" and the "communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations," the Chinese Communists' political sovereignty over Taiwan.

6. That he would support the solution of the differences of opinions between Taiwan and the mainland should be solved by the Chinese people themselves, that any solution to that problem should be by peaceful means, and that the United States must honor its commitment to provide defensive weapons to Taiwan.

In addition, in answer to a question by Senator Pell, Shultz said that he did not see any sign that the people in Taiwan want independence. Shultz pointed out that he had the observation from his visits to Taiwan that Taiwan's economy is very strong, the distribution of income is very broad, and there has been a lot of progress for everybody. He therefore believed that the people in Taiwan would want to safeguard everything existing and also their lifestyle. Shultz' answer was a direct blow to Senator Pell, who hangs onto the Taiwan independence issue, and to those elements for "Taiwan independence" who dreamed of U.S. congressional support for the Taiwan independence movement.

It is obvious that in Shultz' mind the China policy is quite close to what President Reagan has in mind and what he preached during the election campaign. If Shultz is as good as his word, Taipei-Washington relations should show more optimistic prospects after he takes over as secretary of state than in the Haig era. Of course, this is on the assumption that Shultz will act according to his own established policies and will not allow himself to be manipulated by the "China hands" in the State Department. However, it is certain that after Shultz takes up his post at the State Department, the "China hands" will use all their skills in selling the China policy of the Carter and Haig eras. If and when the tension between Washington and Peiping arises because of the Chinese Communists' unhappiness with the policy announced by Shultz at the hearings, the experts on Chinese affairs will actively attempt to offer suggestions by taking advantage of the situation and will sell stuff undermining our interests in order to appease the Chinese Communists. By then, it is hard to say whether Shultz will be able to choose and follow what is good and remain unmoved.

It is true that Shultz has close personal relations with President Reagan and can talk to him at all times, but Vice President Bush and Senate Republican leader Baker can also get close to Reagan and state their views. It is hard to predict at this moment whether or not Reagan would take Shultz' advice fully when, unfortunately, the views of Bush and Baker are not in full agreement with Shultz'. There is no harm for us to prudently "heed, wait and see and hope for the best" -- Shultz' words at the public hearings.

Haig's sudden departure was a blow and a bitter pill to swallow for the Chinese Communists, who have so far remained silent on this matter. But, on the other hand, they seized this incident to exaggerate matters by pouring out their grievances against the pro-ROC conservatives in the United States. Between 8 and 13 July, Peiping successively published four articles voicing strong criticism of U.S. policy toward China and accusing the United States of playing the "two Chinas" game. The first article on the worn-out theme entitled "Expose the Truth About the Taiwan Relations Act" was published by the CHINA NEWS AGENCY on 8 July, which was closely followed by a XINHUA commentary from Washington on 9 July scathingly condemning the American conservative "diehards." But shortly after that RENMIN RIBAO on 12 July published a commentary: "The Wheel of History Cannot Be Reversed." A day later, RENMIN RIBAO devoted a whole page to reprinting a 10,000-word special commentary of the Chinese Communist quarterly GUOJI WENTI YANJIU. This lengthy article with a short title, "Historical Test," reviewed the U.S. strategy and attitude toward Taiwan over the past 140 years.

This correspondent goes into minute details in enumerating the howls uttered by the Chinese Communist propaganda machinery for the purpose of exposing the Chinese Communist intention of creating a new crisis in an attempt to reverse the situation unfavorable to Peiping following Haig's resignation. For fear that the United States might not know of their intention, the Chinese Communists gave special instructions to Hong Kong TA KUNG PAO and WEN HUI PAO to coproduce an article pointing out that it was no "coincidence" that the Chinese Communists put out four articles consecutively within a few days concentrating their attack on the United States for hanging on to Taiwan. The U.S. New York TIMES also reported yesterday (14 July) that this was the first time the Chinese Communists broke their silence since Bush's visit to Peiping in leveling a most severe criticism against the United States.

It is not yet known what reaction the Chinese Communists had toward Shultz' statements at the Senate hearings that favored the Republic of China. But the two staff members sent by the Chinese Communist "embassy" to Washington on 13 July to Congress to hear Shultz' testimony left the place in a flurry and hurried back to the "embassy" to make a report. The officials from the Coordination Council for Northern American Affairs at the hearings as observers on the other hand were all smiles and had a hard time concealing their joy. The Chinese Communists' like or dislike of Shultz is self-evident.

We have understood and have no doubt about Shultz' basic attitude toward the Republic of China and his stand on the ROC-U.S. relations. What is worth our attention in the future is his opinion on the Chinese Communists. During the 2 days of hearings, he made only one remark about the relations between the United States and the Chinese Communists. He held that "it is important to continue to develop relations with the People's Republic of China." He did not even mention the "strategic relations" between the United States and the Chinese Communists. We remember that his predecessor Haig talked a lot to emphasize the "strategic relations" between Washington and Peiping during his confirmation hearings at the end of 1980. It was for maintaining and strengthening the strategic relations with the Chinese Communists that Haig adopted many measures to rope in Peiping and drift apart from Taipei. They included the announcement of a U.S. decision in June 1981 on preparing to sell defensive weapons to the Chinese Communists.

In his written testimony, Shultz mentioned Soviet expansionism and the threat to the Free World. As long as the United States regards the Soviet Union as its No 1 enemy and a serious hidden danger, it will inevitably want to draw the Chinese Communists over to its side to jointly oppose Moscow. In order to draw support from the Chinese Communists, it is unavoidable that the United States will yield to and try to please them. As the secretary of state, Shultz is no exception. This is the international reality which we have to accept. However, in comparison, it is obvious that Shultz does not attach importance to the strategic relations with the Chinese Communists to the same nearly abnormal extent as did Haig. This is a change which brings us a little comfort.

Among the difficult questions confronting the United States in foreign affairs, the triangular relations among Washington, Taipei and Peiping have always been regarded as a sensitive question which the administration usually evades. Nevertheless, Shultz did not mind those very sharp questions asked by Goldwater and Helms and handled those questions pretty frankly, sincerely and calmly. This shows that Shultz could calmly and frankly discuss those questions because he was prepared and had carefully studied them. His remarks play a positive role in clarifying some ambiguity in U.S. policy toward the Republic of China and dispelling the latter's misgivings. Judging from this viewpoint, Shultz' takeover of the State Department and the great task of U.S. foreign affairs should be a welcome change.

The moral courage of defying the Chinese Communists' intimidation and stepping forward bravely to speak out from a sense of justice displayed by Goldwater and Helms, who are friends of the Republic of China, is touching and admirable. In particular, Senator Goldwater is not a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, but he was roused to righteous indignation by the fact that the ROC-U.S. relations are almost extinct. Of his own accord, he requested to attend the hearings and address inquiries to Shultz.

His deeds can be likened to what the ancients said: "While others are muddleheaded, I am the only one who is sober." Mr Goldwater after all is an old man of over 70. He will surely retire after he completes his term of office 4 years hence. Thinking of this, we cannot help worrying about the lack of a good successor to him. As some of our American friends such as General Weidmeyer and Doctor Judd have become very old, I think that in our relations with the United States, it is an urgent task for us to befriend some influential Americans of the younger generation.

POST VIEWS REAGAN'S 'CONFLICTING' FOREIGN POLICY

[Editorial: "Conflicting Signals"]

[Text] If the Reagan administration's foreign policy is meant to confuse the world, it is an outstanding success. The policy perplexes both America's friends and foes. Reagan's China policy seems to depend on which edition you read in the daily press. One day the U.S. President insists that arms sales to the Republic of China will continue. The next day he reverses himself.

U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, who is a loyal friend of Taiwan, never wavers. In a recent interview he told the English-language ASIA WEEK 'for America's interest and the security of the Pacific the United States should have never forsaken its long-time ally and friend the Republic of China."

Senator Goldwater was referring to former U.S. President Carter's recognition of Communist China in 1979. The senator added that "before, President Reagan's Taiwan policy was the same as mine, but the State Department has now made a difference, modifying the President's stand. The Republic of China and our neighbors in the Pacific are not the only ones confused by the U.S. foreign policy; the NATO countries are equally confused. The same situation prevails in the Middle East. Both the Arab states and Israel seem to be bewildered by the contradictory pronouncements of the White House.

One explanation may well be that President Reagan's attention is concentrated on the sagging American economy. At the same time a federal income tax cut went into effect, Congress voted new tax increases which more than offset the 10 percent income tax reduction.

There is hope that the new U.S. secretary of state, George P. Shultz, may in time straighten out the situation. He is known to be a good friend of Saudi Arabia, which in turn is a loyal friend of the Republic of China.

A recent issue of NEWSWEEK reported that when Senator Goldwater learned the Reagan administration was considering an agreement with Red China to end sales of U.S. weapons to Taiwan, the senator told Reagan: "I never want to have a fight with you, but if you want one, this is where it is going to start." Reagan assured Senator Goldwater no such proposal was in the works and 13 other senators were told that Taiwan would get the F-5E fighter jets.

If the Reagan policy is to keep Peiping off balance, it is certainly succeeding. Peiping's leaders must be confused and angry. We suspect that this confused state may prevail as long as Reagan occupies the White House.

Meeting With Premier Sun

OW210458 Taipei CNA in English 0237 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Taipei, July 21 (CNA)-- Premier Sun Yun-hsuan Tuesday asked Japan not to hurt the Republic of China again because the stability and security of this nation is closely connected with the security of northeast Asian region including Japan. The premier made the remarks when he received a high-level Japanese trade mission headed by Masumi Esaki, former international trade and industry minister and former defense agency director general. The mission, consisting of nine senior members of the House of Representatives, arrived here Tuesday morning for a four-day visit.

James Soong, director general of the government Information Office, said Premier Sun and the Japanese visitors exchanged views frankly and the two-hour talks were conducted under a "friendly harmonious" atmosphere. According to Soong, the premier complained to the Japanese lawmakers that many actions by Japan have affected the interest of the Republic of China since the two countries broke off diplomatic relations in 1972.

Premier Sun particularly mentioned the recent Japanese move to boycott the fifth world women's softball championship which was held in Taipei early this month. He expressed "regret" about this, saying the Japanese, by doing so, have hurt the interests of Chinese people and the Government of the ROC.

The premier expressed his hope that Japan and the ROC will strengthen their cooperation because the two neighboring free countries virtually share a "common interest" relationship in various aspects. GIO Director General Soong declined to disclose the Japanese side's response to Premier Sun's remarks.

Vice Economic Affairs Minister Wang Chou-ming told the press that in the talks, Masumi Esaki called for lifting of the important ban imposed by the Chinese Government last February against some 1,500 items of Japanese consumer goods.

Premier Sun gave a dinner at the Taipei guest house in honor of the Japanese mission.

The Japanese mission and their Chinese counterparts will hold their first round of formal talks on Sino-Japanese trade problems Wednesday morning. The Chinese side will be headed by Economic Affairs Minister Chao Yao-tung and Finance Minister Hsu Li-teh.

Meeting With President Chiang

[Text] Taipei, July 21 (CNA) -- President Chiang Ching-kua received a nine-member Japanese trade mission headed by Masumi Esaki, chairman of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party's Special Committee on International Economic Relations, at the presidential office Wednesday afternoon. President Chiang expressed warm welcome to the high-level mission and exchanged views with members of the group on Sino-Japanese relations and on economic and trade issues between the two countries.

The president expressed his hope that agreement can be reached in the negotiations between the two sides in order to help improve and develop the relationship. President Chiang pointed out that the Sino-Japanese economic and trade relations have become closer and closer in recent years. He said he hopes members of the mission will realize the basic stand and situation of the Republic of China, and that he hopes the visit of the mission will lead to the solution of various problems. In this way, President Chiang said, he expects to see early normalization toward long-term close trade and economic relations, proceeding continually towards healthy development.

The Japanese mission was accompanied by Adm. Ma Chi-chuang, secretary-general to the president; Economics Minister Chao Yao-tung, Finance Minister Hsu Li-teh; Vice Foreign Minister Fredrick F. Chien; Koo Chen-fu, chairman of the Chinese National Association of Industry and Commerce; Mah Soo-lay, representative in the Tokyo office of the Association of East Asian Relations; and Hiroshi Hitomi, director of the Interchange Association's Taipei office.

Japanese Official's Comments

[Excerpt] Taipei, July 17 (CNA) -- An official with the Japan Interchange Association's Taipei office said Friday the Republic of China's imports from Japan in the first half of this year dropped 18.4 percent from the same period last year, while exports to Japan rose 8.3 percent.

Hiroshi Haruhara, chief of the economic affairs section, attributed the decline in imports from Japan to the business slump in Taiwan and a sharp reduction in machinery imports. He said the decrease in the ROC's imports had nothing to do with the import ban imposed by the Chinese Government in mid-February against 1,500 items of Japanese consumer goods. Haruhara cited the ROC's intensified sales drive as the reason for the 8.3 percent increase in its exports to Japan.

Report on Talks' Progress

[Text] Taipei, July 22 (CNA) -- Japan has agreed to further improve official communication with the Republic of China, and it also consented to buy more agricultural products from this country, Vice Economics Minister Wang Chou-ming said Wednesday.

The Chinese side, headed by Economic Affairs Minister Chao Yao-tung and Finance Minister Hsu Li-teh, and its Japanese counterpart, led by Masumi Esaki, chairman of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party's Special Committee of International Economic Relations, held a meeting Wednesday to discuss trade issues between the two countries.

Both sides worked hard to improve the worsening trade relations between the two countries. Japan is the second largest trading partner of the Republic of China, and the two-way trade has been growing rapidly each year, with ROC suffering a deficit amounting to US dollars 3.5 billion in 1981. During the meeting, both sides agreed that the Association of East Asian Relations and the Japan Interchange Association would further strengthen their respective functions, and that Japan will send more trade missions to visit the ROC.

The Japanese mission also accepted the Chinese proposals to increase the interflow of technology between the two countries and encourage Japanese businessmen to set up factories here on the condition that they will ship back their products to Japan. The Japanese side also promised to import more agricultural products from the ROC by removing the bans on some products and sending buying missions to this nation in the April-May period, 1983. The Japanese mission, at the same time, suggested the ROC to send specialists to Japan to do researches on Japanese market.

On the issue of Japanese tariffs against the ROC goods, the Japanese mission agreed to cut down its tariffs on about 15 items of the products, including sports goods. But the mission said that final decisions would be made by the Japanese Government.

As to whether the Chinese Government will lift the import ban against 1,500 Japanese goods, Vice Minister Wang told the press after the meeting: "The government will review this matter cautiously and make a decision in due time." Japan has urged Taipei to lift the ban. Chinese officials have reiterated that the import ban will be removed so long as the Japanese mission shows sincerity to improve bilateral trade relations.

NUCLEAR WASTE TRANSPORTER DOCK TO BE BUILT

[Text] Taipei, July 12 (CNA) -- Taiwan Power Company has completed its preparatory work for building Ming Kuang dock near Kuo Sheng Pu along the northern coast of Taiwan as a permanent dock to transport medium and low radioactive nuclear waste. Produced by the nuclear power plants in northern Taiwan, the waste will be moved to Lang Yu Island for storage, a spokesman for the Taipower said last Sunday.

He recalled that the state-run firm had considered using Chung Chiao dock for the same purpose but later found the dock is not a safe one after transportation tests in September 1980.

Due to public concern over transportation of the nuclear waste, Taipower decided to build a permanent dock, said the spokesman. He noted Taipower authority, along with harbor experts, had inspected many places along the northern coast of Taiwan and finally found Kuo Sheng Pu the best site for building such a special-purpose dock. According to the spokesman, the coast at Kuo Sheng Pu is a small bay with excellent natural protection for sea transportation and near both the first and the second projects. When the dock site was chosen, he said, Taipower underwent ocean depth measurement, geological investigation and planning respectively in 1981.

The spokesman said now that all prepartory works have been completed, the construction of Ming Kuang dock is to begin soon.

TA KUNG PAO VIEWS REAGAN'S FOREIGN POLICY

HK211100 Hong Kong TA KUNG PAO in Chinese 21 Jul 82 p 2

[Special feature by Cheng Yuan [4453 6678]: "Reagan's Foreign Policy Has Been Bogged Down in Endless Contradictions"]

[Text] A public opinion poll published on 14 July by the Los Angeles TIMES indicates that a majority of Americans hold that in the past 18 months there has been a general deterioration in the relationship of the Reagan administration with Europe, Latin America, the Soviet Union, Japan and the Arab countries. According to an investigative report made public on 17 July by the well-known Gallop Poll, it is predicted that if a general ecection were held now in the United States, Democratic Senator Edward Kennedy would defeat the current President, Ronald Reagan.

Apart from this, Sino-American relations are also confronted with great difficulties as the Reagan administration continues to sell arms to Taiwan. In particular, from the testimony given by Secretary of State-designate George Shultz at hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, it has been shown that Sino-U.S. relations can be damaged at any time. Where will the California faction in the Reagan administration lead U.S. foreign policy in the end? And what course will Ronald Reagan himself follow in the end? This has arrested the close attention of the people of the whole world as well as the U.S. Government.

The reasons which led to a general deterioration in the relationships between the United States and many countries in the world are many and varied. Some of them are inevitable, such as conflicts of economic interests. However, in the final analysis, it is because U.S. policymakers lack a sense of the times and refuse to follow historical trends. They turn a blind eye to the fact that the United States of today has already fallen from the peak of its strength, and stubbornly practice power politics of the 19th century, waving a baton everywhere in the world, brazenly poking their noses into the internal affairs of other countries. This has stirred up enmity toward the United States on all sides and made it run into snags and to be foiled everywhere, bringing U.S. foreign policy into endless contradictions.

This can be clearly proved by the emergence of a series of contradictions and crises in handling Sino-American relations since Reagan assumed office.

The U.S. Government, on the one hand, recognizes that in the world "there is only one China and Taiwan is part of China," and that "the People's Republic of China is the sole legitimate government of China." In his recent correspondence to Chinese leaders, President Reagan explicitly expressed once again that "the United States resolutely abides by the stand agreed upon in the joint communique on establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and China." On the other hand, it also insists on carrying out "the provisions of the Taiwan Relations Act" which run counter to the spirit of establishing diplomatic relations between the two countries. George Shultz has gone further on this issue. In reply to some provocative questions raised by Barry Goldwater, he even denied the Chinese Government's "political sovereignty and jurisdiction" over Taiwan.

On the one hand, the Reagan administration keeps on pleading the importance of its strategic relationship with China. Secretary of State-designate George Shultz also said: "The continued development of our relationship with the PRC is a matter of great importance." But, on the other hand, as in the past, it still does not want to stop its interference in China's internal affairs and holds China as a pawn in its contention with the Soviet Union for spheres of influence.

On the one hand, the Reagan administration indicated its appreciation of the nine-point proposal put forth by Chairman Ye Jianying on the peaceful reunification of the motherland; but, on the other hand, it again insisted that the United States has the right to continue selling arms to Taiwan according to, what it calls, the "defence needs of Taiwan."

This is obviously an act on the part of the United States of interference in China's internal affairs in a desperate attempt to obstruct and undermine the peaceful reunification of China. However, it nonsensically said that China has no right to interfere in U.S. internal affairs.

Up to now the United States has not learned to treat China as an equal and it still cherishes the fond hope of dividing up China. With respect to its friends and allies, it has likewise assumed the posture of being a cut above others. Those who submit will prosper and those who resist shall perish. For example, proceeding from its global strategy, the United States has proposed to adopt a tough policy toward the Soviet Union, including the application of economic sanctions. Undoubtedly this helps to check Soviet expansion abroad. However, the United States, while meddling in the economic cooperation and trade contacts between the West European countries and the Soviet Union, engages in large-scale grain transactions with the Soviet Union. Is this not an act indicating that the magistrates are free to burn down houses while the common people are forbidden even to light lamps? How can it convince others? Therefore, differences of opinion between Washington and the West European leaders in dealing with the Soviet Union, just as the Washington POST has said, have almost caused "every important leader to become publicly involved in this increasingly escalating dispute."

The Reagan administration's foreign policy, particularly its policy toward China, has drawn widespread attention among the American public. At a time when some extremely conservative figures in the United States go here and there and, swollen with arrogance, continuously adopt various means in a desperate attempt to thoroughly undermine once and for all the basis of Sino-American relations, U.S. Senator Henry Jackson has warned that "if the administration provides additional arms to Taiwan, it will make a serious mistake" and that "this is against our national strategic interests for it hurts the entire Western position." Jackson considered that the United States has no legal basis to sell arms to Taiwan. He asked: "What if another country were sending equipment to Texas on the grounds that it was once a republic?" He indicated that he will continue to oppose the sales of arms to Taiwan in Congress. Jackson's remarks have reflected the correct views of those U.S. politicians who adopt a realistic attitude and have reflected the common aspirations of the American people.

After the founding of the PRC, Sino-American relations were in a state of hostility for almost 3 decades. It was not until the 1970's that then President Nixon, proceeding from the realities in the world situation, started to thaw Sino-American relations. Subsequently, it took the former president another 7 years to achieve the establishment of official diplomatic relations with China. It can thus be seen that current Sino-American relations have not been achieved easily. Safeguarding and strengthening the friendly relations between China and the United States accords not only with the common interests of the Chinese and American people but also with the interests of peace in the Asian and Pacific regions and in the world.

The current difficulties that have emerged in Sino-American relations have been brought about entirely by the U.S. authorities. According to American sources, the talks currently held between China and the United States have been taken over by President Reagan from the State Department. If Reagan should act according to the views of Barry Goldwater and others, Sino-American relations will surely retrogress. It is easier to undermine them than to repair them. People are waiting to see whether Reagan can handle Sino-American relations from the overall point of view of world strategy.

CONSERVATIVES' AIM TO CREATE 'TWO CHINAS' SCORED

[Short commentary by Gong Chang [1712 7022]: "It Must Not Be Treated Lightly"]

[Text] From across the Pacific Ocean comes an ill wind. Some American conservatives have vied with one another and raised a hue and cry demanding that the Reagan administration sell more F-5E fighters to Taiwan, persistently demanding the implementation of the "Taiwan Relations Act" or shouting the rotten slogan of never forsaking Taiwan, their "old friend." William Clark, national security adviser to President Reagan, also yelled: "If we sell out Taiwan, we should go back to the ranch."

What is the yelling by these people aimed at? Their aim in unscrupulously going against the will of the American people and violating both the spirit of the "Shanghai Communique," which has been agreed on by both the Chinese and the U.S. Governments, and the spirit of the joint communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the United States is precisely to create "two Chinas" and put Taiwan under the control of the United States. In order to embrace a handful of Taiwan authorities, they do not mind offending 1 billion Chinese. They have turned a blind eye to the historical reality that after the founding of New China, the United States was hostile to us for more than 20 years. However, didn't the PRC still exist all the same, and develop and strengthen? They are really overrating themselves, like a mantis trying to stop a chariot. Although the number of those senseless people is small and although those people do not represent the majority of the American people or the mainstream of the two parties in the United States, we must not treat lightly the ill wind and evil waves that they have created.

RENMIN RIBAO VIEWS REAGAN'S GRAIN SALE DILEMMA

[Article by Zhang Dezhen [illegible] 4176]: "Dilemma Faced by Reagan Administration -- the Debate Over the U.S.-U[illegible] Sales Agreement"]

[Text] The U.S.-USSR gra[illegible] agreement, having been extended a year ago, will expire on 30 September this year [illegible] regard to the handling of this matter -- whether the agreement will be extended again, or declared invalid on its expiration -- there are two different opinions within the U.S. Government. Reagan convened a Cabinet meeting on 15 July to discuss this problem, but unanimous decision was not reached. It appears that this is really an embarrassing issue for the Reagan administration.

The question of U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union has been a cloudy issue which has drawn much world attention for a long time. According to a 5-year (1976-81) grain sales agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union, the Soviet Union could buy 8-25 million tons of grain from the United States each year. After the Soviet Union sent troops to occupy Afghanistan, the Carter administration announced a grain embargo against the Soviet Union in January 1980 and decided not to supply the latter with an additional 17 million tons of grain beyond the quota of the 8 million tons of grain agreed upon. This decision won the extensive support of Congress and the media at that time and proved to be a strong blow to the Soviet Union. In order to win the support of voters in agricultural areas during the election campaign, Reagan promised to lift the grain embargo. After assuming the presidency, he hesitated to immediately carry out his promise. Some time later, for political reasons, the Reagan administration decided to end the grain embargo, which had been in effect for 15 months, and to extend the already expired 5-year grain sales agreement for another year. This decision aroused strong reaction both at home and abroad, because the Soviet Union showed no intention of restricting itself in its invasion of Afghanistan, and the Reagan administration had until then advocated a strong posture toward the Soviet Union. Therefore, such a self-contradiction by the Reagan administration aroused serious criticism from American political circles and the mass media.

Now, the extended term is going to expire soon. The Reagan administration has to quickly make a choice between either annulling or extending this agreement. However, the core of the problem which is embarrassing the Reagan administration is not this matter itself. Recently, in order to apply sanctions against the Soviet Union, the United States exerted repeated pressure on West European countries and tried hard to stop them from selling natural gas pipeline equipment to the Soviet Union and from concluding the deal worth more than $10 billion. This has given rise to a dispute between the two sides of the Atlantic Ocean, and thus has created tension in relations between the United States and the West European countries. If the United States decides to continue to sell grain to the Soviet Union in its own interests, such a selfish and unreasonable practice will inevitably give rise to a grievance from the West European countries and thus aggravate the contradiction between the United States and West Europe.

At present, the Reagan administration is facing pressure from both sides over this problem.

Some pressure is being exerted by the opposition faction at home. They hold that it is wrong to renew the long-term grain sales agreement with the Soviet Union while Poland is still under military control. And in particular, the United States will have to face a really embarrassing situation if it decides to continue to supply grain to the Soviet Union, since the West European countries will always insist on selling natural gas pipeline equipment to the Soviet Union because Reagan is lifting the grain embargo against the Soviet Union. As an American newspaper pointed out, the United States sells more farm products to the Soviet Union "than any other Western country; and meanwhile, it does not allow others to sell commodities to the Soviet Union. How will the United States explain this?" Those who support the grain embargo also point out that as the Soviet Union is now facing serious economic difficulties and is encountering its fourth successive year of poor agricultural harvest, its grain production will likely be lower than that of last year. Therefore, the United States should use this opportunity to aggravate the Soviet Union's difficult economic situation, and thus force it to "shift its attention to domestic affairs."

However, the force of the American farmers, with Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block as their representative, strongly opposes the grain embargo. In recent days, some Republican congressmen from agricultural states have gone to the White House in throngs to exert pressure on President Reagan, asking him to extend the term of the grain sales agreement. They declared that if the President does not consider their appeal, the Republican Party will suffer "great losses" in the off-year election to be held in November. They argued that if the United States loses the Soviet Union as its biggest buyer in the grain market, American agriculture, which has already been trapped in dire straits, will be further harmed, [illegible] the economic depression and high interest rates have already struck heavy bl[illegible] [illegible]armers and, in anticipation of a good harvest in the United States this year, the[illegible] will be an enormous surplus of grain and grain prices have already dropped. They even declared that selling grain to the Soviet Union will make the latter "rely on the West," and it will be "beneficial" to the United States since it will "deprive" the Soviet Union of the "ability to shift its financial resources to military uses."

The Reagan administration is faced with the knotty problem of how to extricate itself from this dilemma.

MAC SECRETARIES MEETING HELD IN PANMUNJOM

OW220933 Beijing XINHUA in English 0824 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 22 (XINHUA) -- The 467th secretaries meeting of the Koran Military Armistice Commission was held at Panmunjom yesterday at which Colonel Kim Yon-ki, secretary of the Korean-Chinese side, demanded that the enemy side take measures to ease the strained situation in the Demilitarized Zone, according to a KCNA report.

Colonel Kim Yon-ki said in a statement at the meeting that, of late, the military personnel of the United States and South Korea fired bullets at civil policemen of the Korean-Chinese side on their routine duty, built combat positions and staged military exercises in the DMZ. Owing to these acts of provocation, the situation there is becoming more strained with each passing day.

Since the 414th MAC meeting held on June 26, he pointed out, the enemy has committed more than 1,600 cases of provocations and violations. He said if the present tension in this zone is to be relaxed, the enemy must stop these armed provocations and violations of the armistice agreement unconditionally and immediately.

BOOKS PRESENTED TO NEW DPRK NATIONAL LIBRARY

These books were granted recently by China on the advice of Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hu Yaobang and Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

Present at the ceremony were Chong Chun-ki, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers Party, and vice-premier of the Administration Council; Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers Party and chairman of the Standing Committee of the Supreme People's Assembly; and other leading members of various departments concerned. Charge d'Affaires ad interim of the Chinese Embassy He Zhangming and other Chinese diplomats were also present on the occasion.

Hwang Chang-yop, at the ceremony, expressed deep thanks, on behalf of the Korean Workers Party, to Chairman Hu Yaobang and Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping, to the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party and the Chinese Ministry of Culture for the contribution of the above-mentioned books. These valuable books presented by China will be of much help to the Korean people in further enhancing their level of science and technology and promoting the technical revolution of Korea, he added.

In reply, He Zhangming said China's contribution of books to Korea truly reflected the existing relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries. He expressed the wish that the Grand People's Study House will make greater contributions to the popularization and further enhancement of the standard of science and technology as well as culture of the Korean people.

JAPANESE ARTICLES ON DISTORTION OF HISTORY NOTED

[Text] Tokyo, July 22 (XINHUA) -- Japanese newspapers have recently strongly criticized the distortion of history to prettify Japanese aggression against China in textbooks censored by the Japanese Education Ministry. The textbooks revised and approved finally on June 25 by the Japanese Education Ministry will be used by high school students and primary school pupils in the academic year starting from spring 1983.

In a July 7 article, MAINICHI SHIMBUN said Japan mounted an all-out invasion of China after the Marco Polo Bridge incident of July 7, 1937. "But strangely," the article said, "the textbooks consored by the Japanese Education Ministry have changed 'aggression against China' into 'having advanced' into China."

In an attempt to justify Japan's aggression, the article pointed out, "there appeared an adverse current in Japan today which holds that Japan faced its own internal and external situations at that time." The Sino-Japanese friendship could last "from generation to generation" only when Japan honestly admits that it had "invaded China" and when both Japan and China tell this to their children, the article noted.

TOKYO SHIMBUN said in an editorial today "the censorship by the Education Ministry has received criticism both at home and abroad." Japanese officials who support the censorship should ask themselves first what consequences would result from such distortion of history before saying that the revision of the textbooks was "an internal affair."

In today's "Editor's Note", YOMIURI SHIMBUN said "past experience, if not forgotten, is a guide for the future. Officials of the Education Ministry have no such historical view at all."

SRV EXHORTED TO COMPLY WITH UN ON KAMPUCHEA

OW221647 Beijing XINHUA in English 1617 GMT 22 Jul 82

["Commentary: U.N. Resolutions on Kampuchea Must Be Upheld -- by XINHUA Correspondent Li Yongming" -- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Beijing, July 22 (XINHUA) -- The diplomatic offensive being launched by Vietnam centering round the Kampuchean problem is aimed, among other things, at frustrating the U.N. resolutions on Kampuchea and the declaration of the internationl conference on Kampuchea and creating "legal" grounds for its continued occupation of Kampuchea.

Meanwhile, there are some persons in the world who consider Vietnam's attitude as a "new flexibility" and are seeking a "political settlement" of the Kampuchean problem in contravention of the U.N. resolutions. In these circumstances, it is a matter of paramount importance to uphold and implement the U.N. resolutions and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea.

The U.N. resolutions and the declaration of the international conference demand total and immediate withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. They reflect the aspirations and stance of the world people with regard to the Kampuchean problem, and give expression to the U.N. Charter and the elementary norms guiding international relations. They constitute the correct and reasonable way to resolve the Kampuchean problem. Only by upholding and implementing the U.N. resolutions and the declaration could the Kampuchean problem be really solved and peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia be ensured.

Hanoi falsely accuses Democratic Kampuchea and China of threatening Vietnam and, with this as a pretext, boycotts the U.N. resolutions and refuses to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. In fact this Vietnamese charge is nothing new. The Soviet Union has likewise used the pretext of "outside threat" to invade and occupy its southern neighbor, Afghanistan. Israel has launched the massive invasion of Lebanon under the similar pretext that the Palestinian people "threaten" its "security." Kampuchea is accused of "threatening" Vietnam for resisting the Vietnamese aggression and safeguarding its independence and national survival on its own soil, whereas Vietnam becomes a self-styled "example of internationalism" for sending 200,000 troops to invade and occupy Kampuchea. This is the outright logic of hegemonists. Hanoi's occupation of Laos and Kampuchea has not only destroyed the peace and stability of Indochina but also constituted a genuine threat to the peace and security of South st Asia. Nguyen Co Thach's recent clamour in Singapore that Vietnam would confront the ASEAN states for five or even twenty years and would establish guerrilla forces in those countries clearly shows who is threatening the peace and stability of Southeast Asia.

The Kampuchean problem has arisen from the Vietnamese massive invasion of that country and the long delay in its solution is due to Vietnam's refusal to implement the U.N. resolutions. It is no surprise that Hanoi boycotts the U.N. resolutions in the same way as Moscow boycotts the U.N. resolutions on Afghanistan. For the sake of an early settlement of the Kampuchean problem and an early restoration of peace and stability in that region, Vietnam must be made to respect the aspirations of the people of the world and implement the U.N. resolutions. There is no other alternative.

SIHANOUK'S ADDRESS TO 21 JUL CPPCC MEETING

BK221530 Beijing in Cambodian to Kampuchea 1030 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Address by Samdech Norodom Sihanouk to 21 July meeting sponsored by the CPPCC National Committee at the CPPCC auditorium -- recorded]

[Text] [applause] Esteemed Excellency Liu Lantao; esteemed Excellencies Hu Ziang, Rong Yiren and Dong Qiwu; esteemed Excellency Huang Hua; esteemed excellencies, ladies and gentlemen:

On behalf of the Kampuchean people and the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] and in my own name, I would like to express profound gratitude to you for holding today this glorious meeting excellently sponsored by the CPPCC National Committee with most respected His Excellency Deng Xiaoping as chairman.

This tremendous meeting, which crowns the extremely warm reception that you have so kindly accorded to the president of Democratic Kampuchea and the very cordial speech of His Excellency Liu Lantao, is further brilliant proof of the great friendship and the very powerful and firm solidarity that the fraternal PRC, the gallant Chinese people, the CCP and PRC Government have kindly and forever bestowed to our people and legal government in the valiant and resolute struggle for national liberation.

Once again, permit me to express profound and sincere thanks from the bottom of my heart to you, excellencies, ladies and gentlemen. [applause]

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen, the newly formed CGDK, from the moment it was proclaimed on Kampuchean soil, has received the unanimous support of all patriotic Kampuchean citizens, old and young, men and women both at home and abroad. It has also won the support of justice-upholding and freedom and peace-loving countries, including first of all the PRC, the DPRK and the five members of ASEAN -- namely, Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines. [applause]

The reasons for this national and international support are:

First, the CGDK symbolizes the sacred unity of various Kampuchean patriotic forces and the Kampuchean nation's consensus and determination to reject Vietnamese colonialism and the Heng Samrin-Hun Sen puppet regime installed in Phnom Penh.

Second, the cause the coalition government is defending is a sacred one. It is purely for the supreme interests of the nation. We in the CGDK are determined to fight until final victory to restore to our nation its freedom and independence and to return to the Kampuchean people their inalienable right of self-determination.

Third, we are fighting resolutely and without retreat against alien forces and a foreign government -- Vietnam -- which have shamelessly violated the UN Charter, the universal declaration of human rights and international law and practice, and which have most illegally established themselves in Kampuchea, a sovereign, independent and peaceful state and a member of the United Nations. The people, the armed forces and the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, through their unremitting struggle, have made great sacrifices and concrete contributions to defending the inviolable rights of the peoples of other countries in this region and the world subjected to aggression and bullying by unjust forces.

Esteemed excellencies, ladies and gentlemen, the establishment of the CGDK in our country has further strengthened the conviction of our people, who firmly believe that in the not too distant future we will triumph over the SRV, which will be forced to abide by the resolutions of the 1980 and 1981 UN General Assemblies and the 1981 international conference on Kampuchea.

I was able to witness this conviction recently among tens of thousands of my compatriots living in Thailand, especially in the Khao-i-Dang refugee camp, and among my compatriots in the many vast zones inside Kampuchea -- my fatherland -- which are under the administration of the three fronts of the coalition organization of Democratic Kampuchea. Within the framework of my visits -- three in the past week -- to my fatherland, I have noted without any illusion the rapid growth of the tripartite armed forces and the remarkable expansion of the liberated zones in Kampuchea.

Hence, I am convinced that although the Vietnamese aggressors have played the bully everywhere and boasted that they will never give up the choice meat of Kampuchea, they will sooner or later be overcome by our Khmer people and chased out of Kampuchea.

We, the patriotic people of Democratic Kampuchea, are well aware that there are many obstacles and traps on our road ahead. Only after a struggle of many, many years shall we see the light at the end of the dark tunnel of our nation's misfortune. However, to those international circles which have no faith in the future of the Kampuchean nation, people and country, let me say the following:

Firstly, in its long, long history, Kampuchea has known glory and grandeur on the one hand, and has been through extreme hardships and tragedies, on the other. However, never once in our history have the Kampuchean people and patriotic armed forces been so desperate as to surrender to invaders and foreign occupiers. Never in the history of our nation!

Secondly, although some foreign observers have expressed doubts and a lack of faith in the durability of the tripartite CGDK, I can assure you that the tripartite CGDK which has been firmly established on solid foundations will continue to survive until we can completely liberate our fatherland, for the three factions uniting in this coalition government have pledged to forget, to bury personal and group interests and to make all kinds of sacrifice, in terms of physical strength as well as intelligence and words, in service of the supreme interests of the nation, the vital interests of Kampuchea. [applause] The CGDK has also decided that after the total liberation of Kampuchea, after the Vietnamese forces are pulled out to the last man, we will hand over the sovereign power and rights to the people and let them decide their own future through free, universal elections under the correct supervision of the United Nations to freely choose their leaders and government system.

Thirdly, I have served my fatherland in the field of national policy since 1941. I had the honor of fulfilling the mission, together with the Kampuchean people, in the victory against colonialism, and later, against imperialism. Some foreign observers have predicted that during my presidency the struggle of the Kampuchean nation against the Vietnamese aggressors will certainly not turn out as we Kampucheans might wish. They predict that we will not succeed in our struggle against Vietnam. In this connection, I deem it my duty to assert that I will remain loyal to my fatherland -- namely, Democratic Kampuchea -- and to the Kampuchean people, and with them I will fight till my last breath in order to restore full independence for Kampuchea. [applause]

In the past part of this speech that I have the honor to address to you, esteemed excellencies, ladies and gentlemen, permit me to make some comments on the latest developments in the psychological and diplomatic offensive in the international arena by the Hanoi authorities.

Firstly, regarding the so-called good-will gesture of the Vietnamese socialist government, which claims that it has voluntarily decided to withdraw some of its troops from Kampuchea and send them back to Vietnam, permit me to solemnly address some segments of international public opinion which are still confused about this. I would like to expose this deception by the Hanoi authorities and would like to condemn them because, in fact, they have withdrawn only those south Vietnam-born soldiers whose hearts and minds are completely different from some of the north Vietnamese. Most of the south Vietnamese soldiers who are forcibly drafted and sent to fight in the war of aggression against Kampuchea refuse to be hostile to my Kampuchean people and refuse to fight. They seek only to desert from the army of which the commanders are from north Vietnam. For this reason, the north Vietnamese deem it wise to withdraw these troops. Moreover, among the south Vietnamese as well as north Vietnamese soldiers sent to occupy and control Kampuchea, the majority are seriously ill. Many of them cannot even walk or fight. Soldiers affected by such diseases as malaria are being sent home. Thus, the withdrawal of troops concerns only sick soldiers and those who are not willing to carry on their military mission in Kampuchea. It is, in a word, insignificant. It cannot be regarded as proof of the good will of the Vietnamese rulers in Hanoi at all, for in fact they are sending in fresh troops from north Vietnam to help Heng Samrin occupy Kampuchea.

Secondly, regarding the claim by Vietnam that it wishes to follow a policy of peace and friendship toward ASEAN and other countries, I would like once again to condemn the north Vietnamese rulers in Hanoi, for they do not keep their word and still pursue a misleading policy. The north Vietnamese rulers in Hanoi said they wanted to hold an international conference to settle the Kampuchean question and bring about peace and stability in Southeast Asia, particularly to ensure security and peace for the ASEAN countries. The truth is that these Vietnamese are tricksters, for were it true that they really wished to ensure peace and security for ASEAN and other countries, they would have implemented the resolutions of the United Nations, respected the UN Charter and the universal declaration of human rights as any good UN member would and become a member of the ICK -- international conference on Kampuchea. On the contrary, they refuse to abide by UN resolutions, refused to attend the international conference on Kampuchea and, instead, propose another conference, from which they categorically bar Democratic Kampuchea, the sole legal and legitimate state authentically representing the Kampuchean people and a full member of the United Nations. Indeed, they want the puppet regime they have installed in Phnom Penh to attend this conference with ASEAN, telling ASEAN that it is the government of the Kampuchean people.

Furthermore, the Vietnamese have resorted to all kinds of means to slaughter the Kampuchean people. For example, they have used chemical weapons and poisonous substances and have spread the use of poisoning, daily causing fatalities among Kampucheans. Victims of these Vietnamese toxic substances suffered great pains before they died. Moreover, the Vietnamese and the Heng Samrin-Hun Sen clique have killed many Kampuchean patriots through arrest, torture and execution without any reason.

Thirdly, as a Kampuchea, I cannot, on behalf of the PRC, counter the unjust and unreasonable allegation of the Vietnamese authorities that the PRC poses a threat to Kampuchea, Indochina and the ASEAN countries. However, as a Kampuchean and a first-hand witness, I can testify that the PRC has never threatened or invaded any country, and China always supports the just struggle for freedom and peace of fraternal nations near and far in the world. China even helped Vietnam itself when it was in danger, in difficulty, when it was waging a struggle against colonialism and imperialism for national independence and reunification.

The PRC and the Chinese people made all kinds of sacrifices to help Vietnam until victory. There is only one threat. This threat comes from Vietnam and the Soviet Union, which are occupying and colonizing Kampuchea and Laos. When they have completely swallowed Kampuchea and Laos, they will turn against other nations in Southeast Asia.

Recently, Nguyen Co Thach, the minister of foreign affairs of Vietnam, mendaciously promised some governments inside and outside Southeast Asia that Vietnam might withdraw all of its troops from Kampuchea if there were no longer any threat from China. This is a cowardly and despicable deception by the Hanoi authorities. These Hanoi authorities have most unreasonably invented the story that the PRC poses a threat to this or that country. In reality, they want to have the PRC acknowledge that they snap and chew at will their weaker neighbors, such as Kampuchea and Laos. When they have digested their Kampuchean meal, the Vietnamese -- with the backing and prompting of the Soviet hegemonists -- will insatiably wolf down other weak neighbor countries.

For this reason all Kampuchean patriotic forces have united as one in a resolute struggle against these Vietnamese colonialists and expansionists by consenting to sacrifice their own blood and lives is important not only for safeguarding the Kampuchean nation but is also an important contribution to the defense of the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, freedom, peace and stability of fraternal nations and peoples in our Southeast Asian region.

Because they are well aware of this truth, the neighbors of Democratic Kampuchea, true brothers such as the five ASEAN countries, the PRC, and the DPRK have given us aid and staunch and noble support. For this reason, on behalf of Democratic Kampuchea, I would like to express gratitude and thanks to these brothers, particularly to the PRC. [applause]

In conclusion, I would like to make a friendly appeal to countries in the world which have not yet made up their minds between Vietnam -- which is good only at duping people and which is the aggressor against Kampuchea -- and Democratic Kampuchea, which is the victim of Vietnamese aggression. I appeal to these countries which have not yet grasped the truth. Now that they have learned about this truth, they should turn their faces to and hold hands with Democratic Kampuchea. They should support the CGDK, for this support means that these countries are willing to support a people -- namely, the Kampuchean people -- who must be allowed to recover their right of self-determination and the right to enjoy freedom in peace. But this peace must be a purely Kampuchean peace and not a pax Vietnamica or pax Sovietica.

Long live the great friendship and solidarity between Democratic Kampuchea and the PRC! [applause]

EASING OF MARTIAL LAW IN POLAND REPORTED

Jaruzelski's Announcement

OW221938 Beijing XINHUA in English 1540 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Warsaw, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Polish Prime Minister General Wojciech Jaruzelski announced further ease of martial law restrictions at today's National Assembly meeting (Sejm), which also approved a government reshuffle.

In his report on administrative program, the prime minister pointed out that martial law would have to be retained for the time being because of continued attacks by forces of subversion who, supported by certain Western cliques, had not given up their counter-revolutionary attempts.

But he said that the Military Council of National Salvation had noticed the real conditions for the further easing up of the rigors of martial law, and therefore decided to take measures to this effect, including the release of most of the internees. If the situation continued to improve and there were no new tensions, he said, the council would ask "the supreme organs of power for the suspension of martial law. It is the intention of the military council that the conditions making possible the suspension of martial law may turn ripe by the end of this year."

He stressed that if the martial law was lifted, "it will be necessary to safeguard state and national interests by giving the government special powers."

Referring to the economic work, he said that it would be difficult in the rest of the year and economic problems would be the "key problems" for the government. He said that "there exists a possibility to stop the falling of the economy and keep production at last year's level by the end of this year." The government would firmly carry out the economic reform, he added. Those leading cadres who "do not understand or refuse to understand such a reform must leave their posts now or in the future."

On the restoration of the activity of trade unions, he said that this was a "complicated struggle". At present, he said, "the situation is further aggravated by the illegal anti-state activities of a segment of activists and certain members of Solidarity. By conspiring and organizing adventurist incidents they are pushing the organization towards self-destruction." However, he stressed that the trade unions must be reborn... the authorities of the socialist state will actively meet this need."

Talking about the pope's visit to the country, he said that the government will do everything for the visit to be realized next year. But a "proper condition" for such a visit is that "a necessary degree of normalization must be achieved" in the country. Jaruzelski also stressed that the patriotic movement for national renewal must be developed, holding that the movement is an important stage for "developing a new and ever higher form of socialist democracy."

A resolution adopted after discussing Jaruzelski's report approved the general's assessment of the situation and welcomed the release of internees and the efforts for an early suspension of the martial law. The resolution expressed welcome to the "declaration on patriotic movement for national renewal" adopted at a joint meeting of the Polish United Workers Party, the United Peasant Party, the Democratic Party and Pax Association. The resolution said that the declaration's orientation is correct and therefore gave full support to it.

The Sejm relieved Andrzej Werblan of his post as vice-marshal of the Sejm and appointed two new vice-marshals, Zbigniew Gertych and Jerzy Ozdowski.

The Sejm also appointed Zenon Komender (chairman of the Pax Association) deputy prime minister; Stefan Olszowski (Politburo member of the United Workers' Party) minister of foreign affairs; Zygmunt Lakomec minister of internal trade and service; Andrzej Ornat minister of youth affairs.

Finally, the Sejm adopted an appeal calling on all circles, social organizations and the people of Poland to "support the efforts of all peoples for preventing war, checking arms race and defending peace."

Release of Internees

OW220931 Beijing XINHUA in English 0745 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Warsaw, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Following the decision of the Polish martial law leader, Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Ministry of Internal Affairs issued a communique today authorizing the release of 1,227 internees detained since the imposition of the state of siege last December 13. In a major address to the Sejm (National Assembly) on the eve of Poland's national day, the chairman of the Military Council of National Salvation (WRON) said: "Most of the internees will be released, including all the women interned. Further facilitation in postal services and in telecommunications within the country and abroad will be introduced."

The Interior Ministry communique said of the 1,227 internees to be freed, 913 will be freed permanently and 314 temporarily.

The information adviser to the prime minister, Wieslaw Gornicki, told a press conference here today that those freed are persons "whose attitude guarantees that they will not undertake activities against the legal order." He said after the release, 637 internees will remain in detention centers all over the country. Conditions for the release of Lech Walesa, leader of the suspended solidarity trade union, were not ripe yet, he added.

Other measures for easing the state of siege announced in the Interior Ministry communique include the easing of private visits by Poles having close relations outside the country and possessing an invitation, the lifting of restrictions on the training or repairing of sailing boats on Poland's territorial waters and high seas, and the lifting of the regulation that those going to border areas during holiday period before September have to hand in reports beforehand.

Telephone links with the outside world through an operator and the use of cable facilities and telex -- in five languages only -- would be restored from midnight local tomorrow.

General Jaruzelski told the Sejm: "If the advantageous changes persist without a relapse of tension, if they bear witness unequivocally to the calming down and normalization of the internal situation in the country, then the WRON will approach the supreme organs of power for the suspension of martial law. It is the intention of the WRON that the conditions making possible the suspension of martial law turn out to be right by the end of this year."

YUGOSLAV RESOLUTION ON FOREIGN POLICY ADOPTED

[Text] Belgrade, July 16 (XINHUA) -- The Federal Chamber of the Yugoslav Assembly today adopted a resolution on the current international situation and Yugoslav activities.

The resolution says that Yugoslavia's foreign political activity should be aimed at halting the dangerous deterioration of international relations, relaxation of international tension, solution of crises and strengthening of the struggle for peace and security in the world and international cooperation on an equal footing.

It points out that the activities of the non-aligned countries in the past period reaffirmed that this movement is a real political force in people's struggle for independence and free development of every country. Yugoslavia will in the future continue to work for strengthening the unity and capability of actions of the Non-Aligned Movement as a non-bloc and independent factor, work for the solution of the disputes and conflicts between non-aligned countries.

The resolution says that the present international situation gives special significance to the holding of the seventh summit of the nonaligned countries. Yugoslavia, together with other countries, will invest efforts for securing conditions for the success of the summit.

It especially pointed to the worrisome deterioration of the situation in the Middle East caused by the Israeli incursion into Lebanon. Yugoslavia expresses unreserved support to the solidarity with the victims of the aggression -- the Lebanese and the Palestinian people and the PLO, the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people. It also pointed to the indispensability of putting an end to the Iranian-Iraqi conflict.

SAUDI-SYRIAN PLAN ON LEBANON PRESENTED TO REAGAN

[Text] Beijing, July 22 (XINHUA) -- The foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and Syria Wednesday presented to U.S. President Ronald Reagan a new plan calling for the evacuation of the guerillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization from western Beirut and their redeployment in other Arab countries, according to Washington reports.

The two foreign ministers, Sa'ud al-Faysal and 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam, have been in Washington to seek a solution to the Lebanese crisis on behalf of the Arab League.

Their three-stage plan consists mainly of:

-- An end to the siege of western Beirut by Israel, whose army will be withdrawn to five miles south of the Lebanese capital to leave open all exits from the country;

-- Evacuation of the 6,000 PLO guerillas, now trapped in western Beirut, to northern Lebanon and their eventual departure to other Arab countries;

-- Redeployment of the Palestinian guerillas will be temporary, with a time limit of one month, during which period Arab foreign ministers will meet to seek a long-term solution to the Lebanese and Palestinian problems; and

-- The fulfillment of the above measures will depend on United States commitment to ensure application of United Nations Security Council Resolutions 508 and 509.

President Reagan has reportedly accepted this plan and pledged to work on it to break the deadlock in the Lebanese issue.

The PLO leadership has endorsed the provisional plan. Meanwhile, Saudi Foreign Minister Sa'ud al-Faysal has conveyed to Reagan a message from the PLO to the effect that the PLO is ready to recognize Israel's right to existence and that it is determined not to leave Lebanon without concessions from the United States that would mean progress towards the establishment of a Palestinian state. The PLO also wants the United States to open direct talks with it and recognize the Palestinians' right to self-determination and a homeland. In return, the PLO will be ready to join Arab states in an implicit recognition of Israel's right to existence.

In its letters to Saudi Foreign Minister Sa'ud al-Faysal, Syrian Foreign Minister 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam and the U.S. State Department, the Lebanese Government has expressed opposition to the withdrawal of Palestinian guerillas to northern Lebanon and the Bekaa Valley.

It was also reported that the Israeli Government yesterday insisted on the unconditional withdrawal of PLO guerillas. Prime Minister Menahem Begin has declared that there should be no indefinite wait. Defense Minister Ari'el Sharon has flatly refused to accept any provisional agreement or arrangements to separate the armies of the two sides. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of Israel has told the parliament that the Israeli Armed Forces are prepared for a "drastic solution."

HABIB'S LATEST PLAN FOR LEBANON REPORTED

[Text] Beirut, July 21 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Presidential envoy Philip Habib has proposed a three-phase plan for resolving the Lebanon crisis after consultations with all parties concerned, radio Lebanon reported today.

The proposal includes Israeli withdrawal from Khaled to Damour, 17 kms south of Beirut, withdrawal of Palestinian forces to somewhere outside Lebanon, likely to Syria, and deployment of a multinational force in positions presently held by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The radio said the multinational force will comprise troops from the United States, France, Italy, Greece, Yugoslavia and possibly other countries. U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar has made contacts for the formation of the force.

The radio said the Lebanese regular army will also deploy alongside the multinational force.

The PLO forces will move first into refugee camps and later to locations outside Beirut. They will withdraw from Lebanon simultaneously with Israeli and Syrian forces.

The radio said the Syrian forces will withdraw from the Bekaa area and south Lebanon while the Israeli troops will withdraw from Dammour to Sayda and from Sayda to the international broder. Subsequently all parties concerned in Lebanon will begin talks on a solution to the Lebanon problem.

It was reported that Bahib is scheduled to leave here for Israel later today to deliver a memorandum from U.S. President Ronald Reagan to Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin. Habib will also ask for more time to seek a final solution.

Habib's new proposal came as Reagan had talks with the Syrian and Saudi foreign ministers in Washington yesterday. So far Israel has made no comment on the Washington talks. Opinion here believes that there is no substantial change in the U.S. position in the talks.

According to another report, the PLO is prepared to accept U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338, provided that they recognize the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and to an independent state.

SOVIET-FRENCH CONSULTATIONS ON MIDDLE EAST END

[Text] Moscow, July 21 (XINHUA) -- The Soviet Union and France ended their two-day consultations on "the situation in the Middle East, especially in Lebanon," at the Foreign Ministry here today, the Soviet news agency TASS reported.

French representatives at the consultations, Ambassador Claude Arnaud and a department director of the French Foreign Ministry, Serge Boidevaix, were received by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minsiter Anatoliy Kovalev. "The consultations proceeded in a business-like atmosphere," TASS said, but gave no details.

Observers here noted that in its July 11 commentary entitled "What Paris Wants," the Soviet newspaper PRAVDA criticized the French position toward the situation in Lebanon. But the paper today published its interview with Leonid Brezhnev on the situation in Lebanon, which TASS, quoting Western news agencies, said "has shown the Soviet Union's readiness to play its role in the peaceful mediations over the conflict in Lebanon."

SOUTHERN AFRICAN LEADERS MEET IN BOTSWANA

[Text] Gaborone, July 22 (XINHUA) -- Leaders and senior ministers of the nine member countries of the Southern African Development Coordination Conference (SADCC) held a one-day summit today to review their efforts toward achieving economic independence.

The nine -- Zimbabwe, Zambia, Tanzania, Angola, Mozambique, Swaziland, Lesotho, Malawi and Botswana -- set up SADCC three years ago to reduce their economic dependence on South Africa.

Speaking at the opening ceremony, attended by a crowd of several thousand people in front of the National Assembly here, Botswana President and SADCC Chairman Quett Masire said important advances have been made since the formation of the organization.

He stressed the need to work together for further mobilizing human and material resources necessary for waging a successful struggle for regional economic liberation. The SADCC secretariat, a permanent institution based in Gaborone will soon become operational, he declared.

He also expressed the hope that the leader of an independent Namibia will take his right place in the SADCC when the summit meets next year.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe attacked South Africa's domination and oppression in the region and urged the recist regime to grant independence to Namibia and democracy to its own people. "As we consolidated our gains in SADCC, we must remain cognizant of the fact that the struggle against foreign domination and national oppression in our region must continue. The success of this struggle will immeasurably enhance our progress in SADCC," he said.

Attending the summit were Presidents Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and Samora Machel of Mozambique as well as Masire and Mugabe. The other countries are represented by senior ministers. Two main South African nationalist movements, the African National Congress and Pan-Africanist Congress and the South West African Peoples Organization (SWAPO), also sent their representatives to the meeting.

A closed door session was held after the opening ceremony.

WEST INDIAN OCEAN COUNTRIES BOOST COOPERATION

OW201102 Beijing XINHUA in English 0813 GMT 20 Jul 82

[Text] Dar es Salaam, July 19 (XINHUA) -- The three western Indian Ocean nations of Mauritius, the Seychelles and Madagascar have been in close contact with one another for political cooperation. Mauritian Minister of External Affairs, Tourism and Emigration Jean Claude de l'Estrac has made visits to Seychelles and Madagascar, during which he proposed the establishment of an Indian Ocean commission to organise regional cooperation. When in Seychelles De l'Estrac said that since Mauritius had joined the socialist fraternity of Seychelles and Madagascar, "an attack on the one will be taken as an attack on us all."

Seychelles President France Albert Rene made a two-day official visit to Mauritius on July 17 and 18. Rene said at Port Louis his government supported the Mauritian Government's demands for the return of the Diego Garcia Island and the demilitarisation of the Indian Ocean.

As targets of rivalry between the two superpowers, the three countries which occupy the strategically important triangular positions in the western Indian Ocean all demand the removal of the U.S. base in Diego Garcia.

Mauritian Prime Minister Aneerood Jugnauth has disclosed that talks had started on the proposed formation of an Indian Ocean Commission.

MEXICAN PRESIDENT-ELECT DISCUSSES TIES WITH PRC

HK130850 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 9 Jul 82 p 6

[Report: "Mexico's Newly Elected President de la Madrid Answers Questions Raised by Reporter of the Journal CHINA CLIPPER -- Mexico and China Should Build Closer Diplomatic, Cultural and Economic Ties"]

[Text] Mexico City, 5 Jul (RENMIN RIBAO) -- The newly elected president of Mexico, Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado, recently granted an interview to Guillermo Naser, chief Mexican editor of the Sino-Mexican journal CHINA CLIPPER and answered the editor's questions:

Question: How do you view the relations between Mexico and China?

Answer: I believe there is a long history of relations between the great peoples of Mexico and China. One of the reasons for this is that historical and scientific research have proved that most of the Indians who lived on Mexican territory over the past few centuries came from Asia. Quite a few important expeditions to the Orient started from Mexico. The China Clipper, which called periodically at the port of Acapulco, was like a bridge connecting our two countries through commercial ties. You may recall one of the most typical of Mexican costumes is called the "China robe." The Mexican character and temperament are also similar to those Asians. In today's terms, the Mexican people are full of respect and affection for the Chinese people because they have the traditional virtues of wisdom and diligence, and are making a tremendous effort to raise their standard of living and turn their country into an important world power capable of exerting great influence on international affairs.

Mexico's foreign policy is similar to that of China's in many ways. We wish to safeguard world peace and are opposed to war and arms expansion. We also wish that countries all over the world would strengthen economic cooperation and establish an international order advantageous to the weaker states. I believe that Mexico should seek to strengthen its diplomatic and cultural connections with China. Mexico can certainly sign more mutually beneficial agreements with China.

Question: Do you have anything specific in mind for promoting the development of trade relations between Mexico and China?

Answer: I think it is important to seek an effective way of maintaining a proper trade balance between the two countries. Generally speaking, we are very interested in strengthening the economic relations between Mexico and China. I support China's rational wish to export more of its products to Mexico.

Question: When your government is in office, what policies will it adopt regarding international peaceful coexistence and economic cooperation?

Answer: I think that in order to safeguard world peace and maintain healthy and rational relations between all countries, it is necessary to avoid the use of force and oppose any big power which tries to dominate the world exclusively or partially. We think that the legal principle of equality between countries should be respected, but just this is not enough. We also need to make efforts to promote more effective economic cooperation. Cooperation between all the developing countries should be promoted through comprehensive negotiations at the United Nations to maintain and expand North-South dialogues and to seek establishment of a new international economic order and forms of cooperation suited to the different conditions of development in Third World countries.

We all know that the Third World is made up of a multitude of countries, and therefore, internal differences inevitably exist. In regard to this, we must have clear and realistic understanding. I think, however, that as long as we adopt an attitude of active mutual support, developing countries can also help one another in all spheres and seek unanimity in all kinds of international policies. Of course, they should also seek bilateral or multilateral cooperation among themselves.

Question: In addition to the main points of your platform you expounded in your speeches during the campaign for the presidency, do you have any new points to add?

Answer: Mexico is a nationalist state. Therefore, we insist that Mexican affairs be administered by the Mexican people and that no foreign countries will be allowed to interfere in the internal affairs of Mexico or put pressure on Mexico. We also insist that Mexican resources be controlled by the Mexican people and that such resources be used for bringing benefit to the Mexican people.

This means that nationalism not only stands for political independence but also for consolidating economic and cultural independence. Our nationalism is not opposed to our implementation of internationalism with other countries for the purpose of giving mutual support. However, we must insist that Mexico should occupy its due place in international society while developing its relations with countries throughout the world.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF SCIENCE OF LAW SOCIETY OPENS

Deng Xiaoping Meets Delegates

OW230729 Beijing XINHUA in English 0711 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 23 (XINHUA) -- Deng Xiaoping and other party and state leaders, Peng Zhen, Wei Guoqing, Peng Chong, Wan Li, Xi Zhongxun and Yang Shangkun met here this morning in the Great Hall of the People with participants of the national conference on work on political science of law and participants of the meeting to establish the China Society of the Science of Law, respectively, and took photos with them.

Peng Zhen Addresses Society

[Text] Beijing, July 22 (XINHUA) -- Chinese jurists must uphold the four fundamental principles of adherence to the socialist road, to the dictatorship of the proletariat, to the leadership of the Communist Party and to Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, said Peng Zhen, member of the Political Bureau of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee here today.

Speaking to the inauguration meeting of the China Society of the Science of Law, Peng Zhen said the four fundamental principles put forward by Deng Xiaoping on behalf of the C.P.C. Central Committee "is not a kind of theory or a school of thought. It is the summation of the historical experience of our country in the 20th century."

Peng Zhen listed four major events in the 20th century of the Chinese history to prove that the upholding of the four principles is an irresistable trend of historical development.

The four major events are the 1911 revolution led by Dr Sun Yat-sen to overthrow the feudal imperial system that had ruled China for thousands of years; the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949, which marked the overthrow of the three big enemies that weighed on the Chinese people and an end to the hundred-year-old domination of China by imperialists; the abolition of the centuries-old exploiting system within ten years after the founding of the New China; and the establishment of a solid industrial base through thirty years' effort.

He said: before liberation China was a backward agricultural country which acted as a raw material supplier and goods market for imperialism and could not even manufacture a motorcar. Now China has developed into a country with 2.70 million machine tools, capable of producing 1.0 million tons of petroleum and 600 million tons of coal a year and of manufacturing motorcars, aircraft and intercontinental guided missiles, all thanks to the Chinese people's hard struggle through self-reliance in the past 30 years or so.

These facts are eloquent proof that by adhering to the four foundamental principles, we shall be able to overcome all difficulties, he said.

Peng Zhen urged the jurists to contribute to fostering socialist democracy and improving the socialist legal system.

Peng Zhen also asked them to persist in integrating theory with practice, that is, proceeding from the practical conditions in China to study and sum up China's experience and lessons so as to find out the law of development of the Chinese society, and then apply it in promoting the development of Socialist Democracy and the socialist legal system.

Peng Zhen pointed out that China should draw on the advanced experiences, ancient or modern, Chinese or foreign, making the past serve the present and foreign things serve China, so as to suit the needs of developing China's socialist legal system.

He said China's socialist legal system should have a complete system of its own and laws should also conform to reality.

Attending the meeting were Peng Chong, member of the Political Bureau and the Secretariat of the C.P.C. Central Committee, and Yang Xiufeng, chairman of the preparatory committee of the China Society of the Science of Law.

Yang described, in his report to the gathering, the society as a national mass organization devoted to the study of law. He defined its tasks as uniting, under the leadership of the party, all the jurists of the country to carry out law researches, conduct domestic and international academic exchanges, contribute to the development of Marxist, socialist theories of law, of socialist democracy and socialist legality in China.

The seven-day meeting will discuss and approve the regulations of the society, elect the society's council and its honorary chairman.

BEIJING PLA'S QIN JIWEI SENDS LETTER TO OFFICER

[Report: "Comrade Qin Jiwei shows Concern for the Growth of Young Regimental Commanders"]

[Text] Not long ago, Wang Qin, 38, a young regimental commander of the Beijing PLA units, received a letter from Comrade Qin Jiwei, commander of the Beijing PLA units, and a book entitled "Study on Political and Ideological Work in Companies." In his letter, Comrade Qin Jiwei wrote: "I have carefully read this book twice. I have been greatly inspired and learned a lot from it. Although some of its contents need to be further substantiated and improved and some views and formulations need to be further discussed, overall it is wellwritten. It is very inspiring and helpful in strengthening and improving grassroots ideological and political work. I hope that you will read it carefully and in the light of your own experiences, study and probe into the science of political work and improve your methods of management and education work so that the wrok of your regiment will be further improved."

When the "gang of four" ran amok, Comrade Wang Qin openly struggled against their perverse acts. At the end of 1978, Comrade Wang Qin was promoted to regimental commander. For more than 3 years, the regiment, led by Comrade Wang Qin, has been an advanced unit of the Beijing PLA units. However, Comrade Wang Qin also has shortcomings and errors in doing practical work -- his management methods are oversimplified and he is sometimes stilted in his relationships with the fighters.

In April this year, when Comrade Qin Jiwei was inspecting work in grassroots units, he discovered these weak points of Comrade Wang Qin. He immediately had a talk with him and frankly pointed out his shortcomings. He hoped that Wang Qin would integrate strict demands with a scientific attitude and asked him not to replace careful ideological work with punishment.

Later, Comrade Qin Jiwei returned to Beijing and, while ill, wrote this letter to Comrade Wang Qin.

After receiving Commander Qin's letter and book, Comrade Wang Qin carefully studied each chapter and each line of the book in connection with reality and voluntarily asked to be criticized by leading comrades at the army and division levels. He had talks with fighters in companies to discuss with them civil ways of leading soldiers and made achievements in improving methods of management and education.

At the end of May, Wang Qin was again approved to be "an advanced individual in building spiritual civilization" of the Beijing PLA units and attended a congress of advanced collectives and advanced individuals in building spiritual civilization, which was convened by the Beijing PLA units.

GOBI DESERT ROCKET-LAUNCHING BASE DESCRIBED

["Newsletter by XINHUA Reporters Zhao Qi and Jiang Yongwu: 'The Glory of Gobi -- On a Visit to China's Rocket-Launching Test Base'" -- XINHUA headline; location of base not given]

[Excerpts] Beijing, 21 Jul (XINHUA)-- The train was running fast on the vast Gobi Desert in the northwest region, taking us to the rocket-launching test base. The vast Gobi seemed to be endless. Outside the windows, there was nothing except whirling yellow sand dunes. However, when the train reached the hinterland of the Gobi, a different and magnificent picture unfolded before our eyes. There are high rocket-launching pads towering into the clouds, row upon row of buildings surrounded by trees, wide asphalt roads and line upon line of overhead electric wires extending towards younder...

Ah! What a modern scientific city in the Gobi oasis! China's first manmade earth satellite was launched from here and is still transmitting the music "The East Is Red" in space. It was also from here that our first carrier rocket [yun zai huo jian 6663 6528 3499 4628] and three satellites carried by one rocket were launched and flew towards the Pacific and the space.

The party Central Committee and the State Council decided to build China's first rocket-launching test base in the Gobi region of northwest China 24 years ago. Many persons left their wives and city homes and took command of this Gobi expedition. They included some veteran Red Army men who had experienced the Long March, some veteran Eight Route Army men who had fought the guerrilla war behind a green curtain of tall crops, and some veteran party members who were tested in enemy prisons. An engineer corps unit that fought in one place after another over the years, and a number of cadres and fighters of the Chinese People's Volunteers which fought across the Yalu River marched towards the Gobi soon after returning from the battlefield. A large number of outstanding graduates from various colleges in China and many distinguished engineers and technicians, singing the battle song "Go Where We Are Needed and Settle Where Life Is Hard," also left for the wilderness.

At that time, there was no place to stay on the Gobi Desert. The heroic engineer corps braved sand storms to sink wells, build houses and construct railroads. Tracks of trucks transporting materials were everywhere. In order to ease the people's burden, they also reclaimed land, grew crops, planted trees and built reservoirs to create a "nanniwan" of the Gobi.

During rocket-launching tests, the sons and daughters of the Chinese people have displayed dauntless heroism here.

On a cold windy day they were conducting a low orbit test of a long-range rocket. Up to a hundred tons of fuel had been jetted into the rocket chamber. At the "ignition" order, the rocket roared a while but did not lift off. Flames and smoke soon covered the launching pad. Many communists rushed towards the pad, with Liu Dequing, deputy commander of the rocket-launching pad, running in the vanguard. This 1959 college graduate had vowed as soon as he arrived at the rocket base: "I will dedicate my life to rockets." Now it was time to test him. Standing in billowing heavy smoke and disregarding personal safety, he directed the fight. When a toxic fuel mixture gas blew towards him, he shouted one order after another: "Hurry, fight the fire, increase pressure!" "Tighten the sealing screws," "plug in short-circuit wires"... (XINHUA elipsis) After a stubborn struggle, they finally saved the rocket and the launching pad.

At the rocket flight data computing center, we met Li Fengzhou, an "iron-man-type" computer engineer. In order to keep all the computers in their best operating condition, he worked hard more than 10 hours daily.

He led his men in doing an outstanding job in computing rocket flight data during all the rocket launchings. They also renovated and built more than 30 pieces of computer control equipment. He saved several hundred thousand yuan for the state by designing and building an automatic rocket flight parameter indicator.

Tao Sicai, a young radar technician, had worked tirelessly in the radar room day and night since he arrived at the base after graduation from Chengdu Electronics Communications Engineering College. When China was preparing to launch a new-type satellite, he fell ill because of much overwork and was taken to the hospital. Lying in his hospital bed, he still thought of his beloved radar. He begged the chief doctor: "The satellite will soon be launched. I cannot leave my post. Doctor, please let me go!" He returned to the radar room and checked the radar overnight. He was taken back to the hospital after the radar tracked the satellite and gathered accurate flight data.

We then ended our visit to the rocket base.

39 BUDDHIST MONKS GRADUATE AFTER 2-YEAR COURSE

[Text] Beijing, July 22 (XINHUA) -- Thirty-nine monks today graduated from the Chinese Buddhist Institute and received diplomas after finishing a two-year preparatory course here today at a ceremony in the 1,300-year-old Fayuan Temple.

The graduates, ranging from 20 to 30, are the first group of educated young Buddhist devotees the institute has trained since it was reopened in 1980 after more than a dozen years of closure. Most of them are monks in China's noted temples and some are former workers, students and unemployed youths.

The Buddhist Association of China in the past two years sent Venerables Ju Zhan, Zheng Guo and Ming Zhen as well as Buddhist experts to teach the students. The students have studied more than 20 books on Buddhism and initially mastered the rudimentary knowledge of Buddhist scriptures, law, theory and history.

Venerable Ming Zhen, vice-president of the institute, said he was pleased with the progress of the students. "Although some questions in the examination paper were very difficult to answer, about 70 percent of the students got excellent marks," he said.

Graduate representative Long Zhang spoke at the ceremony. He thanked the party, the government, leaders of the institute and the teachers for the care and attention given the students. He said: "After graduation, we'll continue to study Buddhism and try to be Buddhist successors who love both the country and the faith."

According to Ju Zhan, vice-president of the institute, some of the graduates will begin regular college courses in the institute after passing an examination, and the others will return to their temples.

Since the students entered the institute, they have received a monthly allowance, a little higher than the other college students, from the Buddhist Association of China. In addition to Buddhism, they also studied Chinese, Japanese and English languages and physical education.

According to Zhao Puchu, president of the Buddhist Association and president of the institute, in addition to the Chinese Buddhist Institute, training courses on Buddhism have been set up in Suzhou and Gushan in east China, and more Buddhist institutes are to be added in Nanjing, Chengdu, Qinghai, Gansu and Tibet.

BEIJING OFFICIAL URGES PROMOTING INTELLECTUALS

[Report: "Beijing Municipal Economic Commission Vice Chairman Wang Daming Says at National Conference on Enterprise Consolidation That Competent Intellectuals Should Be Promoted to Leading Posts To Increase Economic Returns"]

[Text] Editor's note: The opinion put forth by Comrade Wang Daming [3769 1129 2494] in light of actual conditions is very much to the point. The speeches delivered by some comrades are very lengthy and loosely organized and have missed the target. As far as a basic unit of an enterprise is concerned, the crux is to provide its leading group with a few "enlightened people." Restructuring, consolidation, increase of economic returns and putting an end to unhealthy tendencies are all related to the correct handling of the problem regarding cadres.

It is now time to make the decision on admitting into the leading groups a large number of "enlightened people" who support the party's line, are knowledgeable, have a pioneering spirit and are young and vigorous. [end editor's note]

At a recent national conference on enterprise consolidation, Wang Daming, vice chairman of the Beijing Municipal Economic Commission, said: The low cultural, technical and vocational levels of leding cadres is the chief cause of mismanagement and inefficiency of many enterprises in Beijing. In particular, some small factories are still being managed by "grandpas" and "grandmas." It is simply impossible to increase economic returns without consolidating the leading groups of enterprises in line with the requirements of the "four modernizations" and without providing the leading groups with a few "enlightened people."

Wang Daming said: The first group of 258 enterprises in Beijing to be consolidated has 1 601 secretaries and deputy secretaries, factory directors and deputy directors, of whom only one-third have attained or surpassed the cultural level of a senior middle school student and only 322, or one-fifth, have obtained professional titles. The leaders of 43 of these enterprises are below the cultural level of a junior middle school student. This situation is highly incompatible with the demand for strengthening enterprise management.

Wang Daming held that this situation was caused by the fact that the policy on intellectuals really had not been implemented. He said: There is no lack of intellectual cadres in some trades. The question is that the intellectuals who are qualified to be admitted into the leading groups have not been promoted to leading posts. For example, the Beijing auto plant has 796 technical cadres, but only 2 of its 10 leading cadres are university graduates; of the 77 intermediate-level party and administrative cadres, only 28.6 percent are intellectuals. Some key departments of this plant require advanced scientific and technological knowledge, but their principal leaders are not intellectuals and some of them possess a cultural level of a junior middle school or primary school student.

Wang Daming said: The results will be greatly different if this problem is solved. The leading group of the Beijing No 9 radio component factory has undergone consolidation three times. At present, of the five factory directors and deputy directors, four are university graduates and the fifth is an intermediate technical school graduate. The average age of the factory's cadres has dropped from 46.5 to 42. They are working vigorously. The factory is being run with better results than ever and has attained increasingly better economic returns. A comparison between 1981 and 1979 shows that total industrial output value increased by 85.9 percent, output of major products by 118 percent and total profits by 26.4 percent. A comparison between the period from January to May of this year and the same period last year shows that output value rose by 21 percent and output by 14 percent, production costs dropped by 19 percent and total profits increased by 43 percent.

The Beijing No 12 rubber factory was poorly managed. It used materials lavishly. Its expenditures were unstable. Its statistics were obtained by "guessing the size of a pile." Its production was carried out without any improvement for many years. The bureau supervising this factory assigned to it a director versed in enterprise management and manufacturing rubber products. This factory director found five university graduates from a rear service unit and charged them with the work concerning production, technical know-how, finance and supply and marketing. They started by improving management at the basic level, thereby bringing about a quick change in production. Output value during the period from January to May this year increased by 43 percent and profits by 98 percent as compared with the same period of last year. The masses attributed this to the arrival of the "enlightened people."

RENMIN RIBAO ON NEED TO PROPAGANDIZE CADRES

["Ideological Comments" column by Ge Wen [7245 2429] and Zhang Yun [4545 0061]: "We Must First of all Convince Our Cadres"]

[Text] Carrying out education to convince others is a characteristic of our ideological and political work. We must carry out this education for the masses. However, it is more important to carry out the education for our cadres. To convince the people, we must first of all convince our cadres.

This is not a new issue. If we review the history of our party, we can see that at some major historical turning points when the party's guiding principles and policies were being initiated, the party always carried out education to convince the cadres first and enabled them to reach a common understanding of the hows and whys. After this, through the cadres, the party united with, educated and led the masses to strive for successes in the revolutionary cause. Many of Comrade Mao Zedong's articles were aimed at convincing the cadres through education. The famous Gutian conference's resolution criticized various erroneous ideas within the Red Army such as the purely military viewpoint, the nonorganizational viewpoint, subjectivism, putschism and absolute egalitarianism. The primary targets of the criticism were cadres. Various famous reports during the war of resistance against Japan such as "On Protracted War" and "The Situation and Tasks in the anti-Japanese War After the Fall of Shanghai and Taiyuan" were all made in light of misgivings among the cadres about the situation, tasks and prospects of the war of resistance against Japan, and were also aimed at convincing the cadres through education. We must first of all convince our cadres. This is an important experience we have gained in carrying out our ideological and political work.

It is a pity that under the erroneous "leftist" influence for a period of time following liberation, this precious and effective experience was gradually discarded. Whenever ideological and political work is mentioned, people think only of the mass work carried out by the cadres and seldom realize that the cadres themselves are also the targets of our ideological and political work. According to some comrades, it seems that only the ordinary people are in need of heightening their awareness of the revolution and improving their cognitive ability and that the cadres' awareness and ability are quite high enough. It seems that the ordinary people always fail to straighten out their thinking and that the cadres always suceed in straightening out their own thinking. Ideological and political work has not only been carried out for the masses only but has also gradually become a way for leaders to deal with the ordinary people. It goes without saying that this way of doing things has serious consequences. It not only adversely affects the honor of our ideological and political work but also disrupts the relationship between the cadres and the masses.

In fact, we must not blame the masses for our failures to successfully handle some affairs. First of all, we must find out reasons for the failures from the ideological style of the cadres and party members.

Some areas, units and departments have failed to successfully implement the party's guiding principles and policies since the party's third plenary session. The first reason for their failure is that leading cadres there have failed to straighten out their thinking. For example, some areas just failed to popularize the agricultural production responsibility system for a period of time. Was it because the masses did not support and welcome it? It was not like that at all. The broad masses of peasants supported with immense enthusiasm this good policy formulated by the party Central Committee and strongly called for implementing the responsibility system. The crux of the matter is that some cadres in such areas have created difficulties and stood up against the implementation of the system. People have described this situation has "hot at both ends and cold in the middle." Only by solving these cadres' ideological problems and dispelling and eliminating their misgivings and resistance can we successfully popularize the agricultural production responsibility system in those areas.

During the previous period, cases of recklessly cutting down state-owned forests and of plundering state property have occurred in succession in some areas. Although the State Council has laid repeated injunctions on them, it has failed to put an end to such cases. Such cases appear to be sabotage activities carried out by some backward people. However, if we conscientiously make investigations, we may discover that such sabotage activities always win local cadres' sympathy and support and are even incited by local cadres. These comrades have taken an erroneous stand. In order to curry favor with the masses, these comrades have appeased unreasonable demands made by some backward people at the expense of the interests of the state and the fundamental and long-term interests of the broad masses of people, turned a blind eye to violations of the law and activities of sabotaging state property, and even fished in troubled waters and reaped some profit from such violations and sabotage activities. To put an end to such sabotage activities, we must first of all carry out ideological and political work for these cadres and assist them in deepening their ideological understanding, adopting an overall point of view and strengthening their sense of law and discipline.

We are currently in a new historical period and are facing many new situations and new problems. Due to the effects produced by various subjective elements, it often happens that some cadres' thinking lags behind the situation and the masses. This means that we must make further efforts to conscientiously strengthen ideological and political work for cadres. We must always remember this: We must first of all convince our cadres.

GUANGMING RIBAO ON PARTY, CONSTITUTION ROLES

[Article by Wu Jialin [0702 1367 7792]: "Upholding Party Leadership and Safeguarding the Dignity of the Constitution" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] When studying and discussing the draft of the revised constitution, some comrades find it difficult to understand certain things stipulated in the preamble and general principles, citing for example the phrases: "All political parties must make the constitution their basic norm of conduct" and "All political parties must abide by the constitution and the law. No organization or individual shall enjoy privileges that transcend the constitution and the law." The writer's personal views on this issue are presented in this article.

TWO GUIDELINES IN REVISING THE CONSTITUTION

In revising the draft of the constitution, several guidelines were followed. This article will not cite all of them, but will emphatically point out only two of these guidelines: one is to uphold the four basic principles; the other is to develop socialist democracy and perfect the socialist legal system.

In upholding the four basic principles, the crux is to adhere to the leadership of the Communist Party, it would be impossible to uphold socialism, impossible to establish and perfect the socialist economic and political systems and impossible to work out the draft of the constitution which was recently promulgated for nationwide discussion.

Developing socialist democracy and perfecting the socialist legal system have also been taken as one of the guidelines in revising the constitution. By doing so, it not only can sum up the historical experiences and lessons since the founding of our country, but it also can meet objective needs of further developing our country. Drawing up a relatively perfect constitution and establishing its authority are important steps toward developing socialist democracy and perfecting the socialist legal system, because the constitution is the fundamental law of our state and provides the basis for daily legislative work. A relatively perfect constitution will create favorable conditions for stepping up the work of making laws and perfecting the socialist legal system step by step. The constitution also provides the legal basis for promoting a democratic system. The basic political system and fundamental rights and duties of citizens which symbolize the socialist democratic principles of our country are all included in the major contents of the constitution and should be affirmed and protected bythe constitution. If the constitution is not perfect enough in content or does not have the necessary authority, then it will be impossible to develop socialist democracy and perfect the socialist legal system.

Thus, it can be seen that we should not only uphold the party's leadership, but also safeguard the dignity of the constitution. This is exactly a concrete expression of the guidelines in revising the constitution. It is wrong and harmful to set the two things against one another.

AUTHORITY AND SANCTITY OF THE CONSTITUTION

In establishing the authority of the legal system and safeguarding its dignity, the most important thing is to establish the authority of the constitution and to safeguard its dignity, as the constitution is the fundamental law of the state and is an expression of providing a legal basis for the democratic system and showing the balance of class forces. The contemporary concept of ruling a country by law also calls for establishing the highest authority of the constitution. It is opposite the system of feudal despotic rule by an individual leading personage. Generally speaking, the so-called rule by an individual leading personage does not exclude the role of law on the surface. But the individual leading personage is virtually more superior than the law. This individual, when holding power in his hands, will ignore the law by placing himself or his words above everything else. Meanwhile, the so-called rule by law does not exclusively negate the role of an individual, but it only requires that the law be higher than an individual, everyone must keep himself within the bounds of the law, no individual or class shall enjoy privileges that override or transcend the law, and the authority of the law must be over that of an individual. The reason why a democratic country should stress the constitution as the highest authority is that if the authority of an individual is above that of the constitution, then the democratic system will exist in name only and the autocratic system may be revived. To set up fascist rule, certain capitalist countries began by getting rid of democracy in parliaments, abolishing democratic principles in their constitutions and fostering personal dictatorships. There is an essential distinction between socialist rule by law and that by capitalists. However, socialist rule by law also needs to establish the highest authority of the constitution. Otherwise, the socialist democratic system might be impaired. At the time when the Lin Biao-Jiang Qing cliques rode roughshod, the system of people's congresses had a mere nominal existence. The NPC had been suspended for a decade. The sacred principle of "sovereign rights belonging to the people" was only empty talk. The solemn constitution became a mere scrap of paper. All democracy was trampled under foot. So there was no way to talk about socialist democracy.

With a view to establishing the authority of the constitution and safeguarding its dignity, not only must there be a relatively perfect constitution which state organs, state functionaries and all citizens can take as the law to abide by with regulations to follow, but there also must be a series of methods and a system to supervise enforcement of the constitution. This is stipulated in the last passage of the preamble, article 5 of the general principles and articles 60, 62 and 65 concerning the structure of the state in the draft of the revised constitution, and is more perfect than the 1954 Constitution. However, the articles concerning the content in this aspect in the constitution are not compactly laid out.

Measures to ensure the enforcement of the constitution are not sufficient. In particular, the provisions conerning how to adjudicate and deal with offenders of the constitution are not concrete enough. We hope these points will be made more substantial in content when finalizing the constitution. This will help establish the authority of the constitution and uphold its sanctity. A relatively perfect constitution which can play its full role in actual life is conducive to an early realization of a high degree of socialist democracy.

A UNITY OF THE PARTY'S STAND AND THE PEOPLE'S WILL

Upholding the sanctity of the constitution goes along with upholding the leadership of the party. This is because both the concrete content of the draft constitution and the whole procedure of its revision work all reflect the leading role of the party and a unity of the party's stand and the people's will.

The constitution of our country gives full expression to the will and interests of the people of the whole country led by the working class. The CCP is the vanguard of the Chinese working class and also the leading nucleus of the people throught the country. Since taking political power into its hands, the Chinese working class has been, through its vanguard -- the CCP -- exercising its leadership over the country. The will of the party, the working class and the people is consistent and inseparable in nature. Under the direct leadership of the party, the highest organ of state power through its legislative activities makes the will of the ruling class (the working class and all of the people) become the state will, the constitution and the law, and also makes it the norm of conduct that all citizens must abide by.

The substantial content of the draft constitution such as the basic system and tasks of the state, all fundamental principles and the fundamental rights and duties of citizens, are the stand of the party and also embody its will and interests. For example, the basic tasks of the state defined by the draft constitution are exactly the goal of struggle set forth at the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. The fundamental political system affirmed by the draft is the system of people's congresses with democratic centralism which was expounded by Comrade Mao Zedong in "On New Democracy." The principles and policies defined in the draft on the building of material and spiritual civilizations are the principles and policies of the party which have been legalized by law and also made the fundamental policies of the state. The stand of the party and the will of the people can be unified only because what the party seeks is not interests for itself, but the maximum interests of the overwhelming majority of the people. The reason why the party upholds socialism is that only socialism can save China and it conforms with the maximum interests of the overwhelming majority of the people. Therefore, any deviation from the principles of the constitution is inconsistent with the will and interests of the party and the people.

The whole course of national discussions on the draft of the revised constitution is also the course of unifying the party's stand with the people's will. The work of revising the constitution has all along been carried out under the direct leadership of the party Central Committee. The constitution is a general charter which 1 billion people should abide by as a norm of conduct. Hence, it is quite necessary to have the people throughout the country discuss it. This not only reflects the democratic principle that the people administer state affairs and participate in drawing up the constitution, but also can ensure perfection of the new constitution both in content and form. A unified action of 1 billion people can only be assured through their unified understanding. To this view, upholding the sanctity of the constitution and upholding the will and interests of the party and the people are all one thing both in nature and in form.

HISTORICAL EXPERIENCES AND LESSONS

In analyzing the causes of the "Cultural Revolution" it is explained in the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" adopted by the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee: "It remains difficult to eliminate the evil ideological and political influence of centuries of feudal autocracy."

And for various historical reasons, we failed to institutionalize and legalize inner-party democracy and democracy in the political and social life of the country, or we drew up the relevant laws but they lacked due authority. This meant that conditions were present for the overconcentration of party power in individuals and for the development of arbitrary individual rule and personality cults in the party. Thus, it was hard for the party and state to prevent the initiation of the 'Cultural Revolution' or to check its development." This can be clearly seen from the experiences and lessons in drawing up and enforcing the 1954 Constitution.

The 1954 Constitution was the first one promulgated after the founding of the PRC. It was relatively flawless both in content and in form as it symbolized two important principles — socialism and democracy. The 1954 Constitution affirmed: In the transition period the general tasks of the nation are to realize socialist industrialization and carry out the socialist transformation of agriculture, handicrafts and capitalist industry and commerce step by step. This fully reflected the basic requirements of the state in the transition period and the people's common desire to build socialism. This constitution not only fixed the socialist orientation and upheld the socialist road, but it also defined flexible methods, steps and concrete forms of carrying out socialist transformation according to the practical situation in China. In fact, it combined principles with flexibility. The 1954 Constitution established a complete people's democratic system of a new type, ensured extensive rights and freedoms for the people, and acknowledged successes the Chinese people had scored in the field of socialist democracy. In the course of drawing up this constitution, attention was given to the combination of internal and external experience, and the combination of leadership with the masses. In the first few years when the 1954 Constitution was seriously enforced, a picture of prosperity was seen in every area of work of our country, great progress was made in socialist construction and socialist transformation, and socialist democracy and the socialist legal system were being put on the right track step by step. It was a pity that, in the last year of the 1950's, some key principles of the 1954 Constitution were arbitrarily criticized as a result of endless political movements. This impaired the due authority of the 1954 Constitution. And in the 10 years of disorder, the whole situation became absolutely lawless because of the reactionary policy pushed by the Lin Biao-Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques. At that time, the constitution became nothing but a scrap of paper, democratic rights of the people were violently stepped on, and the state legal system was thoroughly wrecked. All this caused grave consequences. The loss of the due authority of the constitution and the emergence of a lawless situation brought a great catastrophe to the country and nation and caused incalculable losses to the interests of the party and the people so that the correct leadership of the party was damaged. We must never forget these valuable experiences and painful lessons of history.

For this very reason, the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee demanded that a fundamental task of the socialist revolution be the gradual establishment of a highly democratic socialist political system. An important step toward this task was taken to revise the 1978 Constitution. The positive and negative historical experiences and lessons gained since the founding of the country tell us that in order to attain the objective of struggle and accomplish the basic tasks of our party, it is absolutely necessary to stress the importance of establishing the authority of the constitution and to uphold its dignity.

Thus, it can be seen that upholding party leadership and safeguarding the dignity of the constitution are of course in dilectical unity. We should not indiscriminately set the two things against one another. However, some comrades insist on separating the two metaphysically. They believe party leadership can hardly be upheld unless the party is taken as an organ which transcends the constitution and the dignity of the constitution cannot be upheld unless party leadership is negated. This point of view is wrong and harmful.

AN IMPORTANT CONTENT OF IMPROVING PARTY LEADERSHIP

In order to successfully accomplish the basic tasks of the state as stipulated by the draft of the revised constitution in the new historical period, we must uphold, strengthen and improve the leadership of our party. We must correctly handle the relationship between the party and state and improve the methods of exercising party leadership over state affairs. The party should take the constitution as the norm of its main activities, develop socialist democracy and strengthen the socialist legal system. This is the major content of strengthening and improving party leadership at the present stage. It is the party which leads the work of revising the constitution. The party will also lead 1 billion people to strictly enforce and abide by the constitution because any offense against the constitution will impair the interests of the party and the people and will be detrimental to upholding and strengthening the leadership of the party. In the draft constitution the provision that "all citizens are equal before the law" and the provision that "no organization or individual shall enjoy privileges that transcend the constitution and the law" are applicable to party organizations at all levels and every party member, and at the same time they must take the lead in upholding the dignity of the constitution and ensuring its enforcement. Owing to the baneful influence of feudal autocracy and nihilism over the law, some bad practices ran wild for a time in the past, such as "an individual taking the place of the law," "certain statements of an individual taking the place of the law," "certain statements of an individual being more important than the law," "power being higher than the law," and so on and so forth. As a result, these practices have caused suffering to the country and the people, but also have had a big impact on the authority of the constitution in the minds of the people. This is harmful to the strengthening of the socialist legal system. In upholding the dignity of the constitution and regaining its authority in the eyes of the people, the key to success is to deepen the understanding of the party member cadres on the necessity of upholding the dignity of the constitution. Upholding the dignity of the constitution should be unified with strengthening and improving the leadershop of the party. Moreover, party member cadres must take the initiative in abiding by and enforcing the constitution and take it as the sole criterion of all conduct. Only by so doing will the constitution have its due authority and play its full role in accomplishing the basic tasks of the state.

JIANGSU APPOINTS HAN PEIXIN ACTING GOVERNOR

OW221015 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] The Standing Committee of the 5th Jiangsu Provincial People's Congress held its 15th Session in Nanjing on the morning of 21 July. The meeting decided that Han Peixin be appointed as acting governor of Jiangsu Province. It also approved Hui Yuyu's resignation from the governorship and the resignations tendered by Gong Weizhen, Wang Haisu and Liu Lin from their posts as vice governors. The meeting was presided over by Xu Jiatun, chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee.

Governor Hui Yuyu attended the meeting. His first act was to submit to the meeting his resignation from the governorship. He said: If our country wants to accomplish the four modernizations, the leading groups must be composed of revolutionary, younger, well educated and specialized personnel. As I am very old, it is very necessary to select a comrade in the prime of life to replace me. He said that he, as a Communist must continue to dedicate himself to the revolution in his remaining years and do whatever he can for the party and the people, though he will no longer serve as governor in the future.

Then, Comrade Liu Lin, second secretary of the Jiangsu Provincial CCP Committee, on behalf of the provincial party committee, made a proposal to the meeting on changes of the principal leading members of the provincial people's government. He also gave explanations on the proposal.

He said: In view of Comrade Hui Yuyu's resignation request, the provincial party committee has suggested that Comrade Hui Yuyu be relieved of the governorship and Comrade Han Peixin, secretary of the provincial party committee, be appointed as acting governor. Meanwhile, Comrades Gong Weizen and Wang Haisu and I myself are also submitting our resignations from our posts as vice governors. We request the provincial people's congress standing committee to consider our resignations.

In his explanations, Comrade Liu Lin described the past revolutionary careers of the three veteran comrades, Hui Yuyu, Gong Weizhen and Wang Haisu, and fully affirmed their contributions to the party and the revolutionary cause. Comrade Liu Lin said: The three veteran comrades are very old. With their resignations from the leading posts of the provincial government and their stepping back to the second line, they can avoid overworking and prolong their life to continue their contributions to the party and to the people in their remaining years.

In his explanations to the committee members, Comrade Liu Lin gave a fairly detailed account of relevant matters concerning Comrade Han Peixin. He pointed out that it is appropriate to let Comrade Han Peixin take over the governorship and that he will be able to bear the arduous tasks that will be entrusted to him by the party Central Committee, the State Council and the 60 million people of Jiangsu Province.

After serious discussion, the meeting unanimously agreed to the proposal on changes of the principal leading members of the provincial people's government made by Comrade Liu Lin on behalf of the Jiangsu Provincial CCP Committee. Present at the meeting as observers were responsible persons of the provincial higher people's court, the provincial people's procuratorate and the departments concerned of the provincial people's government, and responsible persons of the people's congress standing committees of Nanjing Municipality and some counties.

SHANGHAI FORUM URGES MORE TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER

Yu Guangyuan Remarks

OW080147 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1512 GMT 6 Jul 82

[Excerpts] Shanghai, 6 Jul (XINHUA) -- Noted economist Yu Guangyuan has said: There is a wide gap between China's advanced and backward areas in the development of productive forces. The transfer of production technology from Shanghai and other advanced areas to the backward areas should be a major task of strategic significance.

Yu Guangyuan made the above statement at a forum to discuss the economic results of technological cooperation between Shanghai and fraternal provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions.

The 8-day forum was jointly held by the China Association for Science and Technology and the Shanghai Federation of Philosophy and Social Sciences Societies at Yu Guangyuan's suggestion. The great quantities of material provided by the forum showed that technological cooperation activities between Shanghai and fraternal provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions have flourished in recent years. Many of Shanghai's advanced production technologies have been transferred to other localities by means of technological services, reciprocal trade, transfer of scientific and technological research results, joint ventures and the establishment of joint firms which have played a positive role in promoting economic development in fraternal provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions.

During the forum, over 60 special investigation reports and scientific papers were exchanged among the more than 200 natural and social science workers and economists from 17 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions.

The forum was held in Shanghai from 29 June to 6 July with the enthusiastic support of the Shanghai Municipal CCP Committee and the municipal people's government. SHIJIE JINGJI DAOBAO Report

[Report: "Actively Transfer the Advanced Technology of the Coastal Areas to the Interior"]

[Text] Strengthening close relations between Shanghai and the interior and enhancing economic returns of technical cooperation is an important strategic measure for developing production in our country. A symposium on the economic returns of technical cooperation between Shanghai and the interior jointly sponsored by the China Association for Science and Technology and the Shanghai Federation of Philosophy and Social Sciences will open tomorrow in Shanghai. This will be one of the comparatively larger academic discussions held in China in recent years. More than 200 people will attend the symposium, including representatives from the departments concerned of the central authorities and planning commission, economic commissions, scientific and technological commissions and economic institutes under the academies of social sciences and social science workers associations of provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions such as Beijing, Tianjin, Shanghai, Jiangsu, Zhejiang, Jiangxi, Fujian, Shandong, Anhui, Henan, Hubei, Guangxi, Sichuan, Guizhou, Yunnan, Nei Monggol, Shaanxi, Ningxia, Heilongjiang and so forth. Representatives from other units concerned and some relevant factories and enterprises which have organized cooperation in Suzhou, Changzhou, Nantong, Hangzhou, Yichang, Kunming, Suihua and so forth will also attend the symposium.

The central task of this symposium is to expound on and prove in a scientific way the economic returns of technical cooperation between Shanghai and the interior in recent years and discuss its strategic significance in the development of the national economy. Scientific treatises and investigation reports which have been submitted to the symposium hold that the practice of transferring the advanced technology of the advanced areas to the backward areas and reducing the distinction between them conforms with our present national conditions. Furthermore, it is also the most practical and important way to enhance our country's economic retursn.

Because of historical reasons, there is a marked economic and technical imbalance between different areas in our country. Such imbalance has occurred between the economically developed areas in the east and the south and the economically underveloped areas in the west and the north. It also exists between major cities of the coastal areas such as Shanghai and so forth and various provinces in the interior areas. Judging from the differences between the level of production of advanced areas and areas in general throughout the country, we discern an enormous potential in such imbalance that can be tapped in order to enhance economic returns. In 1980 every worker employed by industrial enterprises under the ownership by the whole people throughout the country contributed an average output value of 12,000 yuan, whereas every worker in Shanghai contributed an output value of 29,600 yuan. The amount of tax and profits contributed by every worker in Shanghai was 8,690 yuan, whereas every worker in general throughout the country only contributed an average 2,889 yuan of tax and profits. Shanghai consumed energy amounting to 2.41 tons of coal in contributing each 10,000 yuan of output value, whereas the average national level was 8.15 tons of coal.

Shanghai engages mainly in processing industries and its industrial structure is different from other parts of the country. This has affected output value, profits and tax and level of energy consumption to a certain extent. However, when we compare certain industries in Shanghai with similar trades in the country, we discern that the differences between them are still wide. Every light industrial worker in Shanghai contributes to the state tax and profits amounting to 9,496 yuan, whereas every worker working in the same field through the country only contributes 2,025 yuan of tax and profits on average. Every worker employed in the textile industry in Shanghai contributes tax and profits to the state amounting to 8,604 yuan, whereas every worker working in the same trade throughout the country only turns over 4,660 yuan of tax and profits to the state on average. Therefore, it is the unshirkable duty of the central cities to help backward areas so that the latter will continuously make progress and develop. Although there are economic gaps between the advanced and backward areas, their potential should be tapped so that they will continuously enhance their economic returns.

About 17 provinces and autonomous regions throughout the country have cooperated with Shanghai in more than 100 projects. They have found the following main advantages in this respect: 1) Their cooperation will bring the superiority of Shanghai and the interior into full play. 2) Their cooperation will be beneficial to breaking through barriers, resulting from different ownership, between areas and departments and to reasonably exploiting and utilizing natural resources. 3) Their cooperation will be beneficial to enhancing the level of production and economic returns of the interior. 4) Their cooperation will be beneficial to readjusting the product structure of Shanghai and opening up new sources of goods for its foreign trade. With regard to Shanghai itself, such cooperation will help it obtain a large quantity of raw and processed materials which were formerly in short supply and certain profits from some compensated transfer in accordance to contracts.

Technical cooperation between Shanghai and the interior is in accord with the objective requirement of the large-scale coordination of modern production. Such cooperation is now in full swing. However, it is not developing very fast as seen from the needs and possibilities of economic development. Judging from the overall interests of the entire nation, we realize that such cooperation is now basically carried out from bottom to top and in a spontaneous way. To avoid production which hampers the state plan and blind production, it is our pressing task to strengthen planned management and leadership to achieve greater results.

HK130303 Nanning Guangxi Regional Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 12 Jul 82

[Summary] The Guangxi Regional CCP Committee and Government held a telephone conference on 22 July to make arrangements for summer reaping and sowing and for winning a bumper harvest.

Qin Yingji, secretary of the regional CCP committee and chairman of the regional people's government, presided and spoke. (Wang Duguang), member of the standing committee of the regional CCP committee and chairman of the regional agricultural committee, also spoke.

The meeting analyzed the situation in Guangxi agricultural production. There are hopes of increase output and bumper harvest, despite various natural disasters in the first half of the year. If there are no particularly great natural didasters now, grain production can maintain or exceed the previous record level. However, there is still a lot of work to do to achieve this aim, so there is no room for blind optimism or slackness. The meeting pointed out: "At present the leadership's thinking and forces are scattered in some places. They have not yet organized strong and effective leadership over crash-reaping and sowing. It is necessary to concentrate the energy of the leaders at all levels on crash-reaping and sowing." Leading county and commune cadres must therefore regard crash-reaping and sowing as the current priority task. Meetings that would affect this work must be postponed. It is necessary to stabilize and perfect the production responsibility systems and fully mobilize the initiative of both collective and individual. "Places practicing unified management and accounting must strengthen unified leadership and perfect the management of planning and labor. Places practicing the system of assigning land to the households in return for fixed levies under unified leadership must bring into play the spirit of mutual aid and cooperation." Production teams must care for dependents of martyrs and servicemen and households in difficulties, which lack labor force.

GUIZHOU CONVENES PROPAGANDA WORK MEETING

HK190645 Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Summary] "According to a GUIZHOU RIBAO report, in order to exchange experiences in launching socialist education among the peasants and to grasp well economic theory study for in-service cadres, the Guizhou Provincial CCP Committee Propaganda Department held a provincial propaganda work meeting from 13 to 16 July." Since late March, various areas in the province have been launching education in socialism among the peasants. This education is divided into three stages: conducting rotational training for backbone cadres, conducting overall popularization and making summations. As of now, most of the areas in the province have completed work in launching socialist education.

While launching socialist education, CCP committees at all levels have made use of positive examples and adopted the method of persuasion. Most people now have a clear understanding of the party's principles and policies and know what is right and what is wrong. By means of the launching of socfalist education in the rural areas, most peasants have enhanced their socialist awareness. As a result, production has also been increased. Reality has proved that in areas where socialist education has not been launched, people have a shaky understanding of the party's principles and policies and production tasks are left unfinished. Thus, the meeting held that it is necessary to complete educational tasks in these areas before the end of August.

Regarding the economic theory study for in-service cadres, most of the areas throughout the province have done a great deal of work since March. Most of the municipalities and counties have adopted the method of organizing study groups for in-service cadres and scored good results. As of the end of June, the number of cadres at and above county level joining the study groups accounted for 75 percent of the total number of cadres who should participate in the study groups.

After analyzing the major problems concerning the in-service cadres' study of economic theory, the meeting held that strengthening leadership, launching inspections, and exercising guidance are important links in grasping study by the in-service cadres. Small study groups for busy cadres is a good method and should be popularized.

SICHUAN MEETING ON PLANNED PARENTHOOD PROPAGANDA

HK110327 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Summary] The Sichuan Provincial CCP Committee and People's Government held a telephone conference on 10 July to mobilize the whole province to conduct planned parenthood propaganda in a concentrated way from 15 July to 15 August, so as to control population growth and fulfill this year's population plan. Provincial CCP committee Secretary He Haoju and Vice Governor Liu Haiquan spoke at the meeting.

He Haoju said: "Practicing planned parenthood and controlling population growth is a major affair related to the success or failure of the four modernizations drive. Since the beginning of the 1970's, and especially since the third plenary session, the province has scored very great success in planned parenthood work. However, beginning last year, the province's planned parenthood work has encountered many new conditions and problems, and a tendency for the population growth to increase has appeared. The rate of late marriage and child-bearing and the percentage of couples taking out single-child certificates have declined, while the numbers of births not covered by the plan and the number of couples having more than one child have increased. The number of births in the first 5 months of this year was 17.8 percent more than in the same period last year. If we fail to take resolute and effective measures to reverse this situation as quickly as possible, there is the danger that population gorwth will get out of control. This will affect the development of the national economy. We must affect the development of the national economy. We must also realize that Sichuan's population is great and the base figure is high. In the next 10 years, an annual average of 3 million young men and women will be getting married and having children; thus, a new birth peak will emerge."

The meeting called on the province to publicize in depth the instructions of the CCP Central Committee and State Council on further promoting planned parenthood work, and the Central Committee's open letter, to further enhance everyone's understanding of the great importance of controlling population growth. The province must work to increase the late marriage and late birth rates, the percentage of people practicing planned parenthood and the number of couples having only one child, and to reduce the numbers of people having more than one child. The party committees and government at all levels must attach great importance to this propaganda drive.

HK201319 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 0000 GMT 20 Jul 82

[Summary] "On the evening of 18 July, the Xizang Regional CCP Committee and the regional people's government held a regional telephone conference on fighting drought, mobilizing leaders at all levels and the broad masses of people to actively participate in the current struggle against drought and calamities and strive for a good agricultural harvest this year. Sowing was delayed in an area of 160,000 mu because of water shortage. According to the forecast of the meteorological station, abundant rainfall is not expected in most of the rural areas, and Xigaze Prefecture is expected to be particularly dry. Comrade Yang Zongxin demanded that party organizations at all levels mobilize the masses to participate in the struggle against drought. He said: "We must make full use of existing water conservation facilities and give full play to the functions of the irrigation machines. It is necessary to organize forces to repair broken water conservation facilities and irrigation machines and water channels, striving to enlarge the irrigated area."

We must strengthen leadership over fighting drought and educate the broad masses to carry forward the communist spirit of cooperation. We must achieve maximum results with the minimum amount of water consumption. While concentrating all our energy on fighting drought, we must also take precautions against other kinds of natural calamities. All places must take appropriate measures to keep the natural calamities under control and minimize the damage.

Comrade Yang Zongxin concluded: Party and government departments at all levels in all places must take the antidrought struggle as the present central task and concentrate the main forces on fighting against drought. It is necessary to organize powerful work teams to fight in the forefront to assist production. All walks of life in society and PLA soldiers stationed in localities must vigorously assist the launching of the antidrought struggle. We must urge communes and brigades which have already lowered production because of the drought to vigorously develop diversification and sideline production in order to make up for the losses.

YUNNAN'S AN PINGSHENG ON RESPONSIBILITY SYSTEMS

HK190918 Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 18 Jul 82

[Reporter on article by An Pingsheng: "On Implementing the Responsibility System in Industrial Enterprises"]

[Text] In his report "The Present Economic Situation and Guiding Principles for Future Economic Construction," Comrade Zhao Ziyang pointed out: In the past, the main defect in the economic system of our country was, in the field of management, overconcentration of power and lack of division between government and enterprises. In the field of distribuion, it was the doctrine of eating out of one big pot and egalitarianism. In my opinion, these two main defects were the common diseases of our socialist enterprises in the past. For a long period, they seriously dampened the enthusiasm of enterprises and workers and staff, and impeded the development of social productive forces. The practicing of the economic responsibility system in recent years has provided valuable experience in resolving this problem. That is, in handling the relationship between enterprises and the state, it is necessary to give the necessary decisionmaking power to enterprises on the basis of guaranteeing the fulfillment of the state's plan and within its permissible scope. In handling the relationship between enterprises and staff and workers, it is necessary to provide appropriate material rewards to workers and staff on the premise of strengthening ideological and political work, and adhere to the principle of from each according to his ability, to each according to his work.

In the first half of the article, Comrade An Pinsheng introduces the situation of industrial production in our province since practicing the pilot projects of expanding decisionmaking power in enterprises and the subsequent economic responsibility system gradually from March 1979. He thus shows that the practice of the economic responsibility system in industrial enterprises is of far-reaching significance and is not at all less important than the socialist transformation of private industrial and commercial enterprises in the 1950's. This is a scientific Marxist conclusion.

The second half of the article is devoted to the discussion of the fact that we have no sound experience to draw upon in practicing the responsibility system in industrial enterprises, and we have no other alternative but to feel our way along. There are five specific suggestions in the article for doing this work well: 1) It is necessary to have a steady and unchanging policy in practicing the economic responsibility system in industrial enterprises. 2) It is necessary to correctly handle the relationships between the state, the enterprises and the workers and staff. 3) It is necessary to put the profit target in an appropriate position. 4) It is necessary to integrate practicing economic responsibility systems with straightening out the enterprises. 5) It is necessary to uphold the principle of placing ideological and political work in the leading position.

BEIJING PLANS FOR LONG-RANGE URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Plan Put Forward

OW211427 Beijing XINHUA in English 1223 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 19 (XINHUA) -- The Beijing Municipal People's Congress Standing Committee has started a 3-day meeting in the Great Hall of the People, examining an overall plan for the capital's development.

Put forward today by the municipal government, the plan shows the blueprints of the city as China's political center in the year 2000. It ranges from control of the city's size, protecting and rebuilding the old city with the Forbidden City as its centerpiece, to developing green cover and taking precautions against earthquakes.

The plan suggests that priorities be placed in the next few years on improvement of municipal works, construction of more houses and public services and the development of satellite cities. It also calls for greater efforts to settle problems posed by traffic, energy and water supplies in urban areas which are populous and congested with buildings, control environmental pollution caused by factories, and deal with uncoordinated land use and home building.

Explaining the plan on behalf of the city's government, Zhou Yongyuan, director of the Bureau of Urban Planning and Administration, said that the plan was guided by instructions issued by the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party in 1980. The instructions said Beijing should be China's political center and the cleanest, tidiest and most beautiful city in China, with a well-developed culture, science and technology and economy.

Beijing had a similar plan confirmed by the party in 1958. But, Zhou Yongyuan said with some regret, it was blocked from being implemented during the "Cultural Revolution". Although based on the 1958 plan, he continued, the present plan has been revised according to historical experiences and new conditions in the capital.

Beijing established an urban planning committee headed by Mayor Jiao Ruoyu. The mayor subsequently organized groups of architects, historians, geographers, population specialists, economists and experts in energy resources, water conservancy, environmental protection and agriculture in order to make a large-scale on-the-spot investigation in the city. Some of them also visited cities in Japan, the United States and countries in Europe to study experiences in city construction. Models and charts on the general plan were exhibited last year in the capital to collect opinions from some 10,000 specialists and representatives from all walks of life.

Attending today's meeting were more than 300 municipal people's congress standing committee members, members of the Beijing Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference and city officials in various fields. The members made an inspection tour of a satellite city and the newly-built living guarters. City specialists from Shanghai and Tianjin were also on the occasion as guests.

Details of Plan Passed

[Text] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- The overall plan for Beijing's future development defines the capital as China's political center but not necessarily the economic hub of the country.

And while Beijing is clearly aiming at modernization, this 3,000-year-old city seems determined to retain its glamor as an ancient capital of beautiful architecture, gardens and temples, and historical sites.

Details of the city's construction passed today at the municipal people's congress standing committee, to be submitted to the State Council for approval, outline the direction of its projected growth.

According to the plan, the construction of Beijing should facilitate the building of a leading center of government activity, national and international exchange. It is to be bolstered by a well-developed support system of culture, education, science and technology, as well as an economy suitable for the capital city.

In science, technology and culture, Beijing should have universities, science academies and theaters which will lead the country's modernization drive and provide experience and training for professionals in the provinces.

Beijing's heavy industry will gradually be shifted to serve light industry, municipal construction and public services. The focus will be on consumer industries, like textiles, electronics, instruments and meters, household electric appliances, food, clothing, printing, arts and crafts. The shortage of water and energy supplies and mineral resources will also be tackled.

In agriculture, Beijing's suburbs will be built into non-staple food production bases to provide the capital city with vegetables, milk, eggs, poultry and meat.

The plan strictly controls the city's size and aims at developing a powerful center with flourishing satellite townships. Communications and transportation, posts and telecommunications, and tourism are slated for accelerated development.

Today's congress standing committee approved of the plan as "conforming to Beijing's actual conditions." Mayor Jiao Ruoyu, head of the urban planning committee, told the meeting that a research institute will be established to study long-range city planning. "We have full confidence in the building of Beijing", the mayor said.

The three-day meeting heard a report on the plan made on behalf of the city government by Zhou Yongyuan, director of Beijing Bureau of Urban Planning and Administration, and had a detailed discussion of the plan. Suggestions were made to accelerate efforts in population control, city layout and beautifying environment.

Pu Jiexiu, standing committee vice-chairman, proposed that legal regulations be drawn to ensure the implementation of the Beijing plan following State Council approval.

Hou Renzhi, Beijing University professor of history and city geography, described the plan as "inspiring" and believed it can "open a new page in Beijing's outlook".

Further Details of Plan

OW211915 Beijing XINHUA in English 1510 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Beijing in the year 2000 will be a combination of a metropolis, residential suburbs, satellite towns and county and commune towns in the rural areas, with the old city of Beijing at its center.

The overall plan for Beijing's future was approved today by the municipal people's congress standing committee.

The old city of Beijing is basically the area which was surrounded by the old city walls where the second ring road now runs. The center is Tian-An-Men Square and the Forbidden City surrounded by government offices, commercial districts, apartment and other dwelling houses and those industrial units which do not cause pollution. New factories or enlargement of existing factories in the central city is forbidden under the plan. Some factories which cause serious pollution will be moved away.

The next area will contain mostly residential buildings, plus newly developed wooded parks and scenic spots. The hills and river banks will be planted with shade trees to form a green zone around the urban center.

The satellite towns which will be in the suburbs beyond the residential outskirts will focus on industry, institutes of higher learning and science and technology centers. These satellite towns will have all conveniences, such as shopping and cultural centers, and people who work in these units will be encouraged to move out of the central city into the satellite towns. The county and commune towns in suburban Beijing will cater to the agricultural workers.

Future development of urban Beijing will stress the construction of residential quarters, shops and public service facilities and earthquake-proof buildings. Over the past three decades, new house apartments with 90 million square meters of floor space have been built. This is four times the amount of living space in the immediate post-liberation years.

The plan also must be approved by the State Council.

'Greening' of City Slated

OW211916 Beijing XINHUA in English 1516 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Afforestation and the prevention of pollution are two of the major tasks set forward in the Beijing plan for environmental improvement, with "the greening of Beijing" as its ultimate goal.

With the number of scenic spots and historical interests, few people realize that mountainous areas cover about two-thirds of the total area of the Beijing Municipality. But, as residents and visitors alike are quick to observe, the environment is not as good as could be expected, owing to the low vegetation rate, sandstorms and industrial pollution. The efforts made to date have not yet been able to bring about the fundamental change.

The city construction plan adopted here today calls for "giving full play to Beijing's advantages while eliminating the disadvantages" in environmental improvements. This principle includes the following objectives.

— Afforesting the mountains that remain denuded to link them with a forest belt which some have dubbed "the great green wall," in Hebei and Inner Mongolia, so as to form a windbreak against the northern wind and sandstorms. All parks, streets, river banks, industrial areas, living quarters and school campuses should be afforested.

— Opening natural preserves of various kinds in remote, mountainous areas.

— Improving scenic spots scattered in norhtern, western and southwestern suburbs, such as the Badaling Hill, the Ming Tombs, Summer Palace, the Fragrant Hill, Badachu (Eight Scenic Places), Miaofeng Mountain, the Pool and Oak Temple, with the aim of circling the city with afforested areas.

— Prohibiting the building of factories that seriously pollute the environment. Those factories unable to control their pollution should be moved out of the city or told to stop or shift production.

— Motorized transportation of refuse and modernizing garbage disposal.

— Realigning rivers, canals and lakes, and building parks and afforested areas on river or lake banks.

SHANXI RIBAO ON GETTING RICH THROUGH LABOR

HK141126 Taiyuan SHANXI RIBAO in Chinese 6 Jul 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Party Members Must Take the Lead in Gettting Rich Through Labor"]

[Text] The report on CCP member Wang Dongguo, a former red, industrious and skillful pace-setter who got rich through labor, can help people to broaden their vision and to do away with superstitions.

What attitude should a CCP member or an advanced figure take toward the party's appeal? Should he bravely lead the masses to carry out the party's appeal? Should he stand by with folded arms while others are making efforts to realize the appeal? Should he stand behind, make indiscreet remarks and criticisms, and obstruct others from carrying out the appeal? There is no doubt that we should take the first attitude, but not the second one and still less the third one. However, a simple question like this still remains an interrogation in the minds of some comrades today. It is reasonable for the CCP Central Committee to appeal to the vast number of peasants to get rich as soon as possible and to attain a "comparatively well-off" level. Our party members certainly should take the lead in carrying out this instruction, as usual. In other words, they should take the lead in getting rich. However, these comrades still hold that, as party members, they should only help others to get rich instead of taking the lead in getting rich themselves. They think that otherwise they will bring shame on the glorious name of CCP members. The deeds of Comrade Wang Dongguo are really a good response to this question.

Our comrades must still remember that, apart from the correct line, principles and policies adopted by the party. one of the important reasons our party succeeded in defeating the Japanese imperialists and the Kuomintang reactionaries in the period of revolutionary war was because our party members, being brave in fighting, managed to influence and mobilize the broad masses of the people to join together to form a tremendous force which overran all fortifications and won victories everywhere. In the period of sccialist construction, we won successive victories. The reason was the same — our party members have taken the lead in construction, worked hard and efficiently and united with the broad masses of the people, thus overcoming difficulties one after another. Now, as the party is appealing to us to realize the four modernizations, and appealing to the vast number of peasants to get rich as soon as possible, we CCP members and model workers should certainly take the lead in carrying out the party's instruction, and play the roles of vanguards in pushing the broad masses of the people forward.

If we party members do not take the lead and just let the masses work alone, surely the masses will raise the same questions as Comrade Wang Dongguo raised "You used to take the lead in doing everything. Why do you not take the lead this time?" "How can the masses have courage in starting work if party members do not take the lead?" As a result, the Party's appeal will come to naught. This is because, in the struggle for the four modernizations, whether we can get rich depends not only on whether we have the ability to get rich, but also on whether we dare to cast off the "leftist" influence and resolutely carry out the line laid down by the third plenary session. As the thinking and acts of getting rich used to be seriously criticized as capitalism and revisionism in the past, people still have a lingering fear today. If we CCP members dare not take the lead in casting off the yoke of "leftist" thinking, how can we expect the masses of the people to move ahead? "A village follows the example of other villages, a household follows the example of other households, and the masses of the people follow the example of party branches." This was true in the past, is true at present and will be true even in the future.

Some comrades say Communist Party members should help others to get rich first, and then make themselves rich after everybody is beter off -- they should be first to worry and the last to enjoy themselves. Yes, CCP members should help others to get rich; if we just work hard alone and pay no attention to others' interests, we will never deserve the title of CCP members. But helping others to get rich is not an empty word. In the first place, if we ourselves do not have the ability to get rid of poverty and become rich, how can we help others to get rich? Even though we have the will and enthusiasm, who will still have confidence in finding a good way and scoring good results? We depend on our real ability but not on our good will to win the masses' confidence. If we ourselves are getting rich, this shows that we are capable and have taken the right path. Then the masses will follow us. Then the masses have an example to follow and we have subjects to help' the second place, helping others to get rich needs not only great political enthusiasm, but also a solid material basis. Wang Dongguo bred rabbits, so he could offer rabbits to households in difficulties and thus helped them to solve major problems. If we have not a penny to our name and can solve no real problem. How can we claim to help others? Therefore, for a party member, there should be no contradiction between taking the lead in getting rich and helping others to get rich; in fact, these two things are compatible. In separating them from each other and setting them against each other, some comrades are actually holding that "richness" is a shameful word and evil thing which a Communist Party member should never be engaged in, although other people can. Obviously, the evil "lefist" thinking is still doing mischief in their minds.

Of course, in getting rich, a Communist Party member should follow the correct path and abide by the party's requirements and the state's policies and law. In other words, nobody is allowed to promote evil practices in getting rich through labor. This is also a key point in determining whether CCP members can win the masses' support and play the leading roles in getting rich. Therefore, in the first place, we must be courageous in taking the lead in getting rich; in the second place, we must only get rich together. If we can fulfill these three requirements, the masses will have confidence in us and will follow us. Then we will be able to pool the wisdom and strength of the masses to attain the goal of a "relatively higher standard of living" within a short period. As far as the problem of how to get rich is concerned, there is much in Comrade Wang Dongguo's practices that we can make use of.

TIANJIN RIBAO DISCUSSES PRESENT CLASS STRUGGLE

HK090449 Tianjin TIANJIN RIBAO in Chinese 13 Jun 82 p 2

["Question and Answer" feature: "How To Understand Questions of Class Struggle Under Current Conditions"]

[Text] Editor's note: Recently some typical serious criminal cases in the economic field were disclosed by newspapers.

The details, consequences and influence of these cases are serious and the way in which they were committed was vile. This is an important expression of the class struggle in the economic field. Since some cadres, workers and intellecturals still do not have a clear understanding of the situation of class struggle under the current conditions, we would like to give a brief analysis on some of the most important problems for the reference of our readers. [end editor's note]

Question: Why has the problem of class struggle been raised since the focus of our work has been shifted?

Answer: There is no doubt that the focus of the work of the whole party has been shifted to socialist construction, and our work in all other aspects should be arranged around this central task. However, when it was decided at the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee to shift the focus of the work of the whole party, it was also clearly pointed out: "In our country, there are still a small number of counterrevolutionaires and criminal offenders who are hostile to and sabotaging our construction of socialist modernization. We must never slacken our struggle against them and weaken the proletarian dictatorship." In both Comrade Deng Xiaoping's speech delivered at a meeting in March 1979 and Comrade Ye Jianying's speech to mark the 30th anniversary of the founding of the PRC, which was adopted by the 4th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the following fact was mentioned: In our country, although the exploiting classes have been eliminated as classes, class struggle continues to exist within certain limits. The "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" adopted by the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee comprehensively and scientifically expounded on the domestic class struggle and pointed out: "It is imperative to maintain a high level of vigilance and conduct effective struggle against all those who are hostile to socialism and try to sabotage it in the political, economic, ideological and cultural fields and in community life."

The analysis and appraisal made by the CCP Central Committee and the leading comrades among the central authorities over the past few years on our domestic situation of class struggle are completely correct and far-sighted. While the whole party and the people throughout the country are shifting their main energy and attention to the construction of socialist modernization, the CCP Central Committee has time and again reminded us not to overlook class struggle. However, when class struggle was not mentioned after the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, some comrades thought this was "rightist," and when class struggle is again mentioned at present, they think this is turning to the "Left." These views are entirely wrong.

Since the exploiters have been eliminated as classes, class struggle no longer constitutes the principal contradiction. However, because of certain domestic factors and influences from abroad, class struggle will continue to exist within certain limits for a long time to come and may even grow acute under certain conditions. It is necessary to oppose both the view that the scope of class struggle must be enlarged and the view that it has died out. This is a scientific conclusion of classes and class struggle in our socialist society under the new historical conditions, which was drawn by applying the basic principles of Marxism. It is also an important guiding ideology for us in correctly understanding the question of the present class struggle in our country.

Question: Why does class struggle continue to exist after the exploiting classes have been eliminated?

Answer: It is not difficult to understand this question if the actual situations both at home and abroad are taken into consideration. First, although the exploiters were eliminated as classes, their remnants and other hostile elements still exist. Whenever there is an opportunity, they will stir up trouble. Second, although the exploiters were eliminated as classes, the ideology of the exploiting classes will continue to exist for a long time to come and will inevitably corrupt some people. A host of facts shows that most of the new exploiters, degenerates and serious criminal offenders are wavering elements in the ranks of workers, peasants, intellectuals and cadres, who have been corrupted by the ideology of the exploiting classes.

Third, although the exploiters were eliminated as classes on the mainland, the exploitation system and exploiting classes still exist in Taiwan, Penghu, Jinmen and Mazu, as well as in Hong Kong and Macao. Among these exploiters, there are inevitably some reactionaries and some elements who are obsessed with the desire for gains, and they will certainly corrode the mainland with unhealthy ideologies through various channels. Fourth, internationally, the imperialists and hegemonists are always trying in a thousand and one ways to carry out various activities to infiltrate, sabotage and subvert our country politically, economically, ideologically and culturally. Fifth, along with the development of our economic contacts with other countries, the decadent ideology of capitalism and the bourgeois way of life will also invade our country through various channels. Because of all this, class struggle will continue to exist within certain limits after the exploiters have been eliminated as classes, and under specific historical conditions, it will be a long-term and protracted struggle. It may even grow acute under certain conditions. This is an objective law independent of man's will.

The present struggle against serious economic crimes is a good example of this question. From the economic criminal cases which have been disclosed so far, we can see that the criminal activities in the economic field, such as smuggling and selling smuggled goods, embezzlement and bribery, speculation and swindling and stealing state and collective property, are much more serious than those in 1952 when the "movement against the three evils" was carried out. If they are allowed to develop unchecked, they will undoubtedly more seriously destroy our socialist cause. These grim realities profoundly show that class struggle will not only exist within certain limits for a long time to come, but may also grow acute under certain conditions.

Question: Do we commit the mistake of enlarging the scope of class struggle when we recognize that class struggle will continue to exist within certain limits for a long time to come and may even grow acute under certain conditions?

Answer: No. First, the targets of class struggle are different. Since the exploiters have been eliminated as classes, the main targets of class struggle are counterrevolutionaries and other hostile elements, criminal offenders who seriously sabotage socialist order, new exploiters such as grafters, embezzlers, speculators and profiteers, remnants of the "gang of four," a small number of unreformed landlords and rich peasants, and some remnants of other exploiting classes. The targets of the present struggle are serious economic criminals.

Second, the position of class struggle in our society is different. Since the exploiters have been eliminated as classes, class struggle no longer constitutes the principal contradiction in our society. The principal contradiction in our country since the basic completion of the socialist transformation is the contradiction between the people's growing material and cultural needs and the backward social production. Therefore, the focus of the work of the party and the state must be shifted to the construction of the socialist modernizations, with economic construction as its central task. It is necessary to greatly improve the living conditions of the people materially and culturally. Class struggle, including the present struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field, must be subordinated to and serve the needs of economic construction, which is the central task.

Third, the appraisal of the situation of class struggle is different. In the past, it was believed that class struggle existed everywhere and at all times. A great number of social contradictions which did not fall within the scope of class struggle were regarded as class struggle. Now we hold that class struggle will exist only within certain limits for a long time to come. Provided we draw a strict distinction between class struggle, the reflections of class struggle and other social contradictions which do not fall within the scope of class struggle, we can certainly restrict class struggle within certain limits.

Fourth, the method of class struggle is different. Since class struggle no longer constitutes the principal contradiction in our society, we need not and should not launch a turbulent mass movement in this struggle, as we did in the past. We can certainly make full use of our state apparatus to solve the problems of class struggle which exists within certain limits. In the present struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field, a mass movement is not being waged. Instead, the method of handling cases is adopted and the problems are solved based on facts, in accordance with the law and through judicial procedure.

Provided we correctly understand the characteristics of class struggle under the new historical conditions, correctly estimate the situation of the present class struggle without enlarging or narrowing it, strictly follow the policies, principles and laws of the central authorities on hitting at serious criminal activities in the economic field and handle this with great care, we will certainly do a good job in solving the present problems of class struggle, which find expression in the economic field, and will not commit the mistake of again enlarging the scope of class struggle.

BEIJING-QINHUANGDAO ELECTRIC RAILWAY -- Beijing, 15 Jul (XINHUA) -- Construction is now in full swing for a double-track, electric railway expected to facilitate transportation of coal from China's leading coal producer, Shanxi Province, to the coal wharf at the port city of Qinhuangdao. More than 30,000 workers are defying the sweltering weather to build the Beijing-Qinhuangdao railway, to be connected with another double-track, electric railway, the Beijing-Datong railway, according to a front-page news report of BEIJING RIBAO. The project is designed to transport annually 20 million tons of coal out of Shanxi Province for export and domestic consumption. Work on the 280-kilometer Beijing-Qinhuangdao railway started on 1 March 1982, and on the 379-kilometer Beijing-Datong railway, 1 June, according to earlier reports. The Beijing-Qinhuangdao project calls for building 293 bridges, the longest being 3 kilometers with 92 piers, and a twin tunnel of 1,345 meters. [Beijing XINHUA in English 1255 GMT 15 Jul 82 OW]

NATIONAL ASSEMBLYMEN CABLE SHULTZ ON APPOINTMENT

[Text] Taipei, July 23 (CNA) — National assemblymen of the Republic of China cabled their congratulations to United States Secretary of State George Shultz Thursday on his assuming his new post. They also expressed admiration to Shultz for his recent remarks that the U.S. will honor the "Taiwan Relations Act" and will continue to sell defensive weapons to the Republic of China.

CHU FU-SUNG AFFIRMS NO-CONTACT POLICY WITH PRC

[Text] Taipei, July 22 (CNA) — Foreign Minister Chu Fu-sung Thursday reiterated the government's firm position on no contacts with the Peiping regime. He said the sole purpose of the Chinese Communist "peace offensive" is to isolate and defeat the Republic of China.

He made the remarks to the panel discussion group on political and foreign affairs at the 1982 national development seminar held in the auditorium of the Foreign Ministry. He said Yeh Chien-ying's nine-point peace offensive announcement issued in Peiping on September 30, 1981 is one part of the regime's united front plot, which aims solely to subordinate the Republic of China to the communist regime as a special district or a local government.

Citing the example of Tibet, Minister Chu said the Peiping regime claimed they would allow Tibetans self-rule — maintaining their own religion, social system, family system, political system and military troops — before they went on to communize the roof of the world. The only condition Peiping attached was, he said, that Tibet had to accept the position of a local government and subordinate itself to the Red regime. However, Chu recalled, the Peiping regime sent troops to communize Tibet with a heavy hand within six or seven years after Tibet had agreed.

Although the situation in Taiwan is different from what it was in Tibet, Chu emphasized, the Peiping regime's plot and communication techniques are the same. Therefore, he noted, the government must bear in mind the lesson learned from Tibet's bitter experience and be very careful in dealing with Red China's united front tricks.

Minister Chu told participants in the panel discussion on political and foreign affairs that the government can not make any mistake this time, adding that the nation still adheres to its basic policy of refusing negotiation with the rebellious regime.

INTERIOR MINISTER ON POSTAL LINKS WITH PRC

[Text] Taipei, July 19 (CNA) — Interior Minister Lin Yang-kang said Sunday Peiping's proposal to establish postal links with the Republic of China is a trick. The Communist regime seeks to downgrade the post office in Taiwan to a provincial post office while making the post office on the mainland as a national post office, Lin said. In other words, Lin told participants of the national development seminar, Peiping hopes to downgrade the Government of the Republic of China to the position of local authorities. However, the interior minister added, the government has not forbidden correspondence between family members and friends through third countries.

FUTURE STATUS OF HONG KONG EXAMINED

[Station commentary]

[Text] Most people in the world believe Hong Kong will remain safely under the British, at least until 1997 when the treaty with the Ching Dynasty will run out. This is not necessarily so. The Chinese Communists do not recognize the treaty. In their view, Hong Kong is Chinese and could be seized at any time. If the British thought this was academic, they have been rudely disillusioned. Just last March, the Chinese Communists established a Peking committee to study the Hong Kong issue. It is a high-ranking group at the State Council level and including members from the party, the regime and the army. Some Hong Kong community leaders have been heard from. Almost surely there is a direct connection between this activity and the scheduled visit of Margaret Thatcher to Peking in September. The British had their head in the sand with regard to the Falklands. Hong Kong could be a repeat case. Great Britain can be remarkably obtuse sometimes. London has presumed that the Chinese Communists wouldn't move before 1997, and probably not even then. They have reasoned that Hong Kong is more valuable to the Chinese Communists in British hands than it would be under Peking administation. That may not be so. Red China could surmise that it would have much to gain by taking over Hong Kong earlier rather than later.

One important aspect is the morale of the people on the mainland. It is widely agreed that they have lost faith in communism. Taiwan cannot be usurped at this time, but Hong Kong could be regarded as a substitute to help build communist prestige. Additionally, Hong Kong has had the bright lights and affluence to beckon millions of people from the mainland. These lights could be turned off. Hong Kong could be turned into a slave economy to serve communist needs for cash and know-how. Deals could be made with foreign entrepreneurs. Such a policy is already underway on the mainland, although with so much redtape that industrial estates have grown slowly. The British might not be thrown out all at once. The Communists could accept a nominal sovereignty and that the British phase out the Hong Kong Government during a period of some years. Britain fought for the Falklands against Argentina. They are in no position to fight for Hong Kong. The garrison is very small, the British fleet could never get there in time. If it came to blows, the Chinese Communists could walk across the border, and that would be that. There is not really much likelihood that Britain would raise a finger in defense of Hong Kong, nor that the Chinese Communists would find it necessary to attack. Something will be worked out at the bargaining table.

The Republic of China would fight for its compatriots of Hong Kong. In the free Chinese view, the treaty with Britain passed from the Ching Dynasty to the Republic of China and never to the Chinese Communists. Unfortunately, Britain decided to recognize the Chinese Communists soon after their usurpation of the mainland. The Republic of China has a legal role in the future of Hong Kong, but will find it hard to exercise this in a realistic way unless there is a unifaction of China under democratic auspices.

What would happen to Hong Kong under Chinese Communist occupation? The British would go. They have been selfish managers but have maintained elements of law and order and allowed a large measure of free enterprise. Inevitably, the Communists would be compelled to take over control. Their bureaucracy would ruin incentives and terminate forward economic motion as surely as on the mainland. Some Chinese would escape. Money talks everywhere. Business and industrial leaders might get away. Most of the people couldn't do so. Their services and know-how would be used by the Communists, but not for long, because the Communists do not trust intellectuals or anyone else, including engineers, who could do things well. Hong Kong's demise would help the economy of Taiwan. It would reduce competition. It is not, however, a goal sought by the Republic of China. The free Chinese would like to see Hong Kong survive until a unified China could shape its future.

PREMIER SUN ON LIFTING JAPANESE TRADE BAN

[Text] Taipei, July 22 (CNA) -- Premier Sun Yun-hsuan said (?Thursday) that the Republic of China will "gradually" lift the ban on the import of 1,530 items of Japanese [words indistinct] goods, according to Vice Economic Minister Wang Chou-ming.

The premier held his second round of talks Thursday afternoon with the visiting Japanese trade mission led by Masumi Esaki, chairman of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party's Special Committee on International Economic Relations, to discuss trade issues between Japan and the Republic of China.

After the meeting, Wang told the press, "the Republic of China may lift the import ban on over 1,500 items of Japanese goods gradually on the basis of the reactions by the Japanese side after the mission's visit here and also after investigating how these Japanese goods will affect the economy of this nation."

According to Wang, Premier Sun hoped the Japanese side will carry out the agreements reached at the talks to help balance this nation's trade deficits which amounted to .35 [as received] billion U.S. dollars in 1981 and is growing rapidly each year.

In replying to questions by the reporters, Wang said: "The Japanese mission's visit and its talks with us have helped strengthen the economic and trade relations between the two countries." On the other hand, Masumi Esaki firmly held that Japan and the Republic of China have not only built up solid and growing economic relations, but also promoted mutual understanding between the peoples of the two countries.

Although the Republic of China has suffered great deficits in its trade with Japan, he expressed the belief that the ROC will be able to balance its deficits in the future by expanding exports and strengthening the free trade relationship between the two countries.

Masumi Esaki said: "An Office of Trade Ombudsman will be set up to deal with the business complaints from the Chinese manufacturers. It will help solve and give answers to complaints from the Chinese side."

CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO VIEWS RELATIONS WITH JAPAN

OW242216 Taipei CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO in Chinese 18 Jun 82 p 3

[Report by CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO reporter Lin Shengfen: "The Solid and Profound de Facto Relations Between China and Japan"]

[Excerpts] A Sino-Japanese friendship delegation consisting of eight legislators of the Republic of China recently made a 7-day visit to Japan at the invitation of the Japanese side.

Invited by Munenori Akagi, LDP member of the Japanese House of Representatives, the delegation was primarily repaying a 1981 visit which Munenori Akagi and six other members of the Japanese House of Representatives made to our country.

Through arrangements made by Munenori Akagi, the delegation formally called on the speakers of the Japanese House of Councillors and House of Representatives, Director General Toshio Komoto of the Economic Planning Agency and LDP Secretary General Susumu Nikaido, despite the fact that there is no diplomatic relationship between China and Japan at present. In addition, members of the delegation held sincere talks with Kenji Manabe, vice minister of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, and other related people on how to promote the trade relationship between China and Japan, improve the trade imbalance and solve the problem of import limitations. Those who are quite familiar with the political situation between China and Japan pointed out:

The arrangements for those activities were made when the Chinese Communists were putting heavy pressure on the Japanese Government. This has clearly shown that the Japanese side has attached great importance to the visit by the delegation and demonstrated, to a great extent, the solid and profound nature of the de facto relations between China and Japan.

Therefore, we can see that although we do not have diplomatic relationships with most countries in the world today, if we make proper plans before the departure of delegations of the people's representatives at the central level, we can further promote the exchanges between the Government of the Republic of China and the governments of other countries through contacts between the parliamentary members and political parties of the Republic of China and other countries. The results are often better than visits to foreign countries by governmental officials or members of the ruling party.

'CAPTIVE NATIONS' RALLY HELD IN KAOHSIUNG

[Text] Kaohsiung, July 22 (CNA) -- A rally commemorating the captive nations week was held at a navy base in Kaohsiung with foreign dignitaries, government officials, civic leaders and students participating. Kaohsiung Mayor Hsu Shui-teh said at the meeting that communism has endangered not only this region but the whole world and all the peace-loving peoples should unite to fight against communism.

Dr Ku Cheng-kang, honorary chairman of the World Anti-Communist League, also spoke at the rally.

U.S. Congressman Gerald Solomon said at the rally that the people in the captive nations, subjugated under the yoke of international communism, live in fear, deprivation, and despair. "But their valiant spirit is far from broken and they continue to struggle for basic rights even though time and time again they are cast down and suppressed," he said. He continued: "International communism under the leadership of the Soviet Union and Red China has extended its empire to entrap millions of people and it continues to reach out its tentacles to capture millions more."

Australian Parliamentarian Dan McKenzie said that communism is the single most dangerous threat to the fabric of the Free World. "Every day one reads of new advances, new threats and new actions being taken by the Soviets against the freedom-loving nations. We must fight this wretched curse with every ounce of determination we can muster."

He highly praised the Republic of China for its leadership in fighting against the international communism, saying that "it is a war that we have no option but to wage and no choice but to win."

Bo Seigbahm, Swedish lawmaker, expressed his admiration for the Republic of China's efforts in the past 30 years in fighting against communism. "The free peoples in Europe have deep sympathy for the Chinese people living under the Chinese Communist oppression, and they are working for the common cause of anti-communism with their colleagues in this part of the world to seek the early arrival of freedom and democracy in mainland China," he said.

Also attending the rally were leaders from Belgium, Japan, Bahrain, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador, France, Korea, Italy, Saudi Arabia, and Jordan. After the rally, a combat skill demonstration by navy's marine corps was shown in front of some 60,000 spectators. The foreign dignitaries later also visited the economic installations here.

SCIENTIST DISCUSSES DEFENSE INDUSTRY SUCCESSES

[Text] According to a report about the current state of the defense industry, outstanding successes have been achieved in many major research projects. Flight experiments of a high performance jet fighter have already begun and production capacity is building up in the development an manufacturing of armored vehicles. Other major government research projects include development of large-caliber artillery pieces, radar systems, electronic communication technology for early warning and interference purposes, and chemical warfare defense.

At a meeting of the science and technology panel of the national construction conference, Tang Chun-po, president of the Sun Yat-sen Institute of Science, made a report to the attending scholars on the current state and future development of defense science and technology and the defense industry of the Republic of China. According to his report, the current state of eight major defense industries in the ROC is as follows:

1. Airplanes -- flight experiments of a high performance jet fighter have already begun. The National Science Council, the precision equipment center, the Nankang Tire Company and a number of other government and privately owned enterprises are participating in the development of the airplane.

2. Warships -- in addition to the development and assembly of missile-equipped patrol boats and other weapon systems, development of the second generation of ships for the defense of the Taiwan Strait is underway at a number of units in the ROC.

3. Rockets and missiles -- because of the successful development of the 6a-type mobile rockets and the Male Bee and Kun Wo missiles, thousands of technicians for manufacturing, designing and testing rockets and missiles have been trained. The ROC now has the capacity of developing high performance rockets and missiles needed by the air force.

5. Guns and ammunition -- in principle, the ROC produces all the guns and ammunition needed by its armed forces. Major defense industrial projects accomplished in recent years include production of 155-mm cannons, automatically controlled howitzers, 20-mm guns and preparations for the production of interference rockets. Manufacturing of the firing control systems of the large-caliber artillery pieces is actively underway.

6. Communication electronics -- development of electronic equipment for guided missiles and firing control systems, special purpose computers and optical and electronic equipment has been accomplished. At present the ROC is actively building up its capability of manufacturing radar systems at home.

7. Weapons spare parts -- because of difficulties in purchasing spare parts from abroad, a decision has been made that 59,000 types of major spare parts will be produced at home. Over 38,000 types of parts, or 65 percent, have been produced by contractors for 2 years. Production of the remainders has been included in the armed forces' intermediate development plan and particular efforts have been exerted to resolve this problem.

8. Raw material -- Tsinghua University, the Taiwan Machinery Corporation and the Taiwan Aluminum Corporation have been requested by the industrial bureau to develop special alloy steels and aluminum products for military use. Certain projects have already been accomplished by Tsinghua University; the Taiwan Machinery Corporation and the Taiwan Aluminum Corporation have been actively carrying out theirs.

JAPANESE RIGHTIST GROUPS SAID TO DISTORT HISTORY

["Newsletter From Tokyo" by Chang Cheng-chien [1728 2052 0467]: "Japanese Rightwing Groups and Distortions of History"]

[Text] From 28 June to 1 July, the teaching staff trade union of Japan held a congress in Nagasaki. During the time when the congress was being held, the trade union suffered wanton attacks from rightwing groups. As a result, the trade union could not even find a large meetingplace and had to rent hotels to hold meetings simultaneously in five places. Some 500 or more deputies spoke at the major meetingplace and 1,200 other deputies had to sit in four separate meetingplaces to watch a TV relay of what was happening at the major meetingplace. At the opening meeting of the congress, the major meetingplace was surrounded by 900 ruffians from 117 rightwing groups who tried every means to menace the deputies. Nearly 1,000 policemen looked on around the meetingplace and they did not disperse the troublemakers. Mot Fumi Makieda, chairman of the committee of the teaching staff trade union of Japan, said indignantly: "Japan's democracy is in a crisis!"

Impact of the Revision of Textbooks on Japan's Destiny

One of the primary reasons why the teaching staff trade union has suffered such severe attacks from rightwing groups lies in the trade union's opposition to the distortion of history and prettifying of militarism in textbooks. Japanese newspapers disclosed that the Ministry of Education has made many more major amendments to the textbooks for high schools and primary schools since April. It planned to display these new textbooks in more than 700 meetingplaces throughout the country beginning 1 July. A mere comparison of the new and old textbooks will easily make people understand the reason why the rightwing groups have focused their attacks on the teaching staff trade union.

In the existing high school textbooks there are the following words about the emperor: "The imperial order of education stressed that the emperor was the spiritual authority and that this authority should be used to rectify the ideology and morals of the people of the country and thus it brought about a retrogression in the previous ideology of freedom and democracy." These words have been replaced in the new textbooks by the following: "The imperial order of education taught the supreme ideal of loyalty and filial virtue on the basis of the Confucianist morals and national awareness.... Its aim would be realized among the people of the country." The existing textbooks point out that the restoration of the "commemoration day of the founding of the nation" is the result of the "gaining of ground of the nationalism that advocates restoration of ancient ways," but these words are left out in the new textbooks.

With regard to the "imperial constitution," the existing textbooks say: "The basic principle of this constitution was the dominant power of the emperor.... This constitution granted extensive power to the emperor and provided that all the ministers should be responsible to the emperor." However, these words are replaced in the new textbooks with the following: "While stipulating that the emperor ruled over the country, this constitution provided three separate powers under the rule of the emperor.... Therefore, the constitutionalism had already been in the main established." The section in the previous textbooks that discusses the fact that a constitution centering on the emperor played the role of ideological rule has also been completely left out. The alteration is more barefaced when it comes to the narratives about the Japanese militarists' aggression against China and Korea. For example, it treats the sudden attack against the Chinese Fleet by the Japanese Fleet in 1894 as a "sea battle between the Japanese and Qing fleets." It treats the "September 18th incident" in 1931 as the Japanese Army "blowing up a few installations along the railways in southern Manchuria." It changes the "Japanese Army's invasion of northern China" into "going in and leaving" northern China and "carrying out all-round aggression against China" into "attacking and invading China from all sides." It treats the implementation of the "policy of burning everything, killing everything and looting everything" in China into the "development of the anti-Japanese movement forcing the Japanese Army to safeguard public security."

It has deleted the narration about the Korean people "shouting slogans of long live independence, holding meetings and demonstrations and spreading the independence movement all over Korea" and has rewritten it as "demonstrations and riots spreading all over Korea." The historical facts about Japanese militarists forcibly taking Chinese and Korean people to Japan and forcing them to toil in Japanese mines has also been left out.

In this way, the Japanese textbooks will soon become books confirming the "great East Asian war," and the "Greater East Asian Coprosperity Sphere." Will the Japanese younger generation who will be educated with such textbooks resume Tojo's path? From the above, we can see that this struggle between the teaching staff trade union and the rightwing groups is, in fact, related to Japan's destiny in the future.

Besieging the Teaching Staff Trade Union Was Not Isolated Action

During the past few years, the rightwing forces in Japan have gradually run rampant. On 15 August last year, when the usual activities of the "commemoration day of the ending of the war" were carried out in Tokyo, quite a few rightwing elements wore their old army uniforms, sang aggressive army songs and created disturbances inside and outside the Yasuguni Shrine. On 21 February, when Japan was celebrating the "commemoration day of the founding of the nation" as usual, some rightwing elements held a celebration meeting at the club of the temple of the Meiji emperor during which some people raised a hue and cry about "uniting the world under one ruler" and shouted "may the imperial family prosper." On 14 June some rightwing elements flagrantly carried out terrorist activities and shot and wounded a secretary of the trade union at the door of the office of the trade union. On the other hand, the old boys' association of the imperial infantry primary school published full-page articles in newspapers extolling the spirit of the school as being immortal. The old boys' association of the navy school also published articles in newspapers and praised their school, stating that "the school has trained talented people" "who even now are still contributing to the construction of the country." In all these activities, we see no self-questioning concerning the war of aggression, but the arrogance of "staging a comeback." Many people in society there have been talking about the rightwing elements' attack at the teaching staff trade union. They regarded it as a part of the rightwing elements' planned activities and an important action of theirs in coordination with the government's alteration of textbooks. These rightwing elements have been trying to force the Japanese educational workers to imbue Japanese youngsters with leftist thinking according to the history textbooks that have been altered in a distorted fashion by the Ministry of Education.

Keep a Lookout as to What Attitude the Japanese Powerholders Will Adopt

In the eyes of Asians, Japanese militarism is the specter of "war disaster." Since the end of the war, the Japanese powerholders have made great efforts to change this image, given many pledges and tried arduously to make people believe that "Japan will never become a military power." In his speech on 17 June in Honolulu, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki especially expressed Japan's wish to see the Pacific become an "ocean of peace" and an "ocean of mutual benefit." However, shortly after he published this speech, the Japanese newspapers disclosed the facts about the distortions of history and prettification of militarism by the Ministry of Education in revising textbooks. This cannot help but make people doubt how much of the achievements of the Japanese powerholders in changing this image remain. In the face of the problem of what path Japan should choose, the Japanese powerholders have to decide whether they will continue to tolerate the rightwing elements carrying on their wanton activities or whether they will restrict the rightwing elements and correct the mistakes of distorting history. All Asians are closely watching what they will do.

"All this is for the benefit of the development of national culture of all countries," said the minister heading a Chinese Government cultural delegation to the UNESCO-sponsored second world cultural policy conference scheduled for July 26-August 6.

The Chinese minister, who arrived here this afternoon told reporters at the airport: We have been developing a culture with characteristics of our own to wipe out all the vestiges of feudalist and imperialist influence left over by the semi-colonial and semi-feudal old China." He said: "Mexico is a very suitable site of the second world cultural policy conference because it has a brilliant ancient culture."

On behalf of Mexican Secretary of Public Education Fernando Solana, Vice-Secretary of Public Education Diaz De Cossio went to the airport to greet the Chinese delegation.

[Text] Mexico City, July 26 (XINHUA) -- The second world conference on cultural policies opened here this morning in a bid to give a new impetus to cultural exchanges and co-operation among countries.

The conference, attended by 750 delegates from 119 countries, was officially opened by President Jose Lopez Portillo of the host country, Mexico, at the Palace of Fine Arts here.

Addressing the opening session, Mexican Secretary of Public Education Fernando Solana called for efforts to stimulate international co-operation and to strengthen peace. He condemned colonialism and racism and noted: "If we are to formulate a cultural policy, we must prove ourselves capable of salvaging the profound and human sense of the development process, rectifying its deviations and eliminating its mirages. We need new models, and it is in the sphere of culture and of education that we will find them.

Amadou Mahtar M'bow, director general of the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) which sponsored the conference, said that the conference would encourage reflection on the fundamental problems of culture in today's world and spell out fresh guidelines for strengthening the cultural dimension in general development and for facilitating international cultural co-operation. He stressed that the people and culture of each nation should enjoy respect and equality.

WORLD CONFERENCE ON AGING HELD IN BELGRADE

Delegation Leaves Beijing

OW211108 Beijing XINHUA in English 0811 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 21 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese delegation left here today by air via Belgrade for Vienna, to attend World Assembly on Aging (beginning July 26), sponsored by the United Nations.

Before his departure, head of the 12-member Chinese delegation and Chairman of the Chinese Committee for the World Assembly on Aging, Yu Guangha told XINHUA that the aging problem of population will not be critical in China before the end of this centruy. However, it may become increasingly acute with the development of national economy, improvement of medical condition, and the dropping fertility by the end of the century.

He said that his committee will investigate longevity of elderly people located by the recent national census and undertake scientific research work on geriatrics, psychology and sociology of the aging. The committee will also study how to organize the elderly to help pass on their rich experience and professional knowledge to the younger generation. The group plans to arrange for them to take part in various kinds of social activities according to their ability and health condition.

Yu Guanghan pointed out that China is a country with a long history of respect and care for old people, which is a good tradition. He emphasized the role of the family in caring for the elderly.

In conclusion, he said: "Through this world assembly, we hope to exchange experience with other countries in this matter, and also to establish contacts with friendly countries and relevant international organizations."

In order to meet the convening requirements of the World Assembly on Aging, China set up this national committee in April of this year which consists of 20 departments including government departments, scientific research units, national people's organizations and mass media.

Yu Guanghan Speech at Meeting

[Text] Vienna, July 26 (XINHUA) -- The fine tradition of the Chinese nation to respect, take care of and provide for the aged has been carried forward further since the founding of the People's Republic of China, said Yu Guanghan, chairman of the Chinese delegation at a meeting of the World Assembly on Aging here today.

At present, he added, China's demographic make-up is still relatively young. According to incomplete statistics, China had over 40 million people aged 60 years and above in 1953, accounting for 7 percent of the total population. And in 1980, according to surveys in some areas, the estimated number of people aged 60 years and above in China was about 80 million, making up about 8 percent of the total. It is anticipated that by the year 2000, the number of the aged will have reached 11 percent of the total population. In 2025, the number will reach about 20 percent of the total population.

Yu Guanghan pointed out that China has taken a series of measures to ensure the life and health care of the aged. "With life well secured and people's physique improving, more and more people in China live a longer life and the average lifespan is becoming longer and longer. According to statistics, there were 3,384 people above 100 years of age in 1953 and 7,000 in 1978. A survey of several areas shows that the average life-span was 57 years in 1957 and 69 years in 1980," he said.

He noted that the questions of the aged is a major social problem involving many aspects. It requires concerned efforts of the departments concerned to handle the question.

"In our opinion," he said, "in the endeavour to solve the question of the aged, each country should proceed from its own conditions and rely mainly on its own efforts while at the same time it is also necessary to conduct bilateral and multilateral technological cooperation and assistance. We hope that the appropirate organizations of the United Nations will give greater consideration to the developing countries in organizing such technological cooperation and assistance."

"Through this world assembly, we wish to learn from the experience of other countries, explore possibilities for technological cooperation and assistance and establish contacts with friendly countries and relevant international organizations in this regard. After the adoption of the international plan of action on aging by the assembly, we shall carry out follow-up activities in line with the level of our economic development and social and cultural tradition and handle the question of the aged more properly," he said.
The assembly, which opened here today, is scheduled to conclude on August 6.

U.S. CONSUMER PRICES RISE 1 PERCENT IN JUNE

OW241729 Beijing XINHUA in English 1640 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 24 (XINHUA) -- The U.S. Labor Department announced yesterday that consumer prices rose a full 1 percent in June for the second month in a row, according to reports reaching here. The rise mainly resulted from the 5.5 percent increase in gasoline prices and the 1 percent increase in housing costs.

Inflation in the United States has been reportedly eased due to the tight money policy adopted by President Ronald Reagan after he assumed office last year. The inflation rate has declined further in the first four months of this year following a drop from 12.4 percent in 1980 to 8.9 percent in 1981.

However, it has gone up since May. Statistics show consumer prices rose 1 percent in May. The annual rate of increase reached 13.3 percent in June.

Economic analysts believed that the once slowing down of inflation was caused mainly by a decline in gasoline prices rather than by restrictions on money supply. Energy prices fell nearly 15 percent from March 1981 to April 1982. But when gasoline prices rose again, inflation became worse.

The consumer price index reportedly stood at 290.6 in June, which means that a market basket of goods that cost 100 dollars in 1967 were up to 290.60 dollars in June.

BEIJING REVIEW ON SINO-SOVIET RELATIONS

HK270942 Beijing BEIJING REVIEW in English No 29, 19 Jul 82 p 3

["Notes from the Editors" column by International Editor Mu Youlin: "Sino-Soviet Relations"]

[Text] Soviet athletes participated in a track and field tournament not long ago in Beijing. Can this be interpreted as a sign of rapprochement between China and the Soviet Union? [paragraph published in boldface]

China and the Soviet Union maintain diplomatic and trade relations and there are also a few exchanges of visits.

Soviet athletes came to Beijing recently to take part in an international meet, but major differences in principle still exist between the two countries. China's principled stand of opposing Soviet hegemonism and expansionism is well known. On the other hand, China has always held that relations between the two countries should be maintained and developed on the basis of the five principles of peaceful coexistence and that outstanding issues between them should be settled through negotiations. There are many obstacles to the improvement of Sino-Soviet relations, the most serious being the Soviet Union's hegemonist foreign policies.

Soviet leaders sometimes also talk about improving their relations with China. As a Chinese saying goes: "Judge a man by his deeds, and not his words." We want action from the Soviet Union. By action we do not merely mean a change in Soviet behaviour regarding the Sino-Soviet border issue and the huge Soviet military force stationed along the Sino-Soviet border, but also the Afghanistan and Kampuchean issues. So far, there is no indication in any regard that the Soviet Union sincerely wants to improve its relations with China.

USSR FAILS TO MEET FIRST-HALF PROJECTED TARGETS

[Text] Moscow, July 24 (XINHUA) -- The Soviet Union has failed to meet the projected targets for its national economy in the first half of this year. A production communique released by the Central Statistics Board shows that the output of nearly one third of major industrial products was lower than that of the corresponding period of last year. Among the 62 kinds of the essential products listed by the board, the output of about 20 items such as steel, rolled steel, steel tubes, iron ore, forging presses, oil equipment, diesel locomotives, vehicles, generators, cement, leather shoes and iceboxes fell from the same period of last year. The industrial output value rose by 2.7 percent, falling short of the target of 3.9 percent.

The growth of labour productivity in the first half of this year was set at 3.3 percent. But it posted an increase of only 2 percent in the period. According to the communique, the plan for purchasing domestic animals, poultry and milk was unfulfilled. More grain will be imported as the Western news agencies forecast.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON JAPANESE TEXTBOOK ISSUE

PRC Official Protests to Envoy

OW271648 Beijing XINHUA in English 1628 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Xiao Xiangqian, director of the First Department of Asian Affairs of the Chinese Foreign Ministry, yesterday received Yukiharu Watabe, minister of the Japanese Embassy here, by appointment and made representations to him on the textbook affair.

During the meeting, Xiao Xiangqian expounded the Chinese Government's position on the Japanese Ministry of Education's distortion of the history of the Japanese militarist aggression against China in examining and approving the primary and secondary school textbooks and demanded that the Japanese side rectify the errors in the textbooks censored by the Ministry of Education.

Xiao Xiangqian pointed out that in censoring the textbooks for primary and secondary schools, the Japanese Ministry of Education tampered with the history of the Japanese militarist aggression against China by changing "invasion of north China" to "advance into north China," and an "all-out aggression against China" to an "all-round advance into China." What is more, it even attributed the Nanjing atrocities during the war to "the stubborn resistance of the Chinese troops, which inflicted heavy losses on the Japanese army, who were enraged and, as a result, killed many Chinese soldiers and civilians." This is an obvious distortion of the historical facts, and is therefore unacceptable.

Xiao Xiangqian went on to say that the Chinese Government has always maintained that the Japanese war of aggression against China was launched by Japanese militarists. The war brought untold suffering to the Chinese people, and the Japanese people, too, suffered a great deal from it. We should always bear in mind this historical lesson and see to it that this phase of history not be repeated. This accords with the fundamental interests of the people of the two countries and is also the duty of the two governments. The Japanese side stressed in the Sino-Japanese joint statement that Japan "is keenly aware of Japan's responsibility for causing enormous damages in the past to the Chinese people through war and deeply reproaches itself." China holds that only when this period of the history is explained strictly according to the facts will it be conducive to educating the later generations of the two countries in forever remembering the historical lesson so that the friendship between the Chinese and Japanese peoples will last from generation to generation.

The director of the First Department of Asian Affairs pointed out that the attitude of the Japanese Ministry of Education in censoring the textbooks was far from serious and its motive suspectable. In view of the fact that the textbook affair runs counter to the spirit of the Sino-Japanese joint statement and the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty, is detrimental to the consolidation and development of the peaceful and friendly relations between the two countries, and will hurt the feelings of the Chinese people, the Chinese Government cannot but express utmost concern. It hopes that the Japanese Government will take note of the above stand of the Chinese Government and rectify the errors in the textbooks censored by the Ministry of Education, Xiao Xiangqian said.

Ji Pengfei Comments

[Text] State Councillor Ji Pengfei met at the Great Hall of the People this afternoon with a delegation from the Japan Journalists League led by its chairman, Shizuma Kai.

Touching on the Japanese Education Ministry's revision of textbooks regarding the nature of Japanese militarist aggression, Ji Pengfei said: The Chinese people express their indignation at this action. History should not be distorted. Ji Pengfei then said: In the past 10 years since the normalization of Sino-Japanese diplomatic relations, the relations between the two countries have developed very well. We should set great store by the friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries. He expressed the hope that on the present basis, the relations between China dn Japan would develop more solidly, steadily and in an all-round way.

Shizuma Kai said: It is natural that China opposes the Japanese Education Ministry's revision of textbooks. Such opposition also accords with the aspirations of the broad masses of Japanese people.

RENMIN RIBAO Article

[XINHUA SHE replies to readers: "What Does the Word 'Advance' Mean in Japanese?"

[Text] Question: When transmitting reports on 26 June and 22 July about the Japanese Ministry of Education's tampering with history while revising secondary and primary school textbooks, XINHUA quoted a Japanese press report which stated: The newly revised textbooks "change the word 'aggression' to 'advance' [6651 0427] in many places" in the portion dealing with Japanese aggression against China; for instance, the Japanese army's "invasion of north China" is changed to its "advance into north China."

These two news reports both used the Japanese word "advance." Many readers do not understand the meaning of this term, and some interpret it as meaning "passing in and out." Is this correct?

Answer: According to the "thesaurus" published by the Japanese Iwanami Bookshop, the meaning of this word in Japanese is "to actively move out" or "to advance from a certain place." According to a definition in English given in the "(Shin Yamato) English Dictionary" published by the Japan Research Society, the meaning is "advance, march." [both words written in English] From this we can understand that the basic meaning of this word is to actively advance.

This word is used quite extensively in Japanese, and can be translated in various ways in Chinese according to context. For instance, the Japanese "women advance to the stage of society" means in Chinese "women go onto (or enter) the stage of society"; "Japanese-advanced enterprises in the United States" means "Japanese-operated enterprises in the United States"; "the Japanese economy advanced on Southeast Asia" means "the Japanese economy breaks into Southeast Asia." All these contexts illustrate different meanings of this word. The word is not used in a derogatory sense in Japanese, but actually has a commendatory flavor. When revising the history textbooks, the Japanese Ministry of Education changed "aggression" into "advance" in the portion dealing with the history of Japan's aggression against China. Although this is just one example of its extensive tampering with historical facts on this occasion, it is sufficient to reveal its motives in embellishing militarism and concealing the barbaric aggression committed by Japanese militarism against other countries in those years.

For the sake of better comprehension by readers, the Japanese word "advance" [6651 0427] would be better translated as "advance into" [6651 0354] in Chinese.

GUANGMING RIBAO Commentary

[Short commentary: "Historical Facts Brook No Distortion"]

[Text] Recently, in screening and approving the textbooks for the current year, the Japanese Ministry of Education tampered with the historical facts by calling the aggression launched in the past by the Japanese militarists against China "advancing into" China, and even tried to shift the responsibility for the massacre committed by the Japanese army in Nanjing in 1937 onto the Chinese army. Such an open distortion of historical facts cannot but arouse the Chinese people's vehement indignation.

The whole world knows the Japanese militarists' aggression against China brought untold suffering to the Chinese people. The Japanese Government admitted also in the 1972 Sino-Japanese joint statement that "the Japanese side is keenly aware of Japan's responsibility for causing enormous damage in the past to the Chinese people through war, and deeply reproaches itself." But 10 years later, when the people of the two countries are ushering in a new stage in Sino-Japanese relations through joint efforts, the Japanese Ministry of Education has gone so far as to distort historical facts and whitewash Japanese militarism in violation of the spirit of the joint statement. Some Japanese Government officials have even tried to justify the Education Ministry's act of distortion. Just as a Japanese newspaper has pointed out, "such a distortion is indeed condemnable, or rather despicable."

Facts speak louder than sophistry. No one can write off the facts about the Japanese militarist aggression against China and its serious consequences. The Japanese MAINICHI SHIMBUN was right in saying in an article: "Japanese today correctly admit that Japan did 'invade China.' Both Japan and China should tell their children about this fact. Only in this way can we establish real Sino-Japanese friendship which is to be carried over 'from generation to generation'."

ZHONGGUO QINGNIAN BAO Article

[Commentator's article: "Absurd Revision, Harmful Acts"]

[Text] Not long ago, in editing the textbooks for their primary and middle schools, the Japanese Education Ministry rendered Japan's "aggression against China" as Japan's "advance into" China and distorted a series of historical facts in order to "make it ambiguous as to who was responsible for the war." (Words in quotations are cited from Japanese newspapers. For example, it shifted the responsibility for the inhuman massacre in Nanjing onto the Chinese troops and said: "The massacre took place because of the stubborn resistance of the Chinese troops." It described the "September 18th" incident that shocked the world merely as the Japanese troops "blowing up the southern Manchurian railway." This act of the Education Ministry in distorting the historical facts and beautifying the Japanese militarists cannot help but arouse tremendous indignation among the broad masses of Chinese youths.

These distortions have also aroused the strong indignation of the people of insight in Japan and the Japanese press circles. Japanese newspapers say that the policies and actions that Japan carried out against China in the past can only be called "aggression." This is a historical fact. These distortions "above all, make us feel ashamed."

It was said that the aim of the Education Ministry in doing this was to avoid bringing "shadows" to present Sino-Japanese friendship because these events happened long ago. Obviously, this is only an excuse to justify itself. Indeed, we have often told our Japanese friends that the past is, after all, past and that in order to develop the friendship between China and Japan, we will let bygones be bygones.

However, we will never tolerate any distortion of historical facts. For Japan's aggression against China the japanese militarists must be held responsible. For us, the later generations, it is important to learn and remember the historical lessons. Any distortion of the historical facts is not only a violation of scientific attitudes, but will also be harmful in educating the later generations. As a ministry in charge of educating the Japanese youngsters, the Education Ministry has the duty to give a faithful account to the Japanese younger generations of the brutal aggressive war launched by the Japanese militarists, the great disasters this war brought to the Chinese people and the tremendous suffering it brought to the Japanese people. By so doing, they will make future generations of Japanese always remember these grievous lessons. We will also teach our young people in the same manner. Only by so doing can we prevent the repetition of the historical tragedy and only by so doing can China and Japan maintain their friendship for many generations in the future.

GONGREN RIBAO Comment

[Short commentary: "Chinese Workers" Indignation"]

[Text] The Japanese Ministry of Education has harbored evil intentions in an attempt to distort the history of the invasion of China and prettify militarism. This cannot but arouse the high vigilance and furious indignation of the Chinese workers. The Chinese people, who were invaded by imperialists for a long time, have stood firm since 1949. It is certain that any aggressors who want to stage a comeback will be unable to deceive the Chinese people or achieve their aim.

Staff and workers in many places of our country are studying modern and contemporary history. It is very necessary to master historical knowledge in order to recognize one's evil behavior of hoodwinking the world's people by distorting history. If we have a good understanding of history, we will be able to prevent a repeat of history of being invaded.

The Japanese people have once again shown their friendly feelings for the Chinese people through their opposition to the distortion of the history of the invasion of China by the Japanese Ministry of Education. Just as the Japanese people bravely fought against war when the Japanese militarists invaded China years ago, this fully shows that the hearts of the Chinese and Japanese peoples are closely linked. The behavior of the Japanese Ministry of Education also goes against the fundamental interests of the Japanese people and is firmly opposed by them. The Japanese Ministry of Education must change its wrongdoing of deceiving Japanese students and undermining the friendship between the Chinese and Japanese peoples, and make the Japanese textbooks conform with actual history.

Japanese Politicians Protest

[Text] Tokyo, Jul 27 (XINHUA) -- Leading members of some political parties in Japan have issued statements criticizing the Japanese Education Ministry for its deliberate distortion of historical facts while censoring revised textbooks, YOMIURI SHIMBUN reported today.

Masashi Ishibashi, vice-chairman of the Japan Socialist Party, said China was justified to lodge a protest against the Japanese practice in changing the wording of Japanese aggression against China because China had borne untold suffering from Japanese militarist aggression.

Naohiko Okubo, chairman of the Japanese Komei Party's Policy Affairs Council, held that historical facts should be correctly recorded for younger generations. He suggested that this question of censoring textbooks should be discussed by the Diet.

Keigo Ouchi, chairman of the Japanese Democratic Socialist Party's Policy Affairs Council, pointed out that the practice of distorting historical facts during the censorship of textbooks is wrong.

Public Opposition Noted

OW280728 Beijing XINHUA in English 0700 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Public opinion in Japan holds that the Japanese Education Ministry's screening and revision of textbooks should not result in prettifying Japanese militarism, reports KYODO this afternoon.

Yoshiaki Masaki, chairman of the Komei Party Diet Policy Committee, said: There should not be fabrication and distortion of historical facts. Obviously, Japan's aggression against China is a history fact that later generations in Japan should be told.

Seiichi Tagawa, representative of the New Liberal Club, held that the revision of textbooks should not be ignored; otherwise, it would lead to the embellishment of Japanese militarism.

Chairman of the Japanese Publication Workers Union Kunitake Narahashi made a statement this afternoon calling on the Japanese Education Ministry to retract its instructions on revising textbooks.

"China is furious at attempts to conceal the aggression against China and the slaughter, sabotage and arrests committed there by the Japanese militarists. They will naturally condemn such attempts. We consider this a serious matter," Narahashi said. "We have always opposed the changing of aggression into advance by the Education Ministry during its screening of textbooks," he added.

He urged the Education Ministry to retract its instructions on this matter and compile textbooks which will be conducive to development of international peace and unity.

According to a JIJI report, the secretary general of the Japanese Teachers Union told reporters today that the protest against Japan's revision of textbooks is a serious warning against Japanese militarism.

[Text] Tokyo, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Japanese public opinion has expressed support to China's representations to the Japanese side concerning the screening of school textbooks by the Japanese Ministry of Education.

ASAHI SHIMBUN said editorially today that while the Japanese Government indicated that the screening of textbooks should proceed in an objective and fair way, with appropriate educational purposes in mind, some of the Cabinet ministers accused China of "interference" in Japan's internal affairs and disapproved of China's protest.

Their attiude, the editorial said, "is erroneous both externally and internally. What did [happen] in those countries which Japan invaded during World War II has been put on the record as historical facts, which can never be obliterated by a play on words".

The editorial said: "Only by recognizing this fact and making repeated self-examination can Japan be able to establish sound relations with these countries." That is why the Chinese Government points out that Japan's present act runs counter to the spirit of the China-Japan joint statement and the China-Japan peace and friendship treaty.

The editorial pointed out that those who arrogantly hold that "education is an internal issue" will surely incur condemnation and protest from all the Asian countries once ruled by Japan.

ASAHI SHIMBUN today carried the interviews of two Japanese shcolars. Professor Masami Yamazumi said that the idea and attitude of distorting historical facts as one pleases can be traced back to pre-war militarism and is extremely dangerous. He hoped the Japanese Education Ministry would listen carefully to criticisms from China and other countries. Professor Kenichi Nagai of the University of Law and Political Science said it is only natural that China has carried out criticism and repudiation. The younger generation should be taught true history, he stressed.

YOMIURI SHIMBUN published interviews of some Japanese scholars who voiced support to China's criticism of the Japanese Education Ministry.

The Chinese Embassy and other Chinese missions in Japan have received telephone calls from personalities of all walks of life, who expressed support to China's protest against the mean act of revising historical facts by the Japanese Education Ministry.

RENMIN RIBAO ON 'HISTORY OF PUPPET MANZHOUGUO'

[Article by Shi Yang [4258 5017] "Commenting on 'History of the Puppet Manzhouguo'"]

[Text] The "History of the Puppet Manzhouguo," written by Jiang Niandong et al and published by the Jilin People's Publishing House, is the first monograph since the founding of the PRC to systematically narrate the history of this puppet regime.

After the "September 18th" incident of 1931, the Japanese imperialists, having made preparations for a long time, created a so-called "Manzhouguo" in the northeast region of our country. This puppet Manzhouguo, a monster in the history of contemporary China, was the work of those dregs of feudalism who tried in vain to restore the monarchy and a number of pro-Japanese traitors and collaborators who regarded the enemy as kith and kin. Another reason this regime could come into power was because the Kuomintang government at the time was implementing the policy of nonresistance, which placed the people of northeast China in a miserable colony-like situation.

This book is divided into eight chapters, which cover the whole course of the puppet Manzhouguo, from its rise to its fall. They can be summed up into the following major parts:

First, throughout the book, the authors firmly stick to the basic historical fact that Manzhouguo was the product of the Japanese imperialists' aggressive policy. In the late 19th century, the so-called "continental policy" was gradually shaped within the Japanese Government. This policy aimed at annexing Korea, invading the northeastern part of our country, and thus conquering China and dominating all of Asia. The Tanaka Cabinet which assumed power in 1927 said in the "Tanaka memorial": "If we want to conquer China, we must first conquer Manchuria and Mongolia. If we can conquer China, all other Asian countries and Southeast Asian countries will be afraid of us and will succumb to us." At the time of Manzhouguo, the Japanese militarists "had already taken the first step by conquering Taiwan, and the second step by conquering Korea; only the third step of terminating Manchuria and Mongolia and conquering all of China had not yet been completed."

The puppet Manzhouguo was an important move which the Japanese militarists took to realize their general goal in the third step of their aggressive scheme. The entire value of Manzhouguo's existance was merely to meet the need of Japanese militarism in further realizing its wild aggressive ambition. Throughout the book, the authors narrate in detail the formulation and the change of all policies and decrees of the puppet Manzhouguo in light of the key line of the Japanese "imperial policy," holding that the commander of the Japanese Guangdong army was the actual overlord who ruled the northeast.

Second, with rich historical facts, this book has presented to the readers the hideous features of those dregs of feudalism and pro-Japanese traitors and collaborators who sought power and wealth by betraying the country. After the "September 18th" incident, the deposed prince of the former Qing Dynasty Pu Wei (Prince Kung) was appointed chairman of the "four people peace preservation association." When worshiping the Qing ancestors at the North Mausoleum in Shenyang, he said: "Now we are relying on the spirit of our brave ancestors and the Japanese just force in overthrowing our enemy who has illegally occupied our imperial land for more than 20 years. From now on I will devote all my efforts to restoring our ancestors' glorious achievements." At the time, the dethroned emperor of the Qing Dynasty Pu Yi, who was always longing for restoring "the heritage left by the ancestors," came back to the northeast to assume the ruling power of the puppet Manzhouguo, under the agreement with the Japanese imperialists that the latter would assist him in "restoring the empire." He immediately signed with Japan a secret treaty and the "agreement between Japan and Manzhouguo," in which northeast China was sold. Soon after that, he ascended the throne. He declared: "We, the court of Qing, regret that our people have been driven into misery and the throne was ceded to the Han nationality, which is upsetting the social order day after day. Today, we have to rely on the cooperation between China and Japan in reestablishing a powerful country in East Asia; otherwise, we will not be able to fulfill our goal." In this way, they turned the Japanese imperialists' aggression into a "just" act by which "the people were esteemed because of their misery. They even went so far as to defy public opinion by declaring "independence" and playing the part of lackeys who collaborated with the Japanese imperialists in maintaining colonial rule in the northeast.

Third, a vast number of historical facts, diagrams, tables and statistical figures have been used in this book to elaborate the various measures which the Japanese militarists took in molding the puppet Manzhouguo into a Japanese military base for expanding the aggressive war, in reinforcing their fascist colonial rule, in carrying out out enslavement education, in massacring the Chinese people under the pretext of "rectifying" social order, and, in the economic field, in formulating various colonialist policies to wantonly plunder the people. By exposing the Japanese imperialists' aggressive policies and savage deeds in China at that time, the authors tried to make the readers understand the misery which both the Chinese and the Japanese peoples suffered, and thus spur them to contribute more efforts to further developing the friendship between the peoples of the two countries.

Fourth, special chapters have been devoted to the northeast people's anti-Japanese struggle. The anti-Japanese amalgamated army led by the CCP carried on fighting under extremely difficult conditions in the northeast. Their glorious deeds will shine through the ages. Strictly distinguishing a small number of militarist elements from the broad masses of the Japanese people, and a bunch of aggressive policymakers from the vast majority of people who were driven to implement these policies, the authors have devoted special chapters to the shoulder-to-shoulder struggle of the Chinese, Korean and Japanese peoples.

RENMIN RIBAO VIEWS VIETNAM'S CONSCRIPTION DRIVE

[Report: "Vietnam Starts Second Large-Scale Conscription Drive This Year"]

[Text] While the Vietnamese authorities are playing the trick of "partial withdrawal" of their troops from Kampuchea, they have launched this year's second large-scale conscription drive and arms expansion movement at home.

On 8 July QUAN DOI NHAN DAN reported, with a banner headline in a most prominent place on page one, the meeting, convened by the Vietnamese Council of Ministers, to implement the military service law. According to reports, the Vietnamese leaders stressed at the meeting: "While building the standing military forces, we must also build the reserve forces and organize ex-servicemen to fulfill their reserve duty. They are an enormous force consisting of several million people."

Vietnam officially promulgated its new military service law in January this year. This law readjusts the conscription age and the length of the term of military service, and stipulates strict enlistment regulations, management and training methods for reserve servicemen. It also stipulates that violators of the military service law shall be severely punished.

In February and March this year, the Vietnamese authorities carried out the first conscription drive. According to reports by Hanoi's newspapers, "a large number of youths have been recruited into the army." At present, the Vietnamese authorities have started the second conscription drive and arms expansion. The scale of publicity and mobilization is unprecedented. On 11 July, QUAN DOI NHAN DAN reported that in Quang Ninh Province alone, thousands of youths had taken conscription medical checkups. The number of new recruits in the second conscription drive in that province will exceed that in the first drive and the number of youths of minority nationalities will increase by 50 percent.

BEIJING NOTES COMMEMORATION OF SRV-LAO TREATY

BK251422 Beijing in Lao to Laos 1230 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Station correspondent (Chen Yisan) commentary: "Joy With Concern"]

[Text] Over the past few days, the Vietnamese and the Vientiane authorities have organized massive celebrations to mark the fifth anniversary of the signing of the so-called treaty of friendship. Greetings messages were exchanged, while rallies were held in an enthusiastic atmosphere to commemorate this occasion. In fact, all these merely reflect joy with concern.

Five years ago, the Le Duan clique persuaded and lured the Lao authorities to sign the so-called treaty of friendship and another treaty on the delimitation of national borders with Vietnam. Its intention was to seek cooperation in setting up the Indochina federation and to expand its influence into the Southeast Asian region. Actually, Hanoi's purpose in signing the two treaties was to control Laos through a charter.

Simultaneously, the Le Duan clique has cooked up a theory on the so-called Vietnam-Laos special relations, and claimed it to be a rule of the revolution and an unobjectionable strategic line. Based on these nonsensical words, the Vietnamese regional hegemonists have stretched their greedy hands into Laos. They have sent thousands of military advisers and experts to Laos to control its party, government and military leadership organizations from the central down to the local levels. These experts and advisers have considered themselves to be superior to the Lao Government. These advisers and experts have ordered or forced the Lao authorities to do anything they want in Laos.

In view of the nonsensical words noted above, Vietnam has dispatched 50,000 to 60,000 troops to Laos to control this country in all respects, from the northernmost area of Nam Ou to the southernmost area of Liphi. These occupational troops have set fire to and plundered the Lao people's property while raping Lao girls and conducting other vicious acts. The Vietnamese authorities have recklessly plundered the prosperous natural resources of Laos. They have transported a large quantity of rice and valuable minerals and lumber to Vietnam. As a result, the already deteriorated and backward economy of Laos has deteriorated even further.

Most of the Lao people hate the aforesaid special relations. This is why, over the past 5 years, one-tenth of the total of only 3 million Lao citizens have fled their country. They have risked their lives crossing the Mekong River to become refugees, refusing to live under the special relations. The exodus of such a large number of citizens from their native country is an unprecedented event in world history. The aforesaid special relations has caused this. It is the special relations which have caused Laos to suffer disasters and which have brought starvation and hardships to the Lao people. As a result of the said special relations, neither peace nor tranquillity has prevailed in Laos. At present, more and more Lao people have come to understand the true nature of the so-called treaty of friendship and special relations between Vietnam and Laos.

A Lao refugee has sent a letter to our radio station, pointing out that the word special has become a piece of cloth blindfolding the eyes of the people and all leaders of Laos. It has compelled the Lao people and leaders to surrender in the dark to accept the occupation and control of the Soviet and the Vietnamese hegemonists. Actually, it is their scheme to use the so-called special relations as a chain to tighten around the Lao people's necks.

In an interview with our radio correspondent, Dr Khamsengkeo Sengsathit [Lao defector] immediately pointed out that the so-called Vietnam-Laos special relations are a chain being tightened around Laos and its people, that they have made Laos a colony of the Le Duan clique, and that they have made the Lao people the clique's slaves.

A deception does not (?last) long. Facts have helped the Lao people become conscious. More and more Lao people have joined in the struggle. This fact has made the Vietnamese authorities become worried, and this is why they have again raised an uproar, commenting on the so-called Vietnam-Laos special relations among the Lao people with the hope of deceiving them. But they have expended their energy in vain. The Lao people who have been conscious daily will certainly break the links of the chain around their necks and then gain their genuine independence and freedom.

THAI OFFICIAL ON SRV FOREIGN MINISTER'S VISITS

[Text] Bangkok, July 23 (XINHUA) -- A senior Thai security official charged yesterday that the current visit to some Southeast Asian countries by Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach was chiefly aimed at isolating Thailand from the rest of ASEAN countries and countering the U.N.-sponsored resolutions on Kampuchea, according to Thai press reports here today.

Prasong Sunsiri, secretary-general of the National Security Council (NSC) of Thailand, made the statement when he addressed a seminar of public relations officials at the Government House.

He said that the other purposes of Thach's visit were to draw world attention to the importance of Indochina, "to serve Vietnam's objective in creating the Indochina federation" and "get all countries to hate China by giving the impression that China threatens the regional security." Nobody should be fooled by such propaganda, the NSC secretary general declared.

Prasong noted that Thach was wearing "several masks." When Thach went to Singapore he talked tough, but would be expected to speak softly in Rangoon. "Then we'll see what mask he will wear when he comes here," he said. Thach is due to arrive in Bangkok on July 28 and to have talks with Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila the next day.

Prasong told a group to Thai reporters that the threats reportedly made by Thach in Singapore showed that he was only interested in solving the Kampuchean problem through the use of force. "Those threats that Thach made, they (the Vietnamese) have been doing for a long time, but not very successfully," he added.

SINGAPORE OFFICIALS' REMARKS ON SRV NOTED

Rajaratnam Cited

OW241852 Beijing XINHUA in English 1831 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 24 (XINHUA) -- Singapore Deputy Prime Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratnam has said that reports about Vietnam "being flexible and making concessions" over Kampuchea are untrue, according to reports reaching here today. This was borne out by Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's attitude towards the ASEAN countries, he said.

In a recent interview with local reporters, Rajaratnam said: "Apart from being 'flexible', Mr Thach is also flexing his muscles." He was referring to Thach's veiled threat in Singapore that Hanoi would retaliate against ASEAN for its alleged interference in the internal affairs of Kampuchea.

Rajaratnam, who had a two-hour-long talk with Thach last Monday, said Vietnam's threat to get even with ASEAN for backing the coalition government in Kampuchea showed Hanoi's lack of confidence. If Thach had come here believing he could frighten Singapore into accepting Vietnam's solution to the Kampuchean problem, it was a wrong strategy, he added.

He pointed out that since Vietnam invaded Kampuchea, its position has worsened and it is now reliant on Soviet charity. There is more suffering, more economic disintegration and no reconstruction in Vietnam.

Dhanabalan Remarks

[Text] Hong Kong, July 25 (XINHUA) -- The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) will continue to keep a comprehensive pressure on Vietnam until it pulls out all its troops from Kampuchea, said Singaporean Foreign Minister S. Dhanabalan. Dhanabalan made this remark in an exclusive interview with the daily SIN CHEW JIT POH yesterday when he commented on Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's visit to Singapore.

Referring to the Vietnamese foreign minister's claim that the situation in Kampuchea was irreversible, Dhanabalan said the Vietnamese point of view is wrong. He said Nguyen Co Thach's visit was not conducive to seeking a solution to the Kampuchean problem. But it should help Nguyen Co Thach understand what a firm stand the ASEAN has taken on the Kampuchean problem, Dhanabalan said.

Dhanabalan pointed out that the Vietnamese assertion that its occupation of Kampuchea is aimed to check China's attacks is very dangerous.

Dhanabalan stressed that so long as Vietnam continues its military occupation of Kampuchea, there exists the possibility of Vietnamese intrusion of Thai territory. The existence of such a danger has led ASEAN to call for a total Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea, he said.

Also greeting them at the airport were Li Dengying and Ge Shiying, governor and deputy governor of Gansu Province, Chen Hong, deputy commander of the Lanzhou units of the Chinese People's Liberation Army; and other officials of Gansu Province and Lanzhou City.

His Majesty King Birendra, a much respected friend of the Chinese people, has visited China on several occasions and made valuable contributions to the development of friendly relations between China and Nepal and the friendship between the two peoples. The city of Lanzhou was in a jubilant mood today.

After crossing over the Himalayas, the special plane carrying the distinguished Nepalese guests landed at about 4:15 p.m. at Lanzhou's Zhongchuan Airport, over which the national flags of China and Nepal fluttered.

As the king and the queen came down the steps from the plane, Premier Zhao Ziyang and Governor Li Dengying stepped forward to greet them with warm handshakes. Premier Zhao Ziyang was very glad to meet His Majesty King Birendra again. He said: "We warmly welcome you here in China again." Two Young Pioneers presented the king and the queen with bouquets.

Nepalese Press Hails Visit

[Text] Kathmandu, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Nepalese papers and weeklies have recently carried editorials and articles emphasizing that the current friendly visit to China by their majesties the king and queen of Nepan will give an impetus to the friendship and cooperation between the two countries.

The RISING NEPAL in an editorial said: "The present friendly visit by their majesties should give a further fillip to Nepal-China relations, broaden mutual understanding and come to mark yet another memorable milestone in the steady development of Nepal-China relations."

On the significance of the present royal visit to China's Gansu Province and Tibet Autonomous Region, the editorial points out that it will be "providing his majesty the king the opportunity to personally view the Chinese development effort in two remote regions whose topography somewhat resembles that of the hilly regions of the kingdom."

CHARCHA WEEKLY said on July 26 that their majesties' current visit "will further deepen and strengthen Nepal-China relations" and "further promote mutual understanding, particularly in the context of the rapidly-changing international political scene."

The RASHTRA DHWANI weekly in an article on July 22 praised China as "the first nation to extend support to the peace zone proposal of Nepal." It added that the visit of their majesties "may be helpful in bringing the two countries closer together, promoting mutual interests, adding other constructive dimensions in their relations and developing identity of views on international issues."

The Nepalese weekly CURRENT of July 19 in an article said: "From the very beginning Nepal has given special importance to its relations and contacts with China at the highest level, thereby contributing to the national interest. We feel happy over this."

It added: "The Nepalese feel assured that the visit will render a noteworthy contribution in strengthening the intimate and trustful relations existing between Nepal and China."

Zhao Ziyang Hosts Banquet

OW271806 Beijing XINHUA in English 1553 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Lanzhou, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council, gave a banquet here this evening in honor of his majesty King Birendra Bir Bikram Shah Dev, and her majesty Queen Aishwarya Rajya Laxmi Devi Shah, of Nepal, and other distinguished Nepalese guests.

At the banquet which proceeded in a cordial and friendly atmosphere, the premier and the king delivered speeches in warm praise of Sino-Nepalese friendship.

Zhao Ziyang said, "China and Nepal are close neighbours linked by common mountains and rivers. There exists a profound traditional friendship between the two peoples. Thanks to the joint efforts of the two governments and peoples, Sino-Nepalese friendly relations entered a new stage with the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Nepal. Our cooperation in various fields has yielded very good results. Sino-Nepalese relations are characterized by mutual respect, full understanding, equality and friendly cooperation. Both sides cherish Sino-Nepalese friendship, which is in conformity with the fundamental interests of the two peoples. Such friendship has stood the test of time in the complex and changeful international situation over the past twenty years."

Zhao Ziyang said: "The Nepalese people are famed for their ardent love for independence and freedom and for their glorious tradition of combating imperialism and colonialism. In recent years, his majesty the king emphasized self-reliance in developing the national economy. The Nepalese Government and people have scored one achievement after another in the cause of building up their own country.

"In international affairs, Nepal persistently pursues a policy of peace, independence and non-alignment and opposes imperialism, colonialism and expansionism of any manifestation and has made valuable contributions to upholding the principles of the non-aligned movement, stengthening unity among the Third World countries and promoting cooperation in the South Asian region, thus winning praise from the international community."

Referring to the international situation, Zhao Ziyang said "the international situation has become more tense and turbulent, while old problems remain unsolved, new crises keep cropping up, the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of a number of countries have been subjected to encroachment and interference, and peace in Asia and the world at large is faced with grave threat.

"At this eventful time, it is very useful that the leaders of China and Nepal meet and exchange views on international and regional issues of mutual concern and on ways to further develop bilateral relations."

Zhao Ziyang reiterated that "China will, as always, firmly support the just struggle of Nepal to safeguard national independence and develop the national economy and his majesty king's proposal on declaring Nepal a peace zone. China has consistently worked to strengthen its unity and cooperation with other Third World countries, oppose hegemonism and maintain world peace. We are willing to make concerted efforts with Nepal to maintain peace and stability in South Asia and Asia as a whole.

His majesty King Birendra said in his speech that due to the mutual trust and confidence that exist between Nepalese and Chinese leaders and people, Nepal-China relations have "withstood the vagaries of time." "I am therefore happy to note with satisfaction the state of relations existing between our countries," he said, "We in Nepal have always cherished and valued our friendship with the Chinese people."

Reviewing the long-standing and well-established friendly relations between Nepal and China, the king said: "The seed of friendship that my father, late King Mahendra together with Mao Zedong and Zhou Enlai had planted has now become a sapling. Today we have no basic problems, our borders have been delineated, and as always, we have continued to remain good neighbours by adhering firmly to the principles of peaceful coexistence.

"The Nepalese people have been grateful to the Chinese people for their generous assistance in national development. Today the people of Nepal hope for building new areas of economic cooperation which will be of mutual benefit to both our peoples."

He said that today clouds of hostilities hang low in the skies of the world. He stressed the need for unity among countries of the Third World. He said: "The Paris U.N. conference on the lease developed countries and the Delhi south-south meeting have helped in forging the will of the developing countries to cooperate among themselves for their mutual benefit. In our region of South Asia, we have been effortful to promote regional cooperation for development.

"In the ultimate analysis, it is development based on interdependence, mutual good will, justice and solidarity that will help consolidate peace everywhere."

The king said: "We have watched with interest the recent developments in this country. We welcome China's positive contributions in the international arena in general, and particularly your support for the cause of the developing countries. We applied the bold endeavours of the Chinese leadership in directing the nation on its new path of modernisation so as to build a new China befitting a great civilization."

During his visit to Nepal in June last year, Premier Zhao had a cordial meeting with King Birendra. Today, the two leaders were glad to have met here again and they chatted cheerfully about their old friendship.

During the banquet, the band played both Chinese and Nepalese music and the hosts and guests toasted to the ever-lasting friendship between Chinese and Nepalese people.

Present at the banquet were Li Dengying, Governor of Gansu Province, and Wu Xueqian, vice-minister of foreign affairs.

Nepalese Ambassador to China Shumshere Jung Bahadur Rana Guna was also present.

PRC SUPPORTS UN PALESTINE APPEAL; U.S. OPPOSED

OW280232 Beijing XINHUA in English 0200 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Geneva, July 27 (XINHUA) -- The United Nations Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) today adopted a resolution calling upon various countries and international organizations to provide emergency assistance to the Palestinian people in Lebanon.

The resolution, co-sponsored by the members of the Group of 77, China and the German Democratic Republic, was adopted with 48 in favour and one (The United States) against.

The resolution expressed "deep alarm at the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, which claimed the lives of a very large number of civilian Palestinians." It also expresses deep concern at the dire need of the Palestinians in Lebanon for urgent humanitarian assistance. It calls upon Israel to release civilians detained by the Israeli occupation army in Lebanon and to apply fully the Geneva Conventions to the civilians and the imprisoned combatants.

During the debate on the question of assistance to the Palestinian people, representatives of many countries strongly condemned Israeli invasion of Lebanon and expressed deep sympathy for the Palestinian people.

ECOSOC today also adopted a resolution on providing assistance to the oppressed people of South Africa and their national liberation movement.

U.S. TERMS FOR PLO RECOGNITION ENUNCIATED

OW271018 Beijing XINHUA in English 0807 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Washington, July 26 (XINHUA) -- The United States announced today that it will not deal directly with the Palestine Liberation Organization until the PLO "explicitly" recognizes U.N. Resolution 242 and Israel's right to exist.

The White House and State Department issued a statement today saying: "The United States will not recognize or negotiate with the PLO until the PLO accepts U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338 and Israel's right to exist." "This must be done in a clear and unequivocal way. The statement by (PLO Chairman) 'Arafat does not meet these conditions," it noted.

The statement said if the conditions were met, the United States would be willing to talk with them.

According to an earlier report, an American congressman, Paul N. McCloskey, Jr., yesterday told a press conference in Lebanon after meeting with Yasir 'Arafat that the PLO leader had signed a document accepting "all U.N. resolutions relevant to the Palestine question."

McCloskey said the statement meant to be the PLO's acceptance of U.N. Resolution 242. But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today 'Arafat's statement "didn't specify the resolution."

Resolution 242 calls for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories and Arab recognition of the Israeli right to exist. The PLO has always refused to accept the resolution on grounds that it only refers to Palestinians as "refugees." Observers noted that the United States has never asked Israel to recognize the PLO and the national rights of the Palestinian people before the latter recognize Israel.

Meanwhile, the State Department announced today that the foreign ministers of Egypt and Israel will visit the United States this week. The Egyptian foreign minister, according to the State Department, is bringing a message to President Ronald Reagan from President Husni Mubarak on events in the Middle East.

Mubarak decided to send 'Ali to the United States after he met with U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib on the Lebanon crisis on July 25. Ali will stop over in London on his way to Washington for talks with British officials and may visit Paris on his way home.

Informed sources said Mubarak in his messages calls on the United States to take advantage of the situation in favor of peace which has emerged as a result of the statement made by PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat accepting all U.S. resolutions on the Palestinian issue. Mubarak also calls for a halt to the bloodshed in Lebanon and urges a just and comprehensive settlement to the Palestinian problem.

Yesterday 'Ali met with senior members of the Palestine Liberation Organization and made telephone contacts with Lebanese officials.

CHINA DAILY CALLS FOR END TO GULF WAR

[Article by CHINA DAILY commentator: "Time To End the War"]

[Text] The unfortunate gulf war between two brotherly Islamic countries, Iran and Iraq, has entered its 23rd month. The renewed ferocity of the hostilities after a brief lull has brought further heavy losses in Muslim lives and property, much to the chagrin of countries friendly to both the belligerent parties.

It had been hoped that the war would somehow be brought to an end when, about two months ago, the two warring sides found themselves almost where they had been before the armed conflict first flared up on September 22, 1980. Whatever misconceptions either side might have had to cause the war should have been dispelled by NMC, and whatever grievances each might have against the other cannot be worth being redressed by further bloodshed.

There are no fundamental differences among Third World countries. All problems between them are solvable at the negotiation table and through mediation of other nonaligned Islamic countries.

Historical disputes over territory must be viewed with a long-term perspective. Any rash action would only complicate the matter -- as it has -- and might sow the seeds of additional discord, which should be avoided at all costs.

In both warring countries, too many important oil-refining and other facilities have been destroyed, and large construction projects have waited too long to be completed.

Peace is in the best and immediate interest of both, and an early end should be put to the war that has only saddened their friends and emboldened their enemies.

Already the war has weakened the Islamic countries' precious unity to face their common foe -- the Israeli expansionists. In these warring months, the Zionists have successively taken steps to annex the West Bank of the Jordan River and Syria's Golan Heights. They are now besieging Beirut and threatening a genocidal massacre of the Palestinian people.

The two hegemonist superpowers are taking advantage of the conflict to intensify their rivalry in the gulf region and the entire Middle East. With each professing neutrality, they are reaping third-party profits through arms sales, either direct or via intermediaries. Their sophisticated weaponry is being tested with Muslim lives and blood, to mention just one instance.

Peace in the gulf region and unity among the Islamic countries are needed to hold the Israeli expansionists in check. Peace and cooperation among all the Middle East countries are needed to keep hegemonism out of the region. Peace and coordination among the OPEC countries are needed to prevent manipulation by the transnational corporations and to work for the common benefit of the Third World. Peace between Iran and Iraq is necessary, above all, for the prosperity and well-being of their respective nations.

CHEN MUHUA FETES SUDANESE TRADE DELEGATION

[Text] Beijing, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Chen Muhua, state councillor and minister of foreign economic relations and trade, said here this evening that "the Third World countries should unite to develop South-South cooperation and make concerted afforts to establish a new international order of justice and equality, to oppose hegemonism and safeguard world peace." Chen Muhua made this remark at a banquet given by her this evening at the Great Hall of the People in honor of the Sudanese Government trade delegation led by Faruq Ibrahim al-Maqbul, minister of cooperation, commerce and supply of the Sudan. Chen Muhua also spoke highly of the achievements the Sudanese Government and people have won in safeguarding state independence, defending national sovereignty and building their own country under the leadership of President Numayri.

Maqbul said: "We all understand the influence and effective role of economic and trade relations in consolidating and developing bilateral and international relations." He said he would make efforts to further develop the economic relations and trade between the Sudan and China.

Present at the banquet were Lu Xuejian, vice-minister of foreign economic relations and trade, and Muhammad Hamad M. Matar, Sudanese ambassador to China.

YANG DEZHI ON PLA TRADITION, MODERNIZATION

[Text] Beijing, 27 Jul (XINHUA) -- Yang Dezhi, chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, talked to XINHUA reporters on the eve of 1 August Army Day, calling on the whole army in the new historical period to further carry forward its fine traditions, strive to build itself into a powerful, revolutionary, modern and regular armed force and make new contributions to defending the motherland and world peace and accomplishing the sacred cause of the motherland's reunification.

Yang Dezhi said: This year 1 August marks the 55th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. In commemoration of this glorious day, I am thrilled to express high tribute and cordial regards to all PLA commanders and fighters, all members of the people's militia and comrades who have made positive contributions to national defense construction.

After talking about the very important role played and tremendous contributions made by the army under the Chinese Communist Party's leadership over the past 55 years in winning the people's revolutionary wars, consolidating the people's democratic dictatorship and defending and participating in the socialist revolution and construction, Yang Dezhi pointed out with emphasis that in the 22 years from the birth of the People's Army in 1927 to the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949, the victories of the Chinese revolution were inseparable from the armed struggle led by our party. Just as Comrade Mao Zedong pointed out: "Without a People's Army the people have nothing." "Without armed struggle neither the proletariat, nor the people, nor the Communist Party would have any standing at all in China."

Yang Dezhi said: While contributing to China's revolutionary and construction causes, the PLA has in the protracted struggles also developed, strengthened and tempered itself and achieved great successes in army building. Our army has developed from scattered guerrilla units, each fighting on its own in the early days, into a regular army under a highly centralized and unified leadership, from a single armed service into an army composed of ground, naval and air forces and various arms and services, and from "millet plus rifles" in the past into possession of fairly modern weapons and equipment including aircraft, tanks, warships, atom bombs, hydrogen bombs, guided missiles and so forth. Through the protracted revolutionary wars, our army has accumulated rich practical experiences and trained a large number of outstanding cadres. Integrating the universal truth of Marxism with the concrete practice of China's revolutionary wars, pooling the wisdom of the whole party and the whole army and inheriting and drawing from the essence of ancient and foreign military theories, Comrade Mao Zedong put forward a whole series of theories, policies and principles on building a People's Army and fighting a people's war, forming an important component of Mao Zedong Thought, Mao Zedong's military thinking. This was Comrade Mao Zedong's very outstanding contribution to the Marxist-Leninist military theories. This valuable ideological wealth has been, still is and will continue to be our army's guide to victory.

Yang Dezhi said: Since the downfall of the "gang of four," especially since the 3d plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee and Comrade Deng Xiaoping's taking charge of the work of the Military Commission, important new progress has been made in army building. The whole army has closely followed the party Central Committee's plan, firmly implemented the party's line, principles and policies, conscientiously checked the influence of the "left" guiding ideology, eliminated the pernicious influence of Lin Biao and the "gang of four," and worked hard to build a modern and regular revolutionary army. It has upheld the four fundamental principles, achieved unity in thinking and action with the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" and taken on a new outlook politically and ideologically. The whole army has warmly supported and actively implemented the important policy decisions of the party and state on readjusting the economy, restructuring the administration, dealing blows at criminal activities in the economic field, enhancing our cultural development under socialism and so forth.

Our army's fine traditions of unity between officers and men, unity between the army and the people, and plain living and hard struggle have been vigorously carried forward, and the unity between the army and the government and between the army and the people has been further strengthened. New achievements have been made in building up the cadre ranks. Group after group of command cadres and specialized and technical personnel at various levels trained by the military academies and schools have been assigned to the units; arrangements have been made in a planned and appropriate way for a part of the cadres to be transferred to civilian work and for some old comrades to leave their posts for convalescence or to retire; the problem of having younger cadres for combat units below the regimental level has been basically solved; and the average age of other leading cadres has been lowered somewhat from before. In the past few years, we have attached strategic importance to education and training, and training work has made remarkable progress in all PLA units and military academies and schools. The ground, naval and air forces have all organized tactical training for senior and middle-level cadres and exercises for leading cadres and organs for them to conscientiously study Mao Zedong's military thinking and theory of active defense and to study questions of combat and training under modern conditions. The technical and tactical levels of the units have been upgraded rather rapidly, accelerating the growth of their fighting capacity. The large-scale coordinated combat exercise and grand military review held in north China last autumn with the participation of various ground service arms, air force flight units and airborne units marked new steps taken in the modernization and regularization of our army.

Yang Dezhi pointed out emphatically: Looking back on history, we deeply feel that the great achievements in the founding, development and strengthening of the People's Army have not come easily. They have been made under the leadership of the great Chinese Communist Party, the guidance of Mao Zedong Thought and the vigorous support of the masses of the people and the people's government, through protracted and extremely hard and bitter struggles with millions of revolutionary fighters and masses of people advancing wave upon wave, shedding their blood and giving their lives. Our army's 55 years of experience in struggle shows that so long as we uphold the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party, adhere to Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking, strategy and tactics of the People's Army and the people's war and rely on the support of the masses of the people, we shall always be invincible.

Yang Dezhi said: In the new historical period, the central task of the Chinese people is to concentrate their efforts on socialist modernization, and this socialist modernization drive is to be carried out under international conditions of serious threats from hegemonism and imperialism and worldwide tension and turbulence. As the most important component of our country's armed forces, the PLA's basic task is to consolidate national defense, resist aggression, defend the motherland, safeguard the four modernizations, take part in national construction and serve the people wholeheartedly. To successfully accomplish this glorious mission, our army must maintain sharp vigilance, strengthen preparedness against war, strengthen education and training and military scientific research, improve weapons and equipment, constantly enhance its fighting capacity and build itself step by step into a powerful, modern, regular, revolutionary army.

We must uphold the party's absolute leadership over the army and firmly implement the party's line, principles and policies. This is a fundamental principle we must adhere to in strengthening army building in the new historical period. The People's Army has been founded and cultivated by the party. Without the Communist Party, there could be no People's Army. Since the day of its founding, our army has been "an armed body for carrying out the political tasks of the revolution" and has fought heroically for accomplishing the party's goals of struggle. This determines that our army must be placed under the party's absolute leadership. Our army must steadfastly adhere to this principle in the past, now and in the future. For this reason, we should consolidate the party organizations and rectify the party work style step by step in a planned way, strengthen party building, improve party leadership, carry forward the party's fine work style and enhance the party organizations' fighting capacity so that the party organizations at various levels in the army will really become strong cores of leadership.

We should also, through the party's vigorous ideological and political work, enhance the political consciousness of all PLA commanders and fighters and work hard to carry out the party's tasks in the new period.

We must strengthen scientific research, develop new weapons and equipment and constantly raise the level of modernization of our weapons and equipment. This is an important task for achieving modernization of our national defense. At the same time, it is still necessary to give play to our army's glorious traditions and base ourselves on defeating a superiorly equipped enemy with inferior equipment.

We must always pay attention to education and training by attaching strategic importance to them. This is the focus of the work of the whole army in peacetime. We must strive to strengthen military training, logistical training, political education and science and cultural studies, properly solve the question of combining people with weapons and improve the army's military and political qualities. Bringing into play men's courage, consciousness and spirit to sacrifice themselves remains the decisive factor in people's wars under modern conditions; but with the development of science and technology and the increasing modernization of weapons and equipment, the improvement of men's cultural and scientific knowledge and technical level has become an important aspect of strengthening the decisive human factor. We should pay attention to education and training in these areas. We should also strengthen cadre training, strengthen coordination training for a composite army and enhance the organization and command abilities of commanders at various levels.

We must reform the army's organization and structure with a revolutionary spirit, build up step by step a contingent of cadres who are revolutionary, younger, better educated and professionally competent, and build our army into a crack force with a smaller but more efficient structure, ease and speed in command, quick reaction, high efficiency and strong fighting capacity. This is an important aspect of our army's modernization and regularization. It is necessary to establish a sound mobilization system and reserve system, consolidate the militia organization, strengthen militia training and do a good job in building up the reserve forces.

It is necessary to develop in depth the "four haves, three stresses and two fear-nots" [to have ideals, morality, knowledge and physical strength; to stress military appearance, courtesy and discipline; and to fear no difficulty or hardship nor bloodshed and sacrifice] activities and vigorously promote our cultural development under socialism. All PLA commanders and fighters must make the "four haves, three stresses and two fear-nots" the standard of their words and deeds and strive to turn themselves into revolutionary fighters with socialist and communist ideals, noble moral standards and habits, rich cultural and scientific knowledge and a high sense of organization and discipline. It is necessary to closely combine raising the level of our cultural life with doing our own jobs well and successfully fulfill all our tasks in defending the motherland, training in preparedness against war, construction, production, scientific research and so forth. It is necessary to closely combine raising the level of our cultural life with supporting the government and cherishing the people, serve the people wholeheartedly, actively participate in socialist construction and various public spirited activities and enhance unity between the army and the government and between the army and the people. It is necessary to continue to learn from Lei Feng and from the heroes and models, foster a new spirit, energetically commend the advanced units and individuals in promoting our cultural development and push the activity continuously to new heights.

Yang Dezhi said in conclusion: In the past 55 years, under the Chinese Communist Party's leadership, our army has traversed a glorious course, achieved great successes and won great prestige. In the new historical period, we must further carry forward our fine traditions, closely rally around the party Central Committee, hold high the great banner of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and make new contributions to building China into a modern and powerful, highly democratic and culturally advanced socialist country; to building our army into a powerful, revolutionary, modern and regular army; and to defending the motherland, safeguarding world peace and accomplishing the sacred task of reunifying the motherland.

CHEMICAL VICE MINISTER YANG YIBANG PUNISHED

[Text] Beijing, July 27 (XINHUA) — Chinese Vice-Minister of Chemical Industry Yang Yibang has been placed on two years' probation within the party and removed from all his party posts in accordance with a recent decision of the party Central Committee Discipline Inspection Commission, based on his actions in violation of party discipline and government regulations.

Yang Yibang was formerly member of the leading party group in the Ministry of Chemical Industry and secretary of the Communist Party committee (and concurrently general manager) of the Yanshan General Petrochemical Corporation of Beijing. The commission decision recommended that he be removed from his administrative posts and assigned other work. Another senior official, Xiao Yang, deputy director of the Beijing Municipal Economic Commission and general manager of the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation, was given a serious party warning for involvement in the same case and the Central Discipline Inspection Commission recommended that his work unit give him a demerit. It was found that, without investigation and analysis, Yang Yibang had signed a memorandum for a 600 million U.S. dollar loan with a Hong Kong businessman who palmed himself off as the representative of a powerful international consortium. The Hong Kong man "led him around by the nose," the commission decision said. Xiao Yang signed two other memoranda with the same man. The decision said the Hong Kong businessman, with almost no financial backing, claimed he could get China interest-free, long-term loans amounting to billions of U.S. dollars. On Yang Yibang's proposal the businessman was appointed an advisor to the Yanshan General Petrochemical Corporation. The man used the title of agent of the corporation, one of China's largest, to swindle and bluff outside China. China's international prestige was seriously compromised. Yang Yibang was also accused of bypassing the Foreign Ministry and Chinese embassies abroad and asking the Hong Kong man to arrange visas for him to Japan and Belgium, where he sought foreign loans and made study tours. All this violated rules and regulations of the State Council and the Foreign Ministry, the decision said. In March 1979 the China National Chemicals Import and Export Corporation was selling polyethylene at 885 to 952 U.S. dollars per ton and polypropylene at 800 dollars per ton. The international prices of both products were still rising as a result of the oil crisis at that time. But Yang Yibang and Xiao Yang refused to take advice from Chinese foreign trade departments and the following month arranged for the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation to sell to the Hong Kong man polyethylene and polypropylene produced by the Yanshan General Petrochemical Corporation at 800 U.S. dollars per ton. As a result, that man netted a profit of 750,000 U.S. dollars, the decision said. Moreover, said the decision, the Hong Kong man dumped in Hong Kong, Singapore and the Philippines what he had bought in Beijing forcing Chinese foreign trade companies to lower twice the prices for the products already sold. As a result, the country lost foreign exchange amounting to 480,000 U.S. dollars.

The decision pointed out that what Yang Yibang did violated the rules of conduct for Chinese Communist Party members as well as discipline for government functionaries. "The third plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee held in December 1978 decided to open the country to the world and revitalize the domestic economy while readjusting national economic development," the decision continued. "Nevertheless, Yang Yibang and other comrades failed to conscientiously study and comprehensively understand the new policy."

For many years in the past, the decision said, Yang Yibang and Xiao Yang had done useful work for the party. In view of this, the party has dealt with their case in line with the traditional policy known as "learning from the past mistakes to avoid future ones, and curing the sickness to save the patient."

RENMIN RIBAO Report

HK280329 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 27 Jul 82 pp 1, 4

[Report: "Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee Seriously Deals With the Case of Vice Minister of Chemical Industry Yang Yibang"]

[Text] In light of the opinion of the broad masses of party members, the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee has further checked the information and made a decision on punishing Comrade Yang Yibang, vice minister of the Ministry of Chemical Industry, a member of the leading party group and former secretary of the CCP committee and general manager of the Yanshan General Petrochemical Corporation of Beijing for the serious mistakes which he committed in international trade work. According to the decision, Comrade Yang Yibang has been placed on probation within the party for 2 years and has been dismissed from all his positions in the party. The decision also suggests that he be dismissed from all his present positions outside the party and be assigned to another post.

Prior to this decision, the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee gave Comrade Yang Yibang a serious party disciplinary warning on 1 February of this year for his repeated violation of the discipline for foreign affairs. When further action was taken to handle the case, the former punishment meted out on 1 February was rescinded.

According to the decision of the Discipline Inspection Commission the CCP Central Committee, Comrade Xiao Yang, deputy director of the Beijing Municipal Economic Commission and general manager of the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation, was given a serious party warning for his involvement in the same case and his serious mistakes. The commission also recommended that disciplinary sanctions be imposed on him.

The decision of the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee pointed out: Comrade Yang Yibang was the main executor of seeking loans and carrying out compensation trade with a certain company in Hong Kong. This company was without powerful financial backing. When the responsible person of this company first got in touch with Comrade Yang Yibang, he pretended to be the representative of a powerful international consortium and claimed that he could get China interest-free, long-term loans amounting to billions of dollars. This was obviously a fraud. However, without investigation and analysis or reporting to the higher authorities or knowing the real situation of the company, Comrade Yang Yibang hastily signed a memorandom for a $600 million loan with the responsible person of the company. Not long after that, he told Comrade Yang Yibang that without the mandate of the Yanshan Corporation, it would be difficult for him to carry out his activities in foreign countries. This actually tore the mask off his face and exposed the fraud. Under such circumstances, Comrade Yang Yibang proposed that the responsible person of the company be appointed advisor to the Yanshan Corporation regardless of the consequences. That Hong Kong businesmen used the title of agent of the corporation, one of China's largest, to swindle and bluff outside China. Our country's prestige was seriously compromised.

Comrade Yang Yibang was a vice minister in the government. His purpose in visiting Hong Kong and making study tours in foreign countries was to seek loans. However, he repeatedly violated rules and regulations of the State Council and the Foreign Ministry. He bypassed the Foreign Ministry and Chinese embassies abroad to go through formalities to go abroad and the Hong Kong businessman arranged visas for him to Japan and Belgium. Such behavior of violating rules and regulations for external activities aroused the suspicion of foreign embassies in China and produced a very bad influence in foreign countries. His main activities in foreign countries were not arranged by the Chinese establishments or embassies abroad, but by that Hong Kong businessman. He "led him around by the nose" and regarded him as a signboard for swindling and bluffing. Yang Yibang violated the state security regulations by asking that Hong Kong businessman to send out classified letters and documents. During the time when he was associating with that Hong Kong businessman, he accepted two Western-style suits and other articles of daily use.

In addition, he asked every member of the delegation to turn their 20-yuan pocket money over to that Hong Kong businessman in exchange for a radio-cassette player. This was an act of accepting bribes in disguised form. Apart from that, Yang Yibang secretly helped that Hong Kong businessman to get a newborn baby girl from a hospital in Yantai through very abnormal means. None of this can be tolerated by the discipline of the party and government.

Comrades Yang Yibang and Xiao Yang put forth the proposal and assigned the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation with the task of selling some plastic raw materials to the above-mentioned Hong Kong company (6,000 tons of polyethylene and 8,000 tons of polypropylene). Before selling those plastic raw materials, a new worldwide oil crisis had loomed up and the international prices of petrochemical products were still rising. Our establishments in Hong Kong had already informed personnel of the Yanshan Corporation in Hong Kong of the international prices. According to several contracts signed in Hong Kong on 21-27 March 1979, the General Import and Export Company of Chemical and Industrial Products of China's Foreign Trade Ministry sold polyethylene at $885 to $952 per ton and polypropylene at $800 per ton. Under the conditions of constantly increasing prices, it was improper to sign long-term sales contracts. However, when the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation signed transaction agreements with that Hong Kong company on 4 April, the price for the two kinds of plastic raw materials with seven specifications was $800 per ton. Such an act of neglecting general commercial knowledge and refusing to take advice concerning international prices from the units concerned was completely wrong. Due to the intervention by the State Council, the actual delivery quantity of those plastic raw materials was later reduced to 9,500 tons. That Hong Kong businessman netted a profit of $750,000. Furthermore, he sold big quantities of those plastic raw materials in Hong Kong, Singapore and the Philippines at prices lower than those of the China resources company and other foreign trade companies to disrupt our state-run export trade. In Hong Kong, the China resources company was twice compelled to lower the prices for products already sold. As a result, our country lost foreign exchange amounting to $480,000. Comrade Yang Yibang should be held responsible for such tremendous losses.

In December 1979 a business group organized by the Yanshan Corporation and other units signed 5 contracts in Hong Kong with businessmen from Japan and the United States on selling chemical industrial raw materials such as propylene, and so forth. The group violated our common practice in foreign trade by appointing that Hong Kong businessman to be a witness. According to the prices of the first delivery period as stipulated in the contracts, that Hong Kong businessman was able to obtain witness fees amounting to $400,000 within 3 years. The Yanshan Corporation is one of our country's large-scale chemical industrial enterprises and has a good reputation abroad. The act of appointing a witness in foreign trade contracts actually played down our own reputation in international trade. This produced a very bad influence. Comrade Yang Yibang was leader of the group at a higher level. When the group was negotiating with businessmen from Japan and the United States, he wrote a letter to the group, instructing it to give some benefits to that Hong Kong businessman and tell him the information in his presence. He is entirely responsible for the unnecessary and erroneous act of appointing that Hong Kong businessman to be a witness, which played down our international prestige.

The decision pointed out that what Comrade Yang Yibang did violated the rules of conduct for Chinese Communist Party members and that his mistakes were serious.

The decision of the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee also pointed out the main mistakes committed by Comrade Xiao Yang. It stressed: Comrade Xiao Yang was the specific reason responsible for contacting that Hong Kong businessman. Before establishing association with that Hong Kong businessman, leading comrades of the central authorities repeatedly instructed that he be "careful" and "know the real situation."

However, he turned a blind eye to these instructions and refused to carry out conscientious investigation and study. He hastily signed two loan memorandums with that Hong Kong businessman and appointed that Hong Kong businessman without authorization to be representative of the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation so that he was able to swindle and bluff on the international market. All this severely violated the discipline of the party and government.

When Comrade Xiao Yang visited Hong Kong in February 1979 together with Comrade Yang Yibang, he also committed mistakes of taking bribes in disguised form. His visa to visit Japan was also arranged by that Hong Kong businessman. This severely violated discipline for external activities.

With regard to the problem of the Beijing General Economic Construction Corporation's selling plastic raw materials at low prices, Comrade Xiao Yang was the person directly responsible for the case. Before the transaction, he neither studied the matter of selling prices nor specifically explained it to comrades at lower levels. He made a hasty decision and severely neglected his duty. This caused enormous economic losses to the state.

The decision of the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee also pointed out: During the second half of 1978, Beijing Municipality and Yanshan Corporation sought loans and carried out compensation trade with that Hong Kong businessman with a background of all-out efforts to carry out construction and an overanxiety to make achievements. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the CCP Central Committee has decided to implement an open-door policy and pursue the practice of enlivening the domestic economy. At the same time, it has put forth the eight-character guiding principles aimed at effectively readjusting the national economy. However, Comrade Yang Yibang and other comrades failed to conscientiously study and comprehensively understand the correct guiding principles of the CCP Central Committee implemented since the third plenary session. They turned a deaf ear to instructions issued by leading comrades concerned in their work, did not make conscientious investigations and study and refused to consider information provided repeatedly by departments concerned and to take their advice. While carrying out activities in foreign countries, they bypassed our country's establishments abroad and repeatedly violated discipline and were led around by the nose by foreign businessmen and yielded to their demands. All this harmed our country's reputation and caused tremendous economic losses. It is obvious that they did not commit mistakes due to lack of experience or knowledge.

The decision pointed out: Comrades Yang Yibang and Xiao Yang did beneficial work for the party for many years in the past. They scored achievements in their work. According to the principle of "learning from the past mistakes to avoid future ones, and curing the sickness to save the patient," while seriously handling their mistakes, we should continue to show them warm concern and help them, and hope that they will modestly learn their lesson, enhance their ideological level and strengthen their training in party spirit so that they will exert efforts to make new contributions in their work.

Commentator's Article

[Commentator's article: "It Is Necessary To Boldly Work and Strictly Observe Discipline at the Same Time"]

[Text] -- In light of the opinion of the broad masses of party members, the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee has further checked the information and has made a decision on punishing Yang Yibang and other comrades for the serious mistakes which they committed in international economic work. According to the decision, Comrade Yang Yibang is placed on probation within the party for 2 years and is dismissed from all his positions in the party. The decision also suggests that he be dismissed from all his present positions outside the party and be assigned to another post.

It gives Comrade Xiao Yang a serious disciplinary warning of the party and records an administrative demerit against him. The further handling of the case is completely correct because it shows the determination of the party Central Committee to set right the party's work style and to enforce party discipline. The punishment is a profound disciplinary education not only for the cadres who committed the mistakes but also for other cadres.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, our country has adopted an open-door policy and has thus rapidly developed economic exchanges with foreign countries. The promotion of international economic and technological cooperation of various forms through international exchanges of equality and mutual benefit can strengthen our self-reliance. We should firmly continue the open-door policy, actively expand and develop foreign trade, import advanced technology and scientific management experience, use foreign capital and constantly expand international economic exchanges to accelerate our four modernizations. All cadres doing international economic work should take the initiative to work boldly, create new prospects for international economic work and make new contributions to our socialist economy.

We still lack experience in international economic exchanges and many of our comrades are still not very skillful in dealing with foreign capitalists. Under this situation, it is unavoidable for some cadres to commit mistakes of one kind or another in their work or even to be deceived by others. We should sum up experience from the mistakes and draw lessons from them. A fall into the pit is a gain in your wit. We should raise our ideological level, enhance our working ability and further exert ourselves to do our work well.

We should see that the majority of the cadres doing international economic work are good. They work hard, seriously conduct investigations and studies, modestly listen to the opinions of foreign experts and handle various complicated questions in a down-to-earth way. Therefore, they can boldly create new prospects for their work and are good in summing up experience and constantly making new achievements. Such cadres are precious. We should develop their wisdom and talents to the full.

Some cadres work hard and boldly, but they lack experience and necessary knowledge and do not know how to study new problems and sum up new experience. Therefore, they suffer losses in their dealings with foreigners and commit mistakes in their work. We should earnestly point out the mistakes of such comrades, help them sum up experience and improve their skills and continue to bring into play their enthusiasm for working boldly and their initiative in daring to bear responsibilities.

There are also a small number of cadres who have neither experience nor knowledge and do not listen to other's opinions. They do not hesitate to undermine national dignity and interests, violate law and discipline and cause serious losses to the country only for the partial and local interests of their locality, department or unit or even just for small personal advantage. Comrades such as Yang Yibang are in this category.

During international economic exchanges, they disobeyed the instructions from the leadership concerned, ignored the advice given by the departments concerned, disregarded the national reputation and interests, acted willfully and persisted in their errors on the pretext of opening a new road. They allowed themselves to be ordered about by foreign businessmen, submitted to foreign businessmen's demands, repeatedly violated party and government discipline and caused serious political and economic losses to the state. Their actions did not open any new road; on the contrary, they allowed themselves to be led astray by speculative businessmen. We cannot condone party members and cadres, particularly high-ranking cadres like Comrade Yang Yibang, if they make such mistakes. It is a matter of course to punish them according to party and government discipline.

The decision of the Central Discipline Inspection Commission points out: "On the one hand, we are duly dealing with their mistakes according to the principle of 'learning from past mistakes to avoid future ones and curing the sickness to save the patient.' On the other hand, we should continue to give them our warm and cordial concern and help. We hope that they will modestly accept the lesson, raise their ideological level, enhance party spirit and make new endeavors and contributions in the future."

We should draw many lessons from the mistakes made by Yang Yibang and other comrades. The most important lesson is that we must strictly observe discipline when we work, particularly when we are handling foreign affairs. Discipline is one of the guarantees for implementing the party's line, principles and policies. No one should violate discipline on the pretext of opening a new road. Violating discipline will obstruct the implementation of our principles and policies at the expense of national interests. To boldly work is in agreement with strict adherence to discipline. Only by boldly working can we open up new prospects. Only by strictly adhering to discipline can we protect national interests. Both promote the development of our socialist economy.

It is worthy of our attention that since we began the open-door policy, some comrades have tried but accomplished nothing, or have found fault with others because they have stuck to old ways in their thinking under the new situation. Such a mentality is completely inadvisable and should be quickly corrected. A small number of persons are taking advantage of the open-door policy to commit economic crimes. We should resolutely strike blows at economic criminals and punish them according to law if their crimes are serious. In this way we will be able to ensure sound development of our international economic activities.

We must strive to boldly work and strictly observe discipline at the same time because this is a basic demand set by the party for all comrades who deal with foreigners.

CHINA DAILY CARRIES HONGQI ON ECONOMIC CRISES

[By Li Zhuqi from HONGQI No 14]

[Text] Economic crises are part of capitalism. In a socialist society, there are no such economic crises because public ownership of the means of production eliminates the origin of such crises -- the contradiction between private ownership of the means of production and socialized production.

A socialist state can plan and develop its national economy and tailor production to meet the material and cultural demands of its people.

We once had a serious imbalance in our national economy which adversely affected our socialist construction and people's livelihood. Some comrades maintained then that this imbalance constituted an economic crisis. This is obviously a misunderstanding.

An economic crisis is a phenomenon of capitalism. It lies in the fundamental contradiction of capitalism which is caused by the disparity between production and consumption.

In pursuing high profits, capitalists have to speed up production with all possible technological means -- and then hope to sell the products -- and also exploit workers by all possible means. Although in each capitalist factory, production is organized and planned, it is competitive and anarchistic in society as a whole. Although there is a big increase in salable commodities, the amount the majority of the labouring population can afford to buy tends to decrease relatively. Therefore, economic crises become an inevitable part of capitalism.

When our economy was imbalanced, it was not an outgrowth of socialist economy. It was due to "leftist" influence and the sabotage of the gang of four. It was caused by mistakes we made in our work.

An economic crisis occurs in capitalism amidst tumuluous economic activity. As production increases, a big surplus of commodities is stockpiled.

The necessity to reduce production creates a large surplus of workers and a drastic increase in unemployment. Hence, capitalist production undergoes periodic swings from crisis to prosperity and vice versa.

When our economy is imbalanced, there is usually a shortage in equipment and consumer goods. This is not cyclical. It only occurs when errors are made in our work. When the errors are corrected, the national economy can develop again.

With the present economic readjustment, production of consumer goods has developed rapidly over the past three years and people's living standards have been raised.

SHIJIE JINGJI DAOBAO ON 'BUOYANT' FOREIGN TRADE

["Recession Fails To Sink China's Trade"]

[Text] China's foreign trade is buoyant despite the rough waters of the world recession, the Shanghai-based newspaper WORLD ECONOMIC HERALD reports.

Exports for the first half of this year totaled U.S. $10.2 billion, 10.2 percent higher than the same period of last year.

This increase exceeds the expansion of industrial and agricultural production for the period, and that of world exports, the paper says.

China's export of petroleum and machinery increased 15 and 19 percent respectively. Exports of steel, polyester, bicycles, sewing machines, hemp and flax, filature silk, peppermint oil, and pig bristles also increased.

Imports, conversely, dropped 19.6 percent, totalling only U.S. $7.8 billion, with the import of complete sets of equipment, machinery and instruments down 43 percent and that of steel and copper down 23 percent.

The paper quotes a leading cadre of the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade as saying that China, while struggling to overcome the difficulties brought about by the world recession, should strive to improve the quality of its export goods, and to produce more market-oriented commodities.

The newspaper INTERNATIONAL TRADE NEWS meanwhile reports that China has exported $392 million of ready-made clothes in the first six months of this year, 26 percent more than the same period last year.

The paper said Beijing, Tianjin, Jiangsu, Liaoning, Hebei, Jiangxi, and Anhui had seen bigger textile export achievements than other places and some districts has suffered setbacks.

The paper says Britain is the leading importer, buying 179 percent more Chinese clothes. Chinese textile exports to Hong Kong have increased by 76 percent, to the United States by 36 percent, to Canada by 33 percent and to France by 64 percent. However, the paper says, textile export to Iraq, Italy and the Soviet Union have dropped by 30 to 67 percent.

The paper forecasts continuing depression in the international textile industry in the rest of the year and there is room for Chinese textile enterprises to further boost her exports.

ECONOMIC OFFICIAL ON SENDING WORKERS ABROAD

[Article by Chen Guanfeng: "More Chinese Are Working Overseas"]

[Text] China will further its economic cooperation with foreign countries by sending more technicians and skilled workers abroad, says an official of the Bureau of Economic Cooperation With Foreign Countries.

According to the official, about 25,000 Chinese technicians and skilled workers are now working abroad, mainly in Middle East countries.

He told CHINA DAILY these technicians and workers are mainly involved in such projects as the construction of railways, highways, harbours, bridges, factories and hospitals.

Asked whether the sending out of these people is one of China's steps to cope with unemployment, the official said: "No, we do not have enough of them for our work at home."

"We are sending them abroad to help develop China's economic cooperation with foreign countries; to promote friendship; and to learn advanced skills and techniques from our foreign friends."

He criticises some people who compare these people working abroad to those who went to work abroad before the liberation. "Those days are gone forever," he says. He is referring to the days before the founding of the People's Republic, when many Chinese went abroad as coolies to serve foreign capitalists. "These people were either driven abroad by poverty or oppression, or were victims to the lure of traders in human beings," the official says.

"As for the technicians and skilled workers now working abroad, they all have jobs at home. And as a matter of fact, many of them have been holding very important posts and enjoying a confortable life at home," he explains.

He says these people do not go abroad of their own accord. Rather, they are chosen by the state for their high conscientiousness, superior skill, robust health, good discipline and diligence in work.

While working abroad, they have Chinese interpreters, doctors and cooks to take care of them, so that they can live and work abroad as happily as at home.

After a short period of stay abroad, about one or two years in most cases, these people come home and return to their former jobs.

"They usually come back with better skills and more advanced techniques, and can thus make greater contribution to the work of their units," the official adds.

PAPER LAUDS PERFORMANCE OF SHOUDU STEEL FIRM

[Article by CHINA DAILY reporter: "Steel Plant Turns Over 270 Million Yuan to State']

[Text] The Shoudu [Capital] Iron and Steel Company has increased profits by more than nine per cent despite being instructed to cut production by a tenth in last year's national readjustment, according to Pan Huayan, assistant general manager.

Pan, a 1950s economist from Datong University, Shanghai, said the company had turned over 270 million yuan to the state and now employed 73,000 workers.

The medium-sized company is one of the country's eight biggest metallurgical bases, following Anshan (Liaoning), Wuhan (Hubei), Shanghai, Taiyuan (Shanxi) and Baotou (Nei Monggol). Its products and some of its equipment, which it manufactured itself, are among the best in the country.

In 1979, Pan said, the company had been chosen to experiment with restructuring China's economy. This means, in essence, that enterprises are given more power. The company's profits have increased 20 per cent in each of the three years since then.

Beginning in June 1, 1981 the company tried the new system of handing in a fixed percentage of profit to the state, keeping a certain proportion for its own distribution.

In June 1982 an economic responsibility system was extended down to the level of the individual. The better the performance of each unit or person, the higher the pay.

Since last August, the monthly rate of profit has been consistently above 30 million yuan. Profit rates as a percentage of various criteria were: of production value, 38.55 per cent; of marketing and sales, 33.79 per cent; of assets and circulating capital, 25.61. These figures are the highest among all steel and iron complexes in China.

In the 52 economic and technical indexes by which businesses are compared, it leads in 30. Its coke ratio is below 400, lower than the world standard. Its improvements on the 'coppers' blast stove prompted the American inventor, Mr Coppers, to seek patent rights from China.

Pan said the company had been commended by the government which noted that if all enterprises in the country did as well as Shoudu, there would be no deficit in the state budget.

There are about 400,000 enterprises in China. As little as 10,000 yuan more profit from each would mean an additional revenue of four billion yuan.

Of the 400,000 units, the profit from 1,800 accounts for 60 per cent of the total. However, one-fourth of them run in the red. The deficit would disappear if only these 1,800 enterprises did better.

The success of the Shoudu Steel and Iron Company is a magnificent example for these key enterprises, Pan said.

COMMENTATOR URGES EXAMINING INTELLECTUALS' WORK

HK270925 Beijing RENMIN RABAO in Chinese 26 Jul 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "It Is Necessary To Seriously Solve Problems While Checking on the Work Among Intellectuals"]

[Text] Recently, in accordance with the requirements of the CCP Central Committee, the CCP committees at various levels have checked on or are checking on the intellectuals' work in their respective areas and departments. Measures are being taken to improve our work in this respect. This is the first time since the founding of the PRC that the CCP leading bodies at various levels are extensively examining the work among intellectuals. It vividly shows that our party is continuing to carry out in all fields its line, policies and principles mapped out since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, and is effectively guiding and promoting the development of the construction of socialist modernization. We must be fully aware of the importance of the work among intellectuals, which has been placed on the agenda, and should never treat it lightly.

In the examination of the work of intellectuals, many CCP organizations have taken a conscientious attitude and done a meticulous job. Quite a few comrades have taken this opportunity to educate the cadres on the policy on intellectuals, hold heart-to-heart talks with the intellectuals, encourage them to work still harder, find out their difficulties and listen to their criticisms and opinions. They have thus tightened the bond between the party and the intellectuals. However, in some areas and units, the work has been done perfunctorily, superficially and in a careless manner. Facts show that things differ greatly whether the work is examined or whether it is examined conscientiously. With regard to the work of the whole country, the examination work is now at an important stage of collecting data and mainly solving problems.

Those units which have made a conscientious examination of the work in accordance with the requirements of the CCP Central Committee must realistically and conscientiously study and solve the problems, and those which have done the work perfunctorily must conscientiously and meticulously reexamine it and find out and solve problems. In short, it is necessary to emphasize "conscientiousness."

In order to solve the problems, it is necessary to deepen the understanding of the cadres and masses in all walks of life on the importance of the intellectuals' work. Some comrades think that since the policy on intellectuals has been implemented and the social status of intellectuals has greatly improved since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, if there is any problem in the work in this respect, it should be the problem that some intellectuals have become cocky again and must be warned. However, through conscientious examination we find that although much work has been done over the past few years in implementing the party's policy on intellectuals, there are still some problems which have remained unsolved. In some aspects, the work is still far from being satisfactorily done. The heavy tasks, arduous work and difficult life of the millions of middle-aged cadres and the running down of their constitutions are unimaginable when one is far removed from the masses and reality. One of the main reasons for the long-term existence of these problems, which have remained unsolved although the central authorities have repeatedly emphasized them, is that some comrades, especially some leading comrades, have not yet freed themselves from the prejudice of overlooking or even discriminating against the intellectuals. They do not regard the intellectuals as an important force to rely on in the socialist revolution and socialist construction, do not understand the historical role played by them and do not understand the simple fact that "without culture and the intellectuals, it is impossible to carry out socialist construction," as was pointed out in the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC." In order to eliminate this prejudice, much work has yet to be done. One of the effective ways is to conscientiously examine our work, heed mass opinions and respect the facts.

The problems in the intellectuals' work and the difficulties and demands of the intellectuals are many and varied. For example, after redressing a number of frameups, false charges and wrong sentences, do we understand the feelings of those comrades who have been wronged? The intellectuals are usually not satisfied with the fact that they are no longer the targets of the dictatorship, and are not humiliated and looked down upon. They are ambitious and are looking forward to doing something worthwhile. Have we placed enough faith in them and provided them with necessary conditions? Some of them are still worrying that some political problems may be left in their personal dossier; some are vexed because they are unable to display their strong points due to the improper jobs assigned to them or they have been "reserved" in a certain improper unit for a long time and are unable to give play to what they are good at; some are holding too many posts at the same time and are feeling that their ability is falling short of their standard while some are feeling aggrieved for being unable to give play to their fortes and make contributions to the motherland because the leaders do not know their abilities. The concrete situation varies in each district, unit and department and for each person. Only when the problems are conscientiously checked on and studied in depth one by one can they be solved in an appropriate and reasonable way.

The long-pending problems in the intellectuals' work concern various aspects of our society. It is necessary to solve all the problems that must be solved. However, work should be done in the order of importance and urgency. Some problems which cannot be completely solved at present due to the financial and material conditions of our country shall be gradually solved in the future, but efforts should be made to create conditions for their solution. The broad masses of intellectuals, who have been brought up under the education of our party, are reasonable in their demands. They understand that our country is in difficulty. Regardless of remuneration, they have worked selflessly and made enormous contributions to our socialist cause over the past several decades. If we make a penetrating analysis of the problems and really care for and support them in their work, ideology and daily life, they will certainly continue to give full play to their enthusiasm.

Some difficult problems, such as low wages and housing problems, must be gradually solved under unified arrangement. Of course, in dealing with these problems, we must also pay great attention to being fair and reasonable and realistically solving the problems in the light of the present conditions, and must take into consideration the particularity of mental work as well as the difference between complicated and simple labor in carrying out distribution according to work. In some cases, the intellectuals' troubles can be solved without spending money or by spending little money, and they will thus be able to spend more time and energy on their work, while in some other cases, the problems are more difficult and can be solved by their respective areas in accordance with relevant policies. During the examination work, some localities have realistically promoted a considerable number of major professional cadres and vacated some rooms for those who really need them. Both "eating out of a big pot" and egalitarianism have been prevented. In dealing with some problems which cannot be solved at present, whether concerning people or work, they have made patient explanations and put forth realistic plans for future solutions. The leading comrades in these localities are good at doing the intellectuals' work. They have acquired successful experiences in repeated practice. Some of them are faithful and devoted friends of the intellectuals, some of them have courage and insight and dare to break conventional rules in promoting cadres, and some of them are excellent rear-service men who are capable of solving such problems as troubles in food, transportation and sending children to nurseries. Those who have not done a conscientious job and have often complained of hardship, instead of examining their shortcomings, should learn from these comrades. To conscientiously examine our work and sum up good experiences will greatly benefit us in improving our intellectuals' work.

Recently the leading comrades in the central authorities once again stressed the importance of the rapid solution of difficulties shared by the middle-aged intellectuals in both their work and livelihood. The middle-aged intellectuals are the backbone force in various fields today, shouldering the heavy tasks which link the past and the future. Since our country is still very poor and much work has to be done, it is more necessary that the backbone force be used where it is most needed. It is worthwhile to spend some money in improving the working and living conditions of the middle-aged intellectuals so that their role can be brought into full play. This is in the vital and long-term interest of the country and the people. We must conscientiously do a good job in this examination work and really solve some problems so that the large number of intellectuals can rally round the party and make more contributions to the cause of socialist modernization of the motherland.

ARTICLE URGES CONTINUING TO GROW GRAIN CROPS

["XINHUA Commentator's Article: Land Suitable for Growing Grain Crops Should Still Be Used for Growing Grain Crops" -- XINHUA headline]

[Excerpts] -- Beijing, 23 Jul (XINHUA) -- Considering the entire situation as a whole, we must clearly point out now that land suitable for growing grain crops should still be used in growing grain crops. We must not only grow grain crops, but also strive to increase the per-unit output as well as the total output in order to meet the daily increasing needs in socialist construction.

Is this practice not negating our efforts to readjust the production structure some time ago? No, not at all. On the contrary, this practice is aimed exactly at further implementing the guidelines on making readjustments according to local conditions and implementing rational crop distribution patterns.

After several years of efforts on readjustments since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, China has made considerable improvements in correcting the irrational structure in agricultural production and the ecological imbalance at present. Although the total acreage of farmland sown to grain crops in 1981 was more than 40 million mu less than that in 1979, the total grain output in 1981 still reached 650 billion jin. It was the second highest annual yield since the founding of the nation.

The output of cash crops such as cotton, oil and sugar-bearing crops and hemp has once again risen by leaps and bounds after several years of increases in production. The total output value in forestry, animal husbandry and fishery and in sideline production in 1981 has increased by 4, 6 and 6.8 percent respectively as compared with those in 1980. This practice of readjustments is quite effective. We must continue to make such readjustments.

However, we must also realize that China has a population of 1 billion people at present. Feeding the people remains an issue of top priority. Ensuring a steady increase in grain production has always been an important policy decision which should not be ignored. A current phenomenon which merits our attention is that the acreage of farmland sown to grain crops is decreasing while that sown to cash crops is increasing in many localities.

We have many mountainous areas and large tracts of grassland, hilly regions and waters where we can raise large number of cattle, sheep, rabbits and fish and grow more persimmons, chestnuts, walnuts and dates. It is because of the grain shortage that the superiority of these localities has not been brought into full play. Therefore, so far as the readjustment of the structure in agricultural production is concerned, problems in the plains region have been generally solved following our strenuous efforts in this regard for 3 years. However, we must continue to make readjustments in mountainous areas.

Why do peasants in areas suitable for growing grain crops hesitate to grow more grain crops? This is because peasants feel that the income from grain crops is low, while that from cash crops is high, so it is better to grow cash crops than grain crops. In shaping its policy, the state must take this issue into consideration and put forward some measures to solve this issue. Various localities may also adopt some measures, such as helping develop commune-run and brigade-run enterprises and giving peasants price subsidies so as to whip up peasants' enthusiasm in growing grain crops.

In short, it is necessary to make peasants' income from growing grain crops generally equal to that from growing cash crops. Thus, the grain output in the whole country will steadily increase, and we will be able to boldly readjust the crop pattern in the mountainous areas. A fine ecological cycle will bring about a fine cycle in agriculture. With more grain crops, animal products and special local products, we will be able to develop the food industry. At that time, there will be changes in the diet of the people in China.

SHANXI HIGHWAY OPEN; HU YAOBANG INSPECTION NOTED

[Newsletter by XINHUA correspondents Xi Lai, Shu Gen and Xin Min and reporter Li Guo: "Opening Up a Rich Road Through the Summit of Taihang Mountain"]

[Summary] Taiyuan, 23 Jul (XINHUA) -- A highway which goes through Taihang Mountain and links Yuxiaguan in Shanxi's Pingshun County and Huayuanchun in Henan's Linxian County was recently completed and opened to traffic. People of the Yuxiaguan Commune are very happy because it will help them promote the economy in the mountainous area and become rich.

For more than 20 years before the convocation of the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the people of Yuxiaguan Commune lived in poverty and had to rely on state subsidies. The 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee brought them hope. The production responsibility system has been implemented and diversified farming operations are being encouraged. The peasants of the commune have not only increased their income through diversified farming operations but have also become self-sustaining in grain consumption. They eagerly hoped the highway would be built so that they could ship their agricultural sideline products to other places for sale.

"In August 1981 Hu Yaobang inspected the southeast Shanxi areas. Talking about the development of the economy in the mountainous areas, he pointed out that it was necessary to build several highways in order to find more outlets leading to other parts of the country. The peasants were overjoyed and said: Comrade Hu Yaobang's words have reflected the wishes of our hearts."

The building of a highway was started in the commune in 1970 but the construction work was stopped due to "interference by the movement to learn from Dazhai."

FILM ASSOCIATION HOLDS NATIONAL COUNCIL

OW232215 Beijing XINHUA in English 1258 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 23 (XINHUA) -- China now has a daily film audience of 70 million, according to the national film association. "Therefore, Chinese film artists should take seriously their sense of responsibility to the people," said Xia Yan, chairman of the Chinese association at a national council held recently in Beijing.

A strong advocate of the "pact for literary and art workers" adopted last June, the leading film critic called on the movie artists "to do more, speak no empty lines and immerse themselves in hard work for the next ten years, so as to achieve a genuine prosperity and progress in Chinese films."

More than 130 members of the council from fifteen film studios and the army attended the meeting. Vice Chairman of the association Yuan Wenshu gave a report summarizing the work of the association in the past two years.

The theoretical subjects covered in the report include encouraging revolutionary realism, stressing the guiding role of Marxist-Leninist aesthetics in artistic creation, adhering to the basic principle of reflecting people's life in art, opposing art diverted from reality and opposing the idea that artistic creation is nothing but the self expression of the artists.

On the subject of human nature, the report maintained that the bourgeois theory of human nature which blurs the social character of people should be avoided and class analysis be stressed. On the other hand, the report admitted that some commonality of human nature does exist. It also stressed the necessity of promoting the national style of Chinese films and analysing and studying the experience of foreign films.

The members of the council attending the meeting agreed that serving the people and socialism should be the ultimate purpose of the Chinese film as well as the basis for artistic creation and theoretical inquiry.

Speaking at the meeting, Ding Qiao, the new vice minister of culture who has been working in the field of film industry for years, expressed his continuing support to the association so that what he called the "two wings of the film industry" -- the film association and the film bureau under the Ministry of Culture -- can cooperate more closely and harmoniously.

On the subject of progress made in recent years, movie critic Zhong Dianfei said that the Chinese film has shown "keener insight and more courage in reflecting people's life," better treatment of historical themes and deeper exploration on the means of artistic expression.

Zhong Dianfei expressed his appreciation of the efforts by some young and middle-aged directors and actors who have probed the techniques of artistic expressions, which he described as highly necessary. "The key problem is to strengthen the leadership in this respect," he said. "We have a bright future ahead."

Referring to the weaknesses in film production, he said there is such a considerable gap between good films and bad films, and the work of literary and art criticism is so weak that it has lagged behind film production, an opinion apparently shared by many council members.

HE JINGZHI ADDRESSES LITERARY, ART CRITICS' FORUM

[Text] Beijing, 25 Jul (XINHUA) -- In his speech at a forum on literary and art criticism, which ended yesterday, He Jingzhi, deputy director of the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central committee, said: "A firm, sober-minded and competent Marxist literary and art critic should hold high the banner of communist ideology and never waver on principle and orientation in the course of advance despite possible shortcomings and mistakes."

The forum was held by the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee to carry out the party Central Committee's instructions on strengthening the building of a contingent of theorists and to develop literary and art criticism ever more soundly and effectively under the guidance of the party's four fundamental principles and its principles on literature and art. It was attended by more than 70 critics and editors from literary and art departments, research institutions and literary and art newspapers and periodicals directly under the party Central Committee as well as from the army and some provinces and municipalities.

During 7 days of discussion, participants first studied the speeches on literary and art work by leading comrades of the party Central Committee and the relevant documents of a recent conference held by the national committee of the China Federation of Literary and Art Circles. They then penetratingly discussed such topics as the importance and urgency of developing literary and art criticism, historical experiences in this regard, achievements made in recent years that should not be underestimated, existing problems and shortcomings in literary and art criticism and how to further organize the contingent of Marxist literary and art critics. The forum set forth the tasks, methods and measures for literary and art criticism in the new period and several jobs to be done at present. The discussion was centered on major questions of theory, policy and principle. In the light of actual conditions, participants expressed very good opinions.

Many comrades said at the forum: Historic, heavy responsibilities are on our shoulders. A Marxist critic should uphold principle and make progress and develop. This requires an understanding of dialectics and avoiding one-sidedness. In literature and art, interference by the influence of left ideas should be overcome and the tendency of bourgeois liberalization should be firmly opposed.

In his speech, Comrade He Jingzhi said: Every party cadre in charge of literary and art work should particularly keep a clear head and guard against any deviations in work. He also said: To be a competent critic, one must have a solid foundation in theory and philosophy and a wide knowledge of life. Literary and art critics should come out of their study rooms to learn about society and the masses as writers and artists do. This is because socialist literary and art criticism belongs to the masses.

He Jingzhi also stressed: Critics must have a Marxist style of work and the courage to make criticism and self-criticism. Only thus will they be able to fear no setbacks and keep forging ahead. He hoped that the forming contingent of Marxist literary and art critics would sum up experiences and advance toward new victories.

The forum on literary and art criticism, the first of its kind since the founding of the PRC, was held in Zhuoxian County, Hebei Province, from 17 to 24 July. At the forum, participants made suggestions on further revising the "proposals for literary and art work."

Those speaking at the forum included Chen Bingyi, Chen Yong, Wang Hao, Zhong Dian (?Fei), Feng Mu, and Chen Huangmei. Among those present were Kong Luosun, Kiang Xiaotian, Li Geng, Yuan Wenshu, Lu Meilin, Cheng Daixi, Xu Juemin, Lin Yuan, Wu Yuanmai, Miao Junjie, Li Xifan, Lin Wenshan, Tang Yin, Tang Dacheng, Shi Fangyu, Liu Jianqing, Wei Jianlin, Xie Hong, Yan Gang, Chang Chenghuan, Du Rongquan, Chou Shenming, Tan Yi, Ma Xianting, Fang Jie, Shao Yanxiang, Meng Weizai, Li Songtao, Li Yingmin, Yang Zimin, Liang Guangdi and Xu Feiguang.

PERMANENT COUNCIL OF ARTISTS HOLDS MEETING

[Text] Beijing, July 26 (XINHUA) -- Young and middle-aged artists have become an important force in China's fine arts, according to recent membership figures released by their state-sponsored professional organization.

Of the more than one thousand new members admitted into the association since 1980, nearly 80 percent are under the age fifty-five. Membership has expanded from 932 before the Cultural Revolution to the present 2,380, according to the permanent council of artists association meeting held recently in Beijing.

A progress report delivered at the five-day meeting pointed out that "it is our strategic task to discover and bring forward competent young artists."

Hua Junwu, vice chairman and permanent secretary of the association, reported to the meeting that FINE ART magazine, run by the association, published 1,490 artistic works and 195 commentaries last year, nearly 90 percent of which were composed or written by young and middle-aged artists.

Discussions among Chinese fine art workers in the last two years, Hua Junwu noted, include such subjects as socialist realism, self expression in artistic creation, traditional Chinese painting, art of the human body and the relation between form and content -- some of which went into much more detail and depth than in the past.

The current situation of China's artistic circle, Hua Junwu concluded, is characterized by "enlivened thinking, bold exploration, prosperous creation and the constant emergence of new talents."

It is the young and the middle-aged who are most active in thinking and most bold in exploration, and the majority of them are devoted artists, the vice chairman said.

On the subject of immature or even incorrect ideas of some young artists, Hua said: "It's just natural. Our job is to help them and offer guidance to them." Such practice as "vulgar flattery" should be avoided, he said.

In the last wo years, the association held fifty-five art exhibitions with more than 7,400 works by 4,089 artists presented. The number of one-person exhibitions, including those on works by deceased artists, has shown a remarkable increase. Joint exhibitions for young and middle-aged artists were also held.

Despite the success made, Hua Junwu said, people should oppose the erroneous tendencies of divorcing art from reality in creation, bourgeois liberalization and putting profit first.

Hua Junwu urged artists, whom he described as "the engineers of souls," to strengthen their study of Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought and adhere to the socialist orientation.

Referring to the association's future work, he said, artistic criticism should be strengthened. Continuing efforts should be made to serve the 800 million peasants and artistic activities in minority nationality areas should be further enlivened.

The association now has 148 members of different minority nationalities. The national art exhibition on works by minority nationality artists held earlier this year presented the works by 282 artists of fifty minority nationalities. Some also had their one-person exhibitions.

VISITING OVERSEAS CHINESE VIEWS RELIGIOUS POLICY

[Text] Beijing, July 26 (XINHUA) -- "A half-year long visit to the motherland has convinced me that China's policy on religious freedom is not just an official position of the government, but a policy that is being fully implemented in all parts of the country," according to an overseas Chinese priest here recently before winding up his visit to the country.

The Rev. Father Wei Tsing-sing, a professor at Paris University who has lived in France for 50 years, has just ended a visit to over 20 provinces and municipalities, during which he called on many Catholic bishops, priests and sisters as well as dropping in on some religious friends' families to spend religious holidays with them.

He said the government treats various religions equally and various religious personages have good relations with one another. Religion is no longer dominated by foreign influence, he said. So far, a few hundred churches have been opened to the public and religious life has become normalized. The return of churches and religious estates confiscated during the Cultural Revolution -- which he said is somewhat unbelievable in some Western European Catholic countries -- is true.

Wei said China's Catholic and Christian churches were used as a tool by imperialists in the past. After the founding of New China, the "Three Self Patriotic Movement" was launched by Catholic churches, which made it possible for Chinese churches to be administered by Chinese religious believers themselves. The movement was started in mid-fifties for self-administration, self-support and self-propagation among the Catholic and Protestant churches in China.

The charge that there has been a so-called "religious persecution" in China is a sheer fabrication, he stated.

Wei Tsing-sing said that the self-administration of Chinese churches by Catholic believers is in accord with Christian doctrine and the traditions of the religion.

He was convinced that with the protection of law in China the future for the Catholic churches in China is bright.

ELECTRONIC COMPONENTS INDUSTRY DEVELOPING

[Excerpts] Beijing, 22 Jul (XINHUA) -- In the past 3 years China's electronic components industry has achieved a considerable development by implementing the principle of "readjustment, restructuring, reorganization and upgrading." Many new electronic components have been made; product quality and reliability have been improved; and product mix is better than before. Now more than 33,000 varieties of electronic components with some 300,000 different specifications are produced in our country. These basic products, which are of a certain quality level and are produced in large quanitites, meet the needs of electronic equipment used in various sectors of the national economy as well as in people's daily life.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, electronics industrial enterprises in our country have readjusted their product mix and made intensive efforts to develop new products and to improve their management and operations. Attention has been paid to promoting the production of electronic components and to improving their quality. As a result, electronic components for sophisticated equipment for national defense purposes have shown imporved reliability. Of the 87 components for key military electronic equipment which have to stand a low temperature of 55 degrees below zero centigrade, 84 have met the requirements. The application rate of electronic components for strategic arms has grown from some 20 percent in the past to over 95.5 percent at present. The service life of 12-inch black-and-white television picture tubes averages more than 5,000 hours with their electric parameters and picture quality close or equal to advanced standards. Some electronic components have been awarded gold or silver medals by the state.

In recent years quite a number of important new electronic components have been made, including the frequency-converting magnetrons urgently required by a new radar system, 16KB MOS dynamic storage, new C-MOS large-scale integrated circuits, and large-scale integrated circuits for 8-digit microcomputers. In particular, rapid development has been noted in the production of components for electronic appliances for civilian use. In 1981, output of electronic tubes, semiconductors and radio parts in our country exceeded the preceding year by 13-37 percent. Output for the first half of this year again showed a fairly big growth compared with the corresponding period last year. This has made it possible to turn out more and still better domestically made television sets, tape recorders and computers for the market.

A responsible person of the Ministry of Electronic Industry has pointed out that though production of electronic components has developed rathor quickly in our country, the technical level of our products, on the whole, is rather low and their prices are too high. Because of this, he added, they cannot meet the needs of the rapid development of the electronics industry. He urged staff members and workers of electronics industrial enterprises and research institutes in various localities to fully understand the importance and urgency of developing our electronic components industry and take necessary steps toward this end.

GROUPS SUPPORT LIAO LETTER ON REUNIFICATION

Kuomintang Response

[Text] Beijing, July 27 (XINHUA) -- Wang Kunlun, chairman of the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Committee of the Chinese Kuomintang [KMT], described Liao Chengzhi's recent letter to Mr. Chiang Ching-Kuo as "open and sincere," "with deep feelings and quite reasonable." He was of the opinion that the letter has spoken out the wishes of every Chinese who loves the motherland and longs for its reunification.

Wang Kunlun, in his written statement delivered at the Central Committee meeting held today to discuss Liao's letter, said the Chinese history has proved that national unity and the unification of the country are the irresistible historical trend. Cooperation and division between the Kuomintang and the Communist Party have been interwoven into the course of China's national democratic revolution. "History has repeatedly proved that cooperation between the two parties in beneficial to the country and the nation and the Kuomintang too while division is detrimental to the country and the nation, and harmful to the Kuomintang."

He said: "The breakup on two occasions of cooperation has resulted in the separation of Taiwan from the mainland. This is a misfortune to the Chinese nation. Now it's high time to heal the rift of the nation! We sincerely hope that the two parties will join hands again to realize their third cooperation. After the return of Taiwan to the embrace of its motherland and the reunification of the country, the two parties will be able to co-exist for a long time to come, supervising each other while joining in the great cause of building a powerful China."

He said Mr Chiang Ching-kuo is now in a position and at a time when he can do much for the reunification of the country. The historical hang-up knotted in our generation ought to be solved by ourselves and not to be left over for the next generation, he added.

Zheng Dongguo, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the K.M.T. Revolutionary Committee, said Liao Chengzhi had explained the whole thing clearly in his letter, including the advantages and disadvantages. The Kuomintang and the Communist Party had twice cooperated and splitted. "We all went through this period in history. I think it is necessary to remind the Taiwan authorities to draw lessons from history," he said.

Hou Jingru, also vice-president of the Central Committee, said the letter has placed the interests of the country and the nation above everything else and made a practical analysis of the situation. It pointed out to Mr Chiang his unshirkable responsibility for the realization of the third cooperation, showing it to be the only way of solution. Hesitation will only cause harm.

Leading members of the All-China Federation of Taiwan Compatriots and other Taiwan compatriots in Beijing all held meetings this afternoon and gave their support to Liao Chengzhi's letter and effort.

Lin Liyun, president of the Federation, stressed that only with the peaceful reunification of the motherland will the people of all nationalities on both sides of the Taiwan Straits be able to end the pains of separation and build the country by concerted effort.

Overseas Chinese Statement

[Written statement by Zhuang Xiquan, chairman of the All-China Federation of Returned Overseas Chinese: "Hoping the Name of Mr Chiang Ching-kuo Will Go Down in the Annals of History"]

[Text] Zhuang Xiquan, chairman of the All-China Federation of Returned Overseas Chinese, has made a written statement on the letter of Liao Chengzhi to Mr Chiang Ching-kuo. The statement reads as follows:

In his letter dated 24 July to Mr Chiang Ching-kuo, Comrade Liao Chengzhi expressed concern over his health and, based on history and reality, analyzed the advantages and disadvantages of the country and nation as well as the gains and losses Mr Chiang faces in the future. He spoke correctly and sincerely, he expressed the earnest hope of all patriotic compatriots of the country, a hope of achieving the peaceful reunification of the motherland while Mr Chiang is in power in Taiwan. I believe patriotic compatriots in Taiwan, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao and overseas Chinese abroad all feel the same. I hope Mr Chiang will not fail to live up to this earnest hope of all patriotic compatriots.

I myself was a member of the China Revolutionary League. Under the leadership of Dr Sun Yat-sen, I took part in the revolutionary work. Thus, I had a historical relationship with the Kuomintang. I also experienced the two cooperations between the CCP and the Kuomintang. I have, therefore, an intimate knowledge that cooperation between the two parties has always played a great role in crucial moments of history and brought great hopes to the country and nation. The first cooperation helped to defeat the northern warlords; the second was conducive to the all-people's war of resistance against Japan. Now, at the age of 95, I eagerly look forward to seeing the third cooperation between the two parties for the great cause of reunifying the motherland.

In recalling my past experience in the revolution of 1911, I still remember that when we were raising a fund for the revolution from oversease Chinese abroad, we were warmly supported by them. This enables me to better understand the patriotic aspiration of overseas Chinese compatriots for making China strong. My father once lived in Taiwan. I myself was once jailed by the Japanese imperialists in Taiwan for taking part in patriotic and revolutionary activities. Thus, I deeply realize that the compatriots in Taiwan have long yearned for the motherland and to return to the embrace of their homeland. I have been to Hong Kong and Macao several times, so I also know well the patriotic zeal of the compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao. I am convinced that if Mr Chiang Ching-Kuo resolutely agrees to the earnest admonitions made to him by Comrade Liao Chengzihi and makes his contributions toward reunification, he will undoubtedly be greatly admired for his immortal contributions to the country by the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao, oversease Chinese abroad and the people of the whole country. If he does not act on this immediately, but indulges in idle talk in an attempt to put up a desperate struggle to retain sovereignty over a part of the country, he will be unworthy of the hope that everyone pins on him and will greatly disappoint everyone. This is not a permanent solution to the problem.

Taiwan will return to the embrace of the motherland after all, and reunification of the motherland will certainly be achieved. This is the trend of the times and the desire of the people. This is also an irresistible historical law which no one can hinder at his subjective will. An early reunification is better than a late one and peaceful reunification is better than by other means. I hope Mr Chiang Ching-kuo will put the righteous cause of the nation first and value the interests of the country above everything else, and follow the time of historical development and resolutely hold peace talks so as to make immortal contributions to the peaceful reunification of the country.

Mr Chiang Ching-kuo used to spur himself on with the axiom: "The fame to be sought should be a fame that will last forever." I myself believe there are two completely different kinds of "fame that will last forever." One is a good name, which will be left to posterity. The other is its opposite, which is understood. In his poem, Wen Tianjiang said: "What man was ever immune from death? Let me but leave a loyal heart shining in the pages of history." This tells us that one's name in the annals of history should be shining forever and should not become an object of denunciation by future generations. If only in consideration of the eternalness of his own fame, Mr Chiang should seize this good opportunity and make a determined decision so that he will do a great deed for the country and nation and leave his good name in the annals of history.

Hong Kong Publisher's Remarks

281447 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 28 Jul 82 p 4

[Article by RENMIN RIBAO reporter Zhou Yizhi [0719 3015 0037]: "A Smile at Meeting and Enmity Is Banished — Fei Yimi Talks About Liao Chengzhi's Letter to Chiang Ching-kuo"]

[Text] "If the revered Mr Liao goes to Taiwan, I volunteer to accompany him and tell my bosom friends in Taiwan what is on my mind without reservation. Reunification of the motherland not only concerns the destiny of our country, but also is an important matter concerning world peace. I wish to devote the limited time during my remaining years to accomplishing this great task together with the Taiwan compatriots." Unable to restrain his excitment, Fei Yimin, publisher of Hong Kong's TA KUNG PAO, said this at the beginning of his interview with your reporter on Liao Chengzhi's letter to Chiang Ching-kuo.

Every word in the letter is touching and sensible and is straight from the heart, he said. "Vast is the expanse of sky and water. What are you waiting for, staying away from home?" These words reminded Mr. Fei of an unforgettable event. On 16 December 1963 Zhang Zhizhong wrote a letter to Chiang Kai-shek, Chen Cheng and Chiang Ching-kuo. Premier Zhou Enlai wrote a few lines at the end of the letter. "Later, when I had the opportunity to learn of this, I was deeply touched by the premier's warmhearted concern for the elders and brethren in Taiwan." The CCP's policy toward Taiwan has been consistent, has remained unchanged during the period from Zhou Enlai to Liao Chengzhi and has become ever more generous to Taiwan, he said. "I am a direct witness of the history of that period and I have experienced it most deeply. This is a project of vital importance for ensuring permanent peace. I hope that Mr Chiang Ching-kuo will not regard it as an expedient measure."

Fei Yimin mentioned what Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee, said recently: "Respect history, respect realities and look forward to the future." He hoped that the friends in Taiwan would think carefully about the world situation at present and in the future. The future situation will be a chaotic one characterized by wars everywhere, he said. This situation extends from the Middle East to Europe and Latin America. Only China will become the world's stabilizing force, provided we have achieved peaceful reunification and improved our relations with our neighbors in East Asia. The 1 billion Chinese people will become a force of peace and construction. Our words will carry more weight. For this reason, we strive for reunification, not only for our own good, but also for the happiness of the world, of mankind and of our future generations. When we look forward to the future from this angle, we can easily throw away our old scores. When he wrote this letter, the revered Mr Liao stood on a high plane and saw far ahead. I hope that Mr Chiang Ching-kuo will also have the same broadness of vision and mind.

Mr Fei said that he had many friends in Taiwan. He mentioned Sun Yueh-chi, Huang Chao-chin, Lin Hsien-tang, Hsiao Ting-Tsu, Hsieh Tung-Min.... "I miss these old friends very much. Some of them have passed away, but many of them are still alive." He wanted to go to see them so that he could talk with them about his belief. "For all the disasters, the brotherhood has remained; a smile at meeting and enmity is banished." Similar deeds of broadmindedness are plentiful in Chinese history. Some people were hostile to each other, like enemies, but for the interests of the state and the nation, they dispelled ill feelings and forgot their old scores. Lu Xun's words aptly portray this situation. There are things which can be settled by the Chinese by saying a few words. Why should we ask for assistance from foreigners?

"I am a newspaperman. I am neither a CCP member nor a Kuomintang member. I am a literary worker running a newspaper for the sole purpose of saving the country. Everyone knows what kind of a man I am. I feel that I can contribute my efforts." Mr Fei's words expressed his sincerity as a patriot.

LEGALIZING GUIDING PRINCIPLE ON TAIWAN DISCUSSED

[ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE correspondent's roundup: "The Legalizing of the Guiding Principle on Taiwan Shows the CCP's Sincerity"]

[Text] Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee, who is actually in charge of the work of the committee for the revision of the constitution, delivered a speech a few days ago, maintaining that Article 30 of the draft of the revised constitution has "legalized the basic contents of the nine guiding principles promulgated by Standing Committee Chairman Ye Jianying in September of last year and has provided a legal basis for the peaceful reunification of the motherland." This was a formal explanation of Article 30 made by an authoritative CCP figure after the promulgation of the draft of the revised constitution.

Legalizing in the constitution the basic contents of the nine guiding principles for the peaceful reunification has further shown the CCP's determination and sincerity. It is not difficult for those who have been paying attention to the Taiwan problem to draw the above-quoted conclusion as long as they review the development of events of the past 2 years.

Everyone knows that on New Year's Day of 1979, the NPC Standing Committee issued "a letter to Taiwan compatriots," announcing the great guiding principle on the peaceful reunification of the motherland. However, at that time some people spread the rumor that this was no more than the CCP's "united front offensive." On 30 September 1981 NPC Chairman Ye further expounded the guiding principle on peaceful reunification and suggested that the KMT and CCP hold talks on an equal basis. However, some other people said again that this was only Ye Jianying's personal views without any legal basis.

While expounding the nine guiding principles, Ye Jianying explicitly pointed out: "After the reunification of the country, Taiwan can be regarded as a special administrative region which enjoys a high level of autonomy and is allowed to retain its troops, and the central government will not interfere in Taiwan's local affairs." He added: "Taiwan's present socioeconomic system, way of life and its economic and cultural relations with foreign countries will remain unchanged. The ownership and legal right of inheritance of private property, houses, land and enterprises, as well as foreign investment, will not be encroached upon;" "people among the Taiwan authorities and representatives of various circles may hold leading posts in national political organizations and take part in the administration of the state." He put forth the proposal on establishing a special administrative region for the first time and correctly explained the nature of such a region. After that, Hu Yaobang, in the capacity of chairman of the CCP Central Committee, invited Mr Chiang Ching-Kuo to return to the mainland and have a look at his native place. He stressed that Ye Jianying's above-quoted talks and proposal reflected the common desires of the people of various nationalities throughout the country. He said: "We mean what we say." Vice Chairman of the CCP Central Committee Deng Xiaoping also said: "The nine principles recently expounded by NPC Chairman Ye Jianying are reasonable guiding principles and policies formulated in light of our practical conditions so that Taiwan will return to the motherland and peaceful reunification will be realized."

State Council Premier Zhao Ziyang pointed out in his government work report: In accordance with the policies and guiding principles promulgated by NPC Chairman Ye Jianying, we are making efforts to perform our various tasks well so that our desire for the reunification of the motherland will be realized soon. The speeches made by the above-mentioned will be realized soon. The speeches made by the above-mentioned authoritative CCP figures show that the nine guiding principles on Taiwan expounded by Ye Jianying are not merely his personal views. In addition, Article 30 of the recently promulgated draft of the revised constitution explicitly stipulates: "The state may, where necessary, establish special administrative regions. The rules and regulations in force in special administrative regions shall be stipulated by law according to special conditions." This has provided a legal basis for the realization of the nine guiding principles. Now, if anyone still casts doubt on the determination and sincerity of the CCP for peaceful reunification, this can only show that they do not respect facts and that they are still using assumptions and lies to deceive themselves.

The method of establishing special administrative regions can solve the problem of the existence of two different social, political and economic systems within one country after the return of Taiwan and the reunification of the motherland. This is indeed a feasible method. Peng Zhen pointed out in his speech: "While formulating the draft of the revised constitution, we respect history and reality and look forward to the future." Actually, while formulating a series of internal and external guiding principles and policies, the CCP always adheres to the spirit of "respecting history and reality and looking forward to the future." In other words, it always adheres to the principle of "proceeding from reality." The fact that Taiwan and the mainland of the motherland are separated is caused by history. Taiwan and the interior of the motherland have different social, political and economic systems, ways of life, and so forth. Chinese on both sides of the Taiwan Strait and Chinese living abroad long for the reunification of the motherland and reunification is an irresistable trend. KMT-CCP cooperation and solution of the Taiwan problem through peaceful reunification conform with the interests of all Chinese on both sides of the Taiwan Strait and all Chinese living abroad. All this is the present reality. To look forward to the future, we should take into account the long-term and fundamental interests of the Chinese people. The CCP has promulgated the guiding principles and policies for the peaceful reunification of the motherland so that people in Taiwan can avert the disasters of war and the Chinese nation can avert the unnecessary waste of manpower, material and financial resources. It also takes into consideration the act of making China rich and powerful, the changes of the international situation and the magnificent goal of realizing China's four modernizations. The CCP is taking a down-to-earth manner to implement these guiding principles and policies in various tasks. This is what we call "respecting history and reality and looking forward to the future."

The people's interests are above everything else. People, including Taiwan compatriots, Hong Kong and Macao compatriots and overseas Chinese, are the masters of their country. They have their own right to discuss national affairs. Through our concerted efforts, we will certainly be able to more reasonably and perfectly revise the draft of the revised constitution, particularly those clauses and articles concerning the return of Taiwan to the motherland, the reunification of the motherland and vital interests of Taiwan compatriots, overseas Chinese, and Hong Kong and Macao compatriots.

MATERIALS ON NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT SEMINAR

Premier Sun's Opening Speech

OW190735 Taipei CHUNG YANG JIH PAO in Chinese 13 Jul 82 p 3

["Text" of Premier Sun Yun-Hsuan's 12 July address to the opening of the 1982 national development seminar: "To Create a Better Tomorrow" -- published in English]

[Text] Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen:

As the 1982 national development seminar opens today, I speak for the government in extending my warmest welcome to the participation scholars and experts from at home and abroad.

This is the 12th national development seminar. Scholars and experts from at home and abroad participating in the previous 11 seminars have offered many constructive views, and these have been very helpful in contributing to the solidarity and development of our nation. This is precisely why the government has continued the series. We hope each seminar will be more successful than its predecessors: We also hope that the nation will make greater progress year after year.

In the seemingly brief year since the last national development seminar, there have been many changes at home and abroad. We have encountered a number of difficulties and challenges in the course of national development. The solution of these problems and the assurance of continued progress call for the application of collective wisdom and concerted effort. Only then can we overcome dangers and remove obstacles, transform difficulties into motive forces and create a promising future for the nation.

Our national development is entering a transitional stage. Changes and adjustments are taking place in the industrial upgrading of the economy, the value system of society, and the function and operation of political system. On the surface, there is an array of problems. But looking deeper, we find that these problems are unavoidable in the transitional period. The phenomena of difficulties arising in many aspects of adjustment is actually a driving force moving us forward into the next phase of development. Only by exerting ourselves with courage and confidence can we surely create a better tomorrow.

The various groups of this seminar are organized in accordance with the emphasis of current national development. The aim is to solicit the useful views of your scholars and experts for the reference of the government in approaching the major problems of today. I should like to offer my views for your reference during the discussions.

1. Economy. To overcome some of the current economic difficulties, the government has taken measures to assist industry and trade. Thus far, however, we have seen no signs of economic recovery because of the domestic economic transition and worldwide economic stagnation. In discussing the approaches and tasks of current economic development, I hope you will consider both theory and practice and give equal attention to stopgap measures and long-range solutions. This will enable us to solve economic and transitional problems at one and the same time and help move our country into the ranks of the advanced nations during the 1980's.

2. Science and technology. Our success in national development, the augmentation of our national strength and the elevation of our national status in the 1980's depend on our ability to assure growth of science and technology that will enable us to catch up with developed nations. At the beginning of this year, we convened the second national science and technology conference. We have revised our scientific and technological development plan on a basis of the conference's conclusions and proposals. The revision will be announced soon and the new plan implemented.

Our major tasks will be the development of sophisticated industry and strategic industry to serve the needs of national defense industry and at the same time upgrade industry in general, the expansion of farm mechanization and modernization of enterprises, the further regulation of water and land use, and the control of pollution and protection of the ecology. We must put our heads together and find solutions for these important problems.

3. Culture and education. The government established a council for cultural planning and development at the end of last year. The question from now on is how to carry out its tasks through feasible programs. Talented people are essential to national development. At the same time, the cultivation of the talented is decided by the educational system and educational content. The emphasis on education in the 1980's is geared to the needs of total national development. We shall cultivate talented people in all categories: scientists and technicians as well as those to serve the requirements of cultural, social and political development. How can we improve our educational system and content? How can we provide teachers with more opportunities for advanced study to serve the needs of progress? How can we further our great cultural tradition and create a streamlined value system suited to the needs of modern society? How can we ensure spiritual and cultural life without being overwhelmed in the pursuit of material comforts? These questions call for the exercise of our collective wisdom and our comprehensive and penetrating study.

4. Politics and diplomacy. We have always adhered to the overall pursuit of democracy and the rule of law. Regardless of our difficulties, the government has never failed to enlarge the area and functions of political participation. The national compensation law was implemented July 1 of last year. Since November of 1981, we have carried out a series of elections for provincial assembly and municipal council members, mayors, magistrates, county councilors and township chiefs. The government recently drafted an amendment to the law of criminal procedure to permit those charged with crimes to retain a defense attorney during the period of investigation. The amended law has been sent to the Legislative Yuan for its perusal. The government has worked hard to rectify political morality and raise the level of administrative efficiency. These are evidences of the government's determination to carry out democratic and constitutional rules. Undeniably, we still have some domestic problems requiring further review and improvements. But facing the grave threat and challenges posed by the Chinese Communists, we should give first consideration to the overall interests of the people and the nation.

In developing external relations, the government has consistently adhered to its fundamental policy of quietly seeking to create realistic opportunities to maintain and further vital national interests. The Government of the Republic of China has established on Taiwan, Penghu, Kinmen, and Matsu a model Chinese society of prosperity and affluence based on a constitutional framework. This society has achieved an outstanding record of economic development while maintaining and expanding Chinese culture. In order to frustrate the Chinese Communist conspiracy to isolate us, and to further the ultimate goal of national recovery, we must develop relationships with friendly nations of the world on the basis of our existing achievements. Solutions to the complex problems of international law and politics require creative and prudent thinking by all of us. We must make a breakthrough to further promote our external relationships.

In solving our problems and assuring continuing progress, I think we should give attention to the following three points:

First, we must seek consensus. The dislocations of a nation or a society are frequently the result of the absence of consensus. In our circumstances, we have special need for solidarity and harmony. We must also win the hearts of overseas Chinese and mainland compatriots. To reach the consensus that only unity and hard work can ensure our national survival and development, we must strengthen the dialogue between those of different opinions.

Second, we must strengthen institutionalization. Many current problems stem from rapid changes in the environment, the high expectations of the people and outdated laws and regulations. National development requires innovation and change to match the needs of the times.

Third, we must augment the decision-making functions. This is the era of the people. The success of government administration is determined, on the one hand, but the availability of talented people and the soundness of decision-making function, and on the other hand, by the support of the people in the decision-making process. To further promote modernization, we have to cultivate talented people in every category, strengthen the functions of decision-making and management and ensure two-way communication, division of labor and cooperation between government and people.

Ladies and gentlemen, although we are faced with many problems, I believe that as long as we stick to the concept of progress and act with courage, we can overcome all difficulties in due course. President Chiang Ching-kuo has told us time and again that we can express our life values by solving problems. In tackling problems as they arise, we shall find that the process of solving them will lead to progress.

This seminar is held at a time when we should be breaking through the remaining bottlenecks of national development. I therefore call on you to apply your collective wisdom, offer new ideas and make concrete fresh proposals to promote government innovation and provide the momentum for national development.

Ladies and gentlement, the progress and prosperity of free China today results from our hard world. Nevertheless, we must not forget that the Chinese Communist regime on the other side of the Taiwan Straits is intent upon sabotaging and communizing us. The provision of national security and the inescapable duty of the Government. The Chinese Communists are once and again trying to compel the United States to recognize their claims of sovereignty over free China in an attempt to undermine our relations with the United States. I must solemnly point out once again that the sovereignty of China belongs to the whole Chinese people, that the Chinese Communist regime can never represent them, and that there is only one China, the Republic of China, which meets the aspirations of the Chinese people and is suited to the interests of the Free World.

Finally, I call on our compatriots at home and abroad to give attention to the expectations of our mainland compatriots as expressed in a question raised by a young man named Wei to Fox Butterfield, the former bureau chief of the New York TIMES in Peking, as recorded in his new book "China: Alive in the Bitter Sea." Wei asked: "What young people like we want to know is why (mainland) China can't do as well as Taiwan?" This question shows that people on the mainland have placed their expectations on the shoulders of their fellow countrymen in free China. In national development, therefore, we must set our sights not only on the present but also on the future. Let us unite as one and exert ourselves with confidence to convey the constitution of the Republic of China to the mainland as soon as possible so that our compatriots there can live under a democratic and constitutional system and enjoy the standard of living and the fruits of development achieved in Taiwan, Penghu, Kinmen and Matsu, the bastion of national recovery.

Let us join hands and work harder to create a better tomorrow.

I wish great success to the seminar and good health for each of you. Thank you.

Other Speeches

[Text] Taipei, July 21 (CNA) -- Foreign Affairs Minister Chu Fu-sung said Tuesday the government will continue to study new measures in countering against the Peiping regime's united front tricks and in strengthening the nation's international position. Speaking at the political and foreign affairs panel of the national development seminar, he stressed the importance of sticking to the basic national policies and creating a new image in the international community. As long as the basic policies are being maintained, other matters can be flexible so as to effectively promote the nation's substantive ties with other nations, he said.

Chu also pointed out that private organizations and individuals are allowed to attend international meetings or organizations in which the Peiping regime's personnel are also taking part.

Vice Foreign Minister Fredrick F. Chien said at the meeting the government will never play the so-called "Soviet card" because the Republic of China has had bitter experiences in allying itself with the Soviet Union in the past. He said the urgent task of the government is to point out the fallacy of trying to use Red China to counterbalance the Soviet expansionism. Militarily, Red China is no match to the Soviet Union, and the so-called "parallel strategic interests" between the United States and Red China is also erroneous, Chien said.

He said both the government and the mass media must make efforts to publicize the nation's policies in order to let other countries know more about the Republic of China.

Also speaking at the meeting, Shen Chang-huan, secretary-general of the National Security Council, called on the scholars to study various strategies as well as tactics with a view to knowing more about the policy options and about the real nature of the Peiping regime.

President's Interest Noted

[Text] Taipei, July 20 (CNA) -- President Chiang Ching-kuo has been giving much importance to the national development seminar since its opening July 12, Ma Chi-chuang, secretary-general to the president, said Monday. President Chiang has paid attention to news reports on the seminar and the participants' opinions every day, Ma told reporters as he was attending the political and foreign affairs panel discussion at the Executive Yuan auditorium. Speaking to the scholars and experts, Ma called on them to submit more constructive views and proposals so as to help the nation make greater progress in construction programs.

He read parts of President Chiang's speech on "Actively Struggling To Create a Bright Future" to the Kuomintang Central Standing Committee on June 2. In his speech, President Chiang gave directives for the main task and direction in the economic, military, diplomatic, political and social development of the nation.

He said he hopes the attendees from abroad will tell their foreign friends and overseas Chinese in their residence countries what they have seen of progress in various fields in this country during their stay.

Premier's Closing Speech

[Text] Taipei, July 24 (CNA) — Premier Sun Yun-hsuan said Saturday the Republic of China "should adopt a global strategic perspective" in its foreign relations conduct even through relations with the United States will continue receiving top attention in the nation's external activities.

Addressing the closing session of the 12th national development seminar this morning, the premier said free China should not focus its attention only on its U.S. ties or on U.S. policy toward China. By adopting a global strategic perspective and developing an overall policy, free China will be able to play "an active and constructive role" in the complex and ever-changing world community, said Premier Sun.

Continuing, he said: "By developing and making better use of our relations with Latin American, Asian and Pacific, Middle Eastern and African countries, we can increase our contribution to the prevention of communist expansion and assist in the economic growth of developing nations. This will also strengthen our role and status in the international community."

The premier told the participating scholars that the Republic of China will take advantage of its geographical position to become "a major center of the Far East's economy, trade, finances, tourism, and air and sea transport." He was referring to a future economic package recently approved by the cabinet. Lauding Confucianism for its role in the fast economic growth of Japan, Korea, Hong Kong, Singapore and the Republic of China, Sun said the nation should also make use of it as a weapon to wipe out communism.

Premier Sun pledged that the government will seek every feasible means to increase communications between those at home and abroad, "so that views and materials may be exchanged without difficulty and the wisdom and experience of scholars and experts can be applied for the nation's development."

ZHU MUZHI ADDRESSES WORLD CULTURE MEETING

[Text] Mexico City, July 28 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese Minister of Culture Zhu Muzhi stressed here today the necessity for a country to protect and develop its national culture and the significance of international cooperation in the cultural field.

Addressing the second world conference on cultural policies, Zhu Muzhi, head of the Chinese delegation, said that the Third World countries should not only protect and develop their national culture, but also unfold their struggle against the control and erosion in the field of culture and even the devastation and aggression on the part of imperialism, hegemonism and colonialism.

"The basic aim of cultural development", he said, "is to satisfy the needs of the people in cultural life." "The work and activities we undertake must serve the interests of the people who must be provided with true, good and beautiful mental nourishment conducive to the maintenance of their independence and freedom and their wholesome life. Not all cultures are needed by the people. The reactionary decadent culture that infringes upon state sovereignty, injures national dignity and corrupts peoples minds is not wanted by the people, and should be resisted and opposed," he stressed.

Talking about the cultural development in China, he said: "China is now engaged in an extensive and persistant campaign of setting up socialist ethics." "The building up of moral virtues requires the continuous development of education, science, culture, arts, health and sports on the one hand, and the constant boost of people's social and moral values on the other hand."

"The culturalundertakings we are engaging in should reflect the wishes of the majority of the people, represent their will, and conform to their interests and be enjoyed by them. This is genuine democracy."

"In formulating and effectuating cultural policies," he said, "one should take into account of the fact that all members of the society, irrespective of their race, sex, language, religion, and financial situation, should be able to participate in cultural activities, to receive cultural education and to share the achievements obtained in scientific and technological progress and cultural development on an equal footing and in a free way."

He said: "We encourage the diversification in forms and styles in artistic creation, and on academic and theoretical subjects, we encourage the free discussion of different viewpoints and schools." "This is a democratic policy, a policy which protects the right of all cultural workers to freely undertake research and creative activities. This is the policy of letting a hundred flowers blossom, a hundered schools of thought contend that we carry out in China according to our specific conditions."

"Cultural democracy and free development in culture should not be interpreted as making no distinction between good and bad, between right and wrong. That is to say, taking a laissez-faire attitude to anything be it beneficial or harmful to the people who will not allow any corrupt things of imperialism, colonialism and racism or from other quarters to spread unchecked under the pretext of democracy and freedom," he stressed.

"It has become a matter of urgency in the world, particularly for developing countries, to protect and develop their national culture. This not only concerns the future of different national cultures, but also the future of world culture. We hold that all acts aiming to control, erode and sabotage the culture of another country should be severely condemned and that the adoption of necessary policies and measures to protect and develop national culture is the sovereign right and sacred duty of the different governments and their peoples. At the same time, the international community has the unshirkable responsibility to make concerted efforts to oppose any acts of cultural aggression and sabotage, to remedy the inequitable and irrational situation and to protect and support the development of different national cultures." "When protection and development of national culture is being stressed, we are by no means setting it against the development of international cultural cooperation," he noted.

He said: "After the founding of the People's Republic, in developing her national culture, in critically inheriting her own cultural legacy and in learning from what is excellent in foreign cultures, China has carried out the policy of making the past serve the present and foreign things serve China and weeding through the old to bring forth the new. We have attached great importance to the preservation and development of our national culture. At the same time, we highly respect the culture of other nations and set great store by learning what is best from others. We will continue to carry out an open policy to promote our cooperation with various countries both in economy and culture."

REAGAN: U.S. WILL NOT ABANDON TAIWAN 'ALLIES'

[Text] Washington, July 28 (XINHUA) -- Answering a question on U.S.-China relations at a press conference today President Ronald Reagan said "we want to continue developing the relationship that was started some years ago by President Nixon with the People's Republic of China." "But at the same time," he said, "we are not going to abandon our long time friends and allies on Taiwan." "It is a moral obligation that we'll keep," he added.

Reagan described his "allies" on Taiwan as a "government" when he said "we have no secret agreements of any other kind or anything that should cause the government or the people of Taiwan to have any concern about that." But it is widely known that in the China-U.S. joint communique on establishment of diplomatic relations, the U.S. Government declares it "recognized the government of the People's Republic of China as the sole legal government of China." Nowhere in the joint communique is there a "government of Taiwan."

China has repeatedly declared the U.S. "Taiwan Relations Act" violates China's sovereignty as well as the joint communique on establishment of diplomatic relations between the Chinese and U.S. Governments. But Reagan reiterated at the press conference that "I'm going to carry out the terms of the Taiwan Relations Act."

State: 'No Change' in Policy

[Text] Washington, July 29 (XINHUA) -- U.S. State Department deputy spokesman Alan Romberg said here today President Reagan's statement on U.S. relations with Taiwan last night "signified no change in U.S. policy of continuing relations with the people of Taiwan on an unofficial basis."

Romberg was responding to a question raised by a UPI correspondent at a press briefing who asked: "President Reagan uttered another pregnant phrase last night. He talked of the government on Taiwan. Which government is that?"

The spokesman said: "The President was responding to a question about U.S. policy toward China and Taiwan. The President clearly expressed the strong desire to continue developing the relationship between the United States and China that was started some years ago by President Nixon, while maintaining traditional friendship with the people of Taiwan. His comments signified no change in U.S. policy of continuing relations with the people of Taiwan on an unofficial basis."

While talking about U.S. policy towards China yesterday, Reagan caused confusion when he described his "allies" on Taiwan as a "government".

He said: "We have no secret agreements of any other kind or anything that should cause the government or the people of Taiwan to have any concern about that." But the final White House version of the sentence which was carried in the New York TIMES today was changed to: "We have no secret agreements of any other kind or anything that should cause the government of the people of Taiwan to have any concern about that."

REAGAN COMMENTS ON PLO, SIBERIAN PIPELINE

[Text] Washington, July 28 (XINHUA) -- President Reagan said today that the U.S. "could enter into discussions" with the Palestine Liberation Organization if the PLO agrees to "abide by the U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338" and recognises Israel's right to exist.

Speaking at a press conference here this evening, Reagan said: "It would be a step forward in progress if the PLO would change the position it has had and that is that Israel must be destroyed or that it has no right to exist as a nation."

Asked if the U.S. supports an independent Palestinian state should the PLO change its position, the President replied that that is up to the negotiators, Egypt and Israel, "as to how that (Palestinian) autonomy develops."

On U.S. relations with its allies and the U.S. ban on equipment for the Siberian pipeline, Reagan said he has "no second thoughts" on this issue. "The pipeline, when finished, will result in the Soviet Union getting hard cash, which it does not now have and which it can then use to further build up its military might," he noted.

Defending the United States grain deal with the Soviet Union, Reagan argued that a grain embargo did not hurt the Soviet Union but could be a "terrible economic blow" to U.S. farmers.

Reagan said the U.S. has been communicating with the Soviet Union with regard to a possible summit with Soviet leader Brezhnev. He said a summit "isn't the answer or the cure for everything that's wrong in the world" and it has to be "carefully planned". "I don't know whether it's going to be this year or next or at all," he added.

The President acknowledged the U.S. is now facing "economic troubles", and many of the American people are suffering from this.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON JAPANESE TEXTBOOK CHANGES

Envoy With Japanese Official

OW291859 Beijing XINHUA in English 1845 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 29 (XINHUA) -- Isao Suzuki, director of the elementary education bureau of the Japanese Ministry of Education, this evening received by appointment Wang Xiaoyun, minister of the Chinese Embassy here, and made an explanation of the vetting of school textbooks by the Education Ministry.

During the meeting, which took place at the Education Ministry, Suzuki pledged that Japan would "humbly listen" to China's view of the vetting of textbooks but shifted the responsibility for revising textbooks onto non-governmental circles. He alleged that his bureau's consistent policy in censoring textbooks is to "correctly reflect the spirit of the Japan-China joint statement and the Japan-China peace and friendship treaty."

Refuting Suzuki's allegations, Wang Xiaoyun emphatically pointed out that the bureau's practice in censoring the textbooks runs counter to the basic spirit of the joint statement and the peace and friendship treaty between China and Japan. He rejected Suzuki's practice and shifting the responsibility for vetting textbooks onto non-governmental circles.

XINHUA Commentary

["'Sincerity Should Be Verified by Actions' -- Commentary by XINHUA correspondent"-- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Beijing, July 29 (XINHUA) -- The Japanese Government has reportedly responded through diplomatic channels to the representations made by the Chinese Foreign Ministry in relation to the Japanese Education Ministry's distortion of the history of Japanese militarist aggression against China in screening school textbooks.

A three-point response includes: not to change Japan's position stated in the Sino-Japanese joint statement -- being keenly aware of its responsibility for causing enormous damage in the past to the Chinese people through war and deeply reproaching itself; to "humbly" listen to the Chinese Government's views on the screening of school textbooks; and to have the Education Ministry explain the regulations in censoring textbooks.

China has been watching what attitude the Japanese Ministry of Education would take in its explanations towards rectification of its errors in screening school textbooks and its subsequent measures.

The Japanese side sincerely stated in the 1972 Sino-Japanese joint statement: "The Japanese side is keenly aware of Japan's responsiblity for causing enormous damage in the past to the Chinese people through war and deeply reproaches itself." It is stated in the 1978 Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty that the Sino-Japanese joint statement "constitutes the basis of the relations of peace and friendship between the two countries and that the principles enunciated in the joint statement should be strictly observed."

It is a matter of course that the Japanese Government should have reaffirmed the above-mentioned attitude in light of the spirit of the joint statement and the peace and friendship treaty. We are willing to believe in its sincerity. However, we can not but feel uneasy about the attitude demonstrated by the Japanese official circles towards the textbook issue in the past few days.

Look at the following facts:

-- At a Cabinet meeting on July 27, three ministers still held the view that the criticism of the acts prettifying militarism would be "interference" in Japan's "internal affairs", and that the textbooks censored by the Education Ministry have not distorted the historical facts.

-- The Japanese press disclosed that the essence of the third point in the Japanese Government's "reply" is "to make explanation only", but "not to revise the result of the screening of textbooks".

Some press reports even claimed that the Japanese Education Ministry needs to explain to China that "our country's textbooks are not compiled by the state and have always been issued on a non-governmental basis." Apparently, this is a way of shirking responsibility. It is widely known that all the school textbooks have been censored by the Japanese Government departments in charge of educational work. It is of no avail for the Japanese side now to try to explain away its distortion of historical accounts by utilizing its textbook censoring system.

If the remarks by some Japanese ministers reflect the intentions of the Japanese Government, and the "explanation" by the Japanese authorities is such as mentioned above, where on earth are the manifestations of the stand, as expressed by the Japanese Government, of "keenly aware of Japan's responsibility for causing enormous damage in the past to the Chinese people through war and deeply reproaches itself", and "humbly listening" to others' views?

It is our hope that the Japanese Government would show its sincerity by correcting the places in the newly screened textbooks that hurt the feelings of the Chinese people. Otherwise, if those statements hurting the Chinese people's feelings and beautifying the history of aggression are still retained in the Japanese textbooks, it is hard for the Chinese people and the public opinion in China to remain silent.

RENMIN RIBAO Commentary

[Short commentary: "Honest Advice, Though Unpleasant to the Ear, Induces Good Conduct"]

[Text] The fact that the Japanese Ministry of Education prettified the history of Japanese aggression against China in the examination of textbooks has roused the Chinese people to great indignation and has been opposed and condemned by the Japanese people. People of insight in Japan believe that with the Sino-Japanese joint statement issued in 1972, the Japanese Government already expressed its desire of making profound self-criticism of its errors and expressed its responsibility for inflicting tremendous losses on the Chinese people during the previous wars, and such an understanding should not be changed and should be reflected in Japan's educational system. Such a sincere attitude is beneficial to consolidating and developing Sino-Japanese friendly relations and safeguarding peace in Asia. The Chinese people welcome such an attitude.

However, one thing that merits our attention is that some high officials of the Japanese Government have tried to justify the embellishment of militarism by the Japanese Ministry of Education. This is really intolerable.

Yukiyasu Matsuno, director general of the Japanese National Land Development Agency, said in a press statement that when Japan "advanced" into another country, the word "aggression" was never used. He added: "If someone asks us to change 'advance' into 'aggression', that means 'interfering in internal affairs' and 'distorting facts.'. This will lead Japanese children to say that "our forefathers had done something evil." Similar statements were made by several Japanese Cabinet ministers. It is really a disgrace for Japanese Cabinet ministers to utter the above-quoted remarks.

There have been a number of aggressors in world history. Those who have studied history know that no aggressor has ever openly flaunted the banner of aggression. However, aggression can never be camouflaged by high-sounding declarations, and all aggressors are mercilessly exposed and eventually swept onto the rubbish heap of history. This was the disgraceful end of Japanese militarists who claimed to establish a "kingly land of happiness" and a "Greater East Asia Coprosperity Sphere." Now some people in Japan have tried to write off at one stroke Japan's crime of aggression or have even used the shield of "interfering in internal affairs" to prohibit people who were invaded to make their criticism. These people have the right to shout a question to them: What are you going to do?

A handful of Japanese militarists who invaded China did not represent the Japanese people or their forefathers. There is nothing wrong in telling Japanese children that there was a handful of national scum among their forefathers who had once plunged both the Japanese people and the people of neighboring countries into a catastrophe, thus enabling them to learn from this action and be alert against it. How could this cause disrespect for their forefathers? Are those who issued orders for the massacre and humiliation of the Chinese people and who also brought sufferings to the Japanese masses the glory of Japan? Should they be taken as models and respected by Japanese children? What sort of country would those who made the above-mentioned statements want to turn Japan into? Is that not a matter that merits profound thinking by the Japanese and Chinese people?

One thing that should be pointed out is that we did not criticize the Japanese Ministry of Education, which tampered with the history of aggression against China, because we fear the Japanese militarists. To tell the truth, they are no match for the Chinese people. Under the historical conditions of the 1930's and 1940's, the Japanese militarists survived for only 8 years from the beginning of their aggression to their defeat. If they step into their old shoes today, they would inevitably come to a more disgraceful end. We do not like to raise past events which will grieve the Chinese and Japanese people. We raised our criticism for the purpose of bringing about a rectification of this mistake, of preventing its harmful effect on and sabotage of the friendship between the two countries and the two peoples, and of frustrating the scheme of those who are against Sino-Japanese friendship. As the old Chinese saying goes: "Honest advice, though unpleasant to ear, induces good conduct." Our criticism might be unpleasant to the ears of some people, but it is good medicine which is beneficial to Sino-Japanese friendship and world peace. The fact that the Chinese and Japanese people will be friendly from generation to generation is not empty talk. However, tremendous efforts are needed to realize such an ideal.

KOREA UNIFICATION SEMINAR OPENS IN MEXICO CITY

[Text] Mexico City, July 28 (XINHUA) -- A "Seminar on Unification of Korea" attended by tens of well-known Mexican personages opened at the Third World Economic and Social Research Center here today.

The two-day seminar is sponsored by former Mexican President Luis Echeverria who is director general of the center. A delegation of the Workers Party of Korea led by Han Ik-su, vice chairman of the committee for foreign cultural relations, attends the seminar.

Speakers at today's meeting stressed that reunification of Korea is not only the greatest aspiration of the Korean people but also that of the peoples of the world.

In his address, Han Ik-su said that the problem of reunification is an internal affair of Korea. The United States must stop its intervention in this issue and withdraw its troops from Korea, he stressed.

BRIEFS

CHINA-JAPAN TV PLANT -- The China National Electrical Devices Corporation and Japan's Hitachi have formally opened a plant in Xianyang, Shaanxi Province, which is designed to produce 960,000 colour picture tubes a year. The plant has already turned out more than 60,000 tubes, which have been inspected and approved by Chinese and Japanese engineers. The Chinese corporation now has four plants producing colour picture tubes, integrated circuits, chromium plates, and getters, a substance used to remove traces of gas from vacuum tubes. All have met world standards after only three years of trial production. As recently as 1980, China was unable to manufacture any of these products. [Beijing CHINA DAILY in English 23 Jul 82 p 2 HK]

SRV ATTEMPTS AT 'REGIONAL HEGEMONISM' DESCRIBED

[Station international commentary: "Another Big Exposure of the Features of Vietnam's Regional Hegemonism"]

[Text] The Vietnamese authorities recently dispatched their foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, to engage in activities in some countries in Southeast Asia. Wherever he went, he spouted a stream of empty rhetoric denouncing the ASEAN countries for supporting the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea and charging themwith interfering in the Indochinese countries' internal affairs. He threatened that if the ASEAN countries continued to oppose Vietnam's invasion of Kampuchea, Vietnam would confront them for 5 or 20 years and even organize guerrillas in Thailand. Such out-and-out hegemonistic views were immediately scathingly denounced by the ASEAN countries. Public opinions pointed out ASEAN will never yield to Vietnam's threats.

Wherever he went, Nguyen Co Thach babbled: If Vietnam's security is threatened, Vietnam has the right to retaliate in self-defense. People want to ask: What is Vietnam's so-called self-defense? Nguyen Co Thach answered this question most clearly in his interview with a reporter of the Vietnamese News Agency: The Vietnamese Army's occupation of Kampuchea by force is Vietnam's exercise of its right to defend itself. Obviously, in his dictionary self-defense has become a synonym for aggression.

Nguyen Co Thach also openly clamored about Vietnam's having the self-defensive right to oppose all actions of ASEAN. According to this rhetoric, Vietnam may use any pretext to impinge upon the sovereignty of the ASEAN countries, interfere in their internal affairs and even overthrow their legitimate governments. This is the end of the norms for international relations!

In addition to their wanton tone, Nguyen Co Thach's remarks, which have a strong smell of gunpowder, mainly attempt to force the ASEAN countries to give up their support for Democratic Kampuchea so that Vietnam can forcefully occupy Kampuchea on a long-term basis and dominate Southeast Asia. If Vietnam's propaganda about the partial withdrawal of the army from Kampuchea is mainly an attempt to rope some countries in and deceive them, then Nguyen Co Thach's rabid remarks are nothing more than but threats and blackmail. Now that people see through the hoax of a partial withdrawal of the army, what results can Nguyen Co Thach's blackmail tactics achieve? They only enable people to further see through the atrocious features of the Vietnamese regional hegemonists and become united to safeguard their countries' independence and security, and Southeast Asia's peace.

RENMIN RIBAO LABELS THACH REMARKS 'BRAZEN'

["International Jottings" by Feng Xiong [1409 7160]" "Being Brazen"]

[Text] When Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach was visiting Singapore and Malaysia, he threatened these countries by saying: If the ASEAN countries support the newly established Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government, that means they will "interfere in the internal affairs of Kampuchea." Therefore, Vietnam should "reserve its right for self-defense."

When talking about the internal affairs of Kampuchea, Vietnam clamored about its "right" for "self-defense." It has considered itself as the master of Kampuchea. This small hegemonist is tryly rude and unreasonable. Since his threatening remarks have been refuted, let this matter rest for the time being.

What was more ridiculous was that Nguyen Co Thach explained his "theory of self-defense" through the "voice of Vietnam." He said: "Vietnam exercised its self-defense right" to occupy Democratic Kampuchea. "Just as the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France, who exercised similar rights to defeat German fascists and sent their troops to west Berlin."

As a country's foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach has the audacity to distort history. People of the whole world now regard him as a 3-year-old kid. In 1939 Hitler's Germany launched a war of aggression to occupy the territory of a number of countries. The Soviet Union, the United States, Britain, France and other countries exerted concerted efforts to defeat the aggressors and liberate the occupied territory. This was a self-defensive war by an army dedicated to a just war. The Vietnam of today is like Hitler's Germany, because they are both aggressors. The ASEAN countries' efforts to oppose Vietnamese aggression is a just cause. Nguyen Co Thach has dressed the Vietnamese aggressor troops up as an army dedicated to a just war and has regarded people who oppose aggression as Hitler. He has confounded black and white and altered history to such an extent that Hitler was perhaps not so brazen as he.

THAI FOREIGN MINISTER HOLDS TALKS WITH THACH

[Text] Bangkok, July 29 (XINHUA) -- Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila told reporters today that he and visiting Vietnamese Foreign Miniser Nguyen Co Thach exchanged views on Kampuchea in their talks this morning.

Speaking at a press conference this afternoon, Sitthi said Thailand reiterated its stand that the Kampuchean problem should be solved in accordance with the successive U.N. resolutions on Kampuchea, which call for total Vietnamese troop withdrawal from that country.

It is reported that Nguyen Co Thach changed his tone in the talks this morning by making high sounding promises. He said that Vietnam "does not need continued confrontation with Thailand or ASEAN," but "is willing to improve relations with Thailand" and that Vietnam would "in the end withdraw all its troops". However, Thach did not elaborate on how to translate these fine-sounding phrases into action. Once the talks touched on the key problem -- Vietnam's total troop withdrawal from Kampuchea, Nguyen Co Thach made the excuses that "Vietnam is now under threat from China, but it is willing to hold talks with China" and that "the just rights of the various countries concerned must be put into consideration".

Commenting on Thach's remarks at the press conference, Sitthi said: "It would be helpful if the Vietnamese side would act in line with what they had said in today's talks. But we will continue to watch. We have our own position, and they have theirs. It will not do to expect a solution to the problem through one day's talks."

Asked about Thailand's attitude toward Vietnam's "partial troop withdrawal" proposal, Sitthi said Thach had expressed the willingness to partially withdraw Vietnamese troops from the Thai-Kampuchean border, but the Thai side believed that it is not enough "because Thailand cannot privately alter the U.N. resolutions which call for a total troop withdrawal."

At the request of Nguyen Co Thach, secretary general of the National Security Council of Thailand Prasong Sunsiri held talks with Thach this afternoon. At a press conference this evening, Prasong told reporters that "I explained to Nguyen Co Thach the unalterable principle of solving the Kampuchean problem in accordance with the U.N. resolutions. I believe that a solution to only a certain aspect of the Kampuchean problem will not do. An overall solution must be sought," he stressed.

THAIS PROTEST THACH'S 'THREATENING REMARKS'

[Text] Bangkok, July 29 (XINHUA) -- Over 600 representatives of the Thai National Defense Volunteers demonstrated before the Vietnamese Embassy here this morning, protesting against the Vietnamese aggression of Kampuchea and the recent threatening remarks of Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

Nguyen Co Thach arrived here yesterday for a visit to Thailand on the fourth leg of his Southeast Asian tour. His statement in Singapore threatening to invade Thailand aroused indignation among the over 70,000 national defense volunteers throughout the country.

At 0900 this morning, the representatives of the volunteers, in uniform and holding the national flag of Thailand, marched to the Vietnamese Embassy where Nguyen Co Thach is staying. Placards they carried out were inscribed with the words: "No association with Vietnam who launched aggression against neighbors" and "The Thais do not welcome Nguyen Co Thatch." A statement of the volunteers addressed to Nguyen Co Thach and the Vietnamese ambassador in Bangkok said: "The Thai people now have seen clearly that Vietnam, the Soviet lackey, is the aggressor who is intervening in its neighbors and Thailand. It victimizes its neighbors and makes the people suffer. The Vietnamese aggression and intervention in neighboring countries has caused the influx of tens of thousands of refugees into Thailand and other ASEAN countries and imposed a heavy burden on Thailand."

Citing Vietnam's intrusion into Thailand, dispatch of spies for espionage in Thailand and political and diplomatic intimidations, the statement said, "all these amply prove that Vietnam is the enemy of Thailand. Here we declare that we cannot but take a hostile attitude towards Vietnam, the Soviet lackey." Refuting Nguyen Co Thach's threats to Thailand and other ASEAN countries, the statement said: "They fully demonstrate that Vietnam cherishes no sincerity towards Thailand and other ASEAN countries and that it is attempting to continue its occupation of Kampuchea and to invade Thailand with the aggressor troops in Kampuchea. This is a scheme long cherished by the Vietnamese authorities under the baton of their Soviet boss."

SRV REPORTEDLY REINFORCING KAMPUCHEA TROOPS

[Text] Bangkok, July 30 (XINHUA) -- The Supreme Command of the Royal Thai Armed Forces disclosed yesterday that Vietnam had recently sent about 2,000 reinforcements to western Kampuchea opposite the Thai border, reported the BANGKOK POST today.

About 300 Vietnamese troops ferried by boat from Ban Sao Thong in Koh Kong Province up the Klong Kruen Canal to reinforce positions along the Banthad mountain range, opposite Khlong Yai District of the Thai province of Trat, according to the command. A larger contingent of some 2,500 men and military hardware were also trucked from Vietnam to Phnom Kong Wa of Sisophon where the Fifth Infantry Division is based.

On the battle front, the Khmer resistance forces last Sunday captured a Vietnamese firebase in Ban Soriya and seized a large cache of arms and ammunition.

HANOI'S CHARGES ABOUT VO DAI TON RIDICULED

OW291038 Beijing in Vietnamese to Vietnam 1130 GMT 28 Jul 82

["Current Events" talk: "A Farce"]

[Text] To add spice to its partial troop withdrawl trick, Hanoi recently staged a farce on the so-called China threat. As reported by the Hong Kong FAR EAST ECONOMIC REVIEW, on 13 July, the Vietnamese authorities held a press conference in Hanoi with Vo Dai Ton making confessions before the newsmen. Vietnamese Culture Vice Minister Le Thanh Cong told the newsmen that Vo Dai Ton was the chieftain of an armed force tat is fighting against the Vietnamese Government. In this confession, Vo Dai Ton said he was a secret agent of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, and that he was an instrument of the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese reactionaries. He added that he was the leader of a group of overseas Vietnamese scattered about in Europe, America, Southeast Asia and Australia, who had volunteered to regain national independence. Leaving Australia, he headed for Thailand and then sneaked into southern Vietnam with the mission of establishing connections with the other antigovernment forces. He was nabbed by Lao authorities in November 1981 during his contact with Lao antigovernment forces and packed off to Hanoi.

During his confession, Vo Dai Ton suddenly changed subjects, saying he was clearly aware of the Vietnamese authorities' stand, but he still firmly believed in the success of his freedom-seeking mission. However, His Excellency Vice Minister Cong suddenly cut in during Ton's talk and had Ton removed from the conference hall. When Ton was brought back to answer newsmen's questions about the aid issue, he said: Aid to Vietnam comes from donations by private citizens in various countries. Whereupon Ton was again dragged out of the conference hall, and his excellency the vice minister, stupefied by Ton's statement, explained to the newsmen that Vo Dai Ton declared that the CIA, in collusion with the Chinese, had organized his group and provided him guidance in all activities.

When talking about the countries that had connections with Vo Dai Ton, Le Thanh Cong mentioned the name of the commander in chief of the Thai armed forces. However, Vo Dai Ton did not say in his confession how and where he had contact with the CIA and the Chinese reactionaries. Le Thanh Cong attempted to give explanations on Vo Dai Ton's behalf, but he failed.

Through this farce, the Vietnamese authorities, racking their minds, attempted to concoct evidence of the so-called China threat. However, their clumsy play was poorly managed. They ridiculously paired off the CIA with China, and their carefully selected actors did not act in accordance with the prepared script. What a dismal flop!

AFP SAYS AUTHORITIES DENY KNOWLEDGE OF HIJACKING

OW301010 Hong Kong AFP in English 0951 GMT 30 Jul 82

[Excerpts] Hong Kong, July 30 (AFP) -- A bid to commandeer a chartered Chinese aircraft was foiled today and the plane forced to make an emergency landing in the second hijack attempt reported in China this week; a Chinese newspaper here said.

(But aviation authorities in China said they were "unaware" of any new hijacking attempt or emergency landing at Nanjing Airport as reported by the left-wing Hong Kong newspaper THE NEW EVENING POST [HSIN WAN PAO].)

The POST said in an unsourced report that a British-made Viscount aircraft, chartered for tourists, was on a flight from the eastern port of Shanghai to Beijing when the hijacking attempt occurred. The report came 5 days after China's first confirmed hijack bid.

The POST did not specify the number of would-be air pirates or their motive but said the plane was forced to make an emergency landing in Nanjing after the hijacking big over the town of Wuxi, west of Shanghai, was thwarted.

The newspaper said the hijacker or hijackers were subdued after a "struggle" but did not say if anyone was hurt or give any other details. "Thus another hijacking plot has been shattered," the POST said.

The POST said that the plane in today's reported incident took off from Shanghai at 9 a.m. (0100 GMT) heading for Beijing, about 1,100 kilometers (660 miles) to the north. It landed at Nanjing, west of Shanghai, at 10:51 a.m., the POST said.

No further details were available. The official NEW CHINA NEWS AGENCY, monitored here, had not reported the incident by late afternoon.

(But authorities at eastern China's Nanjing Airport and officials of the national airline CAAC said they were "unaware" of the attempted hijacking and said there had been no emergency landing in Nanjing.

(At the CAAC headquarters in Beijing officials said no aircraft had been reported missing or delayed on the Shanghai to Beijing run, adding that there had been no flights scheduled to leave Shanghai today at 9 a.m.

(A Beijing airport official also denied that any charter flights as distinct from CAAC flights had been expected today in the capital, and Nanjing Airport officials continued to affirm that no emergency landings had taken place today nor had any charter flight arrived.)

RENMIN RIBAO INTERVIEWS MARSHAL XU XIANGQIAN

HK300757 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 29 Jul 82 pp 1, 4

[Article by RENMIN RIBAO reporter Ji Xichen [4764 1585 2525]: "The Old Marshal's Hopes -- Interviewing Comrade Xu Xiangqian [1776 0686 0467] on the Eve of '1 August'"]

[Text] Looking out of the window, I heard a long roll of thunder; it was showering and the grove in the courtyard was shrouded in the misty rain.

Wearing everyday clothes, Marshal Xu came downstairs quickly and vigorously and entered the simple and unadorned but light and spacious drawing room.

I walked toward him and greeted him. I also wished him good health and a long life.

Marshal Xu shook hands with me firmly, smiled faintly and spoke with a heavy Shanxi accent: "I am old and my energy is failing!"

Marshal Xu is at the advanced age of 81 this year. He is tall and sturdy. Although he is gray-haired, he still has rosy cheeks and is full of vigor. His present helath is better than when I saw him 3 to 4 years ago. During a meeting with him at that time, he indignantly shook his fist and scathingly denounced the counterrevolutionary crimes of Lin Biao, Jiang Ging and their followers. Over the past few years, due to great changes on various fronts throughout the country, Marshal Xu has been feeling happy and his health has become better and better.

Comrade Secretary [Marshal Xu's secretary] said Marshal Xu's daily life is highly regularized. He gets up at dawn and then goes to the courtyard to do taijiquan [a kind of traditional Chinese shadow boxing] and some physical exercises. Since resigning from the posts of vice premier of the State Council and defense minister, he has been acting as if he is still at the command post and has been paying close attention to domestic and international situations. He reads several newspapers and periodicals and spends 1 to 2 hours reading documents every day. He always concerns himself with important affairs of the party and the state and always cares for the building of the army.

Marshal Xu said with deep feeling: "Now, as Comrade Xiaoping is directly in charge of the army, there has been greater improvement in the army work."

Referring to the modernization of the army and putting the army on a regular basis, he said: "To do these things, we must settle three issues: the issue of people, the issue or arms, and the issue of combining people with arms. In other words, they are the issue of establishment and the issue of systems. First, we must foster a large number of commanders who have undergone strict military and scientific training and who possess relatively high military quality. Second, we must constantly improve our weaponry. Third, we must have a scientific establishment and a scientific system. With the advances in military science and technology, we must constantly study new questions regarding military guiding ideology so as to adapt ourselves to new circumstances and to master new military technology and the art of command."

As a member of the Political Bureau of the CCP Central Committee and a vice chairman of the Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee, Comrade Xu Xiangqian has performed immortal feats in establishing and developing the PLA together with other proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation including Mao Zedong, Zhou Enlai, Liu Shaoqi and Zhu De. He said slowly: "I began life as a primary school teacher. At that time, I never expected to be in command of troops and to be fighting for dozens of years...."

As I have worked in places where Marshal Xu had fought battles, I heard many stories about him.

In 1924, being lashed by the waves of the great revolution in China, he left his hometown and was admitted to the first class of the Huangpu Military Academy. Afterwards he took part in the eastern expedition.

In 1927, following the "1 August" Nanchang uprising, he arrived in Jiujiang fr Wuhan and then reached Guangzhou after passing through many different places. The party then appointed him head of the sixth detachment of the Workers' Red Guards to be in charge of the secret military training of workers. He received two pistols and several hand grenades from a female comrade, led the Red Guards to seize firearms from policemen in the street and worked in coordination with the training regiment of the Fourth Army led by Comrade Ye Jianying to launch the famous Guangzhou uprising.

The Guangzhou uprising failed. He led the Fourth Division of the Red Army which was established by regrouping the surviving revolutionary armed forces to fight around Hai-Lu-Feng. He and Comrade Peng Bai held high the revolutionary red flag around the East River.

After this, he left his fighting footprints on the Dabie Mountain and the Daba Mountain; on the snowy mountains and in the grassland; in the Qilian Mountain area; on the two banks of the Huang He and in the Yimong Mountain area.

"He is commander in chief, and a private as well." This was the acclaim he won from his comrades-in-arms.

Marshal Xu was commander in chief of the Fourth Front Red Army at the age of 30. As commander of the army, he was imbued with the heroic spirit of crushing all enemies and played an outstanding role in the Hubei-Henan-Anhui soviet and the Sichuan-Shaanxi soviet. Xu Xiangqian was a name which struck terror into the enemy.

He was adept at adopting an overall strategic point of view. He was also good at concentrating superior forces, at making ingenious military moves and at wiping out enemy forces while they were on the move.

In the spring of 1932, following the smashing of the enemy's three campaigns to "encircle and suppress" the Hubei-Henan-Anhui soviet, he successfully applied the tactic of "encircling the enemy post and trouncing reinforcements coming to its aid" during the Sujiabu battle and commanded three divisions of our army in annihilating 30,000 enemy troops at one blow.

In 1934 he adopted the guiding principle of "contracting the front" to direct the famous battle to defend Wanyuan, thus smashing the Sichuan warlord Liu Xiang's six-route attach and wiping out 80,000 enemy troops.

During the battles, he always braved heavy fire and charged at the head of his men. Although he was wounded three times, he continued putting up tenacious fights against the enemy.

His comrades-in-arms said: When he fights in a war, he is "fierce and tough." However, he treats his subordinates and rank-and-file soldiers as his blood brothers. Although he holds high posts, he has never put on airs. During the march, he offered his horse to the sick and wounded. During the rest and reorganization after a great battle, the commander in chief was found to be missing. He was later found sewing and mending his military uniform in the home of an old peasant.

During the war of resistance against Japan, he shattered many "mopping-up operations" launched by the enemy in south Hebei and Shandong, thus consolidating and expanding bases to resist Japanese aggression in these areas.

In the summer of 1948 he commanded 60,000 troops to launch the Jinzhong [central Shanxi] campaign on the shores of the Fen River. Although he was then suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis again, he spread the map on his stretcher to direct the campaign and wiped out 100,000 enemy troops, thus liberating Taiyuan.

Sitting in front of me was this battle-tested old marshal, hearing whose name caused the enemy to lose courage. He was wearing a yellow khaki jacket the color of which had faded. He serenely sat in an old upholstered armchair. He was so simple, plain and unassuming; he was so gentle and kind. Seing him, one deeply feels that he is respectable and one really wants to befriend him. Seing him, one will not be reserved and withdrawn to the slightest degree.

For fully 55 years, he contributed all his energies to the revolutionary wars and the building of the People's Army.

"What did we depend on in leading the army and directing battles during the war years? We depended on the unity between commanders and fighters, on the unity between the army and the people, on the people's high level of political consciousness and on the communists 'who are the first to charge against enemy fire and the last to retreat, and who are the first to bear hardships and the last to enjoy comforts.' With these things, we can do well in leading troops and fighting in a war. Al those army units which are capable of fighting tough battles and winning battles have leading cadres who possess a good work style, care for rank-and-file soldiers, are in the vanguard charging the enemy lines and who play exemplary and leading roles." After discussing warfare, Marshal Xu said that the key to promoting economic construction and realizing modernization lies in strengthening the party leadership and rectifying the work style of the party.

He said: Only by having a staunch party spirit can we have a fine party work style. With regard to resolutions of the party, all party members are dutybound to implement and carry them out to the letter. We must accurately report situations to our party organizations. We must not tell lies and must not make false reports. With regard to our fellow workers, we must stress unity and fraternal love and help each other. We must not be jealous of able and virtuous people. We must be concerned about the weal and woe of the people.

He used the story about the Han Dynasty's General Huo Qubing sharing wine with rank-and-file soldiers to elucidate the point that with a good party work style and with comrades of the whole party waging arduous struggles and sharing the comforts and hardships of the masses, we can lead the masses to fulfill the tasks of the party and can overcome difficulties more readily. While making a gesture, he earnestly said: "The key to rectifying the party's work style lies in leaders at all levels."

Marshal Xu quoted an old saying: "If the leader sets a good example, his subordinates will voluntarily follow him; if the leader does not set a good example, his subordinates will not follow him even if they are ordered to do so." He used this old saying to elucidate the point that leading cadres must set an example of improving party work style. How can the cadres exercise leadership if they ask the masses to implement and do things which they themselves do not implement and do? Who will obey such cadres? With regard to revolutionizing cadres, lowering the average age of cadres, increasing cadres' knowledge and making cadres more specialized, the most important is the revolutionization of cadres.

He said: Party cadres are the people's public servants. They must not take advantage of their position and power to pursue private ends. Cadres should set good examples in organs, army units and family life. If a parent does bad things, how can he educate his children to do good things?

Marshal Xu has strictly educated his children and does not allow them to seek personal privileges. He does not allow his children to arbitrarily use his car and does not allow any member of his family to use an official car to receive private guests. He asks his children to preserve the style of hard working and plain living. He has a daughter who is a staff member of a certain army hospital. A newspaper once planned to commend her as one of those typical representatives of the children of senior cadres. After learning of this, Marshal Xu immediately stopped the paper from doing so. He thought this would be of no benefit to her at all!

Actions are more important than words. He said: Leading cadres must care for the masses and assist the masses in solving some real problems in a down-to-earth manner. They must not indulge in idle talk.

The rectification of our party work style also depends on giving full play to democracy and supervision by the masses. Marshal Xu said: We must perfect democratic centralism. Only by having extensive democracy can we have better centralism. Centralism means centralizing the will of the majority and does not mean centralizing all power around an individual person. Centralizing all power around an individual person will create autocracy. All organs and army units must have a democratic atmosphere that allows people to speak out. "Blame not the speaker but be warned by his words." In this respect, our party must firmly bear in mind the lessons learned from bitter experiences.

Marshal Xu hoped to know more about new situations at the grassroots and asked this reporter to talk about what he has seen and heard.

After listening to this reporter's briefing, Marshal Xu said happily: Reporters must have the scientific materialist spirit, make investigations and studies at the grassroots, and heed the opinions of various circles. They must not lose sight of progress, must see existing problems and must achieve a real understanding of the situation. Only by doing so can we have convincing reports from our reporters.

He added: "It is not only necessary for reporters but also necessary for all party workers to conscientiously promote investigation and study at the grassroots."

The rain stopped and brilliant sunshine shone into the drawing room through the window. Marshal Xu stood up and cheerfully posed for a photograph for a press photographer. He modestly said: "This talk is a comradely heart-to-heart talk."

During the "comradely heart-to-heart talk," he placed warm hopes on the whole party and the whole army. He also specially wrote an inscription for this newspaper. The inscription reads as follows: "Do well in running the party newspaper, rectify our party work style."

Marshal Xu left the drawing room, walked with firm strides and went upstairs one step at a time. When I was looking up at his tall figure, an idea rose from my heart: History expects the people of this generation to follow revolutionaries of the older generation and to carry forward the glorious tradition of the party; we must act like them, whose love for the revolution is deeper than their love for life and who have dedicated their lives to the ideal of communism!

YANG SHANGKUN VIEWS IMPORTANCE OF SCIENCE TO PLA

[Text] Beijing, July 30 (XINHUA) -- The importance of mastering and applying modern science, culture and technique is stressed in an article by Yang Shangkun, secretary general of the Military Commission of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, which appears in today's LIBERATION ARMY DAILY.

Written in commemoration of the 55th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA) which falls on August 1, the article says that to build a revolutionized and modernized army, the human factor should still be given primary importance. But this involves not only the courage, consciousness and spirit of sacrifice of each PLA member but also their wisdom and talents and ability to master the application of modern science, culture and technique.

The article continues that the test of strength in wars is reflected not only in the quantity of the armed forces but, more important, in the modernization of weaponry and equipment and in the soldiers capacity of mastering them.

The political consciousness of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, the article says, is undoubtedly among the foremost in the world. The pressing task at present for the whole army is to strengthen the professional training of the army's cadre contingent.

Great importance must be attached to the learning and application of modern sciences, culture and techniques in the modernization of the army, the article says.

With the development of the national economy and military scientific techniques, the Chinese People's Liberation Army, which ia already armed itself with high-quality conventional and some sophisticated strategic weapons for defense -- atomic weapons and long-range missiles -- will be further equipped with more up-to-date sophisticated weapons, the article concludes.

RADIO REPORTERS VISIT FIRST MISSILE DESTROYER

[Newsletter by station correspondents (Yu Guangxin), (Li Zuomin) and (Xu Xiaoyan) and station reporter (Cui Qiang): "A Song of High Will in the 10,000-li Coastal Areas and Territorial Seas -- Marking the 55th Anniversary of the Founding of the PLA"]

[Summary] Our great motherland has a long coastline and fine harbors. It has vast sea areas and islands spread all along the coastal areas.

The People's Navy braves hardships and firmly defends our 10,000-li coastal areas and territorial seas day and night to safeguard the security of the territorial waters of our country.

"On the eve of Army Day, we visited China's first domestically made guided missile destroyer of the North China Sea Fleet. We embarked on the guided missile destroyer berthed in the harbor in the early morning. We saw on the front and rear decks many cannons of various calibers stately aiming at the distance. The tall and broad guided missile launchers and the depth charge launchers on the left and right sides signify the tremendous power of the warship."

Suddenly a siren is sounded. The warship sails out of the military port to the vast blue sea. In the meeting room we first interviewed Comrade (Wang Shiqian), political commissar of the flotilla. He said to us:

[Begin recording] "This warship is the first new guided missile destroyer designed and made by our country. It was inspected by Ye Jianying, Deng Xiaoping and other leading comrades of the central authorities. Over the past years, most of our warships have braved the elements and sailed the vast territorial waters of the Bohai Sea, the Yellow Sea and the East China Sea." [end recording]

The leading comrades of this warship have often conducted education in patriotism among cadres and fighters to develop their enthusiasm for military training and regard this as an important content of political work.

"The cabin pipeline squad is responsible for the warship's oil and water supply. Over 10 major pipeline systems link some 100 cabins and sections. The total length of these pipelines exceeds more than 100 li. Fighters figuratively call these pipeline systems the blood vessels of the warship. Because the pipelines are very intircate, it generally takes 3 years to train a sailor to get familiar with and know them well."

While we were touring this warship, we were deeply impressed by the seamen's dedication to the construction of the People's Navy. This new guided missile destroyer not only signifies the tremendous progress made by China's ship-building industry and arms industry, but also reflects the development of China's electronics industry. The destroyer is equipped with ship-to-ship guided missiles, radar, computers and meters of various types. "Listeners, let us heartily wish our naval commanders and fighters still greater success in building a modern navy."

WEI GUIQIN, OTHER PLA LEADERS MEET VETERANS

[Text] Beijing, 28 Jul (XINHUA) -- This morning leading comrades of the PLA General Political Department met new and veteran model heroes and representatives of local models in supporting the army who had been invited to come to Beijing to take part in celebrating the 55th anniversary of the PLA.

Wei Guoqing, director of the General Political Department, extended a warm welcome and festive greetings to the representatives. He said: You have contributed excellent experience. We should publicize your deeds throughout the army and popularize your experience so as to inspire army building. Wei Guoqing expressed heartfelt thanks to the localities for supporting and helping the army units. He said: Army-people unity is our glorious tradition and the army and the people are as inseparable as fish and water. We must, under the new historical conditions, further restore and carry forward the glorious tradition, strengthen army-people unity and together build and defend the motherland. Liang Biye, deputy director of the General Political Department, said in his speech: There are thousands upon thousands of model heroes in our army and numerous support-the-army models throughout the country. The People's Army loves the people; it also needs the people's love. If the parents of every soldier act like "model army dependent" Ma Yaozhi who encouraged her son to serve at the frontier, and if the wife of every armyman behaves like "support-the-army model" Duan Laying who inspired her husband to work at ease in the army, our army will become a stronger army.

Leading comrades of the General Political Department presented silk banners to the representatives of support-the-army models from various localities and also gave souvenirs to representatives of model heroes in the army.

Present at the meeting were Huang Yukun, Yan Jinsheng, Zhu Yunqian and Hua Nan.

DESCRIPTION OF GOBI DESERT ROCKET-LAUNCHING BASE

HK300805 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE 0116 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Feature by Zho Qi [0340 0796]:"A Glimpse at China's Rocket Base"]

[Text] This is the hinterland of the Gobi Desert in northwest China. Previously, it was called a barren land, a region with no sign of human habitation. But now it has become a modern scientific base for the pilot project of launching satellites and rockets by China's sons and daughters.

China's first carrier rocket was launched right here to a predetermined sea area in the Pacific. It was also from here that three satellites carried by China's giant rocket were launched into vast space.

One summer's day, when this writer came here for a visit afrer crossing the Gobi Desert by special train to the rocket base, the first thing I saw was many green shelters, formed by millions of trees, for resisting wind and sand. Row upon row of houses were hidden behind the green shelters. Wide asphalt roads and overhanging cables meandered far into the distance.

When I went into the rocket-launching command center, a smart rocket commander was observing on television various activities at the rocket-launching site miles away. The young assistants were contacting every observation station in the country by telephone.

At one end of the rocket-launching command center was the rocket flight data computer center. Many huge modern electronic computers were operating. Colorful signal lights were like stars in the sky. At the other end of the command center was the time-control center where many atomic clocks, which are accurate to within a millimicrosecond (1 millimicrosecond equals 1 billionth of 1 second), were installed to provide unified and precise time information for the rocket-launching site, for the sites monitoring and controlling rocket flight data and for the work of synchronizing the instruments and equipment of the country's ground observation network.

Rockets with a range in excess of 8,000 km are long-range rockets. They have complicated and precise systems. The instruments in the rocket are automatically controlled after launching. If one part is out of order, the whole pilot project will be unsuccessful. In the rocket survey and experimental center, there was a high and spacious monitoring and experimental hall, in the middle of which was a milky-white new-style rocket. Monitoring wires stretching from various parts of the rocket were connected to the inspecting and monitoring instruments and equipment on both sides of the hall. Many female personnel, like girls doing embroidery, were meticulously conducting strict technical inspection and monitoring of the generator and various guiding and controlling systems in the middle of the rocket to ensure that the rocket was carried to the launching site without any impediment.

One sunny morning, the writer joyfully got in a jeep to head for the destination where rockets were taken to be launched. I saw many rocket-launching frames towering into the sky in the distance, like guards standing firm in the Gobi Desert, who are not to be invaded. When I went up to have a look at the gigantic structures, I found they were merely steel beams and iron pillars. When I took the elevator up there, I found there was a podium on each level. In the middle of the podium there was a semicircular space; an exact fit for a huge rocket. After people conduct the final inspection and survey before launching the rockets, the launching frames are moved away on tracks like trains, leaving only the rockets to be launched. At that time, only when the commander in the control room on the ground issues the order "ignition," does the operator press the button and does the rocket soar and rise high into the sky with an earth-shaking roar and dense flames.

The moment the rocket is launched, the radar measuring center and optical and telemetry center miles away get all their modern instruments into gear and track the rockets to be launched, and record the flying, velocity, altitude, status and operational conditions of the instruments in the rockets.

Built 24 years ago, this pilot project rocket-launching base with complete systems is the earliest one of its kind in China. All the modern instruments and equipment in this base are designed and manufactured by New China itself. Various types of rockets and satellites which have been launched here also fully show that China's space science and technology have developed at an astonishing speed.

Who would dare to say that the Chinese are not as clever as foreigners? One rocket commander said: Although China has not launched rockets and satellites many times, we have a very high success rate. The Chinese people are ambitious and capable. They are able to conquer these bastions of modern science and technology with their own strength. At present, there are only three countries in the world which are able to master the knowledge of satellite recovery. China is one of them.

Here, the writer visited many scientific and technical personnel who have carried out this glorious cause. Just like thousands of trees plannted in the Gobi Desert, they have become the technical mainstay of this prosperous rocket base. Some of them are nearly 50 years old, whereas some are in the prime of life. But they all have the pure heart of a new-born babe to fight and dedicate themselves to the cause of revitalizing China.

Some words in an ancient poem go like this: "Never engage in a distant journey in one's life and never stay in sandy land when traveling." These Chinese sons and daughters of the new era are willing to spend springs and autumns in this sandy land and work for their motherland. Even if the Gobi Desert was influenced by the 10-year chaos, they still bore in their minds the people's commission and vowed to adhere to their chosen course.

Oh, Gobi Desert, you are as vast as the open sea, just like the broad minds of the sons and daughters of the Chinese nation. Oh, rockets, how grandiose and brilliant are the light and flame you gush forth, symbolizing the revitalizing light of the Chinese nation.

[Text] The Central Meteorological Observatory issued a typhoon bulletin at 0600 [2200 GMT] on 30 July: This year's typhoon No 9 landed at Fujian's Putian County at 0000 [1600 GMT] this morning with winds of force 10 to 11. At 0200 [1800 GMT] this morning, the center of the typhoon was located at Xianyou County, Fujian Province, 25.6 degrees north latitude and 118.8 degrees east longitude. Maximum winds in the vicinity of the typhoon center ranged from force 9 to 10. It is expected that the center of the typhoon will continue to move in a northwesterly direction at a speed of 20 kph, gradually diminishing into a low pressure area in the eastern part of Jiangxi and the northwestern part of Fujian today.

Influenced by the typhoon or the low pressure area, winds of force 6 to 7 are expected with heavy rains or squalls in Fujian, Zhejiang, Shanghai, Jiangxi and the southern parts of Jiangsu and Anhui between 30-31 July. Winds of force 7 to 9 are expected in the northeastern part of the South China Sea, the East China Sea and the southern part of the Yellow Sea.

HUAI HE FLOOD THREAT REPORTEDLY AVERTED

[Text] Beijing, July 29 (XINHUA) -- A dangerous flood of a fairly big magnitude in the upper and middle reaches of the Huai He following mid-July has been controlled, thanks to the co-ordinated efforts by armymen and people in Henan and Anhui Provinces, according to the Central Flood Control Headquarters.

The headquarters said that the flood waters crested at Zhenyangguan in Shouxian County, Anhui Province on July 27, but it caused no damage. Downstream from Zhengyangguan the river channel is wider and the water level is now generally above the warning mark but below the danger mark.

Between July 9 and 22, torrential rains hit Xinyang, Zhumadian, Liuan and Fuyang areas on the upper and middle reaches of the Huai He and, in half a month, rainfall was recorded at 500 to 600 millimetres on average in the mountain areas in southern Anhui reaching over 700 millimetres in some regions.

This resulted in a sharp rise in the water level in the main course and tributaries on the river's upper reaches, posing a serious threat to dams and reservoirs in the localities.

The flood control headquarters promptly decided to divert part of the flood waters to the Mengwa water detention basin in Anhui Province's Funan County. Lakes along the Huai He have also detained part of the heavy flow.

Under the leadership of the provincial authorities in Henan and Anhui Provinces, local armymen and people have since unitied in an unremitting effort to fight the flood and guaranteed the safety of major dykes and reservoirs.

Provincial leaders in these provinces gave guidance in the anti-flood struggles, and Liu Jie and Zhou Zijian, Henan's first party secretary and Anhui's first acting party secretary, inspected river fronts at the critical moments.

On July 28, the Central Flood Control Headquarters sent a message of congratulation to the people's governments of the two provinces, the Nanjing and Wuhan units of the People's Liberation Army, the two provincial military commands and the Huai He river harnessing committee, on their victory over the flood.

REGULATIONS ON STUDYING ABORAD APPROVED

OW300539 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1138 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, 29 Jul (XINHUA) -- To further promote the work of studying abroad and clarify the policy, on 16 July the State Council approved and transmitted the "Regulations Governing Studying Abroad at One's Own Expense" submitted by the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Public Security, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of Labor and Personnel to all localities and departments concerned calling on them to comply.

The "regulations" point out: Studying abroad at one's own expense is a channel for training qualified personnel. Those who apply to study abroad at their own expense may do so in accordance with the related regulations of the Ministry of Public Security if they are provided with all of their school tuition and living expenses by reliable relatives or friends residing abroad or relatives at home (or complete financial aid or scholarships obtained through reliable relatives or friends residing abroad) and are able to produce admission credentials to regular college courses, universities, institutes (including foreign language continuation school before admission to a university), graduate schools or schools for advanced study in foreign countries. These applicants must submit notarized or attested letters of guaranty for complete expenses written by their relatives or friends residing aborad or notarized letters of guaranty written by relatives at home.

The "regulations" say: Those applying for study abroad at their own expense as undergraduates or graduate students must not be older than 35 years of age. Those who apply to engage in advanced studies abroad must not be older than 485 years of age and should major in specialized subjects needed for national construction. Applicants for studying abroad at their own expense must produce diplomas of senior middle schools and universities or credentials signed by school authorities certifying the same educational level. If the applicant needs a transcript of his scholastic record in school and a physical examination report for the application for admission to a school abroad, units concerned should help him obtain them.

It is emphasized in the "regulations" that in order to ensure the fulfillment of the state plan for training qualified personnel, no one attending an institution of higher learning as an undergraduate or special training course student or attending an institution of higher learning (including a scientific research organ) as a postgraduate student is permitted to study abroad at his own expense. A graduate of an institution of higher learning must first comply with the unified job assignment of the state to work for 2 years and then obtain approval before he can make outside contacts for study abroad at his own expense. These restrictions -- that a student studying in a college is not eligible for study abroad at his own expense and that a college graduate must first work for 2 years -- may not apply in the cases of those in China who are the children, brothers, sisters and their children (including spouses) of overseas Chinese in foreign lands, compatriots in Hong Kong and Macao, Chinese of foreign nationality or returned overseas Chinese and who have the means to study abroad at their own expenses. If these eligible individuals request it, their present schools may retain their student status for 1 year.

It is further noted in the "regulations" that after obtaining a passport and an exit visa approved and issued by the public security departments of China, a person who pays for his own study abroad may entrust the visa application agency of the China Travel Service or go directly to the embassy or consulate of the foreign country concerned to apply for the country's entry visa. A person who studies abroad at his own expense must pay all expenses while abroad, including those for clothing, food, living quarters, tuition, medical expenses and expenses for the round trip travel. Foreign exchange needed for travel and other expenses abroad may be obtained from the Bank of China by presenting the exit certificates issued by the public security departments and the entry visa to the foreign country concerned, along with the amount of renminbi to be exchanged. A person who holds a job will not be considered to have resigned or have been discharged from his position when he goes abroad to study at his own expense. However, his wage payments will be stopped and the time he spends studying abroad will not be calculated into his length of service. The original length of service he accumulates prior to leaving his post will be counted when he returns from abroad and resumes work.

A person who studies in a foreign country at his own expense shall notify the Chinese Embassy (Consulate) there of his arrival -- personally or in writing -- within 1 month and accept its leadership. When a person completes a tour of study abroad at his own expense and returns to China, he should have with him a document issued by the foreign unit where he studied that can verify the quantity of articles he carries. The quantity to be admitted shall be determined according to the same customs regulations that apply to those who are sent abroad for study by the state.

The state recognizes the record of schooling and the degrees earned in foreign countries by those who have obtained such schooling records and returned after studying abroad at their own expense. Regarding their jobs, the personnel departments of the provinces, municipalities or autonomous regions (or the various departments under the State Council) where they were originally employed before they left the country should be responsible for arranging job assignments for them according to their abilities. Their wage scale will be decided in accordance with the relevant regulations governing those who have studied abroad at the expense of the state.

It is also clearly stipulated in the "regulations" that when key personnel in teaching, scientific, technological and professional fields (for instance, an assistant research fellow, lecturer, engineer, physician-in-charge, outstanding sportsman, key literary and art worker, key professional in office work, and so on) and those who have completed graduate study go for advance study or doctorate degrees in a foreign country's institution of higher learning or scientific research institute, they may not be considered the same as those who go aborad for study at their own expense. Wehn they apply for study aborad, these individuals must first obtain the approval of the units where they work prior to making foreign contacts. After they have obtained complete assurance of all the funds needed for study abroad, their applications will then be handled in accordance with the Education Ministry's regulations concerning persons sent by the state for study abroad.

In conclusion, the "regulations" state that these new regulations shall come into force upon promulgation on 16 July 1982 and that the "Provisional Regulations Governing Studying Abroad at One's Own Expense" submitted by the Education Ministry and six other departments and approved and transmitted by the State Council on 14 January 1981 shall be simultaneously rescinded.

RENMIN RIBAO HAILS NEW CHINA LAW SOCIETY

[Editorial: "Actively Develop Law Research Work" -- Greeting the Establishment of the China Law Society]

[Text] The formal establishment of the China Law Society is a big event in the law circles of our country. Here we extend our warm congratulations to it.

As a national mass organization of law circles, the society has defined its main tasks as: Under the leadership of the CCP it will unite all the jurists of the country to uphold the four basic principles, to actively carry out legal research in line with the party's principles and policies and to conduct domestic and international academic exchanges so as to make contributions to developing Marxist Chinese socialist law theory, to promoting socialist democracy, perfecting the socialist legal system and building socialist material and spiritual civilization.

The history of our country's revolution and construction proves that only by upholding the four basic principles, will China have a great future and be full of promise, and will it be possible to surmount difficulties on the road of achieving victory in revolution and construction. Upholding the four basic principles must be taken as a prerequisite for all research work in social sciences, and law research is no exception. No doubt, the principle of "letting a hundred flowers blossom and a hundred schools of thought contend" must be carried out in a law research in order to maintain and develop a vivid atmosphere in academic theoretical research. This is by no means inconsistent with upholding the four basic principles. Only by upholding the four basic principles, will it be possible to ensure a correct implementation of the proletarian principle of "letting a hundred flowers blossom and a hundred schools of thought content" and to stimulate law research.

Law research work must serve to promote socialist democracy and to perfect the socialist legal system. Our democracy is a socialist democracy and a democracy of the people, practiced under the party's leadership. It is neither bourgeois democracy, nor bourgeois liberalization. Our legal system is a socialist legal system. It is not a capitalist one. Socialist democracy is the basis of the socialist legal system. Without socialist democracy, the socialist legal system will deteriorate. Conversely, the socialist legal system is also the guarantee of socialist democracy. It is, therefore, necessary to make democracy systematized and legalized, otherwise socialist democracy will be destroyed. Promoting socialist democracy and perfecting the socialist legal system are two major component parts in building socialism politically and are requirements for, and manifestations of, the upholding oi people's democratic dictatorship. Law research workers of our country should make their due contributions to promoting socialist democracy and perfecting the socialist legal system.

Law research must be conducted by linking theory with practice. Law is an important component part of the superstructure. Like the other component parts of the superstructure, law is determined by the economic base and, on the other hand, it also serves the economic base. Law research workers of our country must carry out their work according to the actual situation of our country and seriously sum up experiences and lessons from our work of building the legal system so that they can work better for the building of our socialist modernization. Law research work must be closely linked with legislative and judicial affairs and the practice of building socialist modernization. Only by so doing, will the law research of our country reap rich fruits and have its own characteristics.

In the 1980's, tremendous development has been made in science and technology, and also social sciences have been greatly promoted and changed. Thus, our law research workers should broaden their vision. They should understand not only our country's today but also its yesterday. And they should understand not only China but also the whole of the world. It is wrong to look down our own experience in building the socialist legal system by worshipping things foreign and returning to old ways. It is wrong too to close the country to the outside and to shut our eyes and stuff our ears. We must, by taking Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought as a guide, emphatically study experiences and lessons in building our country's socialist legal system and, at the same time, we must study all laws, ancient and modern, Chinese and foreign. Thus, we can select the essence, discard the dross, critically assimilate, draw on the experience of others and use all knowledge, materials and thinking which are useful for reference so that we can "make the past serve the present and foreign things serve China" to enrich and develop the science of the socialist law of the country.

RENMIN RIBAO COMMENTS ON INDIVIDUAL RETAILERS

[Commentator's article: "The Role of Individual Retailers Must Not Be Overlooked"]

[Text] At present, we must pay attention to a new trend that has emerged in the course of enlivening the market: Some comrades think that the market is "excessively enlivened" and that the development of the individual economy has reached a "saturation" point; some people even think that state-run commerce is being "encircled" by the collective and individual economy, sighing that "the situation is excellent, but business is difficult." Under the influence of such ideology, some places are restricting and complicating the legitimate activites of individual retailers under the pretext of laying emphasis on the planned economy and dealing blows at the criminal activities in the economic field, hawkers are not allowed to set up stalls, or the supply of goods is stopped, or they are required to turn over their business licenses. As a result, the number of individual retailers is decreasing drastically in many places. This trend and its serious consequences must not be overlooked.

Has the development of individual retailers reached a "saturation" point? Of course not. After several years of rehabilitation and development, the total number of individual retailers in towns and the countryside throughout the country is about 2 million. Their proportion in the whole national economy is practically next to nothing. Take for example Liaoning Province, which has undergone comparatively rapid development. By the end of last year, the number of individual retailers in this province was 104,000. Even so, the volume of sales was not yet up to the highest level in history. Developing individual retailers is beneficial for allocation to youths who are waiting for job assignments, for people who are idle in towns, for promoting the circulation of commodities, enlivening the market, expanding the network of retail trades, making things convenient for the masses and carrying out competition, and for raising the management and operational level of the state and collective commerce. As far as the whole situation is concerned, there are not too many but too few individual retailers. In some places the number of individual retailers is far behind demand.

Restricting the development of individual retailers will inevitably block up the channel that has just been dredged. This violates the party Central Committee's principle with regard to energetically enlivening the economy.

A new situation has emerged in the development of individual retailers. We must take a correct approach to this problem. For instance, when the market began to be opened up, there was a large proportion of production being directly linked with marketing. Generally speaking, it accounted for over 70 percent of the total volume of trade. Following the daily development of commodity production, social division of labor gradually emerged in production, transportation and marketing. As a result, the proportion of production being directly linked with marketing dropped sharply, while the proportion of the transport of goods for sale on the market through towns and the countryside rose rapidly (on the free market in Shenyang Municipality, the proportion of the latter rose by 70 to 80 percent). Such a natural division of labor in production, transportation and marketing is in compliance with the law governing economic development. The processing and manufacturing of fentiao [noodles made from bean or sweet potato starch] has long been an important type of family sideline production of the commune members of Wanjia production brigade, Gaoqiao People's Commune, Jingxi County and Liaoning Province. The price of fentiao on the local market is 70 fen per jin. If the producers themselves transport fentiao to the marketplace for sale, it takes up a lot of time and work, and is not economical. So they would rather lose 10 fen of profit to sell it to retailers or to special traders who come to them to buy it. In the Yuhong area of Liaozhong County, there are 200 individual professional chicken-raising households. They themselves do not go to the marketplace, but sell their products to retailers, and the retailers transport the products to the marketplace for sale. In this way, they can not only save a lot of time and expenses, but also minimize damage, because the transporters have certain operational skills. This is beneficial to consumption. Rehabilitating traditional commodities on the market also needs the help of retailers in transporting and marketing. Jiangtun People's Commune of Heishan County is an important place that produces sorghum. A group of retailers who specially trade in sorghum purchase sorghum here and transport it to the free market in cities like Shenyang and Wushun. The people in the cities are very happy to be able to have sorghum rice that they have longed for for several years. All this shows that when the commodity economy develops and the sphere of circulation expands, all intermediate links can play their role. Especially with regard to small and scattered items like rough food grains that state-run commerce is unable to handle, fruits, marine products, metal products and native and sideline products of the third category outside the planned purchase, we must rely on individual retailers in transporting and marketing. In this way, the market will be enriched with various products. On the contrary, without the transporting and marketing carried out by individual retailers, it is not easy to collect goods on the market or to stabilize prices. The method of linking production with marketing but forbidding the transportation of goods for marketing is not in compliance with objective reality, and it will get us nowhere.

Some people say indiscriminately that one should have grave doubts about individual retailers who carry out transportation and marketing. They are even regarded as speculators. This is obviously inappropriate. With regard to individual retailers who carry out the transportation of goods for marketing, so long as their activities are within the framework of the state's policies, we should not discriminate against them, nor should we suppess them. A typical investigation of some places shows that individual retailers who carry out the transportation of goods for marketing between towns and prefectures generally have tiny funds and little earnings. They gain some profits from regional price differences. Only a few individual retailers have a comparatively high income. But they have certain operational skills. They work from dawn to dusk and are meticulous about their work. They transport goods for marketing a long way and put in a lot of hard work. So it is appropriate and reasonable that they have a comparatively high income. Of course, those who have an excessively high income must pay business taxes according to taxation regulations.

At the same time, we must also see that some illegal acts are inevitable in the operational activities of individual retailers. For instance, they seek profits from the illegal purchase and selling of state-run enterprises' retail commodities. They rush to where the goods are produced and purchase in a panic, thus undermining the state's purchase plans. They cheat and tyrannize the market. They disrupt the market, raise the prices of goods at will and carry out adulteration and give short measure. We must resolutely carry out administrative and economic measures to ban these illegal acts. But this is not the general trend. We should not mention the ordinary illegal activities in individual retailers and the criminal activities in the economic field in the same breath because of the above phenomenon. Nor can we take it as a reason for restricting the development of individual retailers.

The individual economy is the small grass that grows among stones and is full of vigor. Its economic position determines that it can only play a supplementary role. It will not influence the whole national economy. If we restrict, ban and even suppress all individual retailers, it is inevitable that we will be committing our past mistakes again.

MEETING DISCUSSES ECONOMIC CONSULTATION SERVICE

[Excerpts] Beijing, 27 Jul (XINHUA) -- "In ancient times a man of 70 was rare; but today 80-year-old persons are found everywhere, and 90-year-old people are still full of energy, vying with each other to suggest ways and means to achieve the four modernizations." A group of capitalists of the old society cited this poem to express their determination and enthusiasm to contribute to socialist modernization. They had gathered at a meeting on exchanging experience in economic consultation service work. The meeting, held from 14 to 27 July, was sponsored by the China Democratic National Construction Association and the All-China Federation of Industrialists and Businessmen.. The two organizations, formed by former bourgeois industrialists and businessmen, have a total membership of 100,000. At present, most of their members are old and 80 percent of them have retired. However, as masters of the socialist motherland, they are very enthusiastic about serving the motherland and the people in their remaining years. In recent years they have begun offering economic consultation services to contribute their talents and wisdom to the four modernizations and have made remarkable achievements.

Hu Juewen, chairman of the China Democratic National Construction Association, presided over the closing ceremony today. Hu Ziang, chairman of the all-China Federation of Industrialists and Businessmen delivered a closing speech.

Those who addressed the 2-week meeting included Zhang Jingfu, state councillor and minister of the State Economic Commission; Liu Lantao, vice chairman of the CPPCC National Committee; and Yang Jingren, director of the United Front Work Department of the CCP Central Committee.

In his speech, Yang Jingren said: China's national capitalists have left us two assets: One, the enterprises which we have very successfully used, controlled and transformed; and two, a group of talented people with specific knowledge, skills and management experience. We must say that it is a loss to us that we did not bring their role into full play in the past.

He said: The political and economic development in China since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee has given the former industrialists and businessmen a good opportunity to display their talents and wisdom. We must make up to them. Economic consultation is an effective form of service to the four socialist modernizations offered by the members of the China Democratic National Construction Association and the All-China Federation of Industrialists and Businessmen.

He hoped that the departments concerned would closely cooperate with the members of the two organizations.

Present at today's closing ceremony were responsible persons of various departments and committees concerned. They included Yang Jingren, director of the United Front Work Department of the CCP Central Committee, and responsible persons of the CPPC National Committee, the State Planning Commission, the State Economic Commission, the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, the Ministry of Commerce, the Ministry of Textile Industry, the Ministry of Machine Building, the Ministry of Labor and Personnel and various democratic parties.

MA HONG ARTICLE ON CONCEPT OF SIXTH 5-YEAR PLAN

HK291010 Shanghai SHIJIE JINGJI DAOBAO in Chinese No 91, 5 Jul 82

[Article by Ma Hong [7456 3163]: "the Basic Concept of the Sixth 5-Year Plan -- Delivered at Second Annual Sino-Japanese Economic Information Exchange Meeting, May 1982]

[Text] From the economic situation of our country and taking the long-range future economic development into account, our major task for setting up the "Sixth 5-Year Plan" is to make continuous efforts for carrying out the policy of readjustment, transformation, consolidation and improvement, to stabilize the economy and to achieve better economic results, to strive for a basically favorable turn for the financial and economic situation and to make a necessary preparation for the development of the "Seventh 5-Year Plan." In other words, during the "Sixth 5-Year Plan," we shall concentrate on laying a solid base and accumulate strength in order to prepare conditions for smooth economic development in the future.

Surrounding this main task, we shall strive to correctly deal with the following factors in the course of the "Sixth 5-Year Plan."

A Proportionate Growth Rate Is To Be Achieved on the Basis of Increasing the Economic Results. This Rate Should Be in Line With Product Quality Standard and Conform to Market Demand. It Is Impossible To Resolve Various Problems and To Accumulate Necessary Economic Strength Without a Certain Rate

First, in the relations between the growth rate and the beneficial economic results, we shall not unilaterally seek a rate at the expense of economic benefit. The consideration for economic results in all aspects should be a top priority so that a certain growth rate can be achieved on this basis. This is a real rate which can be achieved after making efforts. The products will be of quality standard and the rate will meet the market demand. During the "Sixth 5-Year Plan," owing to the hard task of readjustment, transformation, consolidation and improvement, the energy and communication sectors and the basic facilities are in the transformation and construction phase. Therefore, it is impossible to speed up the rate of economic development. However, many social problems will remain unsolved, and it is also impossible to improve peoples' living standards and to accumulate necessary economic strength if a certain rate is unavailable. In 1981, the agricultural output value increased by 5.1 percent and the industrial total output value registered 4.1 percent compared with 1980, overtaking the planned demand by 3 percent. However, according to our analysis, a fractional percentage of the industrial growth rate of 4 percent was not real. Because a portion of the products in stock in the warehouses, do not meet the requirements or the real social demand. They are useless. In the next few years, energy production and capital construction investment will gradually be increased to some extent. The economic development conditions will be improved by bringing all potentials of existing enterprises into full play. But because agriculture is greatly affected by natural conditions, it takes some time to change the situation of large consumption and energy waste and to adjust the service orientation of heavy industry. Therefore, according to our safe and tentative idea, the economic growth rate for the next few years will be 4 percent, maintaning the planned level which will be reached or surpassed. We shall strive to overtake this level while carrying out the current 5-year plan. Thus, it will gain the initiative and it will be advantageous to complete the readjustment and the consolidation as well as to boost the economic results by allowing for unforeseen circumstances.

If we do exceed the planned target and fulfill the 5-year plan ahead of schedule, it will be an encouragement to the people. Naturally, imbalances will be present when the planned target is exceeded. This needs to be solved. The production portion exceeded should be the products which the society is badly in need of, and which cannot be satisfied temporarily.

We Cannot Take an Extremely Distateful Food or Take a Very Delicious One. After the Meal, We Should Guarantee That the State Will Have Greater Ability To Carry Out the Necessary Construction

Second, in the relations between construction and life, it is necessary to have a unified plan with due consideration given to all concerned in order to ensure that people have food while carrying out construction. Of course, the food cannot be too bad, but it also cannot be very good too soon. Our national economic development level is still low and the people's income on the average is small. In the next few years, with the increase of economic benefits, the national income will probably be raised at the same rate as industrial and agricultural production. But this rate will not be too high. So it is very important to effectively plan construction and life. In the past, we had considerably increased the people's consumption and raised the investment proportion in the housing for staff and workers and in other nonproduction-related construction. This is indispensable. It probably took a big step in some ways. Wages of urban workers and incomes of peasant families have increased at a faster rate than increases in output and productivity. We cannot afford to let this continue, because it neither facilitates the development of production-related construction or the continuous increase of people's standards of living. Hence, the people's life will continuously be improved and the consumption growth rate will be moderately controlled over the next few years. The purchase prices for farm and sideline products will remain stable for a certain period of time. The increase in rural incomes should depend principally on production development, higher sales in farm and sideline products and decreasing production costs. The growth of workers' wages should be lower than the increase of production and productivity. In 1981, the accumulation rate was down from 32.6 percent in 1980 to approximately 30 percent. During the "Sixth 5-Year Plan," the ratio of consumption funds in national incomes will continue to increase, but its margin will be appropriately restricted in order to maintain a reasonable accumulation rate. In 1981, planned capital construction investment totaled RMB380 billion which was actually exceeded by the some proportion. It is impossible to increase the capital construction investment in a large proportion over the next few years; but instead the planned level will be maintained at or only a bit higher than 1981 in order to control the range of capital construction, raise investment efficiency and strengthen the renovation and transformation of existing factories. In actual performance, supplementary investment will be made according to the possibility of state financial and material resources. It is necessary to appropriately raise the ration of the production-related construction investment in the total amount of capital construction investment. The major production-related construction comprises energy, transport and construction of other basic facilities as well as the necessary construction of light and textile industries.

Vigorously Persist in Agricultural Development, Continue To Put Consumer Goods in an Important Position and Further Adjust Industrial Service Orientation

Third, in relation to the agriculture, light and heavy industries, we shall persist in agricultural development, continue to put consumer goods industrial development in an important position and, at the same time, further adjust the industrial service orientation. The consumer goods industrial development rate will continue to exceed heavy industry over the next few years. This is a necessary measure for balancing the market and finance as well as maintaining the increased economic rate at a certain proportion.

In 1981 light industry increased by 14.1 percent and heavy industry decreased by 4.7 percent. Light industrial output value contributed from 46.9 percent to 51.4 percent of the total industrial output value. In the next few years, following the adjustment of the industrial service orientation and products structure as well as the stability and increase in capital construction investment, particularly the improvement of technical transformation and renovation of equipment, heavy industrial production will gradually increase again and will increase steadily along the new orbit. This is an important factor for further boosting industrial development. However, it is impossible to considerably raise the growth rate of heavy industrial production due to energy restrictions and other reasons. And the light industry will be maintained approximately at 7 percent or at a growth rate a bit higher. During the Sixth 5-Year Plan, the ratio of light industry in the total industrial output value will continue to grow. Naturally, after a great change has taken place in the heavy industrial service orientation, and the thrift of energy is achieved, a rapid growth will be expected in heavy industrial development and the light industrial proportion will be adjusted on this new basis. During the current 5-year plan, we will underscore the desire for product quality, improve its variety and find good markets for light and heavy industrial development so that the production growth will achieve good results.

Extensive Reproduction Is Based on the Domestic Situation. First, Grasp Technical Transformation of Existing Principal Enterprises in Beijing, Shanghai and Tianjin.

Fourth, regarding the relations between capital construction, renovation and transformation of existing enterprises, we shall gradually emphasize the last one. During the "Sixth 5-Year Plan," economic growth will mainly depend on raising the efficiency of existing enterprises. Most of the new projects or projects which are to be built won't play their roles until the "Seventh 5-Year Plan" or even later. In the past, we overemphasized construction of new industries at the expense of renovation of equipment and technical transformation of existing factories. This made us suffer large losses. We should begin to address this problem now. By doing so, it will boost the development of the mechanical industry and other heavy industry, improve the technical conditions of enterprise production and accumulate strength for future economic development. Hence, to pursue equipment renovation and technical transformation of existing factories constitutes an important link for the national economy to steadily step forward. Naturally, this is a very hard task. As we lack experience, we can only carry it out step by step by emphasizing the major projects and never lay equal stress on all of them or to attempt to keep them abreast of one another. In the next few years, according to the feasibility of state financial and material resources, we shall primarily grasp the technical transformation of existing factories in such areas as Beijing, Tianjin and Shanghai and the technical transformation of other facilities which require less expense but will render remarkable and quick results. According to our national conditions, technical transformation should be closely linked with saving energy, shifting material consumption, improving product quality and increasing the variety of products which are badly needed, and never pursue automatic technique purely for saving manpower. Owing to state financial restrictions, we shall make full use of the approximated RMB250 billion for funds allocated for technical renovation and transformation, for factory production development, for repairs and for extra budget costs provided by adaptable amount of bank credit funds. Afterward, when the financial situation takes a favorable turn, funds for technical transformation will be gradually increased by means of raising certain depreciation rates. From the beginning of the "Sixth 5-Year Plan," by making full use of these funds, we shall work out a plan to combine fixed assets investment and make an overall arrangement for capital construction investment and funds for renovation and transformation.

Strive To Increase Export. Devote a Lot of Time and Energy To Increase Economic Benefits in Foreign Trade. Introduce Technique and Single Item Equipment by Using Foreign Funds. Build More Medium- and Small-Sized Plants.

Fifth, concerning foreign economic relations, we shall strengthen our resolve to carry out the policy which is open to the foreign market. We shall actively extend economic exchange and cooperation with other countries by adhering to the principle of independence, sovereignty, self-reliance, equality and mutual benefits. In the next few years, we shall make efforts to increase export and to achieve better economic results in foreign trade. According to our solvency, and our capacity for allocating spare parts and for absorption, we shall actively use the foreign funds for introducing advanced technology which is adaptable to our national conditions by various means. According to previous experience and the present economic situation, we shall, in the future introduce technology and single item equipment. We shall import a fullset of equipment in only a small quantity. It is necessary to conduct medium-sized or small projects which will bring quick results and reduce the number of big projects. It is necessary to closely link the foreign funds, and link technology with the projects in construction and technical transformation of existing factories. It is also essential to concentrate our efforts to make full use of them in order to achieve even more economic results.

Beijing now has over 50 hospitals using and studying radiation and isotopes. Some hospitals can conduct in vitro radio immunosystem function tests, organ visualization and in vitro analysis covering over 20 items.

There are over 150 units in Beijing using radiation and isotope technology.

The peaceful use of nuclear energy in Beijing has received support from government departments and research institutes in providing expertise and material.

RENMIN RABAO NOTES MEDIA ON BOURGEOIS LIBERALISM

HK240746 Beijing RENMIN RABAO in Chinese 21 Jul 82 p 5

[Academic trends report by Wen Yi [5113 0001]: "SHIDAI DI BAOGAO republishes explanatory Notes of This Journal' and Publishes Readers' Articles Arguing With Wenyi Bao"]

[Text] The No. 7, 1982 issue of SHIDAI DI BAOGAO [REPORT OF OUR TIMES] published a number of "readers' letters and articles" under the heading of "Republishing 'Explanatory Notes of This Journal' for Readers To Make Comments" with accompanying editor's note, which reads as follows:

This year is the 40th anniversary of the publication of Comrade Mao Zedong's "Talks of the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art." In order to meet the needs of the broad masses of readers, we began in the February issue this year a special column entitled "Restudying 'Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art'" and published in this column "Explanatory Notes of This Journal." People in the literary and art circles have contributed many excellent articles to this column and the column has been welcomed by the readers.

To our surprise, a signed article carried in the May 1982 issue of WENYI BAO entitled "A Question of Principle Which Is Worthy of Attention," which criticizes the expression "in the 16 years since the 'Great Cultural Revolution'" in the "Explanatory Notes of This Journal" saying that "the expression 16 years is strange and queer" and that "it means the same as to write off the great significance of a turning point of the third plenary session in the history of the party and our country." We are greatly puzzled by the terrible label which WENYI BAO has stuck on us. In order to make clear the real situation to the broad masses of readers, we now have republished the "Explanatory Notes of This Journal" for our readers to make a judgment and to discuss. We hope that our readers will distinguish right from wrong.

Letters and articles published in this issue of SHIDAI DI BAOGAO include: "A Strange Article That Plays With Sophistry" by Xue Liang and Fang Hanying; "We Should Study New Situations and New Problems" by Peng Ze and Yan Yu; "Look Squarely at Problems in a Manner of Seeking Truth From Facts Is a Fine Work Style of the New Period" by Zheng Xianguo and Wen Zheng; and "I Also Contend With WENYI BAO" by Liang Jun. These articles counter-criticize "A Question of Principle Which Is Worthy of Attention" carried in the May 1982 issue of WENYI BAO. In their article, Xue Liang and Wen Ying said: 1) The expression "in the 16 years since the 'Great Cultural Revolution'" is only a concept of time and is not a question of formulation. Similarly, in the "resolution" adopted at the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, although only "in the 32 years since the founding of the country" is mentioned, we cannot regard "32 years" as a formulation but should regard it as a concept of time. If we say that when the "resolution" adopted at the sixth plenary session says "32 years," it has not "written off the great significance of a turning point of the third plenary session," why then do we say that the "Explanatory Notes of This Journal" "has written off the great significance of a turning point of the third plenary session" when it says the "16 years" 2) The "Explanatory Notes of This Journal" says: "Some people" "regard 'Talks' as convention and try to throw it to the wind. In the end, they will not get bogged down in the quagmire of bourgeois liberalization." We should point out that it is an indisputable objective fact that "some people" are trying to throw the "Talks" to the wind in order to bring about liberalization. But the article "principle" purposely tries to expand the scope from "some people" to the entire "literary and art circles" and then extend the meaning of this explanation to that of "denying" the "tremendous achievements" made by the literary and art circles and "confusing" the two historical periods, and so on. This method of "expansion" and "extension" is indeed rare and strange. 3) The article "Principle" does not mention upholding the basic principles of the "Talks." Nor does it mention development on the basis of upholding the basic principles of the "Talks." It merely stresses revision. Let us ask: Can we still uphold the basic principles of the "Talks" if we keep on revising it this way?! On the 40th anniversary of the publication of the "Talks," WENYI BAO went so far as to publish such a strange article as the "Principle." This is indeed "a question of principle which is worthy of attention." We think that WENYI BAO's attitude toward bourgeois liberalization in the past few years is worthy of study. The reason why the strange article "Principle" is published today is of course that it regards itself as a hero who is always correct. But on the other hand, it seems difficult to say that no ulterior motives are harbored. The article by Xue Liang and Fang Hanying finally says: "From information revealed by articles published by WENYI BAO and others, they are mobilizing public opinion and organizing joint attacks on SHIDAI DI BAOGAO. They want to treat it as an ultra-leftist publication and destroy it. Of course, they have been very clever. Nevertheless, it is precisely by their clever deeds that they have exposed themselves, showing that although they support in words the third plenary session, they are in fact trampling on the third plenary session's line of seeking truth from facts, uniting as one and looking forward to the future."

[Text] In their letter, Peng Ze and Yan Yu say: "What is worthy of attention is: whatever criticism is made against bourgeois liberalization will get on the nerves of some people. They will immediately become excited in the same way as bulls do in a Spanish bullfight when they see the red cape. They will then denounce it, saying: 'You are opposing the principle of emancipation of the mind put forth by the third plenary session and negating achievements scored since the third plenary session. To put it bluntly, this is to defend bourgeois liberalization under the disguise of defending the line of the third plenary session." In their article, Zheng Xianguo and Wen Zheng say: "Facts have proved that it conforms with facts and is correct to point out distortion and misrepresentation with the leftist or rightist ideas of the 'Talks' in the 16 years since the 'Great Cultural Revolution,' whereas Comrade Yu Dong's article which was published in WENYI BAO cannot hold its ground and its argument does not hold water. In fact, this is a brutal nonscientific attitude of glossing over one's faults and is also a manifestation of the pernicious influence of a disgusting style of using a big stick and putting political labels on others at random which was quite common during the 'Great Cultural Revolution.'" In talking about whether literary and art workers are still faced with the question of remolding their world outlook and shifting their standpoint, Liang Jun says in his article: "If we literary and art workers still foster prejudice as a result of mistakes in history and stubbornly oppose remolding our world outlook and shifting our standpoint, which is something of utmost importance to a literary and art worker, then we are behaving in a very unbecoming and wrong manner."

BEIJING MEETING VIEWS WORK ON INTELLECTUALS

[Report: "Beijing Municipal CCP Committee Meeting Demands Results From Examination of Work Concerning Intellectuals"]

[Text] A municipal meeting was called yesterday by the Beijing Municipal CCP Committee to examine the work done concerning intellectuals. The meeting stressed that party committees at all levels must continue to overcome the influence of "leftist" ideas, rectify their wrong views toward intellectuals, tightly grasp the current examination of work on intellectuals and grasp it through to the end and with good results.

Beijing's examination of the work on intellectuals began at the end of March and covered a whole area from key points. Yesterday's meeting summed up the results of the examination carried out in the past 3 months. It held that as a result of this examination, most units had basically identified the major problems concerning the work on intellectuals and had begun to solve a number of problems; the intellectuals really felt the party's warmhearted concern for them; and the work on intellectuals had produced good results. However, the work had not developed evenly. At present, the leaders of a few units do not have a correct understanding toward the intellectuals and have not yet eliminated the "leftist" influence in their minds. The meeting specially pointed out: While the work on intellectuals was being carried out recently, a serious incident of hurling insults at and beating up three female teachers occurred in Huairou County. This clearly shows that the "leftist" pernicious influence of the Lin Biao Jiang Wing counterrevolutionary cliques in humiliating and persecuting the intellectuals has not been completely wiped out. Signs of not seriously carrying out the CCP Central Committee's instructions and not respecting the work done by intellectuals still remain in some units.

The meeting asked party committees at all levels to continuously raise their understanding and strengthen their leadership and to do a still better job of the examination work in the next stage. It called on the leaders of various units to personally participate in the work on intellectuals. Formerly, we did not show sufficient concern for the middle-aged intellectuals. Usually, the middle-aged intellectuals are the backbone elements carrying a heavy load of work, but they are low paid. They have to support their parents and children. They shoulder a heavier financial burden than the old and young intellectuals. In future, the focus of work on intellectuals should be shifted to the middle-aged intellectuals.

The meeting demanded that in carrying out the work in the next stage, the spirit of simultaneously conducting examination and solving problems should be upheld continuously and emphasis should be put on solving problems in the following three aspects: trust the intellectuals politically; boldly assign jobs to intellectuals; and show concern for the intellectuals in their lives and work. In the process of the current examination of work on intellectuals, a number of outstanding middle-aged and young cadres who are intellectuals should be admitted into the leading groups.

The meeting reiterated the four standards for examining the work on intellectuals: 1) leading cadres have orientated their thinking more correctly and the "leftist" influence has been further eliminated; 2) shortcomings in the work on intellectuals have been discovered and the major problems in the work on intellectuals have been clarified; 3) problems discovered have already been solved if they can be solved, and problems which cannot be solved at present have been analyzed and studied, and plans and measures have been drawn up for gradually solving them; and 4) the enthusiasm of the intellectuals has been further aroused. These four standards must be upheld so that the examination of work on intellectuals can start well and end well.

Duan Junyi, first secretary of the Beijing Municipal CCP Committee, attended and spoke at the meeting. Chen Xitong, secretary of the Standing Committee of the Beijing Municipal CCP Committee, presided over the meeting. The party group of the animal husbandry bureau and the party committee of Yanshan Petrochemical General Company gave accounts of their experiences at the meeting. More than 500 people, including members of party committees (party groups) of various districts, counties, bureaus and institutes of higher learning and responsible comrades of the group examining the work on intellectuals, were present at the meeting.

HEBEI RIBAO VIEWS POLICY ON INTELLECTUALS

[Commentator's article" "The Policy on Intellectuals Must Be Implemented Properly"]

[Text] When checking up on work concerning intellectuals in our province, the CCP committees at various levels have maintained the spirit of resolving problems while checking up and have adopted an attitude of no shifting, no delaying, no waiting and no relying on others concerning the problems which should be resolved and could be resolved through efforts. A number of long-pending problems have been resolved in a short period of 3 months. In the prefectures of Handan, Tangshan and Cangzhou, achievements have been scored in resolving problems of understanding regarding intellectuals and the problems left over in the implementation of policies, in intellectuals joining the party, in selecting and promoting young and middle-aged professional and technical cadres to the leading bodies of various levels, in resolving the problems of husband and wife living separately, in changing the household registration of households of the intellectuals' family members from agricultural to nonagricultural, in adjusting the professions of those who are misemployed, in improving housing conditions and in raising standards of living. Some major responsible comrades from the prefectural, municipal and county party committees have listened to the reports by persons and held forums of intellectuals. They paid home visits to the intellectuals and had private talks so as to hear advice, to keep abreast of the situation and to resolve problems. The vast majority of intellectuals were thus educated. They said with delight: The leaders helped us to overcome practical difficulties. We must reward the concern of the party and people with our own practical actions.

Nevertheless, we must see that the development of checking up is uneven. Leading comrades of certain areas and units have not paid sufficient attention to it and have not done conscientious work. Some of them neither know nor understand the party's policy on intellectuals. They also have a poor understanding of the great significance of checking up on work concerning intellectuals. Filled with "leftist" ideology, they hold a prejudice against intellectuals. They do not recognize that the vast majority of intellectuals have become part of the working class and a reliable force in building our country. Some harbor the wrong idea that too much has been done in implementing the policies on intellectuals and there is no need to check up. In order to fulfill the assignemnt, they just do perfunctory work. A handful of leading comrades even set the work on checking up on work concerning intellectuals against other work. They are unskilled in centering work on the central task, just like playing the piano with 10 fingers. There are some words on their work reports, such as a certain secretary, director or a bureau chief taking the lead (command), and a specific leading group is established to be in charge of the work of checking up. It is known, however, that in the past 3 months some leading persons have not attended any forum on intellectuals or listened directly to reports. Also, the leading group seldom holds meetings to earnestly discuss how to do this work well. Some intellectuals said that our leaders only take command, but do not go to the battlefield. Hence, they have no time to listen to reports. Some problems which could have been solved early are not on the leaders' agenda nor listed for solving. It is a common phenomenon that there are discussions but no decisions, and there are decisions but no execution of those decisions. Some problems that could be solved in a few days are delayed for several months, or even several years. There was an assistant engineer in a factory, who had a family of 5 and could not find a place to live. On approval of the leading comrades of his factory, his family was permitted to dwell temporarily in the factory guest house. Not shortly thereafter, the administrative office of the factory fined him 50 cents a day for occupying a public house without permission. From October 1975 to November 1977, the total penalty was 289.50 yuan (a few months were omitted). In the last 10 days of April this year, while at this factory, the provincial checking group clearly pointed out that it was unreasonable on the part of the factory authorities and this problem must be resolved soon. It was also demanded that the result must be reported to the provincial authority. Nevertheless, the problem has not yet been resolved by the factory leaders.

In view of the situation and existing problems in checking up on work concerning intellectuals in our province, the organization department of the provincial CCP committee recently issued a "Notice on Doing Well From Start to Finish the Work of Checking Up on Work Concerning Intellectuals." It is hoped that all units of various areas, on the basis of checking up on work concerning intellectuals in the preceding stage, will earnestly sum up and examine in accordance with the demands set in the "notice" issued by the organization department of the provincial CCP committee. We must make up for missed lessons in fields where we do not meet the demands, and no perfunctory work is permissible. It is necessary to do well from start to finish the checking up on work concerning intellectuals and properly implement the party's policy on intellectuals. Time must be subordinate to quality. As for those problems which should and can be resolved, the leaders must personally assume responsibility and take effective measures to resolve them within a definite time limit. As for those problems which cannot be solved at the moment, it is necessary to analyze and conduct a study of each specific case, find out the methods for solving them and vigorously create conditions so as to solve them as soon as possible. Through checking up on work concerning intellectuals, the cadres will be educated and their ideological level on policy will be upgraded. Intellectuals will feel the concern shown by the party organizations. Whether or not the enthusiasm of intellectuals has been fully aroused and whether or not their talent and ability have been brought into full play to make achievements should be adopted as an important criterion for measuring our work.

NEI MONGGOL COMMENTARY ON PARTY CONSOLIDATION

SK291052 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "Consolidation of Grassroots Party Organizations Is an Important Task for Party Committees at All Levels"]

[Text] Central leading comrades recently explicitly pointed out that consolidating the party's contingent and strengthening and improving party leadership are the basic guarantees for upholding the socialist road and realizing the four modernizations. Party committees at all levels, particularly, principal leading comrades, should have an adequate understanding of this. The party's basic organizations are the cells of the party's organs and the foundation of the party. Only when these organizations are successfully consolidated can there be a reliable guarantee for the party's line, principles and policies. Therefore, successfully consolidating grassroots party organizations and continuously upgrading the contingents of party members have become a pressing task for all party organizations. The major task for consolidation is to successfully strengthen and build the leading bodies of grassroots party committees, general branches and branches and correct their lax, weak work style. Therefore, leading-body consolidation is the key to the successful consolidation of grassroots party organizations. Any unit, no matter what methods it adopts, should exert great efforts to win a victory in consolidation. Consolidation in pastoral and rural areas should be done in close coordination with the work of summing up and improving production responsibility systems.

The consolidation of the grassroots party organizations of industrial, financial and commercial enterprises is an important component of comprehensive enterprise consolidation. When carrying out enterprise consolidation, we should attach importance to the consolidation of grassroots party organizations. Organizations with many and serious problems on other fronts should also be consolidated in line with the guidelines of related central documents.

In consolidating grassroots party organizations we should not launch mass movements or raise a hue and cry. However, we should earnestly follow the mass line, receive the masses' supervision and heed their opinions and criticism for party organizations and party members. We should persist in the principle of emphasizing ideological consolidation aimed at education and improvement. Meanwhile, we should carry out necessary organizational consolidation. We should permeate consolidation with the education of party members on party discipline, work style and spirit. In organizational consolidation, measures should be taken against the three categories of people and those who, politically, seriously undermine the guiding principles for the inner party political life and violate law discipline in economic and other fields.

Consolidation is not a task for certain units. It is an important issue concerning the party's building up power and realizing the grand goal of socialist modernization. Party committees at all levels should strengthen leadership and conduct conscientious investigations and study. They should classify grassroots party organizations and give them guidance accordingly and inspect the consolidation as it is carried out so that grassroots party organizations and party members throughout the region will perform their role as fighting bastions and vanguards even better in the four modernizations drive.

In referring to the reason why our army has been invincible and developing and growing in strength, Comrade (Zhang Chunde) said: The fundamental reason for this is that our army has all along adhered to Comrade Mao Zedong's idea on building the People's Army and used this idea to guide the masses over a long period of time to enable our army to become a proletarian, modern People's Army.

QINGHAI MEETING HELD ON ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

SK091035 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 8 Jul 82

[Text] The provincial academy of social sciences recently held a discussion meeting on local economic development in Qinghai Province to determine the strategic goal for economic development to achieve the best economic results and the proper rate of speed in this field. During the discussion, some cadres held that the strategy for developing the local economy of Qinghai Province should be focused on the salt chemical industry and nonferrous-metal-smelting industries with energy development as the mainstay, while not neglecting agriculture and animal husbandry. On this basis, we must develop animal product processing and light and textile industries.

Some comrades held that development of our province's woolen textile industry must also be based on the province's resources to develop the light and textile industries. To achieve this, we must concentrate our efforts on agricultural and livestock production. We must seek truth from facts and comprehensively tackle problems in many ways in the course of developing agricultural and animal husbandry production.

Some comrades suggested that efforts be made to foster the ideology of developing agriculture in line with the ecosystem. At present, we must carry out agriculture and animal husbandry on the premise that they are within the possibility of the ecosystem.

Some comrades held that the prospects for industrial development are affected by the adaptability and competitiveness of products on the markets. However, we must not neglect the effect the circulation of commodities has on production. Our province's market is very narrow and small. In developing industry, we must have a firm foothold in the province and keep in view the whole country and the world. We must strengthen commercial and foreign trade work and bring into play the role of economic levers such as credit and tax revenue to promote work in this field. During the meeting, some comrades also offered very good suggestions to help resolve the issues of ecology, talented persons, education and [words indistinct].

SHAANXI GOVERNOR ON 10 MAIN TASKS OF PROVINCE

[Report: "Governor Yu Mingtao, Speaking at Provincial CCP Committee Party School, Discusses 10 Main Tasks the Province Has Concentrated on This Year"]

[Text] Yu Migntao, secretary of provincial CCP committee and provincial governor, speaking at the commencement ceremony of the ninth training class of provincial CCP committee party school for leading cadres, discussed 10 main tasks the province had concentrated on while building socialist spiritual and material civilization this year. These 10 main tasks are:

1. We have profoundly carried out the struggle to deal blows at severe criminal activities in the economic field. By the end of last May, the province had investigated and handled more than 2,000 cases of smuggling, illegal trade, corruption, bribery and so forth. Through this struggle, we have educated cadres and the masses. The work is now developing in depth.

2. We have inspected the results of changing the unhealthy trends involved in the "three recruitments, three changes and one housing problem." About 4,000 cadres have been exposed in the drive, with more than 500 being cadres above the county level. We have exerted major efforts to deal with 45 typical cases.

3. We have extensively carried out the activities of the "five stresses and four beauties" and the "courtesy and civility" drive and have achieved marked results in solving the problems of dirt, chaos and low efficiency.

4. Social order has been greatly improved.

5. We have readjusted and consolidated leading bodies of various departments at prefectural, municipal and provincial levels and have basically solved the problems of various leading bodies, such as half-hearted efforts, inefficiency and impurity. We have taken a further step in making leading bodies revolutionized, younger, more educated and professional and have made ideological and organizational preparations for the reform of government organs.

6. We have conscientiously implemented the spirit of related documents issued by the CCP Central Committee and provincial CCP committee and summed up experiences in improving and stabilizing the production responsibility system in agriculture. We have reaped a good harvest of summer crops.

7. Disaster-affected areas have expeditiously restored their production and people are living a stable life.

8. We have implemented the 10 guiding principles for economic construction. During the first half of the year, industrial production steadily increased, heavy industry increased again more rapidly and light and textile industry further developed.

9. We have resolutely implemented the open-door policy and pursued the practice of enlivening the domestic economy. We have actively carried out economic activities with foreign countries and economic and technical cooperation with other provinces and municipalities. This year our province has established contacts with more than 150 companies from Japan, the United States, Germany and Belgium, as well as Hong Kong and Macao, to discuss a number of projects.

10. We have implemented the guiding principle of relying mainly on planned economy while making market regulation subsidiary. Under the prerequisite of enlivening the economy, we strengthened control over market. During the first half of the year, the turnover of social commodities from retail trade increased by 5.1 percent over same period last year. The situation of revenue is also better than last year.

SHAANXI BUREAU CONDUCTS ANTICORRUPTION EDUCATION

HK260750 Xian Shaanxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 0500 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] The party group of the Shaanxi Provincial Civil Affairs Bureau conducted anti-corruption education among party members and cadres by citing the case of (Gu Yuan), the former vice chairman and secretary general of the Shaanxi Returned Overseas Chinese Federation who was expelled from the party and dismissed from his post because he yearned for capitalism and illicitly sent his daughter to Hong Kong, in order to strengthen the party member's communist ideals and convictions.

(Gu Yuan) is a veteran party member and cadre who has been a party member for more than 40 years. However, since he has slackened his efforts to remold his ideology for a long time, he has degenerated and departed from the moral character of a party member. The exposure of his mistakes has caused great repercussions among party members and cadres of the provincial civil affairs bureau. After (Gu Yuan) was expelled from the party, the party group of the provincial civil affairs bureau seized this negative example to conduct timely anticorruption education among party members and cadres. The bureau party group cautioned them to conduct discussions on "why has (Gu Yuan) degenerated?" and "what should we learn from the example of (Gu Yuan)?" Many cadres and party members said: The mistakes committed by (Gu Yuan) had once again sounded the alarm for us. Capitalist peaceful evolution is not alarmist talk, but is a living reality. It is undeniable that a small number of people in our ranks have lost their national integrity because they are intoxicated with capitalism; they have caused great damages to the cause of the party. All party members must learn a lesson from (Gu Yuan's) mistake, strengthen their efforts to remold their world outlook and uphold the integrity of a revolutionary. In order to conduct anticorruption education in depth and achieve good results, the party group members of the provincial civil affairs bureau went to the party branches and party groups of government organs to explain the necessity, urgency and protracted nature of conducting anticorruption education to the broad ranks of party members, and summed up the profound lesson learned from (Gu Yuan)'s mistake. They demanded that all party members, in particular members of party groups, foster communist ideas and fight all their lives in the struggle for communism. They must be honest to the party, abide by the law and must not use their authority to seek personal gain. The party group of the civil affairs bureau also decided to take anticorruption education as an important item of ideological and political work and make unremitting efforts to wage the struggle against corruption to the end.

SHAANXI LEADER ENCOURAGES PEASANTS TO BECOME RICH

[Excerpts] Provincial CCP Committee Secretary and Vice Governor Jiang Yi said to prefectural, county and district leaders attending a Xianyang prefectural meeting on rural diversification on 25 July: (Wang Chengen), a peasant of No 5 production team of (Chayang) brigade of (Taiping) Commune in Jingyang County, has become rich through hard work raising chickens and has built a reasonably well-off home. We vigorously support this type of becoming rich through hard work. We must clearly explain to the masses that in leading them to pursue socialism we want to make their life better and better so they may advance toward affluence. For the peasants to become rich through their own hard work is in complete accord with party policies. This will not be changed. We must vigorously support this type of getting rich through labor.

There are 10 people in the household of party member (Wang Chengen), including 6 laborers. In the first half of this year the family hatched 120,000 chicks, raised over 560, and made an income of 8,350 yuan.

Everyone started talking about this when the drive against serious economic crime was launched. They were afraid that, as in the past, he would be regarded as a black pigtail and be cut off. Some people became suspicious about his large income, and held that there should be limits on individual affluence.

Jiang Yi made his speech in light of these circumstances, to clarify misunderstandings.

XINJIANG'S WANG ENMAO ON WATER CONSERVATION

HK110604 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 10 Jul 82

[Summary] A Xinjiang regional conference on water conservation for animal husbandry was recently held in Changji. The meeting discussed how to improve this work, so as to promote a sustained and steady development in Xinjiang animal husbandry. The 150 participants exchanged experiences and mapped out plans and measures. Leading comrades of the region Wang Enmao, Tomur Dawamat, Li Jiayu, and Simayi Yashengnuofu attended the meeting.

Comrade Wang Enmao made a speech. He said: "Xinjiang has made great progress in animal husbandry since liberation. The number of livestock has increased by 170 percent. However, animal husbandry development has been slow compared with the growth of industry and agriculture. The main reason is that our resistance against natural disasters is poor. Over 2 million head of stock are lost every winter and spring. Summing up the experiences of many years, in order to achieve a sustained and steady growth in animal husbandry we must, in addition to relying on policies and on science, grasp a whole series of measures for increasing production; and grasping the construction of water conservation for animal husbandry is a key measure. If there is water, there is grass; if there is no water, there is no grass. By getting a good grasp of water conservation in the pastoral regions, we can improve the existing pasture land and increase its use on the one hand, and expand the fodder production bases to meet the needs of developing animal husbandry on the other."

Comrade Wang Enmao stressed: "We must act in light of local conditions and build more medium and small water conservation projects, with the accent on small ones. Reservoirs, ponds, wells, or water channels should be built, according to local conditions. The building of water conservation projects in the pastoral areas should be integrated with the construction of small hydroelectric stations, and the construction of these stations in the pastoral areas should be integrated with developing the processing of animal products."

The participants in the meeting inspected a water channel built in a mountainous part of Manasi County.

HK150657 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 14 Jul 82

[Summary] From the middle of April to the end of June, the Xinjiang Autonomous Region seriously examined its work on intellectuals, vigorously publicized the party's policy on intellectuals and practically solved some problems in this work. All this has aroused the enthusiasm of intellectuals.

The regional CCP committee has attached great importance to the work on intellectuals. From last March, its standing committee has held meetings, made arrangements and issued circular to all localities in the region. Leading comrades Wang Enmao, Li Jiayu, Bai Chengming and Ren Gehai have taken part in some forums of medium- and high-level intellectuals.

According to incomplete figures, more than 27,000 intellectuals have taken part in such forums held in the region. Cadres at various levels have paid visits to nearly 4,000 families of intellectuals and have had heart-to-heart talks with more than 6,700 intellectuals.

In examining the work on intellectuals, party organizations at all levels have consistenly insisted on publicizing the party's policy towards intellectuals. They have also stuck to the work style of checking up on problems and solving them at once. As a result, the party's policy has further struck root in the hearts of the people. Leading cadres at all levels and the masses have deepened their understanding on the status and role of intellectuals in the new period. They have tightened the relationships and strengthened unity with intellectuals. On their part, many intellectuals have further felt the warmth of the party and have become more enthusiastic in their work. At the forums and talks, quite a few of them were moved and said tearfully; our knowledge has been granted by the party and the people. With this knowledge, we must do our bit for the party and the people. And we must work contentedly in the border areas and serve the people of all nationalities for all our lives.

CHUNG YANG PAO ON TRADE TALKS WITH JAPAN

[Editorial: "Our View on the Sino-Japanese Trade Talks"]

[Text] A delegation led by former Japanese Minister of International Trade and Industry Masumi Esaki will arrive in our country today to hold talks on economic and trade relations and other relevant issues between China and Japan. In recent years, our country has sustained huge deficits in trading with Japan. Our side has earnestly called for high-level negotiations between the two sides to solve the problem of the serious trade imbalance. The delegations visit shows that the Japanese side is sincerely trying to solve problems and it deserves attention. Masumi Esaki is very influential in Japan's political circles, and many of the members of the delegation have served as ministers and enjoy high prestige. The delegation is coming to China after its visit to Southeast Asia despite the CCP's interference. We extend our special greetings to the delegation.

To reduce our trade deficit with Japan, our government announced a ban on the imports of some Japanese consumer goods in February. Some of Japan's radicals have made threats. Fortunately, there are still many farsighted and fair-minded statesmen in Japan who have served as mediators and prevented the dispute from getting out of hand. On the matter of restricting imports of Japanese consumer goods, our government is taking a firm stand. It is hoped that the Japanese side will show sincerity, dispatch representatives to negotiate with us to jointly find ways to reduce the huge trade deficits and not try to dodge the issues and merely go through the motion of talks. Our people fully support our government's measures and hope for an early solution to this problem. The people's organizations of the two countries have also been constantly in touch to unofficially exchange views and pave the way for a high-level formal meeting.

To deal with international trade frictions, the Japanese Government has established an "investigation committee on international economic planning" within the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, with Esaki, who enjoys high prestige in Japan's industrial and economic circles, as its head. Most of the committee members are minister-level Diet members with financial and economic experience. After its establishment, the committee formed a delegation headed by Esaki, which visited America and Europe in February and March of this year and held talks with various countries. After the delegation's return to Japan, it announced measures for improvement based on the results of the talks. The third region visited by the delegation was Southeast Asia, and the delegation is to visit our country on its way home from its third trip.

With regard to the Esaki delegation's visit to our country, we would like, in addition to expressing our welcome, to present our views and hopes as a reference for representatives of both countries and as the goals for our industrial and trade circles to pursue from now on.

Among the delegation's nine members, Esaki has served as minister many times, six have been ministers and two have been vice ministers and held important positions in the Liberal-Democratic Party. It is quite a strong lineup and enough to show the importance attached to the solution of the trade and deficit problems by the Japanese side. Because of the time limit of the talks however, decisions only on principle can probably be made. Therefore, we hope that the delegation will listen carefully to our side's opinions, collect sufficient materials and discuss and decide how to hold future talks to work out concrete measures and details.

The ban our country has placed on Japanese-made imports of consumer goods is a measure we had no choice in taking. If concrete solutions can be decided upon and put into effect through talks, then our side should be able to lift the ban step-by-step. Naturally, this still depends on the actions of the Japanese side. To even out the trade imbalance, Japan should -- to the extent possible -- make reasonable concessions on importing agricultural products from us and as an indication of real sincerity, set up factories in Taiwan and sell their products to Japan on joint investment.

We deeply understand that our trade deficit with Japan is mainly caused by the gaps between the two countries' economic structures and technical levels. To eliminate or reduce the imbalance, in addition to sincerity and cooperation on the part of Japan, it is more important for us to make long and hard efforts, particularly, the industrial and trade circles, which must do their part and fulfill their responsibilities. Japan is more developed economically than we are. Its product quality and scientific and technical standards are better than ours. To compete in Japanese markets, we must do a great deal of work in improving the quality of our industrial products and developing new products. We must gain a deep understanding of the habits of Japanese consumers, Japan's marketing channels, effective sales tactics and so forth. We should actively study and not be static and inflexible.

International trade depends totally on competition. It either goes forward or backward and is most realistic. Government assistance can only produce temporary results. In the long run, we must rely on our own strength. The orientation of our country's future economic construction is to step up the development of technology and capital-intensive industries. The government has already put forward encouragement measures. We hope that the businessmen will grasp the opportunities and expand investment so that our economic structure can be quickly readjusted and our export product range can be changed step-by-step. Then, the problem of a trade imbalance with Japan will be solved naturally and smoothly.

KYODO INTERVIEWS KUOMINTANG SECRETARY GENERAL

OW221157 Tokyo KYODO in English 1133 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Test] Taipei, July 22, KYODO -- The Taiwanese Government has no intention of responding seriously to a peaceful reunification plan proposed by the Chinese Communist Party, Kuomintang Secretary General Chiang Yen-shih said Thursday.

Speaking in an exclusive inverview with KYODO NEWS SERVICE here Thursday, Chiang said the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party of China) had no interest in the Communist Party's plan as long as the Communist Party adheres to its Marxist-Leninist ideology. A KYODO correspondent is in Taipei in connection with a visit by a ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) trade mission headed by Masumi Esaki, former minister of international trade and industry.

Chiang stressed that the issue of reunification was not only a key problem for political parties like the Chinese Communist Party and Kuomintang but also for the 1 billion mainland Chinese and 18 million Taiwanese. He expressed his belief that bilateral relations between Japan's ruling LDP and Kuomintang would be further strengthened as a result of the LDP trade mission's current visit to Taiwan.

The Taiwanese Goverment has been continuing its efforst for the promotion of friendly relatins with Japan, even though the two governments currently have no diplomatic relations, Chiang said.

As for the question of a successor to President Chiang Ching-kuo, the secretary general said that a national assembly would be held in 1984 to pick his successor; but it is still not clear who will run for election.

In reply to a question about the health of Chiang, the secretary general said he was in good condition although for a short while he had suffered from eye complaints. He added that Chiang is currently performing his routine work as chief administrator and head of state.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Chu Fu-sung told Japanese correspondents covering the esaki visit that U.S.-Taiwan relations would be promoted with the appointment of George Shultz as new secretary of state.

Bilateral relations between Washington and Taipei are expected to improve as Shultz is believed to be well versed in Taiwanese affairs and has showed a deep understanding of the basic policy of the Taiwanese Government, Chu added.

Touching on the reunification plan proposed by the Chinese Communist Party, Chu stressed that the Taiwan Government would maintain its policy of refraining from making any compromise toward the Beijing government.

WEN WEI PO VIEWS JAPANESE TEXTBOOKS 'ERRORS'

HK300840 Hong Kong WEN WEI PO in Chinese 30 Jul 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Errors in Japanese Textbooks Must Be Corrected"]

[Text] China has, through diplomatic channels, seriously demanded that Japan correct the errors relating to the history of Japanese militarist aggression against China which was examined and approved by the Ministry of Education.

A few Japanese militarists on the Japanese side have gone so far as to nonsensically say that China's opposition to Japanese distortion and prettification of the history of Japanese militarist aggression against China constitutes an "interference in Japan's internal affairs." They also said plausibly that, in recounting the history of the 7 July incident, the substitution of "attack" for "aggression" in the textbooks was aimed at "refraining from hurting Japanese national feelings"; they even went so far as to attribute the cause of the Nanjing wholesale massacre to the following: "As a result of the fierce resistance put up by Chinese soldiers, the Japanese troops suffered very heavy losses. Filled with indignation the Japanese troops killed many Chinese soldiers and civilians."

This is an argument which completely distorted history. Xiao Xiangqian, department head of the Chinese Foreign Ministry, has lodged a protest, stating China's refusal to accept this argument.

The barbarous aggression launched by the Japanese militarists against China brought great suffering to the Chinese people. At the same time, it also subjected a large number of Japanese people to losses with many of them serving as cannonfodder. This phase of history is still deeply engraved on the minds of the Chinese people and the people of the world. No one can erase this phase of history by whatever means he may employ. Only by paying attention to and drawing lessons from this phase of history and preventing militarism from staging a comback will it be possible for the peoples of China and Japan to avoid the calamity of an aggressive war. Is this only a problem of Japan's "internal affairs"? Is this not a serious problem of safeguarding world peace and preventing the repetition of historical tragedy?

If the militarists direct their demagogic propaganda at the youths in an attempt to ideologically form a public opinion, deceive the youths into serving as cannonfodder for the militarists in the future and endanger world peace, they should not forbid other countries to lodge protests and make criticism under the cover of "internal affairs." If we take a laissez-faire attitude toward the militarists' prettification of aggressive acts, this will certainly result in obscuring the demarcation line between evil and justice, and the consequence will be unimaginable.

The West German Government has correctly reflected in the textbooks the atrocity of the Nazi war in order to conduct education among the second generation and prevent the evil spirit of the war monster from lingering. Why does Japan always use mild and roundabout language in the textbooks and why did it recently intensify the prettification of the atrocity of aggression?

Can it be that after the transition of Japan from an economic power to a political power, some people were so blinded by their lust for gain that they attempted to embark on the beaten track of a military power, and even of the militarists? Without clarifying this problem, it will be impossible for the Asian people to lower their guard. The Japanese pronouncements of hoping for friendly coexistence with various countries will also be made blandishments.

China has solemnly pointed out that Japan's acts of distortion in the textbooks will certainly undermine Sino-Japanese friendship. This constitutes a serious and responsible attitude toward history and the cause of peace and serves as a serious warning to people who engage in Japanese militarism.

At the same time this also shows China's sense of principle; China signed the treaty of peace and friendship with Japna under one precondition, that is, as stated in the Sino-Japanese joint communique, that Japan "expresses profound self-criticism" for the war of aggression against China and that the Japanese side pays attention to this phase of history and subjects it to self-criticism and educates future generations to draw lessons from this so that both China and Japan can have a solid foundation to maintain friendly relations from one generation to another. The heart of the matter that determines whether China and Japan will get along lies here.

If some people on the Japanese side spread militarist ideas to the second generation, how can China and Japan remain friendly? Why haven't the people who engage in sophistry conscientiously think about it?

In its censure, Beijing demanded that the errors in the Japanese textbooks be corrected.

Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki is worried that the textbook issue might affect his visit to China in September. Since he has already noted the seriousness of the problem, this is well and good. It is necessary for him to promptly take into serious consideration the way the Japanese Ministry of Education handled the matter. He should not take a heedless attitude toward it.

HSIN WAN PAO EDITOR 'DETAINED' IN BEIJING

HK300131 Hong Kong HONG KONG STANDARD in English 30 Jul 82 p 12

[Article by Terry Cheng: "Left-Wing Editor Luo May Face Spy Charge"]

[Text] In the wake of tense Sino-American relations, the editor-in-chief of a local leftwing newspaper and a leading member of the local communist hierarchy has been summoned back to Beijing and detained for his alleged dealing with Americans.

The staff of the NEW EVENING POST [HSIN WAN PAO] have been informally told that Luo Cheng-xun, aged over 60, who headed the newspaper since it started in 1950, will not return to Hong Kong to resume his duties.

Sources told the STANDARD yesterday that it was almost certain that the accusation against Mr Luo, also known as Luo Fu, is that he leaked "state secrets" to the United States. The charge is very serious and it could call for a very heavy punishment. However, it is not immediately known what Mr Luo is to face.

Since he was summoned back to Beijing in early May, there have been persistent rumors that he is in trouble.

There are two versions of how Mr Luo leaked "state secrets" to the Americans. One version said it was done through his contacts in the United States. Another version is that it was through a U.S. agent, posing as an art collector, who came to Hong Kong earlier this year. However, the two versions could not be confirmed by China's official representation here. Associates and friends of Mr Luo said they did not believe he would have leaked state secrets.

Staff members of the NEW EVENING POST contacted yesterday were reluctant to comment. They said they knew very little about the matter.

The evening newspaper is affiliated with the prestigious TA KUNG PAO, whose publisher Fei Yi-ming is a member of China's National People's Congress.

The NEW EVENING POST under Mr Luo, who also held a senior editorial post on TA KUNG PAO, has adopted a relatively liberal approach towards China news and ideological matters in the past few years.

Mr Luo, who himself wrote commentaries, has been widely respected for this liberal approach by local leftwing and non-leftwing intellectuals and men of letters.

He used to be a member of the Chinese Communist Party's regional committee for Hong Kong, and was said to be in charge of united front work in literary circles.

Mr Luo was in frequent contact with pro-Nationalist elements in Hong Kong. On one occasion, he met Pok Shau-fu, a Hong Kong-based legislator of Taiwan, soon after Beijing announced its nine-point peace overture to Taipei. However, sources said Mr Luo's case had nothing to do with his liberal approach or his united front work.

Sino-American relations have become very tense since the Reagan administration insisted on continued arms sales to Taiwan. Any sensitive matter that cropped up at this time would be taken very seriously, sources said.

China has its own criteria of state secrets. Many items of information not classified as secrets in the Western countries are so treated in China.

Mr Luo's case has already started a change of personnel at the NEW EVENING POST, and it is believed that the change is connected with the power struggle of cliques among leftwing circles.

Mr Luo was summoned to Beijing early in May after he met a relative in Guangzhou. Not until recently were his family and the NEW EVENING POST informed of the reason for his prolonged stay in Beijing. Mr Luo had planned to visit the United States on an official invitation after his Guangzhou trip. The U.S. consulate in Hong Kong was still contacting the NEW EVENING POST early this month about his visit. Mr Luo's family is still in Hong Kong.

PRC REITERATES ARMS CONTROL FORMULA AT GENEVA

OW051938 Beijing XINHUA in English 1911 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] Geneva, August 5 (XINHUA) -- The two superpowers should undertake the responsibility for the prevention of an arms race in outer space, said Tian Jin, head of the Chinese delegation, at the summer session of the Committee on Disarmament today. The session resumed here on August 3. The 40-nation U.N. Disarmament Committee will review the draft program on disarmament.

The two superpowers are sparing no expenses in the development of military technology used in outer space, and the arms race between them is steadily extending to the outer space, a fact that "is causing increasing concern among the world community," Tian Jin said.

He stressed: "People should be vigilant against the practice in some quarters of paying lip service to the peaceful use of outer space while actually stepping up the development of various types of weapons used in outer space."

"China firmly advocates that outer space be used for peaceful purposes and for the good of all mankind and strongly opposes arms race in outer space which endangers peace and security. Consequently, it stands for the prohibition of all outer space weapons, including anti-satellite weapons," Tian Jin declared. He said negotiations of a comprehensive treaty on the prohibition of outer space weapons should be conducted. Referring to the just ended second special session on disarmament, Tian Jin pointed out that the basic reason for the failure of the session is that "the two superpowers with the largest arsenals lacked the will to carry out disarmament and used various methods and pretexts to shirk their special responsibility for disarmament."

He reaffirmed China's proposal concerning disarmament, saying that "the Soviet Union and the United States should cease all nuclear tests, stop the qualitative improvement and manufacture of any kind of nuclear weapons and reduce by 50 percent all types of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery. Thereafter, all nuclear states should cease all nuclear tests, stop the qualitative improvement and manufacture of nuclear weapons and reduce their respective nuclear arsenals according to agreed proportion and procedure."

"The key to disarmament today lies in the cessation of the testing, qualitative improvement and manufacturing of nuclear weapons and their reduction by the two states with the largest nuclear arsenals, which measures we could call, for the purpose of abbreviation, three cessations and one reduction."

He declared: "After the two superpowers have carried out the three cessations and one reduction and narrowed the gap between themselves and the other nuclear states, China will be ready to join all other nuclear states in assuming the obligation of the cessation of the testing, qualitative improvement and manufacturing of nuclear weapons and in a reduction leading ultimately to the total elimination of nuclear weapons." He also expounded China's principled stand on the prohibition of chemical weapons, security assurances for the non-nuclear states, and the comprehensive program of disarmament.

BAN YUE TAN ON INTERNATIONAL COMMUNIST MOVEMENT

HK090319 Beijing BAN YUE TAN in Chinese No 14, 25 Jul 82 pp 50, 51

[Article by BAN YUE TAN international editorial office: "How To Interpret the Four Principles Governing Relations Between One Party and Another"]

[Text] Delegations of the Italian Communist Party [PCI], the Communist Party of Spain [PCE], the Communist Party of Greece [KKE], the French Communist Party [PCF] and the Communist Party of the Netherlands [CPN] from West Europe have visited China one after another since 1980. They have held talks with CPC leaders. Delegations of the CPC have paid return visits or attended their congresses. As a result of common efforts, our party has resumed suspended relations with some communist parties in West Europe and has also developed them under the new historical conditions. This is an important event in the international communist movement and it is an encouraging change for our party in its relations with West European communist parties.

Not long ago, in his interview with Henk Hoekstra, chairman of the CPN, Chairman Hu Yaobang reiterated that the CPC is willing to develop relations with other parties on the basis of the principles of independence, equality, mutual respect and noninterference in each other's internal affairs. It is precisely by adhering to the four principles set forth by Comrade Hu Yaobang that our party has resumed and developed the relations with some parties in West Europe.

How should we interpret the four principles governing relations between one party and another? We should say that these four principles are unified and inseparable. Our party always holds that in the international communist movement, the relations between one party and another should be based on equal and cooperative relations, not on patriarchal relations in which one party controls another and puts it in a subordinate position. The patriarchal party method will only bring great suffering to the international communist movement and do more harm than good. We, the CPC, have had intimate experience in the struggle against the baton of a patriarchal party. All nations and parties, large and small, are equal. Experience has proven that mutual trust can only be established on the basis of equal treatment.

Only by integrating Marxism-Leninism with the specific practice of a country can a communist party find a correct way. Only the Marxist-Leninists, communists and the people of a country can judge whether a country's road of revolution is correct or not. This is proved through their revolutionary practice. If a party and people of a country have made mistakes in revolution, they should correct them themselves, and other parties should not do that on their behalf. Take our party, for example. Having summed up the successful experiences and learned the unsuccessful lessons, it integrated Marxism-Leninism with the specific practice of the Chinese revolution, took the road of surrounding the cities with the rural areas and waged protracted armed struggle and, with the addition of close coordination of various forms of struggle in all aspects, finally gained victory in revolution throughout the country. China did not follow a foreign model to establish its proletarian regime. Speaking of the significance of this, we should not urge other countries to follow China's example to achieve victory in revolution.

Obviously, the key to success in a national revolution lies in the struggle of the party and people, as well as the correct party line of a country, not the line and policy of another party.

During his interview with a Greek reporter, Comrade Hu Yaobang pointed out: "The tendency to demand independence and equality in the international communist movement can be traced back to the 1940's.

RENMIN RIBAO ON U.S., SOVIET MILITARY SATELLITES

HK120914 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 12 Aug 82 p 7

[Article by Yang Xiumin [2799 4423 2404]: "The Development of U.S. and Soviet Military Satellites"]

[Text] Since the first artificial satellite was launched in 1957, the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union, proceeding from the requirements of their global strategy, have competed with each other in developing military satellites, thus engaging in a fierce arms race in outer space. Over 70 percent of the satellites they have launched are for military purposes.

At present the military space systems of the United States and the Soviet Union include photographic and electronic reconnaisance, missile early warning, ocean monitoring, communications, navigational guidance, weather and ground survey satellites. All these satellites are now in use and are also being continually improved and perfected. For example, the U.S. missile early warning system can determine within 6 minutes of a missile launch whether it is offensive and what its target is in the United States, thus providing an early warning. The Soviet photographic reconnaisance satellites can take very high resolution photographs. There is more than one such satellite at work at all times, and they can cover the whole globe for most of the year. The two superpowers are also developing antisatellite systems that can destroy enemy satellites. The Soviet Union is 10 years ahead of the United States in this field, and has already tested working interceptor satellites and laser and particle concentration weapons.

Apart from their possession of corresponding military systems, there are differences between the United States and Soviet Union in the development of military space technology. The Soviet Union is very active in its space activities. In the past 10 and more years Soviet satellite launchings have been 2.5 times more numerous than those of the United States. In addition, the Soviet Union has attached extremely great importance to the development of manned flight technology. It is also developing large transport vehicles with a payload six to seven times greater than that of U.S. spaceships, with the aim of putting large, permanent and manned space stations into orbit. Their crews will be able to select their targets in space and command and control defensive and offensive space weapons.

The space shuttle on which the United States has exerted great efforts in recent years has military potentials that cannot be overlooked. It is a new type of multipurpose vehicle, cheaper and more reliable than a one-shot carrier rocket. It can launch all kinds of military satellites, repair and recover U.S. satellites in orbit, capture or destroy enemy satellites, be formed into a large space structure, act as a launching platform for laser and other military weapons, carry out manned reconnaisance and so on. When necessary it can also act as a military command center. The repeated successful test flights on this spacecraft have enabled the United States to gain more results from less launchings compared with the Soviet Union and to continue to maintain its superiority in manned flight technology. Putting this spaceship to use is bound to speed up the militarization of space and make the space rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union ever fiercer.

Both superpowers have spent huge sums on and paid tremendous prices in developing their military satellite systems. During fiscal year 1981, the space budget of NASA was about $4.997 billion while that of the U.S. Defense Department was about $4.789 billion. In fiscal year 1982 these figures have been respectively $5.617 billion and $5.916 billion. It is said that the Soviet Union's annual space budget exceeds that of the United States.

Right from the start, military satellites have been used by the Soviet Union and the United States to serve their strategic and tactical aim of gaining world hegemony.

AFP: PRC TO HOST 1983 WORLD TOURISM CONFERENCE

OW031400 Hong Kong AFP in English 0958 GMT 3 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, Aug. 3 (AFP) -- Beijing will host an international conference on tourism next year and has invited specialists in the field from around the world, including the Soviet Union and other Eastern bloc countries.

Wang Yueyi, deputy general director of the General Administration for Travel and Tourism in China, said today that the conference will be held from February 28 to March 4 under the sponsorship of his organization and the Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC). More than 300 tour operators have been invited and the conference expects some 1,000 Chinese and foreign delegates, Mr. Wang added.

He said representatives from Nationalist-held Taiwan would be welcome. Although no invitation has been sent to Taiwan as yet, "we plan to do so," he added.

Mr Wang said tourism was flourishing in China, and statistics showed a four-fold increase in the number of Chinese and foreign tourists between 1978 and 1981, from 1.88 million to 7.76 million. The number of foreign tourists more than doubled, from 229,000 to 670,000, during this period. Revenue from tourism increased from 260 million dollars in 1978 to 780 million dollars last year, Mr. Wang said.

China wants to play host to more individual tourists in the coming years, Mr. Wang said. There are currently 267 tourist hotels with a total 90,000 beds in China, he said.

CULTURAL POLICIES CONFERENCE SPEECHES REPORTED

OW011636 Beijing XINHUA in English 1513 GMT 1 Aug 82

[Text] Mexico City, July 21 (XINHUA) -- Delegates from many countries to the second world conference on cultural policies appealed today for a new international cultural order and an unbiased and equal treatment to peoples in cultural relations. The conference ended a five-day plenary discussion here today.

Li Sang-tae, vice-minister of culture and arts of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, called for a new order in international cultural relations at the plenary meeting yesterday.

He stated: "By using their privileged position, the imperialists and colonialists still exploit the Third World countries in the cultural domain, too, resorting to the machinations to infiltrate their corrupt and decadent cultures into the Third World countries in the name of cultural development." The dissemination of such corrupt ideology is harmful to the independent consciousness of other countries and hinders the development of their true national culture, he said.

Constantin Babalau, head of the Romanian delegation and Romanian ambassador to Mexico, said at the meeting yesterday that his country upholds "the principles of full equal rights, respect for other countries national independence and sovereignty, non-interference in internal affairs and mutual benefit" as the basis for cultural cooperation among countries. He voiced opposition to the dissemination of violence, racism and pornography in literary works.

Leader of the Democratic Kampuchean delegation Thiounn Mumm said at today's meeting that his country is now under the occupation of 200,000 foreign aggressor troops and is subjected to the enslavement of an alien culture. He pointed out that only on the basis of independence and sovereignty can Kampuchea's culture be maintained.

Minister of Culture of Senegal Joseph Mathiam [as received] said that the new international cultural order must be based on respect for equality, justice and the cultural characteristics of different countries.

Omar Massalha, representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization, declared that the Palestinian people will continue to struggle. He stressed: "No one can oblige us to deny our cultural identity, forego our existence as a people or suppress our capacity and potentiality as a nation."

Pakistan Minister of Culture, Sports and Tourism, Arbab Niaz Mohammad noted that the developing countries "must band together to exchange experiences and achievements in ways for halting the systematic daily invasion of culture from the more powerful Western nations." "In Pakistan, we have taken out of our TV programmes all foreign series of violence and sex, substituting educational and training films for the others," he added.

Rwandan Minister of Higher Education and Scientific Research Andre Ntagerura Nata stressed respect for the cultural values of each nation and the strengthening of international cultural exchange.

Chibanda, Zambia[illegible]nister of state in charge of culture in the Ministry of Education and Culture, po[illegible] out that in the colonialist epoch, Zambian culture was considered to be in a primi[illegible]ve state. In fact, every country has made its own contributions to the world culture, he added.

In their speeches, the representatives of various countries reviewed the experiences gained in cultural policy and practice since the first world cultural policies conference held in Venice in 1970. The next stage of the conference will be devoted to meetings by the two committees.

The session also passed a resolution on providing assistance to the oppressed people of South Africa and their national liberation movement.

AFP CITES HUANG HUA, SPOKESMAN ON U.S. TAIWAN AID

OW041012 Hong Kong AFP in English 0920 GMT 4 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, Aug 4 (AFP) -- China today reaffirmed that it was demanding an "ultimate" end to U.S. military aid to Taiwan, the Nationalist-ruled stronghold over which it claims sovereignty.

"The United States should ultimately stop its arms sales to Taiwan," an official Chinese spokesman said today, pointing out that Beijing's position on the arms issue was "consistent".

His statement comes in the wake of recent declarations from the State Department in Washington that China had been informed of the U.S. decision to continue military aid to Taiwan.

China has threatened to downgrade its relations with the United States should it continue the arms supplies. The dispute has left relations between Beijing and Washington in a virtual state of paralysis in recent months, and China has also charged the United States of interference in its internal affairs. Since the end of last year, the two countries have been engaged in thorny negotiations to try and resolve the issue.

In recent weeks reports from Washington, originating either from official sources or indirectly, have said that President Ronald Reagan informed China of the U.S. decision to continue military aid to Taiwan, but that this would not go on indefinitely. According to some reports from Washongton, the formula suggested by the United States should in principle suit China.

"The crisis period is not yet over," Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua told AFP on Monday, clearly hinting that the issue had not yet been resolved, and that talks were still continuing.

"China's stand opposing U.S. arms sales to Taiwan is consistent," the spokesman said. "So is China's stand of maintaining that the U.S. should ultimately stop its arms sales to Taiwan," he added, rejecting any possibility of the U.S. being able to link conditions of its arms sales with peaceful reunification of Taiwan with China. Taiwan has been ruled by the Kuomintang Nationalists since the communists came to power on the mainland in 1949. "U.S. arms sales to Taiwan and how China is to achieve Taiwan's return to the motherland are two questions entirely different in nature and cannot be linked," the spokesman said.

China has proposed a negotiated reunification to Taiwan, but it has been rejected by the Taipei administration.

In messages he sent to Chinese leaders, President Reagan manifested his approval of the Chinese proposals, indicating that Washington would take their outcome into account in eventual decisions on continuing arms supplies to Taiwan.

AFP REPORTS ENVOY, SPOKESMAN ON HU NA DEFECTION

OW040304 Hong Kong AFP in English 0255 GMT 4 Aug 82

[Text] Knoxville, Tennessee, Aug 3 (AFP) -- The U.S. Government must return Chinese tennis player Hu Na, who defected last month during a tournament in California, China's ambassador to the United States, Chai Zemin, said Tuesday. Miss Hu, 29, disappeared from the Santa Ana (California) hotel where the Chinese team was staying.

On Tuesday, it was learned in Washington that Chinese authorities had requested her return. The U.S. State Department said in reply it could not comply with China's demand.

"We think the United States should try its best to find her and then return her to us, Mr Chai said to reporters after ceremonies honoring China's participation at the Knoxville's World Fair. "There are no reasons for her to seek political asylum," he said, stressing Washington's obligations to provide safety to Chinese visitors to the U.S.

Mr Chai spoke through an interpreter and it was first thought that he was referring to another Chinese defector, a ballet dancer from Shanghai who remained in the U.S. 2 months ago.

A State Department spokesman, Allan Rombert, said Tuesday that Miss Hu's request would be reviewed on its merits by immigration officials with the State Department providing advisory opinion. The spokesman added that the United States hopes China will not cut off bilateral cultural exchanges because of the defection.

Miss Hu let it be known through her San Francisco attorney Edward C.Y. Lau that she intended to remain in hiding until U.S. officials gave her an answer on her request for asylum.

In Beijing, a Chinese official spokesman said the incident could affect cultural exchanges between the two countries. "Hu Na went to the United States to take part in the international competition at the invitation of the U.S. Tennis Association. So, the U.S. side should be responsible for guaranteeing the personal safety of the Chinese players and should return Hu Na", the spokesman said. "Such an incident is sure to adversely affect the cultural exchanges between the two countries", he added. The spokesman, however, refused to give further details or say whether the Chinese Government had contacted the United States on the matter.

FURTHER REACTION TO JAPANESE TEXTBOOK ISSUE

GUANGMING RIBAO Article

OW032020 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1335 GMT 3 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, 3 Aug (XINHUA) -- Today's GUANGMING RIBAO carries an article by Wang Keju. Citing irrefutable facts, the article sternly rejects three Japanese Cabinet ministers' allegation that the criticism of the Japanese Education Ministry's prettification of militarism is "interference in internal affairs."

The article, entitled "Sharply Denounce Three Japanese Cabinet Members' Allegation of 'Interference in Internal Affairs,'" says: "In revising textbooks, the Japanese Ministry of Education distorted the history of Japanese aggression against China and Southeast Asia. This has aroused the greatest indignation of the Chinese people and has been strongly opposed by people in various Japanese circles. However, three Japanese Cabinet members flagrantly hold that the criticism of the Japanese Education Ministry's prettification of militarism is 'interference in internal affairs.' Furthermore, they do not consider the newly revised textbook to be a distortion of historical facts. This allegation entirely repres ts an act of resorting to sophistry to brazenly defend the crimes of aggression committed by the Japanese militarists. It is only right and proper for the Chinese people to criticize these Japanese officials. Their allegation of so-called 'interference in internal affairs' holds no water at all in light of international law."

The article points out: "Under international law, the concept of internal affairs essentially means affairs exclusively within the jurisdiction of a country. All behavior involving international obligations, especially that constituting a threat to world peace and trampling upon the elementary norms of international law, cannot be treated as an internal affair. In changing the word 'aggression' against China into an 'advance' into China, the Japanese Education Ministry has distorted the history of Japanese aggression against China. By so doing, the Japanese Education Ministry has gone far beyond the bounds of 'internal affairs.'"

The article states: "First of all, the Japanese aggression against China is a stark fact in gross violation of the elementary principles of international law. The aggressive nature of the war has been written into many relevant international documents. The chief Japanese war criminals who unleashed and waged the war of aggression were sentenced by international justice."

After reviewing the trial of Japanese war criminals by the Far East international military tribunal from 3 May 1946 to 12 November 1948, the article points out: "The Tokyo trial and judgment established that the war of aggression was an international crime and that those who led the war of aggression bore criminal responsibility. In its verdict, the Far East military tribunal also 'concluded that the war against China from 1931 on was a war of aggression.' Moreover, the verdict of the military tribunal also said that the evidence on a host of crimes committed by the war criminals was conclusive. By citing authoritative materials firsthand such as the minutes of meetings before the Japanese emperor, the minutes of Japanese Cabinet meetings, the minutes of meetings of five Japanese ministers, secret documents of the puppet Manzhouguo, documents of Nazi Germany's Ministry of Foreign Affairs and testimony given by those who personally participated in such meetings, the verdict brought to light the fact that for 20 years Japan planned, prepared, unleashed and carried out the war of aggression. Most of the facts cited are about the Japanese aggression against China."

The article says: "It should be pointed out that the historical facts concerning the Japanese aggression against China, on which the world had long before reached a final conclusion, have been written into international documents. Furthermore, in light of international law, the aggressive nature of the war cannot be repudiated at any time, in any place or on any condition."

The article points out: "Since the Japanese aggression against China is an irrefutable fact which grossly violated the basic principles of international law and produced grave consequences worldwide, its history is in no way a so-called domestic matter that can be left to Japan's own discretion. Its history cannot be tampered with willfully. Thus, the issue of distorting the history of Japanese aggression against China in Japanese history books is by no means an internal affair. The Chinese people, as the immediate victims of the aggression, can in no way tolerate so serious a distortion by the Japanese Education Ministry."

The article continues: "Judging from the obligations borne by Japan in international treaties, the Japanese official behavior deviates from the spirit of the 1972 Sino-Japanese joint statement and the 1978 Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty, with effects on both signatories. Therefore, it is by no means Japan's own internal affair. The Japanese side stated in earnestness in the 1972 Sino-Japanese joint statement: 'The Japanese side is keenly aware of Japan's responsibility for causing enormous damage in the past to the Chinese people through war and deeply reproaches itself.' It means that the Japanese side recognized the war on China in the past as an act of aggression. It is explicitly pointed out in the 1978 Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty that the Sino-Japanese joint statement 'constitutes the basis of the relations of peace and friendship between the two countries and that the principles enunciated in the joint statement should be strictly observed.' In accordance with the principle of international law that a treaty must be observed, the signatories to a treaty must be bound by it, fulfill their treaty obligations and not do anything in violation of the treaty. As signatories to the treaty, both China and Japan should put into practice the solemn promises they made in the treaty. The tampering with history of Japanese aggression against China by the Japanese Education Ministry constitutes a violation of the aforementioned treaty and joint statement and is by no means Japan's own internal affair."

In conclusion, the article says: "According to the above facts, the three Japanese Cabinet members' charge that the Chinese people's criticism of the Japanese Education Ministry constitutes 'interference in internal affairs' is false and patently preposterous and obviously holds no water at all. The Japanese Government should face squarely the historical facts concerning the Japanese militarist aggression against China and its grave consequences in order to consolidate and develop the peaceful and friendly relations between China and Japan and make the friendship between the two peoples last from generation to generation."

Historians' Condemnation

[Text] Shenyang, August 3 (XINHUA) -- A resolution condemning Japanese Education Ministry's distortion of history of militarists aggression in China was passed at the second annual meeting of the Chinese Society of Japanese History now being held in Shenyang. These noted historians, who specialize in the study of Japanese history, listed facts to give lie to the Japanese arguments.

Wan Feng, historian of Japan and vice chairman of the society, said that for nearly one hundred years, China had been the biggest target of aggression by growing Japanese militarism. Its aggression brought tremendous disasters to the Chinese people. This fact could not be denied by any one with a conscience. The Japanese Education Ministry's using the words "advanced" into China could not absolve Japanese militarism of guilt for its aggression in China. "This clumsy trick," he said, "can deceive neither the Chinese people nor the Japanese people."

Talking about the Japanese Education Ministry's beautifying the aggression in an attempt to leave a good impression on future generations, Wu Jie, vice chairman of the society and expert on Japanese history, said: "The ministry is trying to do the impossible." The correct way would be to tell the truth so that future generations could draw correct lessons from history. Only by doing thus could the two peoples be friends from generation to generation, he said.

Hu Xinian, historian of Sino-Japanese relationship and professor at the History Department of the Teachers University of Shaanxi Province, said: "What's sending armies into a sovereign state, occupying its territory, massacring its people and plundering its property, if not aggression?" The people of Japan were also victims during the war, he said. Even for a period after the collapse of Japanese militarism, the Japanese people had a very hard time. Japan's economy has developed rapidly in the past thirty years. But, as a national policy, it should guard against again following the disastrous road of militarism. It's extremely dangerous if a small number of people are allowed to do whatever they like.

Addressing the meeting, Wu Tingquiu, chairman of the society and professor at the History Department of the Nankai University, said that two principles should be adhered to in the study of history, namely, no distortion of historical facts and a distinction between right and wrong. The Japanese Education Ministry's distortion of the history of the Japanese aggression in China is an insult to the Chinese people as well as the people of the world; it's absolutely not "internal affair." He stressed that a handful of Japanese rightists are doomed to failure in their attempt to resist the trend of history.

JIAOYU YANJIU Demands

[Text] Beijing, August 3 (XINHUA) -- The Japanese Education Ministry should at least respect the principles of education for which it is responsible, and use historical facts to accurately inform the younger generation, many of whom are ignorant of the past war, according to the editorial board of EDUCATION RESEARCH journal.

There is always some educational purpose and policy involved in the process of compiling, editing and censoring of textbooks, the board said today. The purpose of the Japanese Education Ministry in distorting facts and tampering with history while censoring its textbooks is perfectly obvious.

It said that every educator knows that the children and the younger generation should not be fooled, and that they must be taught the facts. As far as the past war goes, China, Japan or any other country should educate the present generation and all those which follow in the facts of the past. Only by doing so can the recurrence of the past painful history be prevented.

Quoting Japanese newspapers, the board noted that approximately 60 percent of the Japanese population know very little of the past war. Under such circumstances, there should be no ambiguity in explaining and allocating responsibility for the war in the classroom.

The editorial board noted that beside history textbooks of primary and middle schools, even such college textbooks as "Japanese History" (1982 revised edition) have been tampered with. This book went so far as to blame the Chinese people's resistance against Japanese invaders for Japanese aggression. It is not surprising that such logic arouses the indignation of the Chinese people and others throughout Asia.

Recalling the ruination the Japanese aggressors imposed on China's education, the editorial board recalled that many schools were destroyed and teachers and students killed. According to incomplete records, more than 500 prominent Chinese educators were tortured and killed by the Japanese aggressors.

To prevent the recurrence of the historical tragedy and maintain Sino-Japanese friendship, the Chinese educators feel dutybound to join hands with the Japanese people in denouncing and protesting the Japanese Education Ministry for distorting history, the editorial board concluded.

Book on Atrocities

[Text] Beijing, Aug 4 (XINHUA) -- A 76-year-old Chinese dramatist produced a book recording Japanese aggressors atrocities published on June 15, 1938 to refute the Japanese Education Ministry's distortion of history concerning Japanese aggression against China in censoring school textbooks, today's PEOPLE'S DAILY reports. Ma Yanxiang personally presented his book yesterday to the paper's editorial department.

"With its words and photos, it accurately records the heinous crimes committed by the Japanese aggressor troops in China in the 1930's and 1940's, which no one can cover up or deny," he said.

As a participant involved in the war against Japanese aggression, he expressed his indignation over the Japanese Education Ministry's recent act on the textbook issue.

PEOPLE'S DAILY today carries three photos selected from the book showing Japanese troops insulting the bronze statue of Dr. Sun Yat-sen in front of the Shanghai municipal government, the decapitation of a young Chinese man and a ruined part of Guangzhou after bombing by Japanese airplanes.

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 3 (XINHUA) -- Some dietmen of Komei Party have demanded the Japanese Government give an honest reply to China on the basis of correcting the distorted history in Japanese textbooks, so as to seek an earlier solution for the problem.

In their representations to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki yesterday, Shigetake Arishima, chairman of the special committee for textbook issue of Komei Party, and some dietmen of the party said that since Japanese troops had obviously committed aggression in China, the government should give instruction to narrate in school textbooks their behaviour as aggression so that a clear account of historical facts could be given to generations to come. They also demanded that in the interest of the friendly relations between the two countries, the government should give instruction to correct the distorted history in textbooks.

RENMIN RIBAO ON FAILURE OF RECENT THACH VISIT

[Short commentary: "The Frustrated Nguyen Co Thach Goes Home"]

[Text] Nguyen Co Thach has ended his trip to four Southeast Asian countries. Swollen with arrogance, Nguyen Co Thach claimed to pursue the mission of "peace and friendship" on his visit. He stopped at nothing to threaten and lure the ASEAN nations. He constantly changed his tricks. Sometimes, he assumed the posture of a vicious person and sometimes he pretended to be gentle and kind. However, no matter how many changes he made, through Nguyen Co Thach's words and deeds, it is not difficult for people to find out that the local hegemonist ambition of the Vietnamese authorities of occupying Kampuchea and carrying out expansion in Southeast Asia remains stubbornly unchanged.

Nguyen Co Thach started his visit after the Hanoi authorities announced that Vietnam would make a "partial troop withdrawal" from Kampuchea. In the face of the international community's demand that Vietnam withdraw all its troops from Vietnam, Nguyen Co Thach first tried to threaten the ASEAN nations and compel them to submit. In Singapore, he openly accused the ASEAN nations of interfering in Kampuchea's internal affairs, saying that Vietnam would resist them for "20 years," organize guerrillas in their countries and retaliate against them. Nguyen Co Thach's arrogant and conceited manner exposed the true features of the Vietnamese authorities. Of course, it was sharply denounced by public opinion in various ASEAN nations. In the public eye, this foreign minister became a rat scurrying across the street.

When Nguyen Co Thach found out that his threat was of no use, he pretended to be gentle and kind. In Malaysia and Thailand, he turned the theme of his lobbying activities to the "threat from China," obstinately asserting that China was the "main danger and source of danger" to peace in Southeast Asia. He stressed that only after signing a nonaggression pact with China would Vietnam withdraw all its troops from Kampuchea. Nguyen Co Thach tried to sabotage China's relations with the ASEAN countries and prettify Vietnam's hegemonist acts in Southeast Asia and its occupation of Kampuchea as helping the ASEAN nations so that they would avert the "threat from China." In so doing, he thought that the ASEAN nations would be deeply grateful to Vietnam and acknowledge the fait accompli of its invasion and occupation of Kampuchea. However, anyone with any common sense realizes that although the Vietnamese authorities are raising a great hue and cry about the "threat from China," China has gradually improved and developed its relations with the ASEAN countries and the threat from Vietnam and its backstage supporter, the Soviet Union, to these countries is becoming more and more serious. Such a fact cannot be blotted out by Nguyen Co Thach's glib tongue. He tried to use the bugbear of the "threat from China" to threaten the ASEAN nations so that they would fall into Hanoi's traps. His attempt has come to nothing. The Thai people used protests and demonstrations to "welcome" him. This shows that all his cunning words and deceitful talks did not work.

The solution of the Kampuchean problem lies in the unconditional withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea according to the United Nations resolution. Nguyen Co Thach wore the red make-up of the stage hero one minute, and the white make-up of a villian the next. He never made any concessions concerning troop withdrawal. This shows that the Vietnamese authorities have no sincerity at all. It is impossible for those who intended to yield to the Vietnamese authorities to praise their "flexibility" any more.

Nguyen Co Thach attempted to further encourage the trends of thought in the ASEAN countries for reaching a compromise with the Vietnamese. However, he lost more than he gained and eventually went home frustrated. Who is to blame for that?

VODK TERMS THACH'S REGIONAL TOUR FAILURE

[Text] Beijing, August 3 (XINHUA) -- Radio Democratic Kampuchean today points out that Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's recent visit to Southeast Asia is a failure.

The radio in a commentary says prior to Thach's visit, Vietnam's propaganda machine had noisily claimed that "Vietnam wants peace", "Vietnam wishes to cooperate with Southeast Asian states". Meanwhile, to display its "sincerity", the Vietnamese authorities even staged a farce of "partial troop withdrawal". However, as soon as he got to Singapore, Nguyen Co Thach uttered intimidation and threats to ASEAN member nations in a bid to shake their just stand on the Kampuchean issue.

The commentary points out that instead of intimidating the people of Southeast Asia, Nguyen Co Thach's threats have told them that Vietnam would never renounce their scheme to annex Kampuchea.

It says that Thach has again used "China's threat" as an excuse to refuse troop withdrawal from Kampuchea. This shows that Vietnam's real intent is to perpetuate its occupation of Kampuchea and turn that country into a springboard for expansion in Southeast Asia by Vietnam and the Soviet Union.

The commentary points out that Southeast Asian countries and people that have seen through the scheme of Vietnam, will, together with other peace- and justice-loving countries and people, continue to press Vietnam for an immediate and unconditional troop withdrawal so that the Kampuchean people can exercise their rights to self-determination without outside interference.

A written statement released by Minister for Finance, Commerce and Supplies Y.P. Pant, who accompanied their majesties on the visit, said that the friendly visit of their majesties the king and queen to China is another historic landmark in Nepal-China relations.

"This friendly visit of their majesties to China has further helped develop closer understanding and commonality of each other's views on various regional and international issues and broadened the political and economic relations between Nepal and China. It provided an opportunity for having friendly and cordial talks with Chinese leaders and renewal of personal contacts. The visit has consolidated relations between Nepal and China and helped in furthering cooperation. In my view, the visit was successful and fruitful in many ways," he added.

AFP: PRC NOT TO SIGN NETHERLANDS ACCORDS

[Text] The Hague, Aug. 4 (AFP) -- China will not ratify cultural and economic-technologic cooperation accords with the Netherlands because of The Hague's decision to authorize delivery of two submarines to Taiwan, the Foreign Ministry has announced.

In a letter to Parliament on Tuesday, Premier and Foreign Minister Andreas van Agt said: "The cultural accord with China has not yet been submitted to the chamber for approval, because there is little chance, given the present state of bilateral relations, that China will ratify it."

A ministry spokesman said that China also had refused to sign the economic-technologic agreement.

Mr. van Agt signed the two accords on the Netherlands' behalf in October 1980 during an official visit to China. In February 1981, the Dutch Government approved delivery of the two Dutch-built submarines to Taiwan, and relations between Beijing and The Hague began to deteriorate, with China soon recalling its ambassador. In (?May), diplomacy between the two countries was reduced to the charge-d'affaires level.

HABIB ADVANCES NEW PLAN TO SOLVE BEIRUT CRISIS

[Text] Beirut, August 3 (XINHUA) -- U.S. President's special envoy Philip Habib has advanced a new plan to solve the west Beirut problem with the concurrence of Israel. The main content of the plan is: The Palestinian armed forces evacuate in groups from Beirut and its suburbs within 15 days, Radio Beirut reported.

Specific measures for the implementation of the plan are: (1) The Palestinian armed forces are to evacuate to Damascus via an international highway, and then move to other Arab countries which are willing to accept them, or they evacuate by sea under the escort of the Red Cross Society, or by both highway and sea. (2) An international buffer force enters Beirut the day following the evacuation of the first group of Palestinian armed forces. (3) Israeli troops must withdraw from Beirut immediately after the entry of the international buffer forces into Beirut.

The broadcast said that Habib's new plan had been passed on to the Palestinian side through the Lebanese-Palestinian Joint Military Committee. The leading organ of the Palestine Liberation Organization held a meeting last night to study this new U.S. plan. It is reported that except for the time about the entry of the international buffer forces into Beirut, PLO agreed in principle to the Habib plan. Political advisors to Arafat called on Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq al-Wazzan last night to discuss with him the Habib plan.

The broadcast said that the Lebanese Government insists that the withdrawal of Palestinian armed forces should go on simultaneously with the entry of the international buffer forces into Beirut.

U.S. URGES 'COMPLETE END' TO BEIRUT FIGHTING

OW031230 Beijing XINHUA in English 1200 GMT 3 Aug 82

[Text] Washington, August 2 (XINHUA) -- The United States today urged a "complete end" to the fighting in Beirut, saying it threatened the diplomatic efforts of U.S. envoy Philip Habib to solve the problem. A White House statement issued after President Ronald Reagan met with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir this morning said: "The President stressed the need for a complete end by all parties to the hostilities in and around Beirut as a prerequisite to allow Ambassador Habib to pursue his urgent work."

The statement went on: "The President emphasized that an early diplomatic settlement of the current problem of west Beirut is the essential first step in ending the trauma of Lebanon," and "moving on to the broader peace process."

Shamir came to Washington at a time when Israel intensified its shelling and bombing of west Beirut and frequently denied west Beirut water, electricity, food and medicines in an attempt to suppress the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

After his brief encounter with Reagan, Shamir spent three hours meeting with Secretary of State George Shultz. The focus of the discussion was Lebanon and PLO's withdrawal from Beirut and Lebanon. Speaking to reporters after his meeting with Shultz, Shamir threatened that the PLO must leave Beirut and Lebanon either "through negotiations or by other ways."

He said during the discussions with U.S. leaders, "there are some different assessments" but "we have identicals [as received] in Lebanon."

The United States is known to have supported the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and shares the goal with Israel of driving the PLO out of Beirut. As was pointed out by a New York TIMES article yesterday, the United States and Israel "have been operating in tandem over west Beirut." U.S. connivance and support of Israeli action in Lebanon has drawn wide condemnation.

REAGAN REJECTS BREZHNEV IMPLICATION ON LEBANON

[Text] Beijing, August 3 (XINHUA) — U.S. President Ronald Reagan yesterday rejected Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's implication that the U.S. is not doing all it can to bring about a peaceful solution to the crisis in Lebanon. The rejection was contained in a statement released by the White House in response to a letter from Brezhnev. Part of the letter was published by TASS yesterday.

"Through Ambassador Habib's efforts, as well as through the United Nations, we are striving to bring about a lasting cease-fire that would end the suffering," Reagan stated. He described the publication of confidential correspondence between the two presidents by the Soviet Union as a "propagandistic exercise" which "casts doubts upon Soviet motives regarding the Lebanon crisis."

According to TASS, Brezhnev in his letter called on Reagan "to use most urgently the possibilities at his disposal to stop the continuing annihilation of people in Beirut." The situation was "so serious and critical" that the adoption of "promptest measures" were necessary, the letter says.

UN AWAITS REPLY FROM ISRAELIS ON OBSERVERS

[Text] United Nations, August 3 (XINHUA) -- U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said in his report to the Security Council today that the plan for the deployment of U.N. observers could not be put into full effect until a reply from the Israeli Government was received.

The report, submitted to the Security Council today, says that Lt. General Erskine, chief of staff of UNTSO (The United Nations Truce Supervision Organization), was informed on August 3 by senior officials of the Israeli Foreign Ministry that the Israeli Cabinet would discuss this subject on August 5, following the return of the Israeli foreign minister from abroad.

The Lebanese Government and the PLO have already assured General Erskine of their full co-operation for the deployment of U.N. observers in and around Beirut in accordance with the council Resolution 516 which was adopted on August 1, the report adds.

Due to the unstable and precarious situation in Beirut area, the secretary-general has instructed General Erskine to take immediate steps to set up initially observation machinery in territory controlled by the Lebanese Government, in close consultation and co-operation with the Lebanese National Army, the report concludes.

ISRAELI FORCES STOP UN OBSERVERS DELEGATION

[Text] United Nations, August 3 (XINHUA) -- Israeli forces yesterday prevented a group of U.N. observers from going to assume functions mandated by the Security Council's Resolution 516, according to a note issued by the U.N. information department today.

The note says a group of 28 UNTSO (U.N. Temporary Supervisory Organization) observers was sent yesterday from Naquora to Yarze, as a preparatory measure for the proposed observer operation. Yarze, near Beirut, is the headquarters of the Lebanese army, and is the current location of the chairman of the Israel-Lebanon Mixed Armistice Commission.

The convoy of the U.N. observers was stopped by Israeli forces at Kahlde Junction, south of the Beirut airport and approximately 7 kilometers from Yarze, and was prevented from continuing to Yarze.

The Security Council adopted a resolution on August 1 authorizing the secretary-general to deploy immediately U.N. observers to monitor the situation in and around Beirut. The action taken by Israeli forces yesterday indicated that Israel rejected the Council's resolution.

PRC CONTRIBUTES TO PALESTINE REFUGEE RELIEF FUND

RENMIN RIBAO ON ISRAEL CEASE-FIRE VIOLATIONS

HK031009 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 3 Aug p 6

["International Jottings" by Feng Xiong [1409 7160]: "Eight Cease-fires, Eight Violations"]

[Text] Israel has violated cease-fires eight times. It is gradually escalating its wanton and indiscriminate bombing of west Beirut. The ninth cease-fire came into effect as of 1 August.

To the Israeli aggressors, the cease-fire is no more than putting pressure on their opponents by force and giving them a certain period of time to consider their surrender. Once their opponents go against their wishes, they carry out air raids and order their warships to bombard. After that, the Israeli's issue a statement saying "they no longer think that it is their duty to observe" cease-fire agreements. The brutal acts of the Begin authorities are exactly the same as those of all aggressors in history. More than 40 years ago, Hitler tore up numerous agreements. An interval between aggression was a period for the rest, training and consolidation of his troops in order to make more frenzied acts. People cannot but doubt that before Begin attains his objectives of aggression, even if 90 cease-fire agreements are signed, they are no more than a pile of wastepaper in his eyes.

McCloskey, a U.S. congressman who has just carried out an investigation in the Middle East, told TV audiences in the United States last week: Begin had told him that Israel has the right to destroy Beirut. In order to kill a Palestinian guerrilla, Israel will not balk at killing 10 Lebanese and 5 Palestinian civilians. Although Begin denied that he had uttered such bloody remarks, judging from the blood debts inclurred by Israel as a result of its violation of eight cease-fire agreements, Begin's denial is completely worthless. All the brutal aggressors in modern history have implemented a policy of "rather slaughtering 1,000 people by mistake than letting a single enemy escape." Begin and his ilk are no exception. The only difference is that behind the murderer Begin, there stands a person wearing white gloves unstained by blood, who looks seemingly impartial.

KENYA REPORTEDLY BACK TO NORMAL FOLLOWING COUP

[Text] Nairobi, August 3 (XINHUA) -- The situation in Kenya has gradually returned to normal and everything seemed under the control of the government after the crushing of an abortive coup. In Nairobi civil servants today began to go to their offices as usual. The abandoned cars and bodies of soldiers and civilians have been removed from the streets. Residents lined up for food at some shops. According to reports, people in Mombasa, Nakuru and other cities continued their normal activities today as shops, schools and banks remained open for business.

President Daniel arap Moi today made a statement to the nation commending the Kenyan army, navy, police and administration police for their unflinching loyalty to him in defense of the nation. The statement said that the gallant forces had demonstrated their loyalty by crushing the air force rebels.

The president also expressed dismay at the big loss of property following the disturbance. He condemned the students of Nairobi University who, he said, had participated in looting in Nairobi together with the rebels. The president thanked the Kenyan people for their cooperation in collecting guns and handing them over to the police and government authorities. The president also urged the Kenyan people to continue cooperating with the authorities and reassured them of government assistance in case of difficulties.

More than 1,000 Kenyan air force rebels were held Sunday night by Kenyan army in Nairobi and Nanyuki following the abortive coup, according to the DAILY NATION of Kenya today.

The paper said by noon yesterday at least 71 air force rebels were reported to have been killed in fighting. About 200 have disappeared into the bush in Timau and Naru Moro in Nanyuki and into the Karura forest in Nairobi. According to government sources the 71 air force rebels were shot dead during the battle over the Voice of Kenya studios which were taken over by the rebels early on August 1.

It was not known how many had been killed in Nanyuki, the biggest air base in Kenya, where the fighting continued till last night, according to a reliable source. Government sources said the coup was led by Col. Mwanthi, commander of the 58th Air Calvary at Ngandu Base in Embakasi. The group was later reinforced by personnel from the air force bases in Eastleigh and Nanyuki. It has also been learned that the Kenyan Government yesterday announced the closure of the University of Nairobi with immediate effect.

The government observed that this had been necessitated by the unwarranted participation of the university students in widespread looting in the city following the disturbances caused by armed rebels of the air force last Sunday. The government noted that the students had also issued a statement supporting the anti-government rebels on the morning of August 1.

POLITICAL, LEGAL WORK IN MODERNIZATION URGED

[Editorial: "Political and Legal Work Must Render More Conscious Services to the Four Modernizations"]

[Text] Recently the Political Science and Law Commission of the CCP Central Committee held a conference on national political and legal work. It summed up historical experiences, affirmed the achievements scored in political and legal work since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, analyzed the new situation of political and legal work and set fundamental tasks for this work in the new historical period. This conference, which was the biggest in scale since the founding of the PRC, is of great importance.

Political and legal work belongs to the realm of the superstructure. Now that the focus of the work of our party and state has been shifted to the construction of the socialist modernizations, political and legal work must more consciously and clearly serve the safeguarding and promoting of the construction of the socialist modernizations. This is its fundamental task.

At present, an important aspect of the tasks for political and legal work in serving the construction of the socialist modernizations is to resolutely hit at serious criminal offenders in the economic field. We must never regard the serious criminal activities in the economic field as merely some ordinary criminal activities. They are an important expression of class struggle under the new historical conditions of carrying out the open-door economic policy and the policy of enlivening the domestic market. It is necessary to definitely carry out the decisions of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council and, after making a thorough investigation, give serious and quick punishments according to law to those who have committed economic crimes which seriously sabotage the socialist economy, such as smuggling and arbitrage, speculation and profiterring, stealing public property, stealing and selling valuable cultural relics and giving and taking bribes. Only by resolutely hitting at the criminal offenders who have seriously sabotaged our economy, while resolutely carrying out the present economic policies, can our construction of the modernizations be ensured to develop along the socialist path, and can the open-door policy and the policy of enlivening the domestic market be correctly carried out.

The political and legal departments are the means of the people's democratic dictatorship. They must perform the functions of defending the people and hitting at the enemy. In the new historical period, since the exploiters have been eliminated as a class and class struggle is no longer the principal contradiction in our country, the tasks of establishing the socialist democratic political system and correctly handling the constradictions among the people are relatively greater and more important. The political and legal departments must make more contributions to developing socialist democracy and perfecting the socialist legal system. Owing to certain domestic factors and influences from abroad, class struggle will continue to exist within certain limits for a long time to come and may even grow acute under certain conditions. In our society, except for the serious criminal offenders in the economic field, there are still a handful of counterrevolutionaries, special agents and spies who oppose the socialist system. In some places, reactionary secret societies have resumed their counterrevolutionary and swindling activities by spreading superstitions. At the same time, the external reactionary forces are stepping up their infiltration and sabotage against our country. All this shows that class struggle has not died out in our society. The whole party must be mentally prepared to carry out long-term struggles against various hostile elements in the political, economic and cultural fields and in the sphere of our social life.

In the past 2 years, public order, especially in cities, has clearly improved. The incidents of cases has dropped. The number of cases cracked has increased. The social sense of order and stability has been strengthened. The masses' sense of security has also improved. The number of people who dare to fight criminals has increased. But the development of the work of maintaining public order is not balanced. There are still many factors responsible for instability, as far as public order in cities is concerned.

A large number of new problems have also cropped up in maintaining rural peace and order. All these problems call for serious efforts to find a solution. We must soberly realize that consolidating social peace and order is a long-term, complicated and arduous task. To basically bring about a turn for the better in social practice and public order, we must still do a lot of hard work.

Concerning public order, we must also introduce "comprehensive treatment." This is to say that under the unified leadership of the party, we must, while giving full play to the proper role of political and legal departments, organizing forces in various fields and arousing the masses of people, clearly define the work for various departments and universally introduce public security responsibility systems and on-the-job security responsiblity systems. We must make everyone assume his given duties, and take practical and effective measures that concern political, economic, ideological and cultural fields and systems. Strengthening education for youths and adolescents is the focus of "comprehensive treatment." The whole society must show concern over the healthy growth of youths and adolescents. Trade unions, CYL organizations and women's federations must regard it as their own important task. Cultural and art, propaganda, publishing, educational and other departments must provide rich and inspiring spiritual food for youths and adolescents. They must carry out activities to build spiritual civilization in a sustained manner. They must make youths and adolescents become new-type persons exemplifying socialism and communism -- persons who have ideals, a moral sense, a cultural background and a sense of discipline. Meanwhile, they must take a correct approach toward youths and adolescents involved in mild cases of law-breaking. They must show ebullient enthusiasm in education, influencing and reforming them, so that they can become persons useful to the state.

"Comprehensive treatment" is based on the strengthening of basic-level organizations and basic-level work. We must reorganize rural basic-level party branches and overcome the state of weakness and lethargy and even of paralysis on the part of a number of communes and brigades. We must establish and perfect village committees and residents' committees and arouse the masses to formulate "residents' pacts" and respect "traditional village customs and practices." We must teach the masses to consciously obey state laws and observe the rules of virtue. We must restore and perfect basic-level reconciliation committees and public security committees in urban and rural areas. We must reinforce urban public security branches and establish rural public security branches. We must have an adequate number of judicial assistants and civil administration assistants and properly increase the number of people's courts. Mining and industrial enterprises, offices, schools and shops must strengthen and perfect security organizations and take proper security measures. Strengthening party leadership is a fundamental guarantee for the proper handling of political and legal work. Various political and legal departments must consciously place themselves under the leadership of the party. Leadership by party committees over political and legal departments has to do chiefly with attention to general and specific policies, control over the handling of things according to the law, the supervision of cadres and the control of political and ideological work. Party committes must protect courts and procuratorates, which independently exercise according to the law the right of judgment and procuratorial rights. They must support political and legal departments which take the initiative to independently carry out professional activities. In accomplishing the complicated and arduous tasks with which we are charged by the new historical period, the most important thing is to build up a political and legal force which is loyal to the party and to the people and which shows a high sense of political consciousness and a highly professional level. In the past few years, the forces of political and legal departments have been strengthened and enlarged. Now, we must seriously do well in consolidating their ranks. We must combine consolidation with training, enlargement and the raising of standards, so that political and legal forces can better meet the needs of modernization.

GONGREN RIBAO ON WORKERS' IDEOLOGICAL EDUCATION

HK031015 Beijing GONGREN RIBAO in Chinese 22 Jul 82 p 2

[Article by Chen Jingyu [7115 6651 3768] of the research office of the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee: "Make Major Efforts To Strengthen Communist Ideological Education Among Workers and Staff Members"]

[Text] In the past few years, GONGREN RIBAO has composed lectures on special topics such as upholding the party's four basic principles, carrying forward the working class's spirit of being masters of the country and maintaining the true qualities of the working class. These lectures have played a positive role in actual life because they have been written in good time and are suitable for the workers to read. We should say that we have done a very good thing in promoting communist ideological eduction among workers and staff members.

Today, the working class accounts for over 100 million people of our country's population and has become one of the most powerful working class contingents in the world. Under the leadership of the CCP, the working class of our country thwarted the sabotage attempts by the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques and put an end to the political turmoil which had lasted for 10 years. Since then, it has participated, with the greatest perseverance and courage, in the great practice of building our country into a powerful modern socialist country. It has played to the full its role as a leading class and has displayed its true heroic qualities inherent in the working class. This is the main aspect and essence of things. Why is it then necessary to make major efforts to strengthen communist ideological education among workers at present? How should we improve this kind of education in order to make it more effective?

An Extremely Urgent Important Task

Continuously imbuing the working class with communist ideology, eliminating various backward and negative phenomena which are incompatible with the advanced qualities of the working class, and building a strong working class contingent which has lofty ideals, has a high moral level, observes discipline and has a high cultural level, and which is suited to the needs of our socialist modernization program is a protracted and arduous task our party will face throughout the entire period of socialist construction. At present, due to various reasons, this is an extremely urgent task that brooks no delay.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, many enterprises have done a lot of useful work in strengthening the ideological building of workers and staff members. However, we must be consciously aware that the party's communist ideological education among workers and staff members is a far cry from the needs of the objective situation. The ideological and political work in quite a great number of enterprises is still in a slack and weak state.

In the past few years, the ideological building of the workers and staff members in our country has been faced with changes in two major aspects. One of them is that great changes have taken place in our country's social and istorical situation, that is, our country has pursued the two major policies of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy. These two policies are entirely correct and should be implemented for a long time to come. However, as a result of opening up to the outside world, it is unavoidable that bourgeois ideas from abroad, including bourgeois political views, philosophies of life and decadent ways of living, infiltrate into our country through various channels (whereas attacks, sabotage and the corrosive influence of anticommunist elements and hegemonitsts have never been interrupted). As a result of implementing the policy of enlivening the domestic economy, commodity production and commodity exchange are being developed with great efforts while the planned economy is upheld. The principle of free exchange and exchange of commodities at equal value may go beyond the sphere of economic activities and find its way into various spheres of social life: the sphere of spiritual production, the sphere of moral life, and even the sacred spheres of the ideals and faith of citizens of a socialist country and the character of persons and the country. Consequently, bourgeois ideas such as money meaning everything, profit before everything, profit before everything and benefiting oneself at the expense of others, have spread much more widely.

The other aspect is that great changes have taken place in the composition of the working class in our country, that is, a great number of old workers have retired and a great number of people have become workers. The addition of a large number of new workers adds new blood to the ranks of the working class. However, because many of them missed their chance of receiving regular school education, family education and social education before they entered factories, they inevitably have brought old ideas, old concepts and old habits with them into the ranks of the working class. As expected, this large-scale replacement of the old with the new often increases non-working class ideas as selfishness, narrow-mindedness, laxness, cowardice and conservatism in the ranks of the working class for a period of time. Under such circumstances, the ideological and political work in our enterprises should, following the aforesaid changes in our country's social and historical conditions and changes in the composition of the ranks of the working class, be strengthened with great efforts. But, as a matter of fact, at a time when the ideological and political work needs to be strengthened most, many enterprises and units, instead of strengthening it, have, for various reasons, weakened it. Moreover, the pernicious influence of ultraindividualism, anarchy and factionalism which ran wild during the 10 years of internal turmoil, have not yet been thoroughly dispersed. Therefore, a serious situation which makes people feel uneasy has emerged in the ranks of workers and staff members. It is that the influence of communist ideology has obviously weakened while the influence of bourgeois ideology, remnant ideas of feudalism and other nonworking class ideologies have obviously grown. Why are there so many workers and staff members who do not have the far-reaching ideals characteristic of the working class?

Why are the hackneyed and stereotyped ideas of eogism such as "men die for the sake of wealth and birds die for the sake of food," "everyone for himself and the devil take the hindmost," "subjectively for oneself but objectively for others" and "men are born selfish" again firmly regarded by some people as irrefutable "truths?" Why are behavior and acts such as "loafing on the job," appropriating public property and benefiting oneself at the expense of the public, which are harmful to the country and the collectives, not forcefully corrected in some enterprises? Besides, offenses and crimes in the economic field such as embezzlement, bribery, smuggling, peddling contraband, speculation, profiteering and swindling and other serious crimes such as stealing public property, waylaying, blasting, rape and manslaughter, committed by workers and staff members in the past few years, have obviously increased. Does this not show that a series of serious consequences has already resulted from the weakening of ideological and political work in enterprises? If we shut our eyes to all this and do not take prompt measures to strengthen ideological and political work in these enterprises, and do not use communist ideology to check the corrosive and pernicious influence of various erroneous ideas among the ranks of workers and staff members, problems will continue to increase and, in 3 to 5 years, the consequences will be too dreadful to contemplate. Thus we see clearly that strengthening ideological and political work in enterprises at present really is an extremely urgent and important task which brooks no delay. It directly involves the healthy development of the four modernizations, the consolidation and development of the political situation of stability and unity, and an increase in the political quality of the ranks of workers and staff members.

At present, the influence and corrosion of various nonworking class ideas among the ranks of workers and staff members has proved once more that the Marxist view that scientific socialist ideology does not emerge spontaneously from the workers' movement but must be imbued into it as an irrefutable truth. This truth is not outdated and it holds equally true before and after the working class has seized political power. We must try very consciously to realize the necessity and urgency of once more imbuing communist ideology into the working class and opposing the corrosive influence of bourgeois ideas.

Great Improvement Must Be Made in the Contents and Methods of Education

Compared with that in the 1950's, the current work of carrying out communist ideological education among workers and staff members is indeed much more complicated and difficult. At present, many enterprises find it "difficult" to do ideological and political work and the atmosphere of political and theoretical study is thin. It is not in conformity with reality if we attribute the emergence of this situation in ideological and political work in an oversimplified way to workers and staff members and say that they "do not pay attention to politics." It is true that the political enthusiasm of some workers and staff members has become lower but this is not the case for most workers and staff members. That the working class will consciously accept being imbued with Marxism has been repeatedly proved by history. We should not have any doubts about this or waver in our faith in it. Therefore, the key to this question lies in the appropriateness of what we imbue and the methods by which we imbue them.

At present, the contents of the ideological and political education in many enterprises are too narrow, not systematic and without clear aims. The methods employed are simple and monotonous and do not arouse much interest. Some comrades onesidedly understand the principle of political work serving economic work, and confine the contents of ideological and political education in enterprises only to ensuring attendance and safety, and have not put the work of educating the workers with basic Marxist theorires and communist concepts of the world and of life in an important position. Of course, we should often carry out education on production and safety but this alone is not enough. The broad masses of workers hope to increase their knowledge, broaden their views, enlighten their minds, increase their ability to understand, and draw in rich, varying, healthy and useful political nourishment and other spiritual food through everyday ideological and political education. They urgently demand that their leadership take into account young workers' characteristics such as being good at thinking independently, having a strong desire to learn and having extensive and varying interests, carry out educational work with concrete problems in view and help the workers to acquire more knowledge through more interesting education. These demands of the young workers are quite reasonable and we should give them resolute support.

At present, young workers who are under 35 account for about 60 percent of the total number of workers and they have become the main body of our country's working class. The communist ideological education among workers and staff members should of course focus on young workers. Therefore, how to suit the contents and methods of our communist ideological education to the characteristics of young workers and how to make them welcome and accepted by young workers have become important and decisive factors determining whether or not this education is effective and how effective it is. We must proceed from the reality of the 1980's, absorb the successful and fresh experiences in carrying out ideological and political education among workers and staff members since the founding of the country and, in particular, that in the first 17 years and since the party's third plenary session. We must make a great improvement in or reform the existing contents and methods of ideological and political education among workers and staff members, and on this basis gradually foster a complete scientific system and scientific methods of carrying out communist ideological education among workers and staff members.

In final analysis, the party's basic aim of carrying out communist ideological education among the working class is to help all the workers to increase their understanding of the historical mission of their class, to continuously resist and eliminate the pernicious influence of the bourgeois ideology, remnant ideas of feudalism and other erroneous ideas, to firmly establish the communist world viewpoint and life and to give full play to the advanced role of the working calss in the political, economic, cultural and other social life of the country. In order to attain this goal, the contents of the education should cover a wide scope.

They should at least include the following nine aspects: basic Marxist theories (including philosophy, political economics and basic knowledge of scientific socialism; communist ideals; communist ethics, values and concept of beauty; communist attitude toward labor and labor discipline; patriotism and internationalism; the socialist legal system; principles and policies of the party and the state; fine traditions of the working class; modern history of China and the party history.

Some comrades think that "to imbue" means pouring something into others' ears. This is a very serious misrepresentation. To imbue is to educate, and this kind of education should be carried out in ways and with methods which are welcome and can be easily accepted by those who are educated. In carrying out education among the masses of workers, our party has all along advocated the elicitation method and tried to abolish the spoon-feeding method and encouraged consciously linking one's study with one's thoughts and raising one's ideological understanding on the basis of studying and mastering theory. At present, it is very important to improve our methods in carrying out communist ideological education among the broad masses of young workers. Practice has proved that if those who are educating adopt an attitude of discussing on an equal footing with those who are being educated, persist in proceeding from the actual receptive power of those who are educated, give positive guidance, convince them through appropriate reasoning and try as much as possible to link this kind of education with the work of enriching the lives of the young workers in their spare time, our education will be highly effective.

Train and Bring Up a Large Number of People Who Are Good at Doing Ideological and Political Work

During the 10 years of turmoil, the ranks of ideological and political workers in enterprises were also seriously damaged. Since the smashing of the "gang of four," many of the political workers in enterprises have been transferred, taken up other jobs and their number has been reduced on many occasions. Whether from the viewpoint of quantity or quality, they cannot meet the needs of the arduous task of strengthening communist ideological education at present. Therefore, the problem of building a mighty contingent of communist ideological education workers has become very prominent and needs a prompt solution.

Regarding the building of this contingent, we must first of all clarify the erroneous idea of despising ideological and political work, thinking that those who are engaged in it are "ignorant," "good-for-nothing" and "inferior to others." There is one saying at present: "Professional cadres can be compared to ginseng, the older the better. Political cadres can be compared to vegetable sponge, the older the emptier." This view is very one-sided. Disseminating communist ideology among the working class is a great and noble undertaking which needs much profound knowledge. In the history of the international communist movement, numerous people dedicated lifelong wisdom and energy to this undertaking. During their lifetimes, Marx and Engels wrote so many articles, gave so many talks and did so much revolutionary work. Were they not imbuing the communist ideology into the working class throughout the world? Many propagandists like Li Yanjie, labor model of Beijing Municipality, who are good at disseminating communist ideology, have emerged in the past few years. Their reports are so warmly welcomed and they are called "engineers of human souls" who light up the fire in the minds of the young people. Who can say that they are "ignorant" or "good-for-nothing?" Are they not supported and loved by the working class and the masses of the people as outstanding experts in production and management, as scientists and engineers are? The essence of the question at present is not that the post of doing ideological and political work itself restricts people from giving play to their talents, but that talented people like Li Yanjie who are badly needed by our cause have not emerged by the thousands.

In order to speed up the building of a contingent of communist education workers for enterprises, we must seriously implement the mass line in political work and carry forward our party's tradition of relying on the masses in doing political work while rectifying, training and raising the level of existing political workers.

Therefore, we should pay special attention to selecting a large number of political workers from advanced workers who are qualified for the work in order to replenish and raise the level of our contingent of political workers. The basic qualifications for a party political worker are: holding identical political views with the party Central Committee, resolutely supporting the party's principles and policies formulated since the party's third plenary session and taking the lead in publicizing and implementing the party's four basic principles; having deep love for political work; possessing substantial cultural and production knowledge; being honest and upright and having close ties with the masses of workers. Cadres schools of party schools, trade unions, and CYL and women's federations at all levels should all be responsible for giving regular training to political cadres of enterprises. Universities and colleges concerned should also offer additional special courses in order to turn out a continuous supply of political cadres who have received strict special training.

We firmly believe that with the change of our country's political and economic situation for the better, and with the strengthening and improvement of our party's ideological and political work, an upsurge of communist education characteristic of the new period, with the working class as the main body and centered round the study of Marxism will certainly spring up vigorously!

GUANGMING RIBAO URGES UNIVERSITY PARTY CONGRESSES

[Commentator's article: "An Important Link in Regularizing Party Life in Institutions of Higher Education"]

[Text] In accordance withthe provisions in the party constitution, which requires that party congresses be held every 2 years, the CCP Committee of Qinghua University recently convened a congress as scheduled. This deserves recommendation.

To convene party congresses in universities and colleges by the scheduled time and to give full play to the role of grassroots party organizations as the supreme power organs at their respective levels is of great significance to the strengthening of party leadership in universities and colleges, to the perfection of the party's democratic system and to the improvement of the party's work style. It is important to the strengthening of the sense of organization and discipline and can help change the situation of laxity and weakness in ideological and political work. It is also important to the strengthening of the fighting power of the party organizations and will help give better play to the exemplary role of party members and unite teachers, students and staff members in running the schools well.

After the PRC was founded, the party congress system was gradually established in universities and colleges. However, during the 10 years of turmoil beginning in 1966, this fine democratic system of our party was completely sabotaged. Since smashing the "gang of four," especially since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the party's democratic system has been gradually restored. Many institutions of higher education have convened party congresses to sum up their work experiences and put forth fighting tasks for running the schools well in accordance with the party's line, policies and principles in the new historical period. They have mobilized the socialist enthusiasm of the broad masses of party members, teachers, students and staff members and promoted the building of more revolutionary, younger, better educated and more professional leading bodies. A revitalized new atmosphere has appeared in the work in universities and colleges. This is an encouraging scene. However, it is necessary to point out that although 6 years have passed since the smashing of the "gang of four," some universities and colleges still have not convened party congresses. This is not in keeping with the excellent situation of stability and unity which has appeared in our country during the building of the four modernizations.

In order to successfully convene the party congresses, it is necessary to fully develop a democratic work style and act in strict accordance with the principle of democratic centralism.

According to the experiences of some universities and colleges, in order to fully develop democracy when the party congresses are held, it is necessary to pay special attention to two important links: drafting and discussing the work report and deliberating on and electing candidates to leading bodies. In summing up work experiences, it is necessary to pool the wisdom of the masses and conscientiously absorb their correct ideas so that a good job can be done in summing up experiences, unifying understanding, clarifying tasks and mobilizing the enthusiasm of the masses. In electing formal candidates to the leading bodies, it is necessary to follow the majority and decide on the candidates according to the margin of the vote. It is necessary to provide the voters with necessary personal details of the candidates and make responsible replies and explanations to various questions and opinions from the voters. No organization or individual is allowed to force any voter by any means to elect or not to elect a certain candidate. The rights of party members and representatives must be effectively guaranteed. Any action violating the principle of democratic centralism must be studied and rectified immediately after it is discovered. Serious cases must be dealt with according to party discipline.

It is an important task for party congresses to do a good job in electing members to the leading bodies. Great efforts must be made in electing members who possess both ability and political integrity and are more revolutionary, younger, better educated and more professional. Attention must also be paid to the structure of the leading bodies so that each has a reasonable number of talented, educated and young people. It is necessary to promote a number of outstanding middle-aged and young cadres. It is necessary to appoint people on their merits and unite all comrades who have come from all parts of the country rather than appointing people by favouritism or according to seniority. Those comrades who adhere to the four basic principles, work hard and have achieved good results in their work and those who are highly principled and fair in doing things and dare to struggle against erroneous tendencies, erroneous words and evil practices must be elected to leading bodies without hesitation. Those who have made their fortunes through rebellion, have been seriously influenced by factionalism and have engaged in beating, smashing and looting, as well as those who have seriously violated the regulations on the party's political life in recent years and those who have seriously violated the law and discipline in the economic field must be resolutely expelled from leading bodies. We must strive to make our leading bodies capable, but with fewer people. The number of secretaries and deputy secretaries in a CCP committee generally must be 2 or 3, with the exception of schools having more than 10,000 students, which may have more.

We hope that all universities and colleges will convene their party congresses as required. Those which have not convened party congresses since the smashing of the "gang of four" in particular must actively make preparations to convene congresses as soon as possible. If there are special reasons a congress cannot be convened as required, they should be reported to the CCP committees at the higher levels for approval, as required by the party constitution. The party constitution is a fundamental law for building the party and administering the party's affairs. The CCP committees in universities and colleges should abide by the provisions of the party constitution in an exemplary way and normalize and systematize party life in universities and colleges.

GONGREN RIBAO STRESSES INDUSTRIAL SAFETY

[Editorial: "Do Not Let the Rules and Regulations Become an Empty Paper"]

[Text] In the first half of this year, the industrial and communications enterprises have developed their production steadily, and the overall situation has been favorable. However, some distressing and serious accidents have also occurred. The enterprise leaders and the broad masses of staff members and workers must heighten their vigilance.

For example, the fire at the borneol workshop of Fujian's Fuding County pharmaceutical factory, the crash of passenger plane No 266 of the Guangzhou bureau of the CAAC and the derailment of passenger train No 193 were rather serious accidents. There were few historical parallels in terms of economic losses and political effects. What deserves particular attention is that in some localities and departments, the accidents involved heavy losses of life and property and occurred frequently, and similar accidents happened time and again. Once an accident has occurred, instead of taking a warning from it, people allow similar accidents to happen again and again. This is why the problem is serious.

The State Council's recent "Urgent Circular on Strengthening Leadership and Preventing Fatal Accidents From Reoccurring in Enterprises" pointed out that the major factors accounting for various accidents are the chaotic enterprise management system, certain leading cadres' have neglected their duties and given directions against the regulations, and some workers not having worked in compliance with the operational regulations. According to the investigation and analysis of a few recent serious accidents carried out by the state labor departments, about 70 percent of the accidents were caused by directions and operations contrary to regulations.

We should stress that the principles of working in compliance with the regulations and observing discipline and ensuring production safety are repeated injunctions. At the beginning of this year, the State Council promulgated once again three "regulations" on production safety; and emphatically put forth the idea of taking inspection of action in violation of regulations and discipline as the crux of the "safety month" campaign. However, it so happens that that is where the problem lies. This shows that in order to ensure production safety, it is necessary to put an end to all phenomena against regulations and discipline by seriously summing up experiences and adopting practical measures.

The current problem is not that there are no regulations to guide us or that there is no discipline for us to observe, but that people are not observing the rules and regulations and are violating discipline. What accounts for such a situation? The major factors are as follows:

Scrambling for more work tasks and striving for production beyond the quota, neglecting the principle of "safety first." In certain plants where the production responsibility system of assigning work tasks is implemented, work tasks which need 8 hours' work are always hastily completed in 5 hours, so that there will be "no more work for that day after finishing this task." In some other plants, although the production quotas have reached the saturation point, plant authorities still work blindly, violating the regulations and disregarding safety, in order to strive for production beyond the quota and to get more bonuses.

Giving customary directions against the regulations. Many people turn a blind eye to serious problems and have gotten used to them. They always say that "everybody is doing the same thing and there have not been any accidents." Their ideology is leaving everything to chance.

Cadres in enterprises and workers lack essential scientific knowledge. They are not adopting scientific practices, know nothing about scientific management and are working in a barbarous manner.

There is insufficient technical equipment which guarantees production safety. Some people use the pretext of not having sufficient capital and delay things which should have been done. In some other cases, although certain things have been done, they are mere formalities which have never been used. Much of the new equipment has been put aside to rust and is just an empty shell.

No essential education and training in production safety techniques has been launched among the cadres and the workers. It is very common for new workers to start work without knowing "what to do and how to do it." As a result, they do not know how to handle emergencies and cause serious accidents.

Management and discipline have not been strictly enforced and rules and regulations have not been observed in actual practice. The derailment of the passenger train No 193 was caused by the railway workers' absence from duty for the sake of buying Popsicles. According to the investigation of a RENMIN TIELU BAO [PEOPLE'S RAILWAY NEWS] reporter, the absence from duty of this railway station's supervisor and workers is a "common phenomenon." Apart from eating Pepsicles at work, they have also eaten apples, drunk beer, chased after wild dogs, caught rats and talked about "The Three Kingdoms" and "Yue Fei." As we heard, such shocking phenomena against regulations and discipline are not only found in the Dahushan section of the Ministry of Railways, but are also commonly found in other trades and departments.

Law and order have not been strictly enforced and people who cause accidents as a result of violating the operational regulations and directions have been too leniently dealt with. As a result, many cadres and workers simply turn a blind eye and deaf ear to the rules and regulations.

The fundamental reason accounting for the serious phenomenon of breaking the regulations and violating discipline is chaotic enterprise management and slack discipline. Over the last few years, the number of cadres promoted and workers recruited has been on the increase, but training in operational safety is out of tune with this. The good tradition prior to the "Cultural Revolution" of strictly abiding by rules and regulations and discipline and good work style has not been restored or developed. In addition, leading cadres at all levels fail to set a good example for others. Thus, although there is a complete set of management rules and regulations, they are just empty papers in certain departments and enterprises. No one has paid close attention to the "rules" and "regulations" written down on paper. They just do what they want and when accidents occur, they are not appropriately punished for the losses incurred. We would like to ask, if we let such phenomena drag on, when can we put an end to them?

The problems are found at the lower levels but the root of the problem is in the leadership. In order to thoroughly change the serious situation of breaking rules and regulations and violating discipline, it is necessary, first of all, to make an obvious change in the ideology of the leaders. This demands that the leaders develop the idea of relying on the masses and grasp education in observing regulations and discipline as a major event in promoting production safety. It is necessary to work in close connection with straightening out enterprises, strengthening management, conscientiously implementing the system of personal responsibility (including the system of personal responsibility of cadres at all levels), strictly rectifying labor discipline, improving technical training and strictly enforcing the regulation of forbidding recruitment of workers who have not passed the required examinations.

The broad masses of workers at the forefront of production are the ones who directly exercise the various rules and regulations. Thus, they must know and observe the rules and regulations. First of all, they are required to "know," to seriously learn "what to do and how to do it" and to familiarize themselves with the regulations and discipline in relation to their post; second, they are required to "observe" them without delay and to conscientiously and meticulously implement them. The broad masses of workers must set a good example in abiding by regulations and discipline, and they must also supervise the work of the leading cadres in enforcing rules and regulations. They must be bold in resisting to the end and resolutely struggle against the bureaucratic practice of leaders who neglect their duty and give directions against the regulations.

We believe that so long as we make practical improvements in the above-mentioned areas, we will improve the chaotic situation of breaking regulations and violating discipline and will gradually form a good atmosphere in which everyone observes regulations and discipline, and in which safety and civilization is ensured.

RENMIN RIBAO ON STRENGTHENING PLANNING WORK

[Article by Xu Jingan [1776 2529 1344]: "A Talk on Strengthening and Improving Planning Work" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] At present, the key to handling well the relationship between planning and the market lies in strengthening and improving planned management, strengthening the scientific nature of planning and upholding the serious nature of planning.

FIRST, IT IS NECESSARY TO CONCENTRATE THE MAJOR PORTION OF OUR ENERGY ON STUDYING WELL THE STRATEGY, OVERALL ARRANGEMENT AND PROGRAM OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. Our previous shortcoming in planning work was in busily dividing the investments and materials without adequately studying the major problems of economic development so that the result often was passivity and faults in the overall situation. Socialism is planned economy. It is indeed necessary to divide the money and materials; however, the key to the rational distribution of funds and materials lies in choosing a correct strategy of economic development, determining a rational arrangement of productive forces and formulating a feasible economic development plan. Only by studying these major problems well will it be possible for us to have a basic precondition for bringing into play the superiority of socialist planned economy. With respect to the strategy of economic development, it is necessary to assign a number of people to engage in long-term and special studies. We have begun this work, and it is necessary for us to maintain its stability and continuity. It is all the more necessary to place the study of the overall arrangement of productive forces and planning on the agenda. At present, special efforts should be made to draw up development plans for the various trades and professions, as well as plans for the various economic regions. This is an intermediate link in exercising macroscopic controls and regulating microcosmic activities. Without doing a good job of these two tasks, the current readjustment, reorganization and technological transformation of enterprises will lack a scientific basis and the duplication of newly built enterprises will be unavoidable. However, the work of drawing up plans for the various trades and professions has made little headway and the work of drawing up plans for the various economic regions has not got underway. It is necessary to change this state of affairs as speedily as possible.

SECOND, IT IS NECESSARY TO RATIONALLY DETERMINE THE SCOPE OF CENTRALIZED MANAGEMENT. With respect to important economic activities that have a strong bearing on the overall economic situation, it is necessary to strengthen centralized management. First, efforts should be made to control the increase of accumulation and consumption and surpassing these controlled increases will not be permitted. Second, efforts should be made to control those goods in excess supply and those in short supply. With respect to products in excess supply, it is necessary to forbid the building of new factories and the expansion of production capacity and excessive production; with respect to products which have to be developed because of short supply, it is necessary to draw up plans and determine the criteria, and rushing headlong into mass action will not be permitted. Third, efforts should be made to control the purchase, allocation and distribution of important products. It is necessary to investigate and affix the responsibility for the failure in fulfilling the plan, which has been caused by subjective factors and it is necessary to make up for the deficiencies in the future if the failure in fulfilling the plan has been caused by objective factors. In order to ensure the fulfillment of the plan, it is necessary to assign mandatory targets on a number of important economic activities. However, the scope of the mandatory targets is too great, the state will find it difficult to maintain a balance and to make the plans dovetail, the enterprises will exclusively rely on the state without bearing any responsibilities, and this is not conducive to improving product quality, increasing variety and improving the economic results. The scope of the mandatory targets should be limited to major goods in excess supply and those in short supply which have a strong bearing on the national economy and the people's livelihood and whose varieties and specifications are simple. They should correspond to our management levels and should be based on the principle that we can manage them well.

THIRD, IT IS NECESSARY TO BRING INTO PLAY THE REGULATING ROLE OF THE ECONOMIC LEVERAGE. The application of economic means to regulate and manage the economy should constitute an important component of the planned management work. In the course of reforms, the enterprises have their own economic interests. This makes it possible and also necessary to employ economic means to affect and guide their economic activities so that they accord with the plans' requirements. While drawing up the state plan, it is necessary to study corresponding policies such as price, tax revenue and credit. In the future, with the development of production, it will be necessary to readjust irrational prices in a planned way. With respect to the price of major products which involve many aspects, it is necessary to gradually readjust the price over several fiscal years; with respect to the price of general products which do not involve many aspects, it is necessary to readjust them once a year. Efforts should be made to uphold the practice of fixing better prices for better quality goods. On the question of price, we must act cautiously but we should not for this reason refrain from doing a lot of arduous and meticulous work that can be done and that is permissible. It is necessary to rationally readjust the tariff rate. It is necessary to raise the tariff rate on high-priced products that bring in great profits and on enterprises run by communes and production brigades that compete for raw materials with major industries. Efforts should be made to rectify the incorrect methods of doing things characterized by a willingness to reduce or remit taxes and an unwillingness to increase the tariff rate. Most of the jurisdiction of tax management should be returned to the central authorities. This should be an effective means for preventing duplicate construction and blind production and for regulating the economy. It is necessary to formulate a rational monetary policy and bring into play the leverage of interest rates. With respect to technological transformation, which is conducive to energy conservation but lacks the capability for repayment, it is necessary to grant low-interest or interest-free loans. Efforts should be made to bring into play the functions of the bank in raising, utilizing, managing and supervising funds.

FOURTH, IT IS NECESSARY TO INSTITUTE AND IMPROVE THE PLANNING WORK SYSTEM SO AS TO MAKE OUR PLANS AND POLICY DECISIONS MORE SCIENTIFIC AND RATIONAL. Great efforts should be made to institute and improve the network of economic information and to accurately and sensitively gather market information, which serves as a basis for drawing up and revising plans. It is necessary to establish the system of planning consulting work and to organize the relevant economic units, the departments in charge of the work, experts and people's deputies to discuss important economic plans and policy decisions. It is necessary to formulate the procedure for drawing up, examining and approving, as well as revising plans, and institute the corresponding responsibility systems. With respect to major errors committed despite the efforts made to avoid them, it is necessary to investigate and affix responsibility for the errors.

FIFTH, IT IS NECESSARY TO IMPROVE THE METHODS OF PLANNING. We should practice the system of drawing up plans by combining the efforts of the higher levels with those of the lower levels. All mandatory targets should be assigned to the lower levels according to the following method, that is, the targets assigned to the lower levels should first be discussed by the grassroots units and then reported to the higher levels. If there are some different views about the targets, it is necessary to help, in light of the different conditions, the enterprises solve problems in production, readjust the prices or tax revenue or revise the targets; when the overall targets cannot be changed in view of the overall interests, it is necessary to maintain the original targets and then issue the directives. All targets for reference purposes should be assigned to the lower levels according to the following methods. The targets issued to the lower levels should be reported for the record to the higher levels after they have been discussed by the grass-roots units. If they do not conform to the plan's requirements, we should chiefly employ economic methods to guide them. If necessary, administrative methods may also be employed.

SIXTH, IT IS NECESSARY TO STEP UP BASIC WORK ON PLANNING. It is necessary to draw up criteria for setting up factories and determine the technical standards for production. The system of permits for the setting up of factories and for production should be practiced. Those which conform to the criteria should be permitted to set up factories, go into production and market their products. It is necessary to fix quotas for the distribution and consumption of materials. Those which exceed the fixed quotas should be subjected to economic sanctions. It is necessary to institute and improve the target systems which reflect the economic results and adopt the corresponding systems of reward and punishment in order to improve the economic effects.

Ours is a socialist country which practices planned economy. We must uphold the idea of taking the whole country into account. No localities, departments and enterprises should disregard the overall interests by placing the partial interests of their own units above the overall interests. A fundamental principle of reform that must be upheld is to fully arouse the initiative of the various aspects and enliven the economy on the basis of conforming to the overall interests and the coordinated development of the economy. We must abide by this principle. Given an economic dislocation, it is all the more necessary to proceed from the overall interests, strive to reverse as speedily as possible the disproportionate ratio and irrational structure, and restore the balance of the national economy. However, while overcoming the tendencies of decentralism and departmentalism, it is also necessary to prevent the inappropriate expansion of the scope of direct control and the repetition of the previous mistakes of excessive centralism and excessively rigid management. That is to say, while stressing market and regulation by market mechanism, we should not overlook the role of planning by only paying attention to activating the economy and by taking a laissez-faire attitude; and, while stressing planning and regulation by planning mechanism, we should not overlook the role of regulation by market mechanism by excessively rigid management. In solving the problems of planning and market, we should have a correct and stable theory as our guide. The "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" pointed out: "It is necessary to have planned economy and at the same time give play to the supplementary, regulatory role of the market on the basis of public ownership. We must strive to promote commodity production and exchange on a socialist basis." This has determined the fundamental orientation for the reforms of our economic systems. If we take this as our standard in understanding and handling the problems of planning and market, we shall never vacillate or deviate from the correct orientation.

FIRST IMPLEMENTATION ACTION OF PRODUCTION PERMIT SYSTEM

[Excerpts] Beijing, 3 Aug (XINHUA) -- Recently, low-voltage electric appliance products of 118 specifications and 15 series produced by 84 factories in the country have passed strict technical examination and approval by the Ministry of Machine Building Industry and become the first group of products to receive production permits. Issuing production permits to manufactured goods meeting quality standards is a measure of technical legislature and is implemented on a trial basis for the first time in our country.

According to stipulations by the Ministry of Machine Building Industry, the low-voltage electrical appliances, which have obtained production permits, must from now on have their permit numbers or marks indicated on their nameplates at the time they leave the factory. Low-voltage electrical appliances which have been examined and failed to obtain permits should not continue to be produced and marketed by the factories concerned. Violations of this rule will be investigated to affix responsibility on both factories and users.

Low-voltage electric appliances include automatic air switches, relays, alternating contactors, low-voltage fuses and so forth. Following low-voltage electric appliances, concerned departments in our country are conducting examination and assessment of such products as boilers, kilowatt-hour meters and so forth, planning to issue production permits on these products consecutively.

CONFERENCE ON CONSTRUCTION WORK ENDS IN BEIJING

[Text] Beijing, 3 Aug (XINHUA) -- A national conference on quality and safety of architectural projects concluded in Beijing on 3 August. The conference summarized the experiences and lessons gained in architectural work in the past 2 years and called on architectural enterprises in all localities to strengthen leadership, respect science, enforce rigorous management and prevent accidents caused by poor quality or disregard for safety.

Since 1980 our country has made tremendous achievements in promoting architectural work. In housing construction alone, some 1.1 billion square meters of floor space of housing has been built in rural areas and nearly 200 million square meters in towns and cities. However, some cases of housing collapse caused by poor quality of construction have been reported; there also exists a serious problem concerning the quality of architectural work in some projects that are still under construction or have already been completed and thus there is a danger of possible accidents.

In order to solve this problem, the conference called on leadership at all levels and on all workers and staffs engaged in architectural work to firmly foster the idea that "construction projects, which are to last for generations, require good quality above everything else," to take the work of ensuring quality and safety of projects as a task of primary importance and to carry out this work in every field of construction and management.

The conference held that strengthening leadership over collective architectural enterprises is of great importance to improving the quality of architectural projects as well as to promoting safety in construction work. The number of people working for collective architectural teams in both urban and rural areas throughout the country has reached some 6 million and they are shouldering quite a considerable amount of construction work.

In order to put an end to the current confusion in the management of architectural contingents, the architectural departments of all provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions should follow the example of Jiangsu Province by setting up organs at all levels specifically charged with architectural work and carry out unified leadership over collective architectural enterprises. Overall supervision and administration should be enforced over those construction teams that hail from counties or communes and enter cities to do construction work so as to prevent and overcome cases of arbitrarily inviting construction teams to do construction work in the cities, or of carrying out construction work in a crude and slipshod manner.

The conference stressed that the current procedures for capital construction, designing and construction work adopted by our country are a scientific summation of many years of practice and experience. These procedures must be strictly followed and should never be violated. As for those people who cause accidents by designing, construction or issuing instructions in an arbitrary manner, they should be handled in accordance with the seriousness of the case. We may go so far as to enforce the law on them but we should never yield to them.

The conference was held in Beijing by the Ministry of Urban and Rural Construction and Environmental Protection.

MINISTRY URGES PROMOTING SCIENTIFIC PIG RAISING

OW021358 Beijing XINHUA in English 1220 GMT 2 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 2 (XINHUA) -- Measures should be taken to promote scientific pig raising to improve economic results, the animal husbandry bureau of the Ministry of Agriculture, Animal Husbandry and Fishery is urging. In the first of 1982, the bureau said, the number of the country's pigs in stock began to rise, resulting in a corresponding increase in purchases.

However, economic results are not satisfactory, because 90 percent of China's pigs are raised by individual peasants by conventional methods.

The measures suggested by the bureau to solve the problem include the cross-breeding of pigs. Compared with ordinary pigs, the bureau said, cross-bred pigs grow 15 percent to 20 percent faster and produce much more pork.

The bureau called for efforts to raise more lean-meat pigs to meet increasing demand.

Under the bureau's suggestion, the state should concentrate funds on construction of additive producing factories, while people's communes and their subdivisions raise funds to set up small fodder processing factories or workshops. Peasants should be encouraged to feed pigs with specially prepared fodder.

The bureau also called for improving the service of local veterinary stations, training veterinarians and rendering cooperative medical service for pig diseases.

Peasant families throughout China specializing in raising pigs should be used as examples for scientific pig raising, the bureau said.

COAL INDUSTRY VICE MINISTER ON FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

OW030842 Beijing XINHUA in English 0750 GMT 3 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 3 (XINHUA) -- Newly appointed Chinese Vice-Minister of Coal Industry Yu Hongen, a former miner who first went down the pits at the age of 15, says the ministry is going all out to put China's coal industry on course to healthy, stable development, yielding increasingly better economic results.

Speaking in his distinctive Shandong accent, Yu Hongen said that in the next ten to 20 years, the ministry will focus its attention on raising the level of mechanization of coal mines. "We must see to it that development of the industry keep pace with the country's overall economic development," he said.

Coal accounts for 70 percent of China's energy output, the vice-minister said. The Ministry of Coal Industry commands an army of 4.5 million miners and servicing workers who produced 620 million tons of coal last year.

In this period, Yu Hongen said, efforts will be concentrated on mechanizing the major operations in coal production, including coal cutting, tunnelling and transportation in the pits. New coal dressing and gasification plants are planned to raise the utilization rate of the abundant fossil fuel, Yu Hongen told XINHUA.

More modern safety devices will be installed in the mines, he added.

At 55, this robust man is one of the middle-aged group who have been promoted to senior posts since the beginning of this year, as large numbers of veterans have retired in favor of younger colleagues.

Shortly after he was appointed vice-minister last March, Yu Hongen went to the Xishan coal mining administration near Taiyuan, capital of Shanxi Province, where he inspected work and talked with miners to acquire a first-hand knowledge about the situation. He went down into the pits almost every day, working a dozen hours at a stretch.

"I was a miner 40 years ago and I still am," he said.

Born into a peasant family in Shandong Province in 1927, Yu Hongen in 1942 became a laborer in Hegang, a coal center in northeast China's Heilongjiang Province, then under the rule of the Japanese invaders.

The Japanese surrendered in 1945 and soon afterwards northeast China was liberated. Yu Hongen, then a miner, was rapidly promoted and became a squad leader. He later became a section head and still later a mine director. He was secretary of the Communist Party Committee of the Hegang coal mining administration before assuming present responsibilities.

Between 1956 and 1961 he was recalled from work for study at the Beijing Institute of Mining where he received vocational and theoretical training that augmented to his considerable practical experience.

The leading body of the Ministry of Coal Industry was streamlined last March in an effort to simplify administration and improve efficiency. The ministry is now headed by Minister Gao Yangwen and four vice-ministers. They average 54.8 years old against 64.5 years for the minister and 14 vice-ministers before the reorganization took place.

The national drive to streamline administration was launched in line with the principle of selecting relatively young people with a high level of political consciousness and expertise to leading posts. Of the five men who head the Ministry of Coal Industry, three are college-trained experts.

Yu Hongen is father of four children. He lives a simple life and often takes meals at the public canteen of the ministry.

COMPILATION OF PALEOGEOGRAPHIC ATLAS REPORTED

OW301320 Beijing XINHUA in English 1209 GMT 30 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 30 (XINHUA) -- A paleogeographic atlas of China has been compiled here, according to the Chinese Academy of Geological Sciences.

"The Atlas of Paleogeography of China" consists of 119 maps which present the tectonic evolution of the earth's crust and geographical development at different geologic periods. Included are paleotectonic maps, paleogeographic maps, as well as others showing the distribution of paleontological zones, paleoclimatic belts and volcanic racks and glaciers, and sketch profiles showing sedimentation.

The atlas documents and exhibits China's achievements in regional surveys and geologic scientific research. The atlas has been compiled by the Chinese Academy of Geological Sciences and the Wuhan Geological Institute under the auspices of the Ministry of Geology and Minerals. With Professor Wang Hongzhen, president of the Wuhan Geological Institute, as chief editor, over 30 scientists from both units participated in the work, which started in late 1979.

An appraisal board including established Chinese geologists Huang Jiqing, Ye Lianjun and Zhu Xia has examined the atlas. The board found it to be valuable for the study of formation and distribution of sedimentary minerals as well as the evolution of tectonic system in China.

The new atlas, together with the atlas of geological maps of China, the atlas of tectonic maps of China and the table of regional geological strata of China published earlier, form the basis for studying Chinese geology, according to the appraisal board. The new atlas will have attached charts and captions, with some of the captions to be printed in both Chiense and English. It will be issued both at home and abroad.

ZHONGGUO WENXUE PUBLISHES NEW ENGLISH PAPERBACKS

[Text] Beijing, August 3 (XINHUA) -- Six new books have recently been added to the English language Panda paperback book series, published by the editorial board of the magazine CHINESE LITERATURE.

Among the titles, four are by modern writers. One, "Beneath the Red Banner", is an autobiographical novel by Lao She, one of modern China's best loved writers, published posthumously. The author of the classic "Camel Xiangzi" (Rickshaw Boy) and the drama "Teahouse", Lao She died in 1966, leaving "Beneath the Red Banner" unfinished. It is an account of life in Beijing at the turn of the century and is told with wit, warmth, candor and sympathy.

"Seven Contemporary Chinese Women Writers" is a selection of stories and reportage by these women writers with a wide spectrum of experience. They present a preceptive cross-section of life in China, writing mainly about the later part of the 1970s. With honesty, courage and sensibility they explain the new generation gap in China, the cynicism of some of the youth, the avid pursuit of knowledge and skills of others, the difficulties of young married couples in overcrowded cities, or of professional women who want also to be good wives and mothers. These themes, realistically drawn, project the quality of life in China, the comradeship and love which lighten difficulties, and the growing sense of the value of the individual.

Two other books in the series by modern writers are "A Pitiful Plaything and Other Essays" and "Recollections of West Hunan". The first one is by Li Guangtian, who wrote these essays in the 1930s or 1940s. He provides authentic glimpses of the grinding poverty and simple pleasures of peddlers, carters, fishermen, pilgrims and beggars. Shen Congwen, author of "Recollections of West Hunan," is a distinguished scholar of the Tujia nationality, one of the minority nationalities in China. In these recollections he describes his boyhood there and the life and customs of the local people.

Drawing on the wealth of classical Chinese novels, two of the newly released Panda books are "Excerpts From Three Classical Chinese Novels" and "Selected Tales of Liaozhai".

The excerpts are from "The Three Kingdoms," a historical novel that covers the hundred years from 184-280 A.D. and describes the rise and fall of the kingdoms of Wei, Shu and Wu. "Pilgrimage to the West" tells how monkey and his friends accompany the monk on his journey westward, vanquishing monsters and facing dangers en route and "Flowers in the Mirror" is an early 19th century novel which satirizes the social mores of that period. Like "Guillivers Travels" by Jonathan Swift, the hero Tang Ao travels to strange lands and sees incredible sights.

Seventeen stories have been included in the "Selected Tales of Liaozhai," a book written shortly after the founding of the Qing Dynasty. Through the stories of fox-fairies, ghosts and other strange spirits, meting out rewards and punishments to good or erring mortals, the author expresses his hostility to the new Manchu rules and their corrupt officials.

The paperback series of Panda books was launched last year on the 30th anniversary of the magazine CHINESE LITERATURE published in English and French. So far ten Panda books have been published. Another seven or eight books are scheduled to be brought out by the end of this year. Among the titles will be "The Selected Stories of the 30s", "Legends About Beijing" and a long poem by wellknown Chinese poet Ai Qing.

The situation is encouraging. However, there are still quite a few problems in the economic field in the province, and serious efforts are needed to solve them. JIANGSU CAPITAL CONSTRUCTION PROBLEMS NOTED

OW030449 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 2 Aug 82

[Text] A responsible comrade of the provincial capital construction committee made a statement to this reporter on 29 July. He pointed out: Capital construction departments in various localities of the province did a large amount of work and achieved some results during the first half of this year.

However, captial construction projects were not completed in a very ideal way and economic results achieved were not excellent. In particular, there is the serious situation of local projects being completed in a better way than state projects and ordinary projects being completed in a better way than major projects.

Such a situation in which the order of the primary and the secondary was reversed should be promptly put to an end. Therefore, a task of top priority is for various localities to conscientiously attend to the projects financed by the state or the province and to the completion of major projects and large and medium-sized projects during the second half of the year so as to guarantee the completion of these projects on a priority basis.

The responsible comrade of the provinical capital construction committee stressed that all prefectures and municipalities would proceed from the general interest, make an earnest examination of capital construction projects completed during the first half of the year, and take reliable and effective measures to promptly carry out the following tasks:

1. Strict control of the scale of construction projects -- capital construction departments in various localities should make strict checks to prevent unrealistic or duplicated construction work.

2. Fostering a viewpoint of attending to overall interests -- efforts should be concentrated on completing projects financed by the state or the province as well as major projects. Appropriate measures should be taken in due time to solve various problems that may arise in the course of construction work. As for those projects that failed to be completed on schedule, investigations should be made to find out the cause of the failure, and appropriate measures should be taken to guarantee that the projects will be completed within the time limit and put into operation or the rate of construction work will be carried out in accordance with the schedule. Efforts should be concentrated on completing the projects approved by the state for completion within reasonable time limits. These projects include (Yichang) chemical fiber industrial joint company, (Huaihai) cement plant, (Chuanshan) limestone mine linked to the Baoshan iron and steel plant in Shanghai and (Muhushan) muscovite mine.

3. Efforts should be made to guarantee that the floor space for housing for urban people to be completed this year will not be less than that completed last year. At the same time, efforts should be made to complete auxiliary facilities on schedule so that they can be handed over to residents for use.

4. Efforts should be made to shorten the time limit set for various projects and to raise economic results of projects completed. At the present it is most important to carry out the projects that are under construction so that the state plans for construction projects can be completed within the time limit.

HAINAN DEALS WITH JUSTICE OBSTRUCTION CASE

HK290946 Haikou Hainan Island Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Summary] A case of the course of justice being obstructed and of judicial work personnel being beaten up occurred recently in Wanning County. Five criminals were arrested and many people were commended for protecting the judicial work personnel.

(Liu Gumei) of Nanxing brigade of Beituo Commune was a married woman. While she was working in Shandong Commune as a part-time worker, she again married this time to Li Baqun, a member of Shandong Commune. Thus, she committed bigamy. As a result, Li was sentenced to 2 months' imprisonment by the county people's court. However, after serving his sentence, Li began living with Liu Gumei again. In order to carry out justice, seven county judicial work personnel went to their home in Hongshan brigade and wanted to escort Liu back to her husband's home. Liu resisted and made trouble, attracting about 300 to 400 spectators. The judicial personnel patiently explained the case to the spectators and sent Lui's children away in a car. However, the relatives of Li and some people who did not know the truth beat up the five remaining judicial work personnel. One of the judicial work personnel fainted and his gun was seized by the troublemakers. While the troublemakers attacked the judicial work personnel, many people protected the latter.

Since this incident, the municipal departments concerned have paid close attention to the handling of this case and have made decisions. The public security organs, procuratorial organs and people's courts have organized joint work teams to seriously deal with this case. As of 27 July, five criminals had been arrested and the case is still under investigation.

HENAN TAKES MEASURES, PRECAUTIONS AGAINST FLOODS

Urgent Notice Issued

HK010839 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 31 Jul 82

[Summary] The Henan Provincial CCP Committee and Government issued an urgent circular on 30 July on strengthening antiflood precautions. The circular said: "Due to the influence of typhoon No 9, rain fell throughout western and northern Henan on the night of 29 July. Centered on Ruyang and Song Counties, heavy and torrential rain fell in several counties in the western part of the province. As a result large flood crests have appeared on the Beiru and Yiluo Rivers." The flood crest reaching the Huayuankou station on the Huang He on the morning of 1 August may be as much as 10,000 cubic meters per second.

"Particularly noteworthy is the fact that the center of this torrential rain will persist for a time in the middle and lower reaches of the Huang He and in the province. Heavy and torrential rain will continue today and tomorrow. Thus the province's all-round struggle against flood, centered on the Huang He, has entered a critical stage." It is therefore necessary to carry out the following urgent tasks:

1. Concentrate forces for antiflood precautions, focusing on the Huang He. All prefectures and municipalities concerned must pay close attention to the situation and take adequate precautions.

2. Ensure that communications keep flowing freely. All areas and the departments concerned must strengthen precautions to keep traffic open and prepare shock forces to be ready to deal with any stoppages.

3. Organize forces to guard dangerous rivers and embankments and ensure that the material required is on hand.

4. Strengthen leadership. The provincial Huang He antiflood office and the provincial antiflood office must keep an accurate watch on the flood situation, step up liaison work and issue timely reports.

[Text] According to a HUNAN RIBAO report, Hunan Province recently held a provincial forum in Changsha on rectifying grassroots party organizations. The forum conveyed and studied the speeches of leading central officials and the relevant documents of the Organization Department of the CCP Central Committee, and emphatically studied the question of rectifying grassroots party organizations in factories, mines and enterprises, rural areas and on various fronts. In order to do a better job of this work, the forum pointed out that it is necessary to pay attention to solving the following questions:

1. Leaders at all levels must enhance their understanding of the significance of rectifying the grassroots party organizations and must unite in their understanding of the spirit of the CCP Central Committee's directives.

2. We must uphold the principle of attaching primary importance to ideological rectification. We must take grasping well the party members' ideological education as the crux of rectifying the grassroots party organizations.

3. We must seriously rectify and build leadership groups and practically solve the questions of impure party spirit, incorrect work style, lethargy, infringing upon unity, the state of laxness and weakness, and so forth.

The objective of carrying out this rectification is to give full play to the leading role of party committees, the fighting role of party branches and the exemplary roles of party members. The specific demands are: 1) Seriously implement the party's line, principles and policies. 2) Vigorously turn the leadership groups into a leadership nucleus which consists of younger, more revolutionary, more educated and more professional cadres. 3) Strengthen political and ideological guidance and overcome the phenomenon in which party committees are preoccupied with administrative affairs and not minding their own affairs. 4) Set up and perfect various rules and regulations inside the party. 5) Basically check various unsavory trends and improve the relationship between the party and the masses. 6) Improve work and production and improve economic returns of enterprises. All units must work in compliance with these six demands and carry out inspections before acceptance.

CHANGES IN BEIJING GARMENT INDUSTRY NOTED

[Text] Beijing, July 30 (XINHUA) -- While sales of manufactured garments in big department stores went down by 30 percent this summer, the city's 780 made-to-order tailor shops reported that they have more work than they can handle.

This revealed a new trend -- that the people are no longer satisfied with uniformity. They want something new, something with originality. Interviews with the city's leading dressmakers and managers showed some aspects of this trend.

"The state supports competition", said Du Jiuqun of the Beijing Garment Corporation. For the 179 state-owned tailor shops alone, the corporation is subsidizing over one million yuan in material and apprentice training. "Competition would force the garment factories to think and to cater to what the people want", Du said.

Beijing is producing 70 million garments a year, averaging seven for each resident. Fashion study groups have been set up in the state factories and the motto is "smaller batches, quicker changes, greater variety."

"I think the time when people would buy whatever is available is past. Now the textile and garment industries have to meet consumer demands and they are working hard", said Zhao Yuming, in charge of planning department of the city's knitwear corporation. Designers under the corporation have been busy visiting senior tailors and buyers of different ages and professions.

57-year-old tailor Ma Hongxiang, of Fenghuang dress making shop on Wangfujing Street, said after over 40 years experience in Shanghai and Beijing he is now able to display talent and taste. His shop, one of the best famed in Beijing, accepts orders for 120 silk dresses and blouses and 100 light woolen suits every day and still many customers have to be turned away. "Some young people bring their own patterns of bad taste. I think I am a veteran enough to give the kids a piece of sound advice. And they listen to me", the old tailor smiled.

Silk is in heavy demand this summer. The Beijing Textiles Company's wholesale department had put in stock 20.7 million meters of silk fabrics. This is more than two meters for every Beijing resident. The company also put an additional 200,000 meters of light woolen fabrics on the market this year. Jersey, silk and light woolen fabrics, and cream colored polysters are selling fast.

Flowery silk dresses are very much welcome by young women. But more fitting and nicer color slacks still remain the most popular form of dressing because they are convenient in work and in bicycle riding. So, the emphasis is on blouses, with embroidery and ruffles. Peculiar dressing, however, like very short shorts, drew stares from onlookers, but not approval.

Fashion has also come to men. The number of safari jackets is increasing and men's shirts have developed from white, pale blue and grey into chequered and some with woven patterns.

HEBEI RIBAO URGES LEADERS FIGHT ECONOMIC CRIME

[Commentator's article: "Leaders Must Personally Grasp Major and Important Cases"]

[Text] Hebei Province has achieved initial results in the struggle to attack serious criminal activities in the economic field, organized the investigation and handling of several cases and punished a number of criminals according to law.

Under the influence of the party's policy and deterred by the law, a substantial number of criminals have surrendered themselves to the judicial departments. This has greatly educated the cadres and masses, and brought about great improvements in the general mood of society and of the party. Judging from the current situation, there is still a great gap between the achievements Hebei Province has gained and the expectation of the party Central Committee. The main problem is that we have not firmly grasped the key points of major and important cases. The progress of examining and dealing with major and important cases is slow. This problem should attract great attention of leaders at various levels, and effective measures should be adopted immediately to solve these problems.

Criminal offenses in the economic field are major manifestations of the current class struggle, and the struggle to attack serious criminal activities is a prolonged task and an important guarantee for accomplishing the "four modernizations." But there are some units and leaders that have not included this serious struggle, which concerns the success or failure of the four modernizations and the life or death of the party and state, in the agenda. The comrades in charge have not personally grasped major and important cases. All the above are the main factors resulting in inefficiency of leadership, weak momentum and slow progress in examining and dealing with major and important cases in this struggle. In order to reverse this passive situation, the leaders at various levels, particularly at the top level, should personally grasp major and important cases, and crack a number of major and important cases in a short time. They should make this public with great fanfare and lead the struggle deeper.

The reason leaders should personally grasp major and important cases is due to the seriousness of the current struggle. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, we have eliminated the erroneous "leftist" guiding ideology of the past and have practiced a policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy. All this has brought about a steady advance in industrial development, an entirely new look in agriculture and an immense improvement in the people's life. In this favorable situation, the economic criminals are seizing opportunities to sabotage our economic construction. Therefore, it is imperative to grasp the two aspects -- on the one hand, we must practice an open policy externally and a lively economic policy internally and on the other, we must persist in attacking the serious criminal activities in the economic field, particularly demanding that leaders personally grasp major and important cases. If we attach importance to the former but ignore the latter or even give up the struggle against the corrosive influence of capitalist ideas and slacken the attack on economic criminal activities, then these criminal activities will spread daily and sabotage our socialist cause. The party committees at various levels should be soberminded, attach great importance to this matter, work vigorously and speedily, and have a firm hold of and personally grasp this serious struggle that concerns the life and death of the party.

The characteristic of the criminal activities in the economic field is that these criminals disguise themselves under the pretext of legality or even go through the full formalities. They promote intrigue between the inside and the outside, have connections with the top levels and the grassroots and have relationships at various levels to protect them from being accused. From the past struggle to attack economic crime, we discovered that the more major and important the cases, the more protection they have from the top. Some involve leading cadres of the locality, enterprises and departments concerned, and in some cases there is interference by factionalism. The protectors set up obstructions, divulge secret information to the criminals, absolve them from guilt and sometimes even join with the criminals in resisting examination. If the principal leaders fail to personally grasp the matter or lack great determination, it will be impossible to break through this relationship and protection net. Therefore, the main leaders should personally grasp the major and important local cases, and persevere in eliminating the protection network. Whether the interference and obstruction comes from the top or local levels, or from the same level or from factions, it must be removed. As to those leaders who have set up obstructions and who protect these criminals, we must seriously criticize and educate them, find out their relationship with the criminals and investigate and affix their responsibilities.

One of the prominent problems existing in the attack against economic crime is that people feel embarrassed in accusing cadres, particularly leading cadres that have committed crimes. Under socialism, after instituting the policy of opening up to the world and enlivening the domestic economy, there still exists struggle between bourgeois corrosion and proletarian opposition to corrosion; there is still the danger of the "peaceful evolution from socialism to capitalism," and the danger of the peaceful evolution comes mainly from within the party, particularly from the degeneration of senior and middle-grade leading cadres. Their crimes have caused great harm to the image and reputation of the party and done serious damage to the state. Therefore their criminal behavior should be strictly punished. Tolerating such evil-doing, shielding it or turning a blind eye to it and trying to turn big problems into small ones and small problems to no problems, are intolerable in party discipline. Those leaders who fear offending the criminals and therefore slacken the struggle in attacking economic crime are completely wrong. Leaders at all levels should adhere to the principled stand of the party and perserve in the struggle against economic crime.

We should practice a responsibility system for leaders personally grasping major and important cases. The standing committee of the provincial CCP committee has decided that the principal leading comrades of the provincal CCP committee should share responsibility for taking charge of important cases directly handled by the provincial CCP committee and grasp them to the end. Leading comrades of all the prefectures, cities, counties and departments should also share responsibility in work, and complete the investigations within a set period.

The attack against criminal activities in the economic field is a major event that concerns the destiny of the state and is a vital struggle that concerns the whole situation. The party committee at all levels should fully recognize the seriousness of the current struggle and earnestly strengthen leadership. The party first secretaries must take up the matter personally, surmount all interference and obstructions, speed up the work of examining and dealing with major and important cases and carry the struggle in attacking economic crime deeper, until we achieve final victory.

HEBEI RIBAO ON IMPORTANCE OF RULES, DISCIPLINE

[Ideological commentary by Bao Ping [7637 1627] "People Are Not Complete Without Rules"]

[Text] Once, while watching a film in a cinema, two youths ate melon seeds while watching, and sometimes even screamed. Despite someone's interference, they spoke plausibly: "This is my freedom." During the noon rest, some people turn up the radio volume so that others cannot rest peacefully. When asked by others to lower the volume, they shout at the top of their voices: "I may increase the volume as I wish. This is my freedom." When touring in scenic places, some like to write or paint some words such as: "So-and-so came here as a tourist." When others try to stop them from doing so, the answer they usually get is: "This is my freedom." Some even go so far as to attack party policies and harm the images of party leaders. When they are criticized, they are not convinced, but say: "This is restriction on my freedom of speech." Some do not accept criticisms made by others on bad works they have written, saying: "This interferes with my creative freedom."

These people speak of "freedom" again and again. Does it mean that they really fight for the "freedom" of the broad masses? Of course not.

Marxism holds that freedom is the cognition of necessity. Only when people's action conforms with the natural and social objective laws will there be freedom. In social life, freedom is correlated with discipline. They are the two opposites of a single entity. Without discipline, there will be no freedom. The freedom they are talking about is characterized by infringing upon others' national and social interests, and eliminating the restriction of discipline and social morality. Therefore, the freedom they want is the extreme individualism of doing things at will. If that is "freedom," it is bourgeois liberalization.

As a proverb goes: Nothing can be made without rules. No society, political party, army or organization can exist a single day without constraint by discipline. This is a truth everyone understands. In capitalist society, freedom means nothing but the freedom of capitalists to exploit workers, and the freedom of workers to be exploited. Ours is a socialist country of the people's democratic dictatorship led by the working class on the basis of the worker-peasant alliance. The people are the masters of the country. The broad masses enjoy extensive rights of freedom and democracy in the country's political and economic life. Every fair-minded person can see that it is impossible for the laboring people in any capitalist country to enjoy the rights of democracy and freedom which the laboring people of our country are enjoying. Nevertheless, rights and obligations are always inseparable. While the people's rights of democracy and freedom are stipulated, their obligations are stipulated as well. Various laws, decrees, rules and systems have been stipulated in our country. These are the disciplines every one has to execute. The conscious execution of this discipline protects the citizens' rights of democracy and freedom. Some people like freedom, but dislike discipline. In their opinion, discipline restricts people's freedom and freedom means doing things at will. Nevertheless, why do some people oppose discipline and seek absolute freedom? Among them, some lack social experience. Some, influenced by extreme individualism, negate socialist discipline and harm the freedom of the broad masses with their willful behavior, thus going in for bourgeois liberalization. For example, the four basic principles represent the fundamental interest of the people of our country. They are the general discipline that the people of our country have to practice. However, some people oppose restricting their actions with the four basic principles. Is it not clear what the true meaning of their freedom is?

Some people highly appreciate the freedom of capitalist countries. They particularly like the system of two political parties. In their eyes, it is an expression of freedom that the people can scold the president when they are not satisfied. In particular, those young people who lack social experience are prone to be misled by superficial appearance. As a matter of fact, behind the system of two parties in capitalist countries are none other than the capitalists themselves, who play the game of elections for the same purpose of defending the capitalist system.

The Western bourgeoisie declare that theirs are free countries. Misled by this superficial appearance, some people think that people can do whatever they like in capitalist countries. As a matter of fact, this is a misunderstanding. In a society where money is omnipotent, the proletariat cannot achieve the rights of freedom in publication and speech as stipulated by the constitution. If the freedom of assembly and association and the freedom to strike touch the capitalist system, people will also be suppressed. The officials' tyrannical behavior has deprived the people of almost all their limited rights of freedom with which the bourgeoisie decorate the capitalist system.

Our country underwent 10 years of chaos with everything in a reversed order. In particular, the anarchistic thinking advocated by Lin Biao and the "gang and four" have deeply poisoned the younger generation. This is one of the main reasons why lax discipline exists in some places. Some people even regard ugly performances of scuffling, fighting and mischief-making as heroic behavior. What is heroic behavior, then? In the opinion of the proletariat, the key lies in the role one plays in promoting society and the extent of the practical interests one has brought to the people.

If one goes against the law of pushing forward history and the people's interest, the more scuffling and fighting one engages in, the more likely one is to be condemned by history. Two people in Beijing, called Zong Jialun and Ren Qingshen, established the Beihuang enterprise service company. By obtaining a big sum of more than 3 million yuan through speculation and fraud, they were really "courageous". But they have become criminals of the people.

There are some sayings: "Honest people usually get the worst of it," and "bold people die of over-eating, while cowards starve to death." Influenced by these sayings, some honest people become dishonest. This is another main reason why lax discipline exists in some places at present. At the time when Lin Biao and the "gang of four" played the tyrant, honest people really got the worst of it. Those who dared to scuffle and fight or were skilled in framing others and lodging false accusations were promoted or made a fortune, whereas those who dared to speak the truth were either imprisoned of lost their lives. At present, due to the weak and lax leaders in some places, who dare not fight against illegal behavior, there still exists the phenomenon of "honest people usually get the worst of it." However, this is quite different from the period of 10 years of chaos, when scuffling and fighting were treated as heroic behavior. Sabotaging discipline and being audacious in the extreme are treated as evil trends and unhealthy practices and are being hit hard. Was Wang Shouxin not courageous? She obtained through corruption more than 530,000 yuan in 7 years. But what did she get, finally? She was sentenced to death. Was Zhang Jiwei of Yichun city, whose crime was disclosed by RENMIN RIBAO recently, not very courageous? Taking advantage of allocating and transferring lumber, he was bold enough to obtain more than 40,000 yuan by demanding and accepting bribes. He might have led a life of debauchery for a period, but he is unable to escape the net of justice spread by the people. Therefore, we can see that dishonest people and those who do not observe discipline will certainly come to no good end. Honest people do not always get the worst of it.

To practice discipline is an expression of spiritual civilization. With the intensification of socialist construction in spiritual civilization, it is certain that the fine tradition of practicing discipline will gradually be carried forward among the people throughout the country.

SHANXI REPORTS INCREASED SUMMER GRAIN PRODUCTION

[Report: "Shanxi Increases Summer Grain Production by 10 Percent This Year"]

[Text] On the basis of a bumper harvest last year, our province has succeeded in achieving another good harvest in summer grain this year. Total wheat output throughout the province amounted to more than 3,500 million jin, an increase of nearly 10 percent over last year, and overfulfilling the state plan. If other summer food grains are added, the total summer grain output amounts to 3,698 million jin, an increase of 10,14 percent over last year.

The reasons for an increased summer grain production in our province this year are due first of all to the implementation and improvement of the agricultural production responsibility systems which have aroused the initiative of the numerous commune members for production. In Rui County, more than 90 percent of the production teams have instituted and improved the responsibility systems of fixing output quotas and work targets for individual households. Total wheat output from the 490,000 mu of land in the county amounted to 177.2 million jin, an increase of 72.2 percent over last year, or 14.4 percent over the highest figure ever reported. Total wheat output from the 570,000 mu of land in Xiangfen County amounted to 202 million jin, an increase of 35 percent over last year. Total wheat output from the 282,449 mu of land in Yucheng County amounted to 105.734 million jin, an increase of 28 percent over the highest figure ever reported, or more than 40 percent over last year, fulfilling the plan by nearly 50 percent.

There are 1,600 mu of nonirrigated wheat fields in Hongdong County's Xizhuang production brigade. Its total wheat output last year amounted to 110,000 jin. After the intensified implementation of the production responsibility system, its total output this year amounted to 610,000 jin, an increase of 450 percent over last year. Wang Xiaolang, a commune member in Lingfen County's Lancun production brigade, contracted 6.7 mu of irrigated farmland for the rotational planting of wheat. He succeeded in reaping 8,000 jin of wheat, an average yield of 1,194 jin per mu. The responsibility system has promoted an increase in wheat production, and this has been reflected in the following aspects: First, the responsibility system has been steadily implemented so that commune members do not begrudge the investment spent on wheat production. Second, the responsibility of all individuals has been clearly defined so that all farmland, whether far away or nearby and whether on the side or in the middle of the fields, has been managed in the same manner. The practice of sowing on bare soil has been basically eliminated. Third, various farm tasks have been meticulously and promptly completed. Fourth, after the implementation of the responsibility system, the role of production conditions and science and technology in increasing production has been brought into better play. A firm grasp of key measures to increase production is also one of the factors contributing to a bumper wheat harvest this year. All major wheat-producing areas have also paid concentrated attention to readjusting crops for rotation and expanding the area of the main crops; the various localities have also selected an improved variety in light of the local conditions. They have renovated the wheat fields and plowed them early and deeply in order to conserve summer grain water; they have also brought into play the superiority of ammonium carbonate and applied the combination of ammonium carbonate and phosphate fertilizer. All this has produced marked results in increasing production.

HEILONGJIANG PEOPLE'S CONGRESS SESSION CONCLUDES

[Excerpts] The 16th session of the standing committee of the 5th provincial people's congress ended today.

This morning the session unanimously approved the additional regulations for the Heilongjiang provincial provisional regulations on land management. The provisional regulations on land management were approved and promulgated for implementation at the 10th session of the standing committee of the 5th provincial people's congress on 10 September 1981. Because the provisional regulations were promulgated rather early, some articles on requisition and allocation of land for national construction were somewhat different from those of the regulations for requisition of land for national construction promulgated by the State Council after being approved at the 23d session of the Standing Committee of the 5th National People's Congress. Therefore, the session revised and supplemented some articles of the provincial provisional regulations on land management. The additional regulations reflected the principle of requisition of land according to the law. The additional regulation of Article 37 states that the requisition or allocation of over 1,000 mu of cultivated land and over 10,000 mu of land of other categories for capital construction should be submitted by local municipal or country governments to the provincial government for examination and then approved by the State Council.

Article 38 on the various standards on compensation for land was revised. The compensation for the requisition of vegetable fields on the outskirts of Harbin, Qiqihar, Mudanjiang and Jiamusi Municipalities should be four to six times of their annual output value and the compensation for land in suburbs and outer suburbs of these four municipalities and other municipalities and counties should be three to five times of the annual output value.

An additional regulation on settlement allowances was added. The regulation states that the units which appropriate land should pay settlement allowances for the production and living expenses of the units whose land was apprpriated in addition to the compensation. The settlement allowances should be paid in accordance with the number of peasants who need to be replaced. The number of peasants should be determined according to the ratio between the number of peasants and the amount of land before it is appropriated and according to the amount of requisitioned land. The additional regulations also supplemented or revised the ways of replacing peasants, requisition of land for temporary use and the ways to handle those who leave requisitioned land unused or who requisitioned more land than necessary.

Li Tao, deputy director of the Economic affairs office of the Standing Committee of the provincial people's congress, gave an explanation of the additional regulations for the provincial provisional regulations on land management.

REACTION MIXED ON REAGAN'S REMARKS ON CHINA

[Article from "Washington Observation" column by Fu Chien-chung: "Reagan's Words Make Us Happy and Worried at the Same Time"]

[Excerpts] President Reagan is indeed a statesman with accomplishments and personal integrity. Facing the Chinese Communists' repeated threat to downgrade their diplomatic relations with Washington, Reagan, speaking in a firm and clear tone at a White House press conference yesterday, reaffirmed the relations between the United States and the Republic of China. His words have dispelled the dark clouds which had gathered over the ROC-U.S. relations since he wrote to the Chinese Communist leaders.

Of President Reagan's conversation last night, the portion concerning the ROC may be summarized into the following four points:

1. To fulfill the terms of the Taiwan Relations Act;
2. To keep the moral obligation to Taiwan;
3. Not to abandon the long-time allies and friends on Taiwan; and
4. There are no secret agreements between the United States and the Chinese Communists.

Of the four points, Reagan's denial of the existence of any secret deals between Washington and Peiping merits our attention most. Recently, there have been many reports and rumors saying that the United States and the Chinese Communists are holding talks on a "Shanghai communique No 2." It is very meaningful that at this moment Reagan stepped forward to clarify the truth about such reports.

Since the termination of diplomatic relations between the ROC and the United States, there have been no formal relations between them. However, Reagan said he still regards the ROC as an ally. This fully shows Reagan's profound feelings of friendship for our country. The State Department has always treated the Chinese Communists with reverence and awe. Most likely it does not agree with Reagan's statement.

President Reagan attends to numerous state affairs every day. It is impossible for him to personally handle everything related to China. As his China policy is entrusted to the State Department for implementation, the result is, of course a foregone conclusion.

Reagan's conversation was indeed delightful, but it also made us worried. For instance, from beginning to end Reagan did not touch on the crucial question, his plans on arms sales to Taiwan. Was this an intentional evasion or an inadvertent omission? If what Senator Goldwater said is true, then the former is more probable than the latter.

The New York TIMES today frontpaged this report: In a telephone interview by Smith, director of the New York TIMES' Washington office, Senator Goldwater revealed that the U.S. Government has offered Peiping new assurances that Taiwan will not receive better and more arms than it now does.

Although the United States has not accepted the Chinese Communists' demand for setting a time limit on its new plan, the "qulaity limit" and "quantity limit" will in the long run yield the same results. In other words, some day the arms the United States provides will become absolutely insufficient to meet Taiwan's defense needs.

We do not know whether or not Reagan's statement on the absence of secret agreements between the United States and the Chinese Communists was a reaction to Goldwater's disclosure. We hope it is, for then Mr Reagan's words will not merely be high-sounding empty words.

EDITORIAL EXPOUNDS ON LIAO CHENGZHI LETTER

[Editorial: "Do the Chinese Communists Still Have To Resort to United Front Tactics After Forfeiting All Popular Support?"]

[Text] Popular support is the key to solving the China issue. A government that enjoys popular support thrives; otherwise, it is bound to perish. This is an unalterable truth. Having perpetrated perverse acts on the mainland for more than 30 years, the Chinese Communists have forfeited all popular support. The atrocities they have committed and their despotic rule on the mainland can be said to be unprecedented and unrepeatable. Now, the Chinese Communists are beset with difficulties at home and abroad and are at the end of their rope. Yet, instead of putting down their butcher's knife and repenting of their crimes before the people, they have been resorting to united front tactics to repeatedly peddle their "peaceful reunification" with honey on their lips and murder in their hearts. In doing so, they are actually "coupling threats with promises." However, their shamelessness and ignorance can only bring ridicule upon themselves. Liao Cheng-chih sent a letter from Peiping on 24 July in which he used cunning words, put up flashy manners and resorted to sophistry. To put it bluntly, what he said in the letter is nothing but harping on the same line.

As a man has his integrity, so a nation has its dignity. The Republic of China has its basic unalterable principles. As President Chiang Ching-kuo declared to people at home and abroad, our basic national policy is:

1. The state system as stipulated in the Constitution of the Republic of China will never be changed.

2. We will never abandon our general objective of anticommunism and national recovery.

3. We will always stand on the side of the democratic camp and will never have any dealings with a communist regime or bloc.

4. We will never compromise with the puppet regime of the communist bandits but will struggle against it until the end in order to achieve the goal of "reunifying China with the three principles of the people."

The consistent policy of the Republic of China and the Kuomintang is based on the long-term interests of the country and nation, and we will oppose communism until the end. The Chinese Communists are the sworn enemy of all Chinese people. Therefore, the Kuomintang will never compromise with the Chinese Communists, and, naturally, there will never be a possibility for holding peace talks between them. Our stand of "no contact, no talks and no compromise" is based on the overall interests of the people throughout the country. This stand also shows the Chinese nation's firm and persistent spirit of upholding justice, being true in word, not being lured by a promise of gain and not yielding under the stress of circumstances.

After a survey of the general situation today, we know very well that the key position presently held by the Republic of China is in fact more important than during any other period in the past. This is because the compatriots on the China mainland, after suffering the oppression and humiliation by the communist tyrannical rule for more than 3 decades, have become fully aware that communism will surely fail. They no longer believe the Chinese Communists' monstrous lies. They are no longer under any illusions about the Chinese Communists. The so-called "crisis of belief, trust and confidence" is the best expression of the popular feelings on the mainland.

All the compatriots on the mainland know that the destiny of China and its people hinges on the existence, development and growth of the Republic of China. They know that the hope of freeing the entire Chinese people from misery can be laid only on the strengthening of our base of revival [Taiwan] and early recovery of the mainland [by the Republic of China]. The will of the people is so clear, but the Chinese Communist powerholders still attempt to undertake their "united front" scheme with glib talk and phrasemongering. It is extremely ridiculous and deplorable that they are ignorant of the world situation and act against the people's will.

Let us take a look at some events which happened in the last 3 days. Five young men on the mainland hijacked a bandit aircraft and demanded a flight to Taiwan. On the verge of success, unfortunately they failed in this great undertaking. Nevertheless, doesn't their courage, will and heroic act of risking life to seek freedom precisely represent the state of mind of "determination to kill you and die with you" shared by the compatriots on the mainland? Moreover, doesn't the famous female tennis player Hu Na's desertion and request for political asylum in the United States also precisely show the determination to leave "the beasts in human clothing" shared by the compatriots on the mainland? All those young people who risk their lives to seek new life belong to a generation "nurtured by the milk of the Communist Party," but they severely hate the communist tyrannical rule. The radiance of the Chinese culture shines over everything and the warmth of the three principles of the people covers everything. The Chinese people are longing for the Republic of China and the three principles of the people. This accords with the will of the people and the general trend of events. A benevolent government will surely overthrow the tryanny. Righteousness will surely triumph over evil. China will surely be reunified under the three principles of the people.

Liao Cheng-chih is Mr Liao Chung-kai's son. Mr Chung-kai, a veteran of the Kuomintang, was a follower of our national father [Sun Yat-sen] and an adherent to the three principles of the people. In his early years, Liao Cheng-chih took the wrong path and joined the bandits. He is an unfilial son to his family and renegade to the country. The Chinese Communists regard him as only a beast of burden or a servant. During the chaotic "Cultural Revolution," he was thrown into a "cattle pen" and suffered enough "persecutions." If he has a good conscience, he should repent and know and choose between right and wrong. To our surprise, he is still being used as a "united front" mouthpiece by the Chinese Communists in his late years. Indeed, he is not worth our discussion. As the Chinese Communists have lost popular support and are opposed by the masses and deserted by their followers, their repeated playings of the old united front trick fully show their fear and desperation.

As a matter of fact, if the Chinese Communists truly have shown their sincerity for "peaceful reunification," all they have to do is resolutely abandon communism and wholeheartedly follow the three principles of the people. A free, peaceful and unified new China is what the compatriots throughout China are praying for.

CHINA POST ON U.S. OPPOSITION TO SEA LAW TREATY

[Editorial: "Law of the Sea Treaty"]

[Text] What is easily the longest negotiated treaty in modern times has finally been signed by all countries except the United States. The Republic of China has a vested interest in the treaty. It covers such things as sovereignty over the waters surrounding Taiwan, ownership of mineral rights, fishing rights and other items.

It is difficult to comprehend why U.S. President Reagan remains opposed to the treaty. The United States has its own fishing rights to protect and control of the waters off its two coasts. Only three other nations voted against the treaty: Israel, Turkey and Venezuela. Another 17 countries, including Great Britain, West Germany and Italy, abstained.

The Reagan administration is opposed to the provisions of the treaty controlling deep seabed mining. The treaty provides for the establishment of an international mining control organization. Mr. Reagan complains the treaty may be amended without U.S. approval. He also charges the treaty would not guarantee mining companies access to the seabeds and would thwart future development of seabed minerals. On the other hand, the developing nations want to prevent the large nations from dominating the seabed mining. Some 130 countries supported this provision.

It is known that the ocean depths abound with valuable minerals, including iron, copper and manganese. What may prove to be even more important is the fact the seabeds abound with new sources of food. Scientists believe that in the future the ocean beds will be able to provide the food for the world's expanding population.

In any event all of these developments are for the future. It will take decades to devise the methods of extracting the sea's mineral wealth. This is why the objections of the United States and other countries seem trivial. The immediate benefits, including water navigation and overflight rights, are more important. The Reagan administration insists the current international laws will protect America's rights.

It is easy to understand why nations which do not have any coastline are eager to share in the potential wealth. They have no concern with navigation and fishing rights.

Mr. Reagan's fears that the treaty will be amended probably are correct. The existing treaty, for example, does not deal effectively with the rights to food from the seabeds. In our judgment, the important fact is that a start has been made in the ambitious effort to develop and share the wealth of the seabeds.

WEN WEI PO PRINTS ARTICLE ON HONG KONG, MACAO

HK030513 Hong Kong WEN WEI PO in Chinese 3 Aug 82 p 2

[Telephone dispatch from correspondent Fang Meng [2455 5536] in Beijing: "A Talk on the Hong Kong and Macao Issues"]

[Text] Beijing, 2 Aug -- The No 15 issue of SHIJIE ZHISHI [WORLD KNOWLEDGE] magazine published in Beijing carries a signed article entitled "A Talk on the Hong Kong and Macao Issues." The text of the article follows:

Some people often asks: Since Hong Kong and Macao are Chinese territory, why is it that on the map of China Hong Kong and Macao are marked with the words "occupied by Britain" and "occupied by Portugal"? What is the problem with Hong Kong and Macao? Here we will briefly talk about the Hong Kong and Macao issues.

Let us first talk about Hong Kong. What is referred to as Hong Kong consists of three parts -- Hong Kong Island, Kowloon and the "New Territories." This area has been China's sacred territory since ancient times. Situated in the east of the estuary of the Zhu Jiang, it has an area of 1,061.8 square kilometers. Of this, Hong Kong Island is 75.6 square kilometers, Kowloon 11.1 square kilometers and the New Territories (including Lantao and the other surrounding islands) 971 square kilometers. It has a population of 5.2 million, 98 percent of whom are our compatriots.

During the Qing Dynasty, Hong Kong was under the jurisdiction of Xinan County (now Shenzhen City), Guangdong Province. In the second half of the 18th century, the number of foreign merchants, with the British as the main body, increased year by year. They unscrupulously plungered China's wealth and seriously poisoned the people's health by trafficking in opium to China. On many occasions the Qing government issued bans of this. However, the decadent officials of the Qing government worked hand in glove with the lawbreaking foreign merchants so that the bans failed to achieve any results. Opium was still secretly transported into the country in a steady stream. This aroused the extremely great indignation of the Chinese people. At the end of 1838, the Qing government had no choice but to dispatch Lin Zexu, who resolutely stood for a complete ban on opium, as an imperial envoy to Guangzhou to enforce the ban. After his arrival in Guangzhou, Lin Zexu ordered the British and all other foreign merchants to hand over more than 20,000 cases of opium and had them burned at Humen in front of the public. At the same time, he notified all foreign merchants that they were allowed to engage in trade as usual so long as they did not traffic in opium. Otherwise, their goods would be confiscated and they would be punished according to law. The British colonialists, however, paid no heed to the warning. On the contrary, they seized the opportunity to carry out deliberate provocation. In June 1840 Britain waged an aggressive war by dispatching an oriental expeditionary army to encircle Guangzhou. Lin Zexu led his troops in tightly defending the city. The British army dared not make an intrusion, and so they attacked Fujian, Zhejian and Beijing. They approached Tianjin and threatened the security of Beijing. The decadent and incompetent Qing government was so panic-stricken that it did not put up any resistance to the invading army. It immediately sent Gishan, viceroy of Zhili, to hold talks with them. At first, the British forces set forth various unreasonable demands. Gishan indicated that so long as the British forces were withdrawn to Guangdong, everything could be negotiated. After the British forces were withdrawn to Guangdong, Gishan, acting as viceroy of Guangdong and Guangxi, signed with the British side, without authorization, the "draft convention of Chuanbi" ceding Hong Kong Island and paying an indemnity. However, the British invading forces were still not satisfied, and they continued launching the war. In July 1842 they approached the city of Nanjing," and the Qing government was forced to sign the "Treaty of Nanjing," the first unequal treaty, with Britain on 29 August. Under this treaty Hong Kong Island was officially ceded to Britain and five cities (Guangzhou, Fuzhou, Xiamen, Ningbo and Shanghai) were opened as trading ports. This was the world-famous opium war.

Through the opium war Britain came to realize the weak and incompetent nature of the Qing government, and so its desire for invasion became more inflated. In November 1856 Britain waged the second opium war by finding another pretext. It allied with France and, after occupying Guangzhou, advanced directly to the north to close in on the Beijing and Tianjin area. The British invading forces again forced the Qing government to sign the "Treaty of Beijing" on 24 October 1860, ceding China's territory to the south of Boundary Street in Kowloon Peninsula. In 1894 the Qing government suffered defeat in the Sino-Japanese war of 1894-95, and the various imperialist powers intensified at will their efforts to carve up China. In April 1898, after France proposed "leasing" Guangzhou Bay, Britain claimed that the French leasing of Guangzhou Bay threatened the security of Hong Kong and, by again using this as a pretext, compelled the Qing government to sign the "convention defining Hong Kong borders" on 9 June of the same year. According to this convention, Britain "leased," commonly referred to as "defined" China's territory to the south of Shenzhen and to the north of Boundary Street on Kowloon Peninsula, as well as its nearby islands, for a period of 99 years. Thus, Britain occupied the entire Hong Kong area through three unequal treaties. During the Pacific war, Hong Kong was occupied by Japan and, after Japan surrendered unconditionally in August 1945, it was again occupied by Britain.

Now let us say something about Macao. Since ancient times, Macao has been part of the sacred territory of China. It is located on the western side of the mouth of the Zhu Jiang. It has a total area of 15.51 square kilometers, which consists of the peninsula of Macao, occupying a total area of 5.42 square kilimeters, the island of Taipa of 3.48 square kilimeters, and the island of Coloane of 6.61 square kilometers. Macao has a population of about 400,000, and over 98 percent of them are Chinese compatriots.

In days gone by, Macao was under the jurisdiction of Xiangshan County (now called Zhuhai Municipality). In 1517 (12th year of the Zhengde Emperor of the Ming Dynasty) the Portuguese entered Guangdong under the pretext of paying tribute. They were ordered to return because they had no certificates, but they hung on and refused to go, engaging in trade and the slave market. In 1535, by means of corrupting the local officials, they started to anchor their ships at the port of Macao for trade. In 1553, with the excuses of promulgating customs duties and claiming for damaged goods, they seized the opportunity to land and settle there. Later on, step by step they expanded their settlement area, built a city wall and forts and illegally appointed officials. This started the invasion of China by the Portuguese colonists.

After the opium war, the British colonists seized the island of Hong Kong from China by force. Following the British practice, the Portuguese colonists also expanded their occupied areas. In 1849 the Portuguese colonists, propped up by the British colonists, expelled the local government and customs officials and occupied the peninsula of Macao. In 1851 they attacked and captured the island of Taipa and then seized the islands of Coloane in 1864. Thus the whole area of Macao came under the occupation of the Portuguese colonists.

The dirty activities of pirates smuggling and peddling Chinese workers and children by the Portuguese colonists in Macao incited strong resistance by the Chinese people. In order to legalize their occupation of Macao, the Portuguese colonists, in collusion with the British colonists, worked out a "draft agreement of the Sino-Portuguese conference" in which they forced the inclusion of the provision of "permanent administration over Macao by Portugal" by making use of the time when the British Government dispatched Jin Deng Gan [6855 4098 1626], customs inspector of Gongbei, to Lisbon in March 1887 to solve the problem of opium seeds. In December of the same year, when concluding the "treaty of friendship and trade," China and Portugal once again affirmed the formulation on Macao contained in the "draft." At the same time, they agreed that a special treaty would not be signed unless a border line of demarcation was fixed through consultations by the two countries. Then several consultations were held between the two sides, but no results were achieved, much less the conclusion of a "special treaty."

In April 1928 the Foreign Ministry of the Chinese Government informed the Portugese Government of the termination of the "treaty of friendship and trade." However, the Portugese Government refused to go and continued its occupation of Macao.

Since the establishment of New China, the people's government has resolutely upheld China's national sovereignty and territorial integrity. With regard to the question of Hong Kong and Macao, Huang Hua, former permanent Chinese representative to the United Nations, pointed out on 8 March 1972 in a letter to the chairman of the UN Special Commission on Decolonization: "Hong Kong and Macao are the results, left over from history, of a whole series of unequal treaties imposed on China by imperialism. Hong Kong and Macao are parts of China's territory occupied by the British and Portugese authorities, and the solution of the Hong Kong and Macao problem is a matter completely within the sphere of Chinese sovereignty and does not at all come under the usual category of so-called 'colonies.' The Chinese Government proposes using appropriate methods to peacefully solve the Hong Kong and Macao issues when the time is ripe, and until then, to maintain the status quo."

For the past 32 years, the Hong Kong and Macao compatriots have warmly loved the socialist motherland and actively supported its construction. Thanks to great support by the motherland and the hard work of the Hong Kong and Macao compatriots, the economies of Hong Kong and Macao have shown relatively great development, and Hong Kong has now become a major trade, communications, tourism and finance center. We firmly believe that the Chinese Government will certainly solve the Hong Kong and Macao problem in an appropriate way when conditions are ripe, and the Hong Kong and Macao areas will also continue to play their proper role.

HSIN WAN PAO ON SHANGHAI 'GANG OF THREE' TRIAL

[Article by Hsu Chu-cheng [1776 6999 2052]: "Listening In"]

[Text] Mr XX: Yesterday I had a chance to be a visitor at the public trial of the Shanghai "gang of three." During my career as a reporter in the last several decades, this was the first time I was to be a visitor at a trial in a court. The higher court has set up a special courtroom on Hongqiao Road in west Shanghai. The courtroom had a solemn appearance -- the central seat of the presiding judge dominated the courtroom; on both sides were the seats of other judges, the jury, prosecutors and defenders, and the seats for visitors were arranged at a lower level. The setting was general the same as that for the public trial of the "gang of four," but the scale was smaller.

It is said that Ma Tianshui is suffering from mental disease. This old man has been a party member. He had already undertaken the post of department head of the East China Military and Political Committee in the period shortly after liberation. If he had never bartered away his honor for the patronage of the "gang of four" and bullied people by flaunting his powerful connections, he would have certainly been rehabilitated long ago and would have been appointed chief in a certain department. However, "the error of a moment becomes the regret of a lifetime." So how can he not become mad because of this?

Therefore, although there were three people to be tried this time, only Xu and Wang actually appeared, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon.

The trial I attended yesterday was that of Xu Jingxian. He must have appeared at this court many times before. Yesterday's trial concentrated mainly on his crimes in framing a deputy prime minister, Chen Yi, and other veteran cadres on the eve of the Ninth CCP Congress, and organizing secret police activities during the early stage of the "Cultural Revolution."

"Bring the defendent Xu Jingxiang to court!" As soon as the presiding judge finished speaking, Xu Jingxian came out from a side door, "escorted" by a bailiff in front and another behind. He was calm and well dressed and had rosy cheeks. Of course, he was no longer as arrogant as before.

All the procedures the presiding judge followed in questioning the procurator were similar to those in the public trial of the 10 evils of the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing antiparty cliques. The only difference was that the questioning proceeded very smoothly. Xu Jingxian seemed very well prepared for answering the questions. He answered every question "thoroughly," "honestly," and properly; and all his answers were rhetorically well-spoken and grammatically correct. Perhaps this was because he had accumulated rich experiences in denouncing and criticizing "reactionaries" and "capitalist-roaders" over past years. So the defense attorney was in fact unnecessary, since he did not have to speak at all.

If some Beijing Operas like "10 Years of Catastrophe," "Spring Dream of the Empress," and so on are to be performed in the future, [words indistinct] in the operas Lin Biao must be molded as an archcareerist, Zhang Chunqiao as a treacherous figure of the like of Cao Cao and Zhao Gao [Cao Cao and Zhao Gao were both treacherous court officials who usurped the throne in ancient China] and the "old lady" naturally as a female clown [the "old lady" is Jiang Qing], while Wang Hongwen, though with an elegant poise, can only be a clown on the stage, and Xu Jingxian probably a minor literate clown. Although Xu Jingxian had commanded the militia and had tried to launch an armed coup d'etat before and after the downfall of the gang of four, he was rather like Jiang Gan, who could only fight on paper and in fact achieved nothing [Jiang Gan was a minor figure in the ancient Chinese novel "Romance of the Three Kingdoms"].

However, a minor clown can sometimes play an important part. For example, in "A Handful of Snow" Tang Qin was originally a hanger-on who had been rescued by Mo Huaigu. In order to fawn over Yan Song and his son [Yan Song was a treacherous prime minister in the Ming Dynasty], he framed the Mo family and beheaded the entire family. Similarly, Xu Jingxian, a literate clown in our time, also framed and destroyed numerous families accused as "capitalist-roaders" and the "stinky ninth!"

Another disgusting story was also exposed during the public trial. A minor literatus called Liu was originally a reporter of ZHONGGUO QINGNIAN BAO [CHINA YOUTH NEWS] in Shanghai. In 1967, during the event of "criticizing Zhang Chunqiao," he secretly published a small newspaper which specialized in collecting information about the criticizers and defaming them. Xu Jingxian really appreciated him, so he recommended him to Zhang Chunqiao. Since then, this reporter Liu had a meteoric rise. He acquired houses and funds, and was ordered to recruit followers to organize a secret agency. So he did a lot of evil things under Zhang Chunqiao and Xu Jingxian's direction.

People like this are of course hatchet men who are even inferior to clowns. But what is worth pondering is that a literatus, though of limited learning, can do every evil thing if he is immoral.

HSIN WAN PAO ON IMPRISONMENT OF CORRUPT OFFICIALS

HK040941 Hong Kong HSIN WAN PAO in Chinese 4 Aug 82 p 4

[Special dispatch from Guangzhou: "Several Corrupt Officials in Zhanjiang Sentenced to Imprisonment"]

[Text] Guangzhou, 4 August -- According to a NANFANG RIBAO report, Zhou Yemao, former director of the foreign economic cooperation office of Zhanjiang Municipality, used his authority to extort bribes and illegally purchase chemical fertilizers and other commodities, thereby reaping a fat profit of over 32,000 yuan. He was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment according to the law. His newly built two-storied house and garden and all his money and things illegally obtained have been accordingly confiscated.

Jiang Huisong, deputy director of the Suburban Trade Trust Company of Shantou Municipality; head of the industrial goods department; and Yao Hongxiang, warehouse manger, availed themselves of the trade in wristwatches to demand "kickbacks" from smuggler and illegal peddler Zheng Yunke and others to the amount of 45,200 yuan. The Shantou Municipal People's Court sentenced Jiang Huisong to 5 years' imprisonment, Wang Shengjie to 4 years and Yao Hongxiang and Zheng Yunke to 2 years each.

Zhou Yemao was only a 24th-grade worker before 1978. In a "meteoric rise," he made it to the 3d grade and became an deputy office director. In a commentator's article, NANFANG RIBAO pointed out: "Zhou Yemao's corrupt practices are very dirty. The most disgusting thing about him is that he availed himself of prevailing unhealthy practices to carry out his own criminal activities. To describe his own activities, he used the euphemism 'promotion of cooperation.' Actually, he was engaged in speculation and the business of deceiving others. His approach was: If you give me something, I will provide you with supplies. If you want to obtain materials from me, I must demand a bribe. In all cases of 'economic cooperation' handled by him in the past several years, he almost never failed to take a bribe. He also used many excuses demanding so-called tea money, introduction fees, compensation for chemical fertilizer weight differences and so forth. He really racked his brain thinking out such excuses. What's more, he used his authority to raise the prices of commodities that he had managed to obtain at lower rates. He resold them on the market, reaping a fat profit. Therefore, his so-called 'cooperation' was actually a matter of stealing state resources."

A NANFANG RIBAO reporter also submitted a report entitled "How Did a 21st-Grade Cadre Manage To Build a Foreign-Style House?"

MING PAO DISCUSSES PRC TRADE POLICY CHANGES

HK170333 Hong Kong MING PAO in Chinese 17 Jul 82 p 3

[Special dispatch from Guangzhou: "Foreign Businessmen Have Misgivings Over Investing as Beijing's Policy Continually Changes"]

[Text] The Beijing authorities have recently stressed again and again that there will be no change in the policy of opening up to the world, but in fact many measures instituted at an early stage, which helped to promote foreign trade, have been changed for some time now. This has weakened the momentum of development of external economic cooperation.

This correspondent recently visited Guangdong. From the things he heard and saw on his visit, he profoundly felt that Beijing's frequent policy changes have already had a bad effect on Guangdong. Cries of discontent are rising everywhere among economic work cadres in many counties and municipalities, while Hong Kong and Macao businessmen shake their heads and sign.

According to my information, the economic policy changes this year include the following: The purchase of popular commodities with foreign exchange certificates has been stopped. After the CCP issued foreign exchange certificates in a bid to attract foreign exchange, a number of friendship stores and designated shops on the mainland allowed fisitors from overseas to use these certificates to buy imported television sets, radio cassettes, refrigerators, and wristwatches, and Chinese-made bicycles. For instance, HK$500 could be exchanged for 150 yuan worth of foreign exchange certificates for purchasing a bicycle. Now a bicycle can only be bought if one changes HK$1,500 into 450 yuan worth of overseas Chinese remittance certificates. Although the price of the bicycle is still 150 yuan, the remaining 300 yuan cannot be spent on further purchases of popular commodities. Since this policy was changed, there has been a big drop in the number of people using foreign currency to buy commodities. This has affected the state's foreign exchange income.

Import duties on commodites such as television sets and radio cassettes have been raised. The duties levied now are from 100 to 300 percent higher than previously. Some duties are even higher than the price of the commodity. Since the duties were raised, very few people have taken into the mainland commodities that their relatives need. As a result, annual revenue from customs duties has fallen by several ten million Hong Kong dollars.

Import duties are levied on raw materials being imported for processing for foreign customers. When instituting the policy of opening up to the world, the authorities encouraged factories short of raw material to import such material and either reexport the processed and finished goods or sell them on the domestic market. The state would levy no duties on imports of such raw material. This measure was taken to enliven the economy. Since a duty was imposed on such imports this year, many factories have been unable to make a profit and some have even suffered losses. Hence many factories would rather halt production and wait for raw material supplies rather than continue to handle the processing of imported raw materials for foreign customers. For instance, the Mei County cigarette plant was short of good tobacco. At the end of last year it imported 10 million yuan worth of duty-free tobacco and produced high-quality cigarettes. Since the state imposed a duty of more than 10 percent on imported tobacco this year, the cigarette plant will run up a big loss in importing any more. A responsible person of the plant declared: In the future we cannot engage in any more "losing business" of this kind.

Exporting powers for many commodities have been withdrawn. In the past powers were handed down to the lower levels, and the provinces and municipalities had the powers to export many commodities. Beijing has withdrawn many of these powers this year. For instance, work gloves can only be exported up to a certain quota, after Beijing has approved. This has affected normal production in the glove factories. Again, paraffin wax, a byproduct of the Maoming petroleum company, has no sales outlet on the mainland, and in the past the enterprise could arrange foreign sales itself. Since Beijing withdrew this export power, products like this have piled up in large quantities. It is said that more than 200 million yuan worth of goods are stockpiled at Shenzhen.

The many economic policy changes in China have caused a loss of confidence among foreign businessmen over investing in the mainland. In the past Hong Kong businessmen signed many long-term contracts with Guangdong enterprises for operating joint ventures or processing imported raw materials or parts for making television sets, metal furniture and so on, and sold them against foreign exchange certificates on the mainland, thus getting back foreign exchange. After the practice of buying commodities with foreign exchange certificates was suddenly stopped at the beginning of this year, many businessmen got into difficulties and were unable to get back the foreign exchange. Later, after several twists and turns, Beijing "stretched the rules," and all the contracts previously signed remained valid; in the future, such matters will be dealt with in accordance with new regulations. As a result of this change, many Hong Kong businessmen have become "birds startled at the twang of the bow-string," and have come to doubt the reliability of the mainland's economic policies.

PRC REITERATES ARMS CONTROL FORMULA AT GENEVA

[Text] Geneva, August 5 (XINHUA) -- The two superpowers should undertake the responsibility for the prevention of an arms race in outer space, said Tian Jin, head of the Chinese delegation, at the summer session of the Committee on Disarmament today. The session resumed here on August 3. The 40-nation U.N. Disarmament Committee will review the draft program on disarmament.

The two superpowers are sparing no expenses in the development of military technology used in outer space, and the arms race between them is steadily extending to the outer space, a fact that "is causing increasing concern among the world community," Tian Jin said.

He stressed: "People should be vigilant against the practice in some quarters of paying lip service to the peaceful use of outer space while actually stepping up the development of various types of weapons used in outer space."

"China firmly advocates that outer space be used for peaceful purposes and for the good of all mankind and strongly opposes arms race in outer space which endangers peace and security. Consequently, it stands for the prohibition of all outer space weapons, including anti-satellite weapons," Tian Jin declared. He said negotiations of a comprehensive treaty on the prohibition of outer space weapons should be conducted. Referring to the just ended second special session on disarmament, Tian Jin pointed out that the basic reason for the failure of the session is that "the two superpowers with the largest arsenals lacked the will to carry out disarmament and used various methods and pretexts to shirk their special responsibility for disarmament."

He reaffirmed China's proposal concerning disarmament, saying that "the Soviet Union and the United States should cease all nuclear tests, stop the qualitative improvement and manufacture of any kind of nuclear weapons and reduce by 50 percent all types of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery. Thereafter, all nuclear states should cease all nuclear tests, stop the qualitative improvement and manufacture of nuclear weapons and reduce their respective nuclear arsenals according to agreed proportion and procedure."

"The key to disarmament today lies in the cessation of the testing, qualitative improvement and manufacturing of nuclear weapons and their reduction by the two states with the largest nuclear arsenals, which measures we could call, for the purpose of abbreviation, three cessations and one reduction."

He declared: "After the two superpowers have carried out the three cessations and one reduction and narrowed the gap between themselves and the other nuclear states, China will be ready to join all other nuclear states in assuming the obligation of the cessation of the testing, qualitative improvement and manufacturing of nuclear weapons and in a reduction leading ultimately to the total elimination of nuclear weapons." He also expounded China's principled stand on the prohibition of chemical weapons, security assurances for the non-nuclear states, and the comprehensive program of disarmament.

AFP: CHAI ZEMIN WANTS U.S. TO RETURN DEFECTOR

OW040024 Hong Kong AFP in English 0004 GMT 4 Aug 82

[Text] Knoxville, Tennessee, Aug. 3 (AFP) -- The U.S. Government must send back to China the ballet dancer who defected during a competition in Jackson, Mississippi, last June, the Chinese ambassador to Washington, Chai Zemin, said Tuesday.

"We think the United States should try its best to find him and then return him to us" Chai said to reporters during a break in ceremonies honoring China at the Knoxville World's Fair.

Lin Jianwei, a dancer with the Shangai Ballet, disappeared June 28 after his performance for the semifinals of the International Ballet Competition. Immigration officials have said since then he has filed papers to obtain political asylum. Washington "is obligated to protect the safety" of Chinese visiting the United States, the ambassador said.

The diplomat did not mention the recent defection of China's top tennis player, Hu Na, during a competition in California, though the impression prevailed in Knoxville that the ambassador was also referring to this case.

CHINESE PAPERS IN U.S. HAIL LIAO CHENGZHI LETTER

[Text] New York, August 4 (XINHUA) -- Chinese-language newspapers here have highly praised Liao Chengzhi's letter to Mr. Chiang Ching-kuo and earnestly hoped that Mr. Chiang would not lose the good opportunity but contribute to the reunification of the country. A CHINA DAILY NEWS commentary yesterday commended the letter as full of feelings, righteousness and good advice. "Those who praise it are many and those [who] slander it are few," it said. The commentary noted "the letter was written in the name of Liao Chengzhi, but it is identical with the views of the Chinese Communist Party."

After reviewing "Message to Compatriots in Taiwan," Chinese National People's Congress Standing Committee Chairman Ye Jianying's nine-point formula for the peaceful reunification of the country and the proposal on the establishment of special zones in China's draft constitution, the paper said: "The Chinese Communist Party is sincere and consistent concerning peaceful reunificat[illegible] "

THE PEIMEI NEWS said editorially: "When suspicions are cleared and previous enmity is abolished, it will be only one step from split to reunification."

It said: "With the cooperation between the Kuomintang and the Communist Party on the previous two occasions, a third is not unfeasible. Chiang Ching-kuo is duty-bound to shoulder this glorious and arduous heavy task as he is in charge in Taiwan today. Of course, this needs courage and insight."

THE CHINA POST and CENTRE DAILY NEWS also published editorials, calling on the Taipei authorities "to seize the opportunity, set the national interests above everything else, respond positively to the letter and consult together on the great cause of reunification," and not to fail to live up to the ardent expectations of the Chinese people both on the mainland and outside.

JANE'S REPORT CITED ON SOVIET NAVAL CONSTRUCTION

[Text] London, August 5 (XINHUA) -- The Soviet Navy's building programme is now concentrated mainly on submarine and larger surface ships, says "Jane's Fighting Ships 1982-83" published here today. The yearly publication says that these ships of the Soviet fleet "range from a nuclear-powered battle-cruiser to 7,500-ton anti-submarine ships. With the fourth Kiev class aircraft carrier now completing, the chances of an early beginning of the first Soviet nuclear-propelled carrier fitted for fixed-wing aircraft must be anticipated."

The Jane's noted that Soviet current building of new ships will provide formidable reinforcement. "In a period of rising tension," it says, "the deployment abroad of even 50 percent of Soviet nuclear attack submarines could have a disturbing effect on international decision-making."

The Jane's indicates: "While the Soviet Navy is continuing a steady expansion of its fleet, the U.S. Navy is faced with a need to make up deficiencies caused by cuts in previous programmes as well as providing long range support for amphibious forces, the Rapid Deployment Force." "Not only have additional submarines and nuclear-propelled aircraft carriers been included in future programmes, but battleships are being brought from reserve and armed with missiles and the mine-countermeasures force is due for long-delayed rejuvenation," it adds.

XINHUA COMMENTS ON JAPANESE OVERTURES TO TAIWAN

["XINHUA Correspondent Commentary: Fallacy of 'Restoring Japan-Taiwan Relations' Should Not Be Regarded as Unimportant" -- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Beijing, August 5 (XINHUA) -- Some persons in Japan are raising a hue and cry for "the restoration of Japan-Taiwan relations".

What is meant by their so-called "restoration of Japan-Taiwan relations"? It means that they want to change the status quo that the relations between Japan and China's Taiwan Province can only be of civilian nature and to reestablish official relations between the two sides which had existed before the normalization of relations between China and Japan. In other words, they want to create "two Chinas" and sabotage the friendly relations that have been established and developed between China and Japan. In short, they want to make the friendly relations between the two countries retrogress and hold back the wheel of history.

It is by no means accident that the fallacy of "restoring Japan-Taiwan relations" has cropped up recently. It may be recalled that the Japanese Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) sent a big delegation to Taiwan last month. During its stay in Taiwan, as was reported by Japanese newspapers, the delegation met the "president", "prime minister" and "ministers" of the Taiwan authorities. The agreement reached between the delegation and the Taiwan authorities goes so far as to use the words of "two countries". It is natural that the Chinese people cannot tolerate such an act which is in gross violation of the basic principles governing the restoration of relations between China and Japan.

The LDP official delegation to Taiwan was led by Masumi Esaki, head of the LDP special committee on external economic relations. Though Esaki did not use the title of "special envoy" of the LDP president as he had used during his tour of Southeast Asian countries, the official nature of his delegation to Taiwan cannot be watered down. The delegation alleged that its discussion with the Taiwan authorities "was limited to economic affairs." However, even the Japanese press did not believe in such an allegation. The JIJI PRESS in a report said: "The LDP delegation's visit to Taiwan is not only of economic importance in melting away the trade frictions between Japan and Taiwan, but also of political importance".

As for "political importance", it means regarding China's Taiwan Province not only as a trade partner of Japan but also a "political entity" itself. Most of the Japanese people, including many LDP members, approve of defending and developing friendly relations between China and Japan. However, a handful of persons adopt an opposite attitude. It is wrong, at least improper, to call them "Taiwan lobby", because they are not friendly to the Chinese people in Taiwan. So they should be called "advocates of encroaching upon Taiwan" or "proponents for returning to Taiwan".

The adherence to the basic principles guiding the restoration of diplomatic relations and development of the friendly relations between Japan and China is in accordance with the basic interest of the two countries. This has been proved by the history of the relations between the two countries over the past ten years. Therefore, the ten hundred million Chinese people and the one hundred million Japanese people should not lower their guard against and treat lightly the existing adverse current aimed at destroying China-Japan friendship. We solemnly warn the advocates of restoring Japan-Taiwan relations that they will make historical mistakes if they think that China will beg something from Japan and that they can trample on the basic principles on China-Japan relations and destroy China-Japan friendship deliberately.

BAN YUE TAN BLASTS JAPANESE EDUCATION MINISTRY

HK060231 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE in Chinese 0916 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, 5 Aug (ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE) -- The No 15 issue of BAN YUE TAN magazine, about to be published, carries a commentator's article on the Japanese Education Ministry's tampering with the history of Japanese aggression against China in school textbooks. The article points out that this is an adverse current that runs counter to friendship between the Chinese and Japanese peoples, and a signal for the revival of militarism.

The article says: The Japanese Education Ministry has flown in the face of world opinion and stuck a knife into the friendly relations between the Chinese and Japanese peoples. Its action in tampering with the criminal history of Japanese militarist aggression against China has aroused the Chinese people's anger and has also been strongly denounced by the peoples of the countries of Southeast Asia who were victims of Japanese aggression. However, the responsible officials of the Japanese Education Ministry have shown no intention of correcting the matter; they have actually stated that they will "only give an explanation" and will "not change the results of revising (the textbooks)." Several Japanese Cabinet ministers have had the impudence to speak in support of this mistake. The article says this is an adverse current that runs counter to the spirit of Sino-Japanese friendship and violates the Sino-Japanese joint statement signed 10 years ago.

The article also points out: This is a signal for the revival of Japanese militarism by a small number of militarists in Japan. It shows that they are making preparations in public opinion for embarking afresh on the old road of aggression and expansion. We must be highly vigilant against this.

The commentator's article says in conclusion: The Japanese Education Ministry must respect the historical facts and correct its mistake.

TOKYO TRIBUNAL PROSECUTOR INTERVIEWED ON TEXTBOOKS

OW060807 Beijing XINHUA in English 0727 GMT 6 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 6 (XINHUA) -- The distortion of the history of Japanese aggression against China in school textbooks passed by the Japanese Eduction Ministry is described as a "sign of reincarnation of militarism" by a former assistant prosecutor of the International Military Tribunal in Tokyo, in an interview with XINHUA here today. Noted Chinese jurist Professor Qiu Shaoheng, 70, who is now teaching in a Shanghai institute, was also secretary to the Chinese representative on the tribunal.

The Japanese war against China was an aggressive war and can be interpreted in no other way, he said. This was the prosecution in the indictment and the judgement handed down by the tribunal.

Professor Qiu, then assigned by the military tribunal to investigate the facts about Nanjing massacre, said the distortion of the facts of the massacre in the revised textbooks showed the bad intentions of the Japanese Education Ministry. Facts were, the professor said, that women were raped and put to death; Chinese soldiers were disarmed and left behind and refugees fleeing their homes in the city were rounded up, lined up on the banks of the Yangtze River, their hands tied behind their back and machine-gunned; the burning of houses and plunder were common sights; civilians were bayonetted or beheaded by the invading troops for fun; for weeks on end, revolting and horrible atrocities were the order of the day. Even children were not spared. The investigation and evidence adduced by the international court proved that when the invading troops entered the city the Chinese army had been almost entirely withdrawn from it.

As a matter of fact, the Japanese outrages, as stated in the judgement, were reported by members of the diplomatic corps in Nanjing, by newspaper correspondents, and by officials of the Japanese Embassy in Nanjing who returned to the city with the entry of the invaders. Even Matsui, then commander-in-chief of the Japanese Army in central China, admitted that he had knowledge of the atrocities but had taken no steps to end the situation. Whether or not there had been any resistance to the aggressors, Prof. Qiu went on, the assertion by the Japanese Education Ministry that the massacre of Nanjing was the result of the Chinese resistance was a tenet of Japanese militarism that victims of aggression had no right to defend themselves.

Facts are facts and history speaks, he said. What makes the misrepresentation and mutilation more ugly and ominous is the ministry's refusal to right the wrong. The description of the naked aggression against China as an "advance" into China and of the Nanjing massacre as a result of resistance by the Chinese army was bound to fail. It showed the ministry's contempt for history and insulted the Chinese people. The substitution of the words "advance into China" for "aggression against China" did not alter the aggressive nature of Japan's war; it reflects the imperialist logic of Japanese militarism that Japanese forces could "advance" into foreign lands with impunity.

True, Prof. Qiu added, revision of textbooks in itself is an internal affair, but it is common knowledge that if a matter is related to historical facts and international affairs, it is no longer an internal affair, but a matter of world concern. No country has the right to deny world-acknowledged facts of history.

Distortion of history does not bury in oblivion Japanese aggression against China, he declared. It only harms the consolidation and development of friendly relations between China and Japan as well as jeopardizes Japan's peaceful coexistence with other Asian countries. Relations between China and Japan have, in a historical sense, been very friendly except for a short period. To derive proper lessons by both countries from the painful memories of Japan's aggression against China is in the interest of peace-loving people everywhere. This will ensure the growth of the friendship between China and Japan from generation to generation, he said.

REMMIN RIBAO ON TRIBUNAL PRESIDENT'S INTERVIEW

[Text] Beijing, August 6 (XINHUA) -- A noted Chinese jurist and president of the Special Military Court on trial of Japanese war criminals in 1956, denounces the Japanese Education Ministry's recent actions on textbook issue, according to today's PEOPLES DAILY report of interview yesterday with the CHINA LEGAL NEWS. The Chinese people will never forget the Japanese military's aggression, and that it is a historical fact which has been recognized by all and no one can alter it, jurist Jia Qian said.

The special military tribunals under the Supreme People's Court were set up in Shenyang and Taiyuan in June and July, 1956 in accordance with a decision of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress concerning 45 war criminals in custody. These included Rokuzo Takebe and Kiraku Suzuki, who committed heinous crimes during the Japanese war of aggression against China.

The jurist noted that the Japanese aggressors had committed atrocities of unparalleled savagery in China by destroying villages and massacring innocent people wherever they went. In case of the Japanese war criminals tried then, he said, some of them were charged with ordering their troops to carry out the mass slaughter of peaceful inhabitants, to plunder China's natural resources and rob residents of food grain and property, while some others were accused of ordering their men to kill Chinese captives, or to make victims bayoneting practice targets for new recruits or to clear mined areas.

In October 1942, while operating the Japanese "three alls policy" -- kill all, burn all and loot all -- Hiraku Suzuki had ordered his troops to "wipe out the Panjiatai Village competely." The result was the slaughter of 1,280 villagers and the razing of 1,000 civilian rooms.

Jurist Jia recalled that all the Japanese war criminals he tried and sentenced confessed to their crimes during their occupation of China and thanked the Chinese Government for its lenient treatment of them. He said that the Japanese military's war of aggression against China encroached upon the country's sovereignty and territorial integrity, undermined the Chinese people's peaceful life and violated peace in the Far East and the world as a whole. The history of Japanese aggression against China and Southeast Asia has been recorded in international documents and can never be reversed, Jia Qian said.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON FRASER'S VISIT TO PRC

Zhao Banquet Address

OW041536 Beijing XINHUA in English 1506 GMT 4 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 4 (XINHUA) -- Premier Zhao Ziyang gave a banquet at the Great Hall of the People here this evening in honor of Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser and other distinguished Australian guests.

Speaking at the banquet, Premier Zhao said: "This year marks the tenth anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Australia. Looking back on the course of our bilateral relations in the past ten years, we are happy to see that, in spite of the complex and volatile international situation, Sino-Australian relations have stood the test of time and have made marked progress in various fields. Our two countries have kept in touch with each other regarding international affairs; the volume of trade between the two countries is more than ten times that of 1972; economic and technological cooperation has made a good beginning; friendly interflow between the two countries has been on the increase; and friendly province-state relations are also developing healthily.

"There is no conflict of fundamental interests between our two countries; we share common concerns and hold similar views with regard to opposing aggression and expansion and maintaining world peace; and in bilateral exchanges, the two sides have always abided by the norms guiding international relations and various principles set forth in the communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries. These factors serve as a firm basis for the steady development of our bilateral relations. Obviously, the friendly relations and cooperation built on this basis is in the fundamental interests of our two peoples and has broad vistas for development."

Premier Zhao spoke highly of the great efforts Prime Minister Fraser had made to strengthen the relations between the two countries. He said: "The present international situation has become more tense and turbulent. While old problems remain unsolved, new crises are cropping up. In some parts of the world, the norms governing international relations are being wantonly trampled on. The independence and sovereignty of some countries are being gravely encroached upon. In the Asia-Pacific region where we live, the big and small hegemonists have continued to subject sovereign countries to naked aggression in disregard of the norms governing international relations, thus posing a serious threat to peace, security and stability in this region. This definitely cannot be tolerated by all peace-loving countries and peoples."

Premier Zhao praised Australia for its constant high vigilance in face of the present grave international situation, and strong opposition to any foreign interference and domination. The premier reiterated that China has consistently pursued a foreign policy of peace. He said: "We strongly oppose the acts of aggression and expansion of imperialism, hegemonism and colonialism. We will continue to work together with all peace-loving and jsutice-upholding countries and peoples and perform our bounden duty in opposing hegemonism and preserving world peace."

Prime Minister Fraser said at the banquet that he was looking forward with great interest to exchanging views with Chinese leaders on a number of issues of common concern and thus helping to strengthen the productive relationship which has been built up between our countries.

He said that the last six years since his first China visit "have brought many changes to the world and to our countries. In recent years you have made great efforts to modernize China's economy and to develop your economic ties with the outside world. That has led to a great expansion in Australia's trade with China which has been to the benefit of both China and Australia."

Discussing the present world economic recession and its effect on Australia, Prime Minister Fraser said that the countries hardest hit by the world recession and trade protection have been the developing countries. He spoke of the efforts Australia had made to help rebuild the world economy and international trade.

He went on to say: "The goal of world stability has continued to elude us. Armed conflict and disputes continue to erupt, often with little warning. Who would have predicted war between Iran and Iraq, or conflict in the south Atlantic? There are also continuing crises in Central America, southern Africa and South East Asia. The Soviet Union has played a major part in exacerbating this instability. Its objective is expansion of its influence and the subjugation of sovereign peoples, and we are at one with China in opposing Soviet hegemony. "If international peace and stability are to prevail it is essential that all nations adhere to a code of international law and conduct based on the principles of self-determination, respect for territorial integrity, and the rights of mankind."

In conclusion, Prime Minister Fraser said: "In an unstable and complex world both our countries have set an example of how, despite our different cultures, political systems and approaches, countries can recognise their common interests and build close and valuable relations based on mutual understanding, mutual trust and mutual respect."

Among those present at the banquet were Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs, Li Qiang and Huang Zhen, who have visited Australia, and leading members of other government departments. The Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries and the Beijing Municipality, and Lin Ping, Chinese ambassador to Australia, and Australian Ambassador to China H.A. Dunn attended.

Return Banquet

[Text] Beijing, August 5 (XINHUA) -- Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser gave a return banquet this evening at the Jianguo Hotel which opened last April. Among the guests present were Premier Zhao Ziyang, Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs, Li Qiang, who has visited Australia, Han Xu, vice-minister of foreign affairs, leading members of Chinese departments concerned, and Lin Ping, Chinese ambassador to Australia.

In his speech, Fraser said: "In our talks today, we have found that many of our perceptions of the world, and of the threats to its security and to harmonious international co-existence, are very similar. We should continue to exchange views on major international issues with a view to reaching agreement on constructive approaches to shared problems.

Indeed, our different perceptions, attitudes and interests should enhance our exchanges and make our conclusions more comprehensive and more relevant. It is in this spirit that Australia looks forward to the further development of our bilateral relationship and today's signing of the land agreement on embassy sites is a pleasing development."

The Australian prime minister pointed out: "It is now ten years since Australia and China established diplomatic relations and in that time we have developed a diverse and dynamic relationship. The enormous growth in our bilateral trade over the last ten years is an indication of the evolving economic co-operation [between] China and Australia and there is potential for further development of our trade in the years ahead of us.

The protocol on economic co-operation signed in September last year has given new impetus to commercial and industrial co-operative ventures which will help both our economies. Our bilateral relations have also blossomed in the cultural field."

In his reply, Zhao Ziyang said: "Today, our two sides had a full exchange of views on international issues of common interest and on bilateral relations in a friendly and sincere atmosphere. Our talks show once again that our two countries share similar views on many major international issues. Situated in the Asia-Pacific region, both China and Australia are concerned about peace and security in this region and the world in general. Regular exchange of views between the two countries on international situation undoubtedly helps to enhance our mutual understanding and coordinate our positions in opposing aggression and expansion and maintaining world peace."

He reiterated that the Chinese Government will continue its efforts to strengthen the relations between China and Australia.

Talking about the situation in China, the Chinese premier said that after summing up the experience of and drawing lessons from the socialist construction in the thirty years since the founding of the People's Republic, China has gradually found a road to socialist modernization suited to China's conditions. He said: "Our policy to readjust, restructure, consolidate and improve our national economy and the policy to enliven our domestic economy and keep China open to the outside world are beginning to achieve good results. At present, the political and economic situation in China is stable and its most difficult period of time has passed. Work in various fields has embarked on a road of steady development. We are sure that with the growth of China's economy, there will be a broader prospect for the economic cooperation between China and Australia."

Also present at the banquet were members of the entourage of the Australian prime minister and Australian Ambassador to China H.A. Dunn.

Additional Talks With Zhao

BK051148 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1130 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] Australia's prime minister, Mr Fraser, has met for additional unscheduled talks with the Chinese premier, Zhao Ziyang, on relations between rich and poor countries. Mr Fraser told reporters in Beijing the aim of the extra talks was to try to break through the barriers preventing a start to global economic negotiations.

The prime minister said that during his initial 3 hours of talks with Mr Zhao no outstanding bilateral problems had arisen, just the hope that trade would expand. He said the Chinese believed trade with Australia would grow significantly once its development was underway. Earlier, Mr Fraser canceled planned sighseeing visits because of ill health.

Beijing Press Conference

[Text] The Australian prime minister, Mr Fraser, says any significant falling-out between China and the United States would be a major tragedy. Mr Fraser was speaking at a news conference in Beijing at the end of his 3-day visit to China which has included talks with the premier, Zhao Ziyang, and with the vice chairman, Deng Xiaoping.

He said he had been briefed on China-American relations, but as Australia was not directly involved, he felt it would be wrong to comment about the attitude of either party. However, Mr Fraser said it was no secret that Taiwan was an issue which China felt very strongly about and had done so for a very long time. There have been differences between China and the United States over the continued sale of American arms and military spare parts to Taiwan. Mr Fraser said he had told the Chinese premier it would be a major tragedy for both the region and the two countries if they fell out over Taiwan. He emphasized that China and the U.S. had much in common and had the capacity to work together for world peace. In particular, he said, this was so that an appropriate stance could be taken in relation to what he called the more imperialist intentions of the Soviet Union. Earlier, during talks, Mr Fraser and Mr Zhao agreed on joint diplomatic action to try to speed up global negotiations aimed at closing the gap between the world's rich and poor nations.

Mr Fraser is due to meet the Philippines president, Marcos, tonight for talks on regional and bilateral issues. The Australian Embassy in Manila says Mr Fraser has decided to spend 2 days in the Philippines rather than fly direct to New Zealand for the South Pacific forum. Mr Fraser was forced to cancel part of his sightseeing program in Beijing due to a bout of influenza.

Meeting With Deng Xiaoping

[Text] Beijing, August 6 (XINHUA) -- Deng Xiaoping, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, met with Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser at the Great Hall of the People here this morning.

Deng Xiaoping briefed Prime Minister Fraser on the gratifying changes that have taken place in China in recent years. He said that China's practical situation in the past two and a half years proved the efficacy of the policies mapped out since the Third Plenary Session of the C.P.C. 11th Central Committee. Greater changes have taken place in rural areas, he said, where the income of peasants has generally increased. Rural inhabitants feel secure and the enthusiasm of the peasants has been aroused. This demonstrates that we have done a good job for the peasants, who account for eighty per cent of the country's total population, the vice-chairman said. All of this proved that China's policy is effective on a very large scale.

Secondly, he continued, China's policy aimed to readjust, restructure, consolidate and improve the nation's industry, commerce and other fields has also achieved good results. This is a victory for the policy of "seeking truth from facts," and proceeding from objective reality, he said.

Vice-Chairman Deng said: "Our goal of four modernizations is a great one. To succeed, it is imperative that we have a correct policy. Playing lip service will not do. Deng Xiaoping pointed out that China aims toward self-reliance in developing its economy while, at the same time, the country remains open to outside world in order to undertake economic and technical cooperation with foreign countries on a mutually beneficial basis.

Vice-Chairman Deng said: "Our country has a promising future. The key task now is to train competent personnel. We can't work well without skill and knowledge. Therefore, we should strengthen the work of training competent personnel on one hand, and, on the other, we should make good use of middle-aged intellectuals and mobilize their initiative."

"Recently we have also begun to pay special attention to the important matter of promoting socialist ethics. We want to mold our citizens into a people with ideals, morals, culture and a sense of discipline," the vice-chairman said. Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping also talked about China's streamlining of institutions.

Prime Minister Fraser said he was very interested in what Vice-Chairman Deng said, and voice satisfaction with the results achieved during his present visit to China. Vice-Chairman Deng and Prime Minister Fraser also exchanged views on some issues of common interest.

Present were Huang Hua, Chinese state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; Han Xu, vice-minister of foreign affairs; and Lin Ping, Chinese ambassador to Australia. Present also were Sir Geoffrey Yeend, secretary of the department of the prime minister and cabinet; P.G.F. Henderson, secretary of the Deaprtment of Foreign Affairs; D. White, director of prime minister's personal staff; and H.A. Dunn, Australian ambassador to China.

[Text] Beijing, August 6 (XINHUA) -- Malcolm Fraser, prime minister of Australia, and his party left Beijing by special plane this afternoon after an official visit to China.

Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang went to the guesthouse to see the Australian prime minister off. Premier Zhao asked Prime Minister Fraser to convey the profound feelings of the Chinese people towards the Australian people.

At noon today, the Australian prime minister gave a press conference at the guesthouse. He told the press that he had valuable discussions with Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping and Premier Zhao Ziyang on international and bilateral issues and these discussions had promoted his understanding of China's positions on these issues. He said that he looked forward to the growth of friendly relations of cooperation between the two countries in science and technology, trade and other fields.

FRANCE'S CHEYSSON GIVES PRESS CONFERENCE 2 AUG

AB051730 Paris DIPLOMATIC INFORMATION SERVICE in French 1130 GMT 5 Aug 82

["First part" of a 2 August press conference given in Beijing by French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson]

[Text] This is the first high-level political meeting held between China and France since last year's change of government. There were some incidental meetings between the president of the republic and the premier in Cancun, and between my colleague Huang Hua and myself on two occasions in Cancun and on two occasions in New York, but there has not yet been any formal political meeting involving hours of common reflection and affording any of the French political leaders the opportunity of meeting the highest Chinese authorities. It is true that we postponed this for 14 months; this is too long. It is certain that the conclusion drawn from the present journey by the Chinese prime minister and foreign minister is that we should maintain regular contacts in the future. This contact already exists at the technical level, as well as at the political level between the official services. There have been periodic consultations on disarmament, the Middle East and Africa, and more will follow, including the forthcoming Paris talks on the Middle East in September. Consultations may also be held on certain Asian problems. Our services and directors have met and will continue to meet on all problems.

Of course, our ambassadors in Paris and Beijing have daily duties, but it is also necessary that those in France who have the authority to talk about foreign policy -- the president of the republic, the prime minister and the minister of external relations -- should regularly exchange views with their Chinese colleagues. My visit falls within this new policy to be pursued and which will be marked in particular by the French president's visit to Beijing. Confirming yesterday the long-standing invitation addressed to Mr Mitterrand, the premier kindly suggested that the French president should come to China at the time of the first blossoming of flowers, that is, about the beginning of May. The precise date is yet to be fixed but the principle has been agreed upon. President Mitterrand has entrusted me with a message expressing in advance his gratitude for this invitation.

There are several reasons why we should have regular high-level political contacts. The first reason is to discuss politics and these past 2 days have shown us that there is complete understanding between the PRC and the French Republic over major political issues, primarily because both countries hold dear their independence. The French, in this respect, are sometimes very unaccommodating toward their allies. We are the allies of the Americans and others in the Atlantic alliance, it is true, but we are independent, with our own strategic nuclear power. We are independent in our economic and political thinking. For example, everyone knows that we are very independent in our approach to Third World issues, to global issues such as the North-South dialogue, energy development, raw materials, specific issues such as ties with Africa, the Middle East, Central America and Asia. The PRC, needless to say, is totally independent in its policy. This is a fundamental common concern. It is even more fundamental, as the PRC, like France, recognizes the right of each country to be independent. There are five principles concerning peaceful coexistence and nonalignment. France systematically encourages respect for these principles and the development of true nonalignment in the Third World. Those are the two fundamental and identical points common to the PRC and France.

If we now examine the major current issues, we note that the PRC and France hold similar views on the most serious ones. On East-West relations; on settling the Middle East crisis -- wherein both countries support the right of every state to security and to self-determination, including both Israel and Palestine; on settling African problems, for example, the issue of independence for Namibia; on the approach to Asian issues -- wherein both the PRC and France affirm Afghanistan's right to independence; and the right of Kampuchea to independence -- we hold similar views. We consequently condemn the invasions of Kampuchea and Afghanistan, or any other invasion. France and the PRC are very close on these major current issues. On some issues our views may differ, but they differ only on certain aspects.

The third reason justifing a constant political and continued contact between the two countries is that there are some cultural and economic developments which concern both countries and which are of great political impact to them. You know that French enterprises are interested in development projects in the PRC... electronics, nuclear energy, aeronautics, petroleum, coal, and so forth. One might say these are purely economic matters; but no, they also have a political dimension. Why? Because the Chinese, while entering into agreement with French concerns, want to remain independent and have access to modern technology, train their staff and move progressively from the stage of buying materials to that of manufacturing them. We Europeans, in order to balance our economies and to maintain our technological advance, need wider markets; we need partners in larger countries -- and there is none bigger than the PRC -- with already trained manpower. In China you already have engineers, scientists, experts. You do not have enough, it is true, but you already have the minimum to help you master certain techniques. It is in your interest, it is also in ours. One should not forget this political dimension when talking about economic ties.

Neither should one forget the political dimension when talking about cultural relations. The PRC is a country with an ancient civilization; France is less old, but still with a good number of centuries of culture. This is an essential point in our national identity which, it must be recognized, our people understand. We want to make a greater effort in France to propagate Chinese culture and the teaching of Chinese. Yet we hope that a greater effort will be made in China to make French culture better understood and to spread the teaching of French. I am happy at what was said by my counterpart concerning the talks which will begin between radio and television officials to enable the teaching of French. On both sides this is an element of pride and identity. It is by consolidating this pride on both sides that we shall consolidate our political independence. Therefore, we should give political training at any technical meetings that may be held. Our minister of external trade came here some time ago; that was good. I have invited the PRC minister of external trade to pay a visit to France. I hope she will be able to come, but political training must be ensured, and this requires contact at the highest levels, levels involving your prime minister, your party leaders, the president of our republic, our prime minister, the political parties and eventually the foreign ministers of both countries. This is the general framework for my visit.

[Question] On North-South relations, we know that France has adopted a forward-looking attitude and that some results have been achieved from this, especially in Africa. Has this trip to Asia given you some new ideas? Another question: Reports from some European capitals say some difficulties have arisen in relations between Europe and the United States because of the gas pipeline. Will you please explain this to us?

[Answer] On the North-South issue, you are right to recall that we are profoundly busy with the search for progress in relations between the North and the South. We cannot see how the world can come out of the present economic crisis if there is no development in the South.

South -- this word is bad because China belongs to the South in the real sense of the word, but already it has climbed far up to the North. In fact, we know that it is only by satisfying the needs of a population of 2.5 billion people that we will have the edge -- the incentive to production, which represents the best and the only way to revive the world's economy.

Secondly, compared with China, France is a very small country. We possess very little raw materials and we have to import almost all our needs. Our market is too small to satisfy the driving ambitions of our production sector. We need a sure, foreseeable relationship, and, as a socialist, I will say a planned relationship with the countries of the South from where we acquire our raw materials and to where we want to export our technology and products. The search for a long-term dimension in our relations with China, as with the Third World countries, is fundamental to us. It is one of the most important elements for progress in the North-South issue. The countries of the South should know what financing they will have at their disposal. The countries of the South must know the markets that are open to them. It is important that the countries of the South know at what price they will sell their raw materials. The countries of the South must be assured that the world's currencies will stop fluctuating from month to month. The dollar must be stabilized because it is the base for the world's currencies. This is in the interest of the countries of the South, but these are also problems which concern us directly.

When we are in Asia -- we Europeans, who are from small countries as compared with Asia -- are more than ever convinced about all this. Think of what a clear perspective for the development of our economic relations with India or with Southeast Asia, or better still with China, can mean to all the European countries. Suppose we win long-term contracts for our purchases and our sales. It is good for you; it is good for your planning, but is good for us too.

Your second question concerns our relations with the United States. It is the U.S. President who said that it is a family squabble. He is right. We belong to the same family when it comes to defending it. We are together. We the French, who are totally independent on the issue of strategic nuclear defense, belong to the same alliance. We are loyal allies. We belong to the same economic system, the same free market economy. We have the same reactions to a large number of family problems -- this is undeniable. However, in families there are disputes, and these can be hot at certain moments. At present there is a dispute between the United States and Europe as a whole, because we feel that decisions made by the Americans unilaterally and without consulting us have a serious impact on our economies, thereby threatening employment in our countries, and we are already suffering from serious unemployment problems. Already, this situation has been aggravated because of the high American interest rates, which American budgetary policy will not allow to come down. These American interest rates reflect on our countries: We are in a free market; we have high interest rates; investment is almost impossible; the employment situation is not improving. We are forced to think that the Americans are not sufficiently examining the problems of their allies when they make their decisions in their own home. What is remarkable is that the same line of reasoning is maintained by all the European countries, whether politically they belong to the West or to the East, whether they speak English, German, Spanish or French; whether they have often had problems with the United States or very rarely. Currently, the same family dispute exists between all the European countries on the one hand and the United States on the other. It is serious; it cannot continue like this for a long time. It is not possible that this should last. We have too many common interests to let this last, and because we are convinced that we are right, the Americans will understand fully that we are right.

UNSC DEMANDS ISRAELI WITHDRAWAL FROM LEBANON

OW050914 Beijing XINHUA in English 0741 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] United Nations, August 4 (XINHUA) -- The U.N. Security Council adopted a resolution this evening demanding an immediate cease-fire in Lebanon and withdrawal of Israeli forces from that country. The Jordan-Spain sponsored resolution was adopted by a vote of 14 to 0, with the United States abstaining.

BREZHNEV MESSAGE TO PLO CHAIRMAN 'ARAFAT CITED

[Text] Moscow, August 5 (XINHUA) -- Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in a message to Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, expressed the "feelings of admiration at the courage and staunchness of all the Palestinian and Lebanese defenders of Lebanon's Beirut", according to a TASS report today.

The message said that the Soviet representative to the United Nations has been instructed to request an emergency meeting of the Security Council to take necessary measures to secure the implementation of the resolutions passed by it earlier, primarily to ensure an immediate ceasefire, stationing of U.N. observers in Beirut and around it and the ending of the Israeli aggression.

PALESTINIANS RESIST ISRAELI ASSAULT ON BEIRUT

[Text] Beirut, August 4 (XINHUA) -- Palestinian guerrillas killed or wounded about 100 Israeli troops and destroyed 21 tanks and 14 armored personnel carriers of the latter today in their tenacious resistance to Israeli's offensives in Beirut, according to a WAFA report.

The Israeli forces bombarded west Beirut in a wanton and indiscriminate manner for 20 long hours since zero hours this morning. The buildings of the prime minister's office, the Information Department, the Central Bank, the radio station, the paper AN-NAHAR and some other government departments as well as industrial and commercial enterprises and hospitals in Hamra district, the business centre of west Beirut, were heavily damaged. According to an estimate of the Lebanese security department, at least 300 people were killed or wounded.

At 4:00 this morning, Isreals tanks and armored forces, under the cover of gunfire, smashed their way into west Beirut from the east, south and north. They broke through Palestine defence lines in the east, captured the Awza'i area and encircled the Burj al-Banajinah refugee camp west of the airport in the south, and took control of the Beirut port in the north. The Palestinian guerrillas were said to have been driven back and confined to an area of about ten square kilometres.

Yāsir 'Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, today appealed to all Palestinian people to take up arms to fight the Israeli troops in defence of national dignity.

An Israeli military spokesman claimed that the Israeli troops had "no intention to enter" into west Beirut and their offensive today was aimed at "strengthening" their own positions. However, observers here held that Israel was intending to creat a new cease-fire line and tighten the encirclement of the Palestinians before the arrival of international observers in Beirut, so as to maintain a powerful military pressure to force the Palestinian armed forces to withdraw from Beirut as soon as possible.

RENMIN RIBAO CONDEMS ISRAELI 'AGGRESSION'

OW060320 Beijing XINHUA in English 0254 GMT 6 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 6 (XINHUA) -- Just as the U.N. Security Council and the international community were working vigorously to solve the Lebanese crisis, the Begin regime tore up the 9th ceasefire agreement on August 4 by launching a large-scale offensive on west Beirut. This shows that the Israeli authorities have no sincere desire to solve the Lebanese problem, says a PEOPLE'S DAILY commentary today entitled "Stop the Israeli Aggression."

Israel tries to wipe out the Palestinian armed forces and their command, so as to wipe the Palestine liberation cause off the slate and perpetuate its occupation of the West Bank of the Jordan River, the Gaza Strip and other occupied Arab territories. "But the Palestine Liberation Organization, enjoying the support of the Arab people and all the peace-loving people the world over, cannot be eliminated," the commentary stresses.

The Begin regime, the commentary says, "has brought great disasters to the people in the Middle East and threatened gravely world peace and security. Israeli atrocities have roused tremendous fury from all the peace-loving people throughout the world who demanded severe sanctions against Israel."

"The Chinese Government and people strongly condemn the aggressive crimes of Israel and firmly support the Palestinian people in their just struggle to restore national rights," the commentary says in conclusion.

PRC AMBASSADOR MEETS KENYAN PRESIDENT 6 AUG

[Text] Nairobi, August 5 (XINHUA) -- Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi said today that the abortive coup staged by junior Air Force officers would not divert the attention of Kenyans from the path they have followed since independence.

Liu Bocheng Unable To Continue

[Text] Beijing, Aug 6 (XINHUA) -- The Seventh Plenary Session of the 11th Central Committee of the Communist Party of China today adopted letters addressed respectively to Comrade Liu Bocheng and Comrade Cai Chang, extending the cordial regards and high respect of the entire party membership to the two veteran proletarian revolutionaries who are not in leading post on account of advanced age and long poor health.

Liu Bocheng, 91, is a member of the Political Bureau of the C.P.C. Central Committee and a vice-chairman of the Military Commission of the C.P.C. Central Committee; Cai Chang, 82, is a member of the C.P.C. Central Committee and honorary president of the All-China Women's Federation.

They have made great contributions to the party and the people in the course of protracted revolution and construction. Owing to their advanced age and long poor health, they will not be able to attend the 12th national congress of the party scheduled to meet on September 1, nor to continue in leading party and state posts.

The letter to Liu Bocheng, one of the founders of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, recalled some of his revolutionary contributions since his early years when he took part in the revolution of 1911 and the war against the northern warlords in the mid-1920's.

Liu Bocheng helped launch and lead the Nanchang uprising in 1927. In the campaigns against "encirclement and suppression" (1930-1934) and the 25,000-li Long March (1934-1935), he served as chief of the General Staff of the Military Commission of the party Central Committee and performed outstanding military exploits. During the war of resistance against Japanese aggression, he fought in the enemy's rear area in north China by developing people's guerrilla warfare and setting up base areas. In the liberation war period (1946-1949), he again showed his outstanding military skill in a series of important campaigns. He made immortal contributions to the victory over Japanese imperialism, the defeat of the Kuomintang reactionaries and the establishment of the People's Republic of China. After the founding of New China, Liu Bocheng worked diligently to train high-ranking commanders of the Chinese People's Liberation Army and made great new contributions in building up a modern, regular and revolutionary army.

The letter said: "Your skill in directing battles and resourcefulness in military strategy constitute an important component of Mao Zedong's military thinking. You are worthy of the title of a battle-tested marshal, a Marxist military theorist and a staunch proletarian revolutionary."

The letter also praised Liu Bocheng for his loyalty to the country, the people and the cause of communism. The letter said that he observes discipline, never claims credit for himself or becomes arrogant, always works hard and is honest in performing his official duties, sharing good and bad with the people and the rank-and-file soldiers. His fine sense of morality has made him very popular inside the party and outside it.

The letter also said that the forthcoming 12th national congress of the party will, under the guidance of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, formulate principles and measures for carrying out the tasks in the new period, adopt a new party constitution and elect a new Central Committee which will be a command post with greater vitality and vigor. The cause started by the proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation through arduous struggle is bound to make new advances.

Cai Chang is one of the earliest members of the Chinese Communist Party. She participated in the 25,000-li Long March, and has been an outstanding leader of the Chinese women's movement as well as a noted activist in the international progressive women's movement.

The letter of the seventh plenary session praised Cai Chang for always being in the van of the struggle in the different historical periods of the Chinese revolution and for her devotion to the emancipation of women under the leadership of the party. The letter said that before nationwide liberation, she led women in building up revolutionary base areas to expand production and support the liberation war, and made tremendous contributions. After the founding of the People's Republic, she served as the principal leader of the All-China Women's Federation for a long time, devoting herself heart and soul to mobilizing and organizing women to take part in socialist revolution and construction and in defending the vital interests of women and children.

The letter pointed out that Comrade Cai Chang's fine revolutionary character and high morality have for a long time educated thousands upon thousands of party members and other people and will inspire vast numbers of rank-and-file members and cadres of the party to work still harder for the lofty ideals of communism.

LEADERS ATTEND CHILDREN'S CENTER OPENING

[Text] Beijing, August 5 (XINHUA) -- China's National Children's Center, one of the biggest in the country, was thrown open here today to 500 singing and laughing children. Occupying a space of 80,000 square meters, the center was formerly known as "Guanyuan" and is located in the western part of Beijing. It can accomodate 2,000 children from 7-14 years of age daily.

On behalf of the party and the government, Deng Yingchao, member of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party's Central Committee and vice chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, extended her congratulations to the opening of the center. She said the building is a gift presented by the party Central Committee to the youngsters.

She emphasized the importance of both school and after-school education. She pointed out that the education and bringing up of today's Young Pioneers, the future builders of the four modernizations require efforts of the whole party and the whole society.

Party and state leaders including Fang Yi, Ni Zhifu, Wan Li, Xi Zhongxun and Hu Qiaomu, as well as Kang Keqing, chairman of the National Committee for Coordinating Child Care Work and president of the All-China Women's Federation, were invited to the inauguration ceremony. They visited the center after the ceremony.

A huge painting greets the children at the entrance of the building with their favorite characters such as monkey king, from Chinese classic "Pilgrimage to the West"; Nezha, a brave child who fought against sea dragon king; Effendi, a Uygur folk tale hero; Pinocchio, Snow White and Mickey Mouse. The mural was contributed by the teachers and students of the Central Academy of Fine Arts.

Behind the entrance is a large auditorium with a stage which can be used for social gatherings, film shows and live performances. A symbol of the children's center is hung on the backdrop of the stage. The symbol has in its center a burgeoning green seedling representing the growing children, circled by a large "C" (in dark green colour), standing for children's center.

Besides the auditorium, are three halls, one each for science-technology, arts and sports.

In the science and technology section, there are one hundred operational exhibits offering children demonstrations in the fields of optics, acoustics, mechanics, electricity, physics, mathematics and physiology.

Rong Gaotang, director of the preparatory committee of the center, said that most of the equipment can be operated by children themselves, so that they can acquire some basic scientific knowledge through "hands-on" experience.

One example is a "magic glass" installed in the hall of science and technology. Children can see a red rose on a glass plate, but when they reach out to touch it, there is nothing there. From the explanation given by a guide, children will learn it is a "mirage effect," light refraction which causes people travelling in the desert to see images of towns and people far away.

Part of science hall is devoted to the study of the human body. "Do you know about your own body?", "what kind of lung you should have?" and "how to protect your eyesight" are the questions put to the children as they enter the room. With the help of models and specimens, children learn the answers.

The hall of arts, where one room is decorated with coconut trees and another with snowcapped mountains, video-tapes describe to the youngsters the beautiful land in southern and northern parts of China. There is also a library with 100,000 copies of Chinese and foreign children's books.

The center of attraction outside the building is an aircraft flight simulator presented by the Shanghai municipal government. It can carry 30 children on board with every movement of a simulated aircraft trip -- from take-off to landing -- with a video display screen.

The garden around the building is covered with trees, plants and flowers. Groups will be set up for children to study botany and horticulture.

During its preparation, the center received contributions from government departments, national mass organizations, factories, scientific institutes and individuals including overseas Chinese. It also got support from more than 20 provinces and cities.

S. Prabasi, representative of the Office of the United Nations Children's Fund in China and the office staff members visited the center before its opening.

COUNSELORS DISCUSS DRAFT REVISED CONSTITUTION

OW051256 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0204 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, 5 Aug (XINHUA) -- The Counselors Office of the State Council recently held a meeting to discuss the draft revised constitution. The counselors, who are all over 70, spent more than half a month discussing the draft revised constitution, chapter by chapter and article by article, and put forward some recommendations for changes.

The counselors held that one important feature of the draft revised constitution is that on the basis of correctly summing up our country's experiences, both positive and negative, in socialist revolution and construction over the past more than 30 years, it affirms that the people throughout the country must uphold the four fundamental principles. In light of their personal experience over many years, quite a number of counselors said that the four fundamental principles summed up from the Chinese people's revolutionary practice are the foundation of our country and the guide for action which every citizen must not forget. They believed that so long as we uphold the four fundamental principles, the situation of stability and unity in our country assuredly will be consolidated and developed, and the magnificent socialist plan of the four modernizations certainly can be realized.

Through serious discussions, the counselors put forward opinions on changing some articles in the draft revised constitution.

The counselors held that the stipulation of the draft revised constitution on setting up a Central Military Commission to lead the armed forces of the country is in keeping with our country's actual conditions. Some counselors suggested that clear-cut stipulations should be added as to the Central Military Commission's functions, the limits of its authority and its relations with the State Council.

On questions of education, the counselors suggested that Article 20 of the draft revised constitution be changed to read: The state does everything in its power to universalize primary education, wipe out illiteracy and develop secondary, vocational and higher education. They said that for many years quite a number of problems have existed in the work to universalize primary education and wipe out illiteracy in our country, and that at present the situation in which primary education has failed to be universalized is becoming increasingly serious. Therefore, universal primary education and wiping out illiteracy should be stressed in the draft revised constitution so that administrative organs at all levels will act conscientiously according to the stipulation.

The counselors pointed out: The development of productive forces is a major premise and orientation for socialist economic construction. For this reason, the general principles of the draft revised constitution should include a clear-cut stipulation that the orientation of the socialist economy of the People's Republic of China is to promote highly developed productive forces.

The counselors also suggested some changes in the supervision of the implementation of the constitution and so forth. They suggested that after the draft revised constitution is passed, an educational campaign on the legal system be launched on a nationwide scale to bring about an atmosphere for everyone to abide by the constitution and the law.

HE JIANZHANG ARTICLE ON STABILIZING PRICES

HK050636 Beijing JIAGE LILUN YU SHIJIAN in Chinese No 3, 20 May 82 pp 23-25

[Article by He Jianzhang [0149 1696 4545]: "Some Ideas on Guiding Principles for Stabilizing Prices"]

Since the end of World War II, particularly in the past decade or so, the economy of many Western capitalist countries has been characterized by both production stagnation and inflation.

The large number of unemployed is keeping pace with soaring commodity prices and the rate of rising prices is often in double digits. However, in the past 30 years or so, our country has not only put a quick end to the galloping inflation and soaring prices which were left over by the old society, but has also taken timely countermeasures against inflation and price fluctuation caused by the two mistakes (the "Great Leap Forward" and "the 1978 rash advance"). Thus, prices have been kept mainly stable. All this has ensured with marked success a smooth development of our country's economic construction. Many foreigners think this is a real miracle and believe there are a great deal of meritorious experiences for them to study and learn from our work.

As a matter of fact there is no secret to our success in this aspect. The main reason for success is that we carry out planned economy on the basis of public ownership. This enables us to maintain a balance between supply and general social demand and to stabilize prices in order to bring about a steady development of the socialist economy. When disproportions appear in the national economy owing to subjective or objective reasons, we are able to readjust them by taking necessary administrative or economic measures. However, in capitalist countries, the whole social production is in a state of anarchism. Disproportions in the economy will inevitably lead to violent price fluctuations and speed up an economic crisis. Then, efforts will be made to regain a temporary balance after the great destruction of an economic crisis. The capitalist system enables the bourgeoisie to plunder the laboring people by means of inflation and price increases. But the socialist system values the protection of the requirements of people's livelihood above everything else. Pricing work should also conform with this objective. Inflation and rising prices which impair the benefits of the laboring people are inconsistent with the essence of socialist economy.

Price stability is called for by maintaining a steady economy and protecting the requirements of people's livelihood. Planned economy can make it possible to achieve this goal. But this can never be made possible by the capitalist system. Price stability is, therefore, one of the main features of the socialist economy.

Stabilizing Prices Is the Basic Principle for the Price Work of Our Country

Price stability is one of the main features of the socialist planned economy. The full manifestation of such a feature depends on whether or not we can work according to socialist economic law. First of all, it depends on our quality of mapping out plans. That is to say, it depends on whether we can achieve a good balance in a comprehensive way, maintain an appropriate proportion between all departments of the national economy, maintain a balance between supply and general social demand, and, particularly, a balance between social purchasing power and the available supply of commodities. For price work, we must keep Prices stable as a basic principle. We must adopt all necessary measures to stabilize prices at different times and under different circumstances.

What is price stability?

Price stability is a relative concept. It means a basic stability of average prices of commodities, the prices of major consumer goods and the people's living standard. As regards the limits of price stability, the rise of commodity prices should be lower than that of wages and the increase of wages should be lower than that of labor productivity. Meanwhile, changes in the average prices of commodities should not be too great. Price stability should not be interpreted as no change in the average prices of commodities. This is because the rise of labor productivity of different production departments cannot be the same.

According to the actual situation of our country, the rise of labor productivity in agriculture and the mining industry is a bit slow. But the rise of the labor productivity in the processing industry, especially newly established industrial departments, is relatively fast because the labor consumption and value of some of their commodities drop relatively fast. Under such circumstances, there are two alternatives for maintaining price parities between different commodities.

One is to lower the prices of all commodities according to differences in the rise of labor productivity of different production departments and in the dropping of commodity value; the other is to properly raise the prices of farm and mining products while primarily maintaining the prices of processing products unchanged. The former requires much work and extensive involvement, and also what has been gained in raising labor productivity will be distributed to consumers on average. It is not beneficial to stabilizing the economy, increasing state accumulation and regulating the income of people of different circles. Hence, the latter alternative is preferable to the former. Under normal conditions, our country raises the purchasing prices of some farm products every 3 years, while in the main, keeping the prices of industrial products unchanged, or only adjusting the prices of one or two products which are extremely unreasonable; that is, "no change of prices in the main, adjustment of individual prices." This can be seen in the First 5-Year Plan and the Third 5-Year Plan drafted in 1964, which proposed an annual allocation of 1 billion yuan for adjusting commodity prices. During the First 5-Year Plan, the annual average rise in industrial labor productivity was about 9 percent, the rise in total wages about 6 percent, and commodity prices about 1.5 percent. With increased state revenues, the people's living conditions generally improved. The price ratio of various commodities, especially the price parities between industrial and agricultural products, were becoming more reasonable to the satisfaction of everyone. This brought about a rapid development of the national economy. Such a situation appeared only when a good overall balance was kept and proportions in all fields were well coordinated.

However, for many years following this situation, the overall balance was wrecked as a result of the interference of "leftist" guiding ideas. Disproportions occurred in the national economy, especially between consumption and accumulation, and between agriculture, light industry and heavy industry. For a long time, social purchasing power exceeded the available supply of commodities and consumer demands could not be met; commodity prices were under the impact of such a situation. Thus, there were great difficulties in maintaining price stability. In times of such difficulties, the party and government as well as all pricing workers did all they could and adopted a series of measures to maintain the basic stability of prices in our country. It must be noted that they were indeed meritorious in this aspect.

Concretely speaking, the methods and measures which have been taken are as follows:

1. Purchase and supply are carried out with plans. In 1953 the state monopolized purchase and marketing of grain, and in 1954 rationed cotton cloth supplies. Then, other measures were taken for supplying some major consumer goods in fixed quantities and with coupons at lower prices. All the actions were taken to seek a balance between supply and demand of major consumer goods at a low level and ensure the main daily necessities for the people. When there was no option but to raise the purchasing prices of such commodities, their marketing prices were still kept unchanged in the main. Losses were made up by state financial subsidies.

2. Control is tightened on social purchasing power, including a relatively long-range wage freeze and cancellation of the bonus systems. Thus, a balance can be kept between supply and demand by controlling people's consumption.

3. Price freezing. This specific measure is usually taken when the contradition between supply and demand becomes acute and a big gap appears between social purchasing power and the availability of commodity supply. This measure was taken during the Cultural Revolution, on 7 December 1980 and on 8 January 1982.

4. While ensuring stable prices of people's daily necessities, it is necessary to pursue a policy of high prices by raising the prices of other consumer goods to a great extent in order to withdraw currency from circulation and create conditions for stabilizing the prices of major daily necessities. This method was used at the beginning of 1960's.

5. Encouraging bank savings and issuing national treasury bonds (in the past government bonds were issued) in order to restrain social purchasing power for a time.

In summing up the above, we can see that in the past we laid too much stress on administrative measures for keeping prices stable and seldom used the method of readjusting prices. This has given people a false impression that stabilizing prices means freezing prices. Meanwhile, we paid inadequate attention to properly readjusting the price parities between different kinds of commodities. This can be understood when wages have been frozen for a long time. But when big increases were made in wages and bonuses, we still dared not make appropriate readjustment of price parities, or we made the readjustment but felt apprehensive. It is wrong to think this way.

It must also be pointed out that relying solely on administrative measures to stabilize prices can hardly provide a solid foundation for price stability. As mentioned above, stabilizing prices by relying on freezing prices or restraining people's consumption will dampen laborers' enthusiasm and blunt the enthusiasm of enterprises in production. Furthermore, stabilizing prices by relying on price freezing and state subsidies is not a permanent solution to the problem. Therefore, the problem of commodity prices must be tackled in a comprehensive way in the national economy. Generally speaking, we must continue to correct the "leftist" errors and implement the "10 principles" recently put forward by Comrade Zhao Ziyang to blaze a new trail in our economic construction. The most important thing is to achieve a good overall balance, attain better economic results and, in particular, maintain a balance between the available supply of commodities and social purchasing power. We must create conditions to the utmost so as to step by step make the rise of prices lower than that of wages and the increase of wages lower than that of labor productivity. On this basis, and according to the changes of labor productivity of different departments and the changes of value of various commodities, we can make timely and proper readjustments of the price relations between different commodities and correctly handle the interests between the state, producers and individuals. Only by so doing will it be possible to provide a scientific basis for the prices of all commodities and to provide a solid basis for price stability. And only with proper price relations will it be possible to fulfill state plans and promote the development of production as well as the stability and higher level of the people's economic life.

Our conclusion is: Stabilizing prices is the basic principle of pricing. Violent price fluctuation must be avoided in all circumstances. Prices must be stabilized by combining administrative and economic measures. Only in unusual times, (that is, in times of severe disproportions) might particular stress be laid on administrative measures, and can the extreme measure on a price freeze be used. But under normal conditions, priority must be given to economic measures, that is, to properly readjust inappropriate price relations in time so as to lay a good foundation for the stabilization of prices.

In order to meet the needs of the above, improvement should be made in the system of pricing management and pricing policy, although centralized management should still be emphasised for stabilizing prices at the present time. However, when the national economy has been properly readjusted, it is necessary to create conditions for changing, step by step and through experimentation, the previous system of pricing management, which is very rigidly and tightly controlled under the centralized leadership of the state, into a system of level-to-level management under centralized leadership (including offering enterprises the right to fix prices). Only by so doing, will it be possible to maintain overall price stability and properly readjust inappropriate price relations in time.

HE JIANZHANG ARTICLE ON PRICE SYSTEM REFORM

HK040513 Beijing JIAGE LILUN YU SHIJIAN in Chinese No 3, 20 May 82 pp 52-54

[Article by He Jianzhang and Zhang Zhuoyuan [1728 0587 0337]: "Some Ideas on Price System Reform"]

[Text] Pricing will play a special role in the socialist economic pattern, and it is required that a series of reforms be carried out in the price system.

First, pricing is a criterion for appraising social labor and its achievements. It cannot be randomly used as a tool to redistribute the national income.

Along with the vigorous development of socialist commodity production and exchange, market mechanism will gradually play a more important role and, being a criterion for appraising social labor and its achievements, price will play a role of regulation in the management of production in the hundreds of thousands of enterprises. In order to give better play to the role of price in correctly guiding production and consumption, in other words, in order to establish the best production and consumption pattern, it is necessary to make price correctly reflect the social labor consumption. If, like a distorting mirror, it does not truly reflect social labor, the social interests will be damaged and the social economic results will be reduced. The more the commodity economy develops, the more it requires price to truly reflect its value, or production price, which is another form of value, and the regulatory role of the law of value will be brought into fuller play.

Of course, proceeding from the overall interests of the whole society, price may sometimes be used, to a certain extent, as a tool to redistribute national income, and the prices of some products may be adjusted a bit higher or lower than their values (or production prices). However, this cannot be regarded as a general or long-term policy. It is only a partial or temporary measure which is adopted when necessary.

At present, there are two main expressions of the use of price as a tool to redistribute national income. One is collecting national construction funds from the peasants through the price scissors [jiage de jiandao 0305 2706 4104 0477 0430] between industrial and agricultural products. The other is ensuring the people's basic daily necessities by means of subsidization. Referring to the former, as there are reasons in history for the existence of price scissors between industrial and agricultural products, this method cannot be randomly used and cannot be regarded as a long-term policy.

With reference to the latter, that is, the problem of state subsidies for prices, this is becoming more and more noticeable in present economic life. Over the past few years, the state subsidies for prices have gradually increased. Although these financial subsidies have played an important role in stabilizing prices, they have also given rise to a number of problems, such as the increasing financial burden and the irrational redistribution of national income. If the situation continues to develop like this, there will be more difficulties. Now more and more people are holding that the state financial price subsidies must be gradually reduced. For some ordinary commodities, this problem can be solved by means of raising sales prices, while for some basic daily necessities, the method of raising sales prices through raising the purchase prices of agricultural products and increasing wages can be adopted, so that the variety and amount of subsidies can be gradually reduced and subsidies finally eliminated. The problems of the latter seem to be more complicated and must be solved with more care. However, there must be a clarified principle, that is, this problem must be solved step by step and price subsidies must not be regarded as intrinsic and inevitable in the socialist economy.

Second, the problem concerning the price system.

Along with the development of the reforms of the economic pattern and economic systems, the market factor will be gradually enhanced, market mechanism will be extensively used and the regulatory role of the law of value in socialist production and circulation will be increased day by day. This naturally requires that reforms be carried out in the present price system and that a comparatively reasonable price system be established.

In 1979, soon after the discussion on the reform of the economic systems began, some comrades had already predicted that the focus of the system reform would be on the problem of prices. Obviously, if the enterprises are granted greater decisionmaking power and are considered to be independent commodity producers which practice independent accounting and assume sole responsibility for their profits or losses, the present irrational price system will become a major problem. Under this irrational price system, the enterprises would naturally like to produce the high priced and high profit products and would be reluctant to produce those low-priced and low-profit products. As a result, the problem of some products being overstocked while some other products are out of stock, would deteriorate and the disproportion of the national economy would be aggravated. Therefore, the reform of the economic systems requires that the existing price system be reformed and rationalized. Of course, if regulation by market mechanism is relatively extensively and fully practiced and the prices are allowed to fluctuate according to the supply and demands of the market, the price system will also become more reasonable in reality.

There is another question which has been discussed for many years. That is, what is the basis for the price system? Now we can see that if the original centralized pattern of the planned economy is not changed, the fixing of prices according to the "will of officials" will be inevitable, and the fixing of prices on the basis of production prices will be a mere ideal, for there will be no internal mechanism or practical conditions for fixing prices according to production prices. When it is acknowledged that the socialist economy should be a planned commodity economy, and market regulation should be carried out under the guidance of the plan, that in the macroeconomic field, the regulation by plan should be mainly practiced while in the microeconomic field the regulation by market mechanism should be mainly practiced, and that market mechanism must play an extensive role, and it is acknowledged that there is competition and various departments, localities and enterprises are trying to invest their funds in the production and expanded reproduction of favorable priced products, and thus there exists, to a certain extent, free transfer to funds, then there will also exist the trend of average profit rate. In other words, there will also exist the practical conditions and inevitability of the value of products being transferred to production prices. In short, when it is acknowledged that the socialist economy, which is highly socialized, is still a commodity economy, the fixing of prices on the basis of production prices will be an objective social procedure independent of man's will.

On the other hand, if the choice of changing the centralized economic pattern is considered to be a correct one, but at the same time a price system is not established on the basis of production prices, for example, some planned prices still continue to be separated from production prices and competition and selective investment are overrestricted by man's will, then the practice of the new economic pattern will naturally be obstructed. Not only will planned prices be affected by market prices, but also finances will be burdened with heavier loads due to financial subsidies. At the same time, the regulation by market mechanism will naturally be restricted in various aspects and will be unable to give play to its role. As a result, the superiority of the socialist economic system will not be brought into full play.

Since 1979, through discussions of the question concerning the reform of the economic systems in our country, more and more comrades have agreed with the "theory of production prices." The main reason for this is that they have realized that the present centralized pattern of the planned economy needs to be reformed. Although the economic patterns they are considering establishing are not all the same, they all hold that it is necessary to attach importance to the role played by the law of value, to make use of market mechanism and to practice regulation by market mechanism under the guidance of a plan. Thus, the logical conclusion is naturally the "theory of production prices." In some Eastern European countries which have carried out reforms of their economic systems, the reform of the price system was designed beforehand so that it could be brought onto the track of production prices, and trial calculation could be conducted on this basis. This was not a fortuitous phenomenon, but an internal demand of the reform. We believe that with the progress of the reform of the economic systems in our country, the establishment of a rational price system on the basis of production prices will be inevitable.

Finally, the problem concerning the forms of prices and the systems of price management.

While reforming the price system, it is necessary to carry out a series of reforms on the forms of prices and price management.

In order to practice regulation by market mechanism, it is necessary to change the unitary planned pricing system. In the past, since prices were not changed according to the supply and demand of the market, the regulation by market mechanism could not be brought into play. Thus, in order to practice regulation by market mechanism, the powers of some central departments in managing prices should, with a few exceptions, be gradually transferred to localities, and the powers of the central and local authorities in fixing and readjusting prices should also be gradually transferred to enterprises in the light of actual conditions. At the same time, the unitary planned prices must be changed into multiple price forms. The prices for purchasing and selling major agricultural products, the ex-factory and sales prices of fuel, motive power and other major raw materials as well as the prices and charges of the railway, civil aviation, post and telecommunications and major water transport departments must continue to be fixed by the state according to plan. But simultaneously, it is necessary to practice the floating price system approved by the state and the provincial, municipal and autonomous regional people's governments, and gradually popularize this system in the development of the national economy. Within the floating range approved by the state, the enterprises must be provided with full power to fix and readjust the prices of certain approved commodities. No interference by any administative department is allowed. As to some less important or odd commodities, the system of negotiated and free prices can be adopted.

Practice shows that the floating price system has played a positive role in many enterprises in improving management, raising the quality of products, reducing production costs and making the products more marketable. Facts show that by practicing the system of floating prices, which is controlled by the leadership to a certain extent, the enterprises can freely list the ex-factory prices and wholesale prices of their products within the floating range. This floating price system is a result of the close combination of planned regulation and regulation by market mechanism in the form of prices. It is also an effective way, and one which has bright prospects, to lead and manage market prices.

By practicing the above-mentioned price management system, the state enterprises are granted, to a certain extent, necessary powers to fix and readjust prices. For example, they can freely list and readjust the ex-factory and wholesale prices of those products which have been approved to be fixed with floating prices, in accordance with relevant stipulations of the state and the departments in charge, and within the floating range. (This has not been tried for retail prices for daily-use industrial products of the first and second categories.) They can, through negotiation, list and readjust the prices of the third category agricultural and sideline products and industrial products as well as some smaller commodities. They can decide on the prices of some nonstandard commodities, for which the state has decided to continue practicing unified and planned prices, according to the principles and methods of fixing prices provided by relevant departments in charge. From this we can see that whether some products are allowed to have floating prices within a certain range, whether the enterprises and individuals are allowed to freely negotiate over the prices of some products, and whether the enterprises are granted certain necessary powers to fix and readjust the prices of some products, excluding those the state has decided to continue practicing unified and planned prices for, are key problems concerning whether or not the state-owned enterprises are really relatively independent commodity producers which assume sole responsibility for their profits and losses, and whether or not they are capable of conducting production and management in accordance with the needs of the market and are competitive. They are also key problems concerning whether or not the regulation by market mechanism is really brought into play.

Under the conditions that unified, floating and negotiated prices are practiced in price management, especially with the development of the reform of the economic management systems, the market factor is playing a greater role and the prices are being more deeply affected by the market. Thus, floating prices will gradually become the main form of prices, and the changes of the form and management of prices will also promote the reform of the price system. Obviously, if the prices are allowed to float, the prices of those high cost products will naturally and steadily be kept higher than their values and those of the low cost products will be kept lower than their value. The average profit rate will become an actual economic process and the market prices will gradually become more reasonable according to production prices.

QUESTION OF INFLATION IN CHINA ANALYZED

["Summary" of speech by Luo Gengmo [7482 5087 3351], adviser to the China Prices Society: "The Question of Inflation in New China and the Fundamental Differences Between It and Inflation in the West"]

[Text] In the early post-liberation period we were relatively successful in overcoming the malignant inflation left over from old China. This displayed the tremendous power of New China. When publicizing the superiority of socialism, we tend to stress that there is no currency inflation under socialism, or tend to be not sufficiently alerted to the possibility of currency inflation under socialism. In fact, the difference between socialist currency and capital currency does not lie in whether or not there is currency inflation. I shall call the inflation left over from old China after liberation the first currency inflation. The great rise in commodity prices during the period of the 3 years of hardship I shall call the second currency inflation. Now, we are going through the third currency inflation. The experience this time once again tells us that currency inflation is also possible under socialism. However, there is a fundamental difference between currency inflation in New China and that in the West. Capitalism in the West has developed to the stage of being monopoly capitalism. Currency inflation there is of a periodic nature. It is rooted deep in the capitalist economic system and cannot be overcome. The West makes use of currency inflation as a measure to exploit the vast masses of its own people and the smaller nations and to transfer the economic crisis to others. It is the product of capitalism itself. It occurs regularly and is of a periodic nature.

Over the 32 year period of New China, the first currency inflation was a leftover from old China. It thus belongs to a separate category and need not be analyzed here. The second and third ones occurred after the basic establishment of the socialist system and under the peaceful and no-war conditions of the country. Although the interval between these two periods of inflation was longer than customarily found under capitalism, there were still two such periods of inflation. Could they be periodic? Were they also the inevitable products of the socialist system itself? To answer these questions, let us examine the causes leading to these two periods of inflation.

1. Over the past 31 years, our population has greatly increased. Under the conditions of an insufficient growth rate in material production, naturally the problem of employment has arisen. During the same period, the output value of industry and agriculture has grown at a higher rate than the population growth has risen. However, the fruits of production cannot be all eaten away, or lavished, since something must be left for construction. Because in the past we did not pay sufficient attention to, or failed to arrange well, the proportionate relations between population growth and the increase in production and balanced relations between consumption and accumulation on the one hand, and the national income on the other, a general strategic gap was generated which wrought havoc in various fields.

2. The "Great Leap Forward" and the people's communes in 1958 and 1959 occurred under the guidance of "leftist" thought. They damaged the enthusiasm of the peasants. Instead of agricultural production being doubled, the productive force of the peasant villages was seriously impaired.

3. The high targets in the Second 5-Year Plan, together with the great campaign to produce steel, caused much extravagance and waste. As a result, there were insufficient funds for the development of light industry and agriculture, and the 3 years of hardship ensued.

The above three points were the causes for the appearance of the second currency inflation in New China. They were brought about by "leftist" guiding ideology.

As for the problem of fiscal deficits and currency inflation in the past several years, it may be attributed to the following seven factors (the biggest factor was the result of the disruptions caused by the extreme-leftist line):

1. An extremely erroneous leftist line and the 10 years of confusion caused by Lin Biao and the "gang of four" greatly disrupted production and left behind an outstanding contradiction of the people not having enough to eat or to wear.

In particular, it has brought about the return flow to the large cities and towns of some 50 million intellectual youths from the countryside, along with the big problem of their employment. This employment problem was even more difficult to tackle than the same kind of problem left over by old China and during the 3 difficult years. In more recent years, a great proportion of these youths have found employment or semiemployment but a portion of them are still on the waiting list. During this period, their production and consumption were not balanced.

2. The "foreign leap forward" in the 2 years of 1977 and 1978 far exceeded the limits of national power (natural resources, financial power and technical talents). It laid idle large amounts of investment and equipment and reduced national finance to the state of expenditure far exceeding revenue. This was a repetition of the errors of the left-inclined guiding thought.

3. Narrowing the price scissors between industrial and agricultural products. During the period of the First 5-Year Plan, a certain amount of funds had been accumulated. This helped in slightly readjusting the commodity prices but no big reform could be carried out. If the price scissors were too wide, it would be disadvantageous to agricultural development. Since the founding of the PRC, at no time have sufficient funds been accumulated to solve this problem. Some 2 years ago, in order to repay a portion of an old indebtedness, it was necessary to raise the state purchase price of grain and other agricultural products. This cost an additional outlay of about 10 billion yuan. However, the measure was absolutely necessary and embodied certain positive significance. But it happened precisely after the 10 years of confusion and temporarily added to the fiscal deficit.

4. Since 1956 the salaries and wages of the staff and workers have not been readjusted at all and therefore they had to be raised somewhat. In 1977 and 1979 some of the salaries and wages at a low level were raised. Unfortunately, this lacked a material foundation for support. Items 3. and 4. here were both necessary enough but they increased the fiscal deficits.

5. Rectification of unjust court cases, frameups and wrong verdicts, refunds and granting of subsidy and compensation were all necessary but they also added to the expenditures.

6. Since wages have been systematized, they cannot be readjusted too often. Hence, in lieu of readjusting wages, granting of bonuses in an indefinite manner has been adopted. In reality, bonuses should be linked with production but in many cases they were not so linked. It is reported that a certain plant of the defense industry produced washing machines and bicycles for civilian use; the products were of first grade. The plant could thus afford to grant a large amount of bonus to its workers and employees. A worker's bonus there sometimes surpassed his wages, and in its workshops the granting of a bonus was not even or on a fair basis.

As a matter of fact, at present granting bonuses, in one form or another, is practiced in many of the party and government organs, in the scientific and research units and even in academic institutions. Consequently, in recent years considerable numbers of bonuses have been paid out. A bonus system is necessary. Unfortunately, in implementation, there are signs of misuse and it also happens that while expenditure increases, the receipts have not correspondingly increased. This is also one phase of the question of having fiscal deficits.

7. Too frequent and too many negotiated prices and price raising. In unified purchases and quota purchases, after the completion of the state's purchase tasks, further purchases can be made at negotiated prices. This kind of negotiated price is perfectly legitimate, since it can encourage an increase in production. Unfortunately, in actual practice, improper negotiated prices have been effected, resulting in the reduction of the actual volume of of the unified purchases but the increase of financial expenditures.

The two measures of granting bonuses and negotiated prices should continue to be used but they must be subjected to appropriate readjustment and reform.

If we analyze the above 10 factors giving rise to the second currency inflation and the third, or current, inflation, it may be seen that the currency inflation in New China is entirely different from that in the West. Our currency inflation has not been brought about by the socialist system itself. It is thus not inevitable but is basically caused by the "leftist" guiding thought, by the extreme-left line and by poor planning and improper arrangements. After summing up the lessons learned from the errors committed, it will be entirely possible to prevent the reappearance of the problem of currency inflation.

Currency inflation under our socialist system has a special regulatory feature. It can be subjected to a 3-point analysis to differentiate it definitely from the currency inflation of the West:

1. After a short period of a few years' time, currency inflation can readily be transformed into currency stability; thereafter, although its recurrency cannot be completely eliminated, it is still possible to gradually diminish the chances of its recurrence.

2. During the period when currency inflation has occurred or is temporarily in evidence, there is no general rise in the commodity prices. On the contrary, due to the special characteristic of the socialist system which denotes that between the state, the collective and the individual, there is no contradiction of an opposing nature except the contradiction of interests, the state may, in a planned manner and with due regard to the focal points, utilize the economic strength in its grasp under the system of ownership by the whole people to carry out quota distribution or sales of certain categories of essential goods of daily use to the populace. This will ensure that prices of the goods do not rise, or do not rise too steeply. It will thus play an active role in restraining or limiting the scope of the currency inflation so that the populace will not become too agitated. If necessary, this may be supplemented by administrative measures.

3. After currency inflation has been put under control (or has subsided), in general the overall level of commodity prices and the prices of commodities essential to the national economy and the people's livelihood will be basically restored, or nearly restored to, the original level. This will thus protect, in the main, the interests of the residents in regard to their bank deposits or treasury notes in their holding. This policy plays a strategic role in restraining currency inflation. Western countries in general are unable to act in this way.

While socialism may still be baffled by the appearance for a time of the problem of currency inflation, it is protected, as pointed out above, by three big restraining forces. This makes it eminently different from the Western countries. Naturally, this is not to say that, bestowed with this special "character of restraint," socialism is at ease to make frequent use of currency inflation, or to erroneously believe that the current problem of currency inflation in our country can be spontaneously kept under control.

[Excerpts] Fuzhou, 29 Jul (XINHUA) -- The Third Fujian Provincial CCP Committee held its fifth plenary session in Fuzhou from 24 to 27 July solely to discuss education work. The plenary session called on party organizations throughout the province to devote their utmost enthusiasm to education work and adopt an effective measure for making intellectual investment, training talented people and improving the situation in education work in order to make it meet Fujian's needs for pursuing a special policy of opening to the world and a flexible construction policy.

In conjunction with Fujian's current situation in education work, the plenary session suggested that the popularization of elementary education should be achieved in 7 or 8 years; earnest efforts should be made to reform the structure of middle school education and develop vocational and technical education; higher learning should be actively but steadily developed; schooling opportunities should be provided by vigorously developing radio and television universities, and running workers universities and correspondence universities; young people should be encouraged to achieve success through self-study; staff members' and workers' education and peasants' education should be run well; teachers' training should be strengthened; and the rotational training of cadres should be improved in order to raise their capability.

After sincere discusssion the plenary session adopted a resolution on strengthening education work.

Speaking to the session, Xiang Nan, first secretary of the Fujian Provincial CCP Committee, said: Party committees that do not pay attention to education are not good party committees. Only when the whole party pays attention to education and acts together to promote education can the question of education and the question of training talented people be solved quickly and fairly. He stressed that the practice of attaching importance to economic investment while neglecting intellectual investment should be changed and that the growth rate of intellectual investment should be gradually raised.

JIANGSU'S XU JIATUN LEADS FIGHT AGAINST FLOODS

[Excerpts] Nanjing, 4 Aug (XINHUA) -- Under the leadership of party committees and governments at various levels, the people of Jiangsu Province have fought courageously against floods and waterlogging and won the fight.

There has not been a single breach in thousands of li of dikes, and tens of thousands of qing of fertile fields have been cleared of water after the rain.

Between 9 and 24 July, there were continuous torrential rains in the province. Precipitation exceeded 100 mm in 68 counties and cities, of which 18 had more than 300 mm of rainfall. Most of the rivers exceeded the flood level. More than 10 million mu of farmland were waterlogged. The Beijing-Shanghai and Longhai railways were threatened.

Xu Jiatun, first secretary of the provincial party committee, and others went to Xuzhou and Huaiyin to direct the fight against disaster. Liu Lin, second secretary of the provincial party committee, and Han Peixin, acting governor of Jiangsu, went to the banks of the Chua He to lead the struggle against flood. The PLA also dispatched troops to give support. The large number of water conservancy projects constructed in the province since the founding of the People's Republic fully demonstrated their effects in discharging floodwater and draining waterlogged fields.

During the fight against flood, the provincial party committee and the provincial government held two telephone conferences to sum up experience in the struggle against flood, make plans on future tasks and call on the people of the whole province to have confidence, prepare themselves against more and serious natural disasters and strive to achieve a good harvest this year. At present, activities are spreading in all parts of the province to overfulfill production targets for autumn-ripened crops.

The meeting proposed eight measures to improve the economic results of industries and fulfill this year's plan for increasing production and income. The meeting held: Since the beginning of this year, industrial production and transportation in Jiangxi Province have maintained steady growth, but the poor economic results are a conspicuous problem. SHANDONG COMBATS TORRENTIAL RAIN, FLOODING

Circular Issued

SK040957 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 3 Aug 82

[Excerpts] According to DAZHONG RIBAO, in the light of the situation in which large flood crests on the Huang He have appeared around the Huayuankou hydrological station as a result of successive torrential rains in the eastern part of the middle reaches of the Huang He and in the Yi He, Luo He and Qing He, the provincial people's government recently issued an emergency circular urging localities along the Huang He to take immediate action to prepare against Huang He flood crests and ensure safety around the river.

The circular urged responsible persons of people's governments at all levels to take up their command posts immediately and do a good job in supervising and carrying out various precautionary measures. Relevant departments should cooperate closely with one another and plunge into the struggle against floods. They should organize and train well contingents of workers for struggling against floods and enhance the organization and discipline of the contingents. Efforts should be made to ensure that all preparatory work for preventing floods and for rushing to deal with emergencies are done well. They should stand in combat readiness and take preventive measures constantly in accordance with the development of the flood situation.

At 1800 on 2 August a flood crest with a flow of 15,300 cubic meters per second appeared in the section ofthe Huang He near the Huayuankou hydrological station. This was the biggest flood crest since 1958. It is estimated that when the flood crest enters our province, the entire shoal area along the Huang He in our province will be inundated and the situation in all lowland counties will be critical. The flood crest began to enter our province on the morning of 3 August and most of the shoal area along the river in Dongming County has already been inundated. Local party and government organs as well as soldiers and civilians are actively defending against the flood and rescuing the stranded masses.

Further Report

SK051029 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 4 Aug 82

[Text] According to our sources, after entering the Huang He in Shandong Province on the morning of 3 August, the flood crest arrived at the (Gaocun) hydrological station in Dongming County at 0800 on 4 August, with a flow of 12,500 cubic meters per second and a water level of 64.1 meters, 1.14 meters higher than that which occured in 1958. This is the highest floodwater level since the PRC's founding.

Shoal areas along the Huang He in the province, including Dingming, Heze, Juancheng and Yuncheng Counties, were totally or partly inundated by overflowing water. Heze, Liaocheng and Dezhou Prefectures as well as Jinan Municipality have vigorously organized all forces to engage in preventive work along river embankments and to vigilantly watch the situation of flooding and the endurance of dike facilities. The provincial people's government on the afternoon of 3 August organized responsible comrades of grain, civil affairs and public health departments to go to Dongming County's shoal areas to visit the people plagued by the flooding and to engage in relief work together with local government personnel.

A certain PLA artillery unit under the Jinan PLA units, and the unit in charge of floating bridge construction under the PLA Engineering Corps, also rushed to flood-stricken areas to rescue the masses isolated by water. The departments concerned of the Heze Prefectural CCP Committee and administrative office as well as party and government units of the five counties along the banks of the Huang He organized over 50,000 cadres to go deep into the forefront of combating the flooding and conducting relief work. Cadres at all levels in Dongming County, which has been seriously plagued by the flood crest, are fighting on the forefront against the flooding day and night and are working together with the people to tenaciously defend dike facilities by dividing the work and to organize all vessels to rescue the masses isolated by the waters.

According to the forecast of the provincial general hydrological station, the southern canal section in Shandong Province will experience a fairly large flood crest due to successive torrential rainfall along the canal's upper reaches. Early on the morning of 3 August, the water level of the canal's section between Linqing and Guan Counties began to rise and registered a water flow of about 700 cubic meters per second on the morning of 4 August. Its water level is continuously rising. Judging by the rainfall along its upper reaches and the water capacity of outlet reservoirs along the canal, it is expected that the southern canal section in our province will successively experience flood crests from the afternoon of 5 August to 7 August, with a water flow of about 1,300 cubic meters per second, which will last for a fairly long time. This makes it urgent for various units concerned to pay attention to the forecast of their local hydrological stations on the flooding situation and to do a good job in vigorously conducting flood-prevention work.

Dongming County Efforts Noted

SK060844 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Excerpt] According to our sources, in the past few days large flood crests on the Huang He have appeared in succession. The people of Dongming County, the first to be affected, have immediately and vigorously plunged into the flood-prevention work to ensure the safety of the great Huang He enbankment and to safeguard the lives and property of the people in beach areas along the Huang He.

Following the first flood crest -- a flow of 5,500 cubic meters per second, which appeared on 31 July -- the second flood crest, with a flow of 12,500 cubic meters per second and with a water level of 64.1 meters, entered the (Gaocun) hydrological station in Dongming County at 0800 on 4 August. As a result, some 230,000 mu of beach areas in 7 communes of the county were inundated, 100,000 people were isolated and the 124-li-long Huang He embankment was forced to drain off the floodwaters.

Having been affected by the flood crests, leading persons of the county CCP committees, the people's government and various departments, bureaus and communes have personally taken up their command posts to struggle against the floods. All flood-combating headquarters at the commune and county levels have been quartered at the embankments. Leading cadres at all levels have been fighting on the forefront day and night.

Leaders Inspect Work

SK061019 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Excerpts] Comrade Li Zhen, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, along with responsible comrades of Heze Prefecture, went to the antiflood and emergency forefront on 5 August to get an understanding of the situation and to map out countermeasures. They encouraged the cadres and the masses to enhance their spirit so as to win victories in the struggle against floods.

As our province's Huang He flood prevention work has entered an emergency state and the shoal areas along the river have been gradually inundated, Comrade Li Zhen, together with (Yu Bohai), secretary of the Heze Prefectural CCP Committee, and (Li Zhaoxin), assistant director, and other comrades, went to Liangshan, Yucheng, Juancheng, Heze and Dongming Counties along the river to inspect the antiflood forefront on the morning of 5 August. They discussed further flood prevention measures along with the cadres and the masses and expressed their sympathy and solicitude for the disaster-stricken masses. The people living along the Huang He were greatly inspired.

At the Huang He major embankment in Yuncheng County, Comrade Li Zhen highly praised the communist work style of the cadres and the masses who, for the sake of the bigger interests and the safety of the lower reaches of the Huang He, have made sacrifices by destroying their own dike. He encouraged them to continuously do a good job in combating floods and dealing with emergencies, organizing production through self-reliance and rebuilding their homelands. Comrade Li Zhen also extended regards to the PLA units participating in the relief work and dealing with the emergencies and encouraged them to make persistent efforts in doing further rescue work so as to reduce the losses of the masses to the minimum and to ensure the safety of the people.

SHANDONG CIVIL AVIATION INITIATES NEW AIR ROUTES

SK061034 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] Qingdao civil aviation was officially opened to air traffic on 5 August. It has two air routes, including Shanghai-Qingdao-Beijing service and Shanghai-Qingdao-Dalian service. The former was opened to traffic on 5 August and the latter will be opened to traffic in the near future. A meeting to mark the opening of Qingdao civil aviation was held at the Qingdao (Liuping) airport on 5 August. Responsible comrades of the Qingdao and Shanghai Municipal Civil Aviation Administrative Bureaus delivered speeches at the meeting. Xu Leijian, vice governor of Shandong Province, cut the ribbon to mark the occasion. The opening of these two air routes will be convenient for domestic and foreign tourists and will play a definite role in developing Qingdao's production and foreign and export trade.

SHANGHAI'S CHEN YI ON RELIGIOUS SUPERSTITIONS

[Text] On 26 July the suburban edition of JIEFANG RIBAO published on the front page an article by Chen Yi, deputy secretary and head of the Propaganda Department of the Shanghai Municipal CCP Committee, entitled "On Attitude of Party Member Cadres Toward Religious Superstitious Activities."

The article says: In the past, some people in a few communes and brigades in counties in the suburbs of Shanghai Municipality have been engaging in superstitious activities in the name of religion. In one or two communes and brigades such superstitious activities have become very rampant. A tiny minority of party members have also been involved. The article points out: In view of this situation, our state cadres and party members must remain sober-minded and expose, in good time, a tiny minority of people who, in the name of religion, engage in superstitious activities, activities which sabotage socialist order, damage the people's physical and mental health and hamper the state's education system, or even counterrevolutionary activities. Our state cadres and party members must help judicial organs punish and deal blows at these activities and educate the masses on not letting themselves be fooled. This is not "interfering with religious freedom." This duty is a must. We hope that our comrades will not be softhearted or look on unconcerned in view of superstitious religious activities of every description.

YANGCHENG WANBAO ON TEXTBOOK ISSUE, MILITARISM

[Article by Wei Yin [1792 7299]: "Look at the Japanese Army's Killing Contest"]

[Text] The Japanese Education Ministry can be said to have harbored ulterior motives when it distorted the history of the Japanese invasion of China in revising the textbooks. However, this is not at all an isolated political phenomenon, but a sign of dregs of the rightist trends of thought floating to the surface. To prettify militarism is to revive militarism. People should be aware that the phantom of militarism is hovering over the Japanese "paradise with an enlightened emperor." Be on the alert!

Acting against the correct principles, the Japanese authorities concerned have changed Japanese aggression against China into "advance." Can this be considered as the Japanese lords playing with words because they are bored of being idle? The people of our country are sternly criticizing the Japanese Education Ministry out of a sense of justice. Do we want to act as "a teacher of Chinese" because we also have nothing to do? Certainly not! The massacre that occurred in Nanjing after it fell into the hands of the Japanese troops shocked the world. The atrocity and cruelty made people's hair stand on end. The story and picture of the killing contest in Nanjing after its occupation by the Japanese troops carried in today's paper are iron-clad proof of this massacre. Nevertheless, in revising the textbooks, officials of the Japanese Education Ministry said the word "after" [zhi hou 0037 1775] in the passage "after they occupied Nanjing, the Japanese troops killed a large number of Chinese soldiers and civilians" must not be used because "it is very misleading, making people think that the massacre was committed by the Japanese troops in an organized way. This must be changed." They also said: "It is indeed difficult to confirm that the Japanese killed a large number of soldiers and civilians. We should also consider modifying this." In the first place, they do not admit "aggression." In the second place, they try in vain to shift the responsibility of the Nanjing massacre onto the Chinese soldiers and civilians who put up resistance against aggression. People are bound to ask: Does Japan mean anything at all when it says that "it is responsible for the heavy losses inflicted by war on the Chinese people and will carry out deep introspection?"

Aggression is aggression. This unreasonable act of calling aggression an "advance" is not only cheating the younger generation of Japan, but is also a great insult to the Chinese people. The Japanese ministers and lords think themselves clever when they are actually foolish. The outcome of this act is that their real intention is exposed; after all, the reason for racking their brains in revising the textbooks is to one day restore Japanese militarism! However, this has made the Chinese people, the Japanese people and the people all over the world wiser and more vigilant -- oh, I see! We invite our readers to look at this picture of the Japanese troops' killing contest. Let us review this bitter part of the history of the Chinese people!

ROLE OF MIDDLE-AGED SCIENTIFIC WORKERS NOTED

HK261235 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "Treasure Middle-Aged Scientific and Technical Workers"]

[Excerpts] Middle-aged scientific and technical workers are now playing a backbone role in the teaching work, scientific research and production development of our province. Respecting, treasuring and taking good care of them is the crux of carrying out the scientific and technical work policy in our province at the present time.

In the enterprises under the ownership of the whole people and the units at municipal level of our province, there is a total of more than 190,000 scientific and technical workers and over half of them are middle-aged. At the same time, of 11,300 middle-and high-grade scientific and technical workers in our province, the middle-aged ones account for over 80 percent.

According to figures provided by the provincial Higher Education Bureau, the middle-aged lecturers and associate professors constitute a great majority in the higher education institutions of our province. At the same time, the middle-aged occupy almost all research posts in the offices of industry and agriculture under the provincial Scientific and Technical Information Institute. They are the mainstay in tackling key problems of major scientific research projects. According to statistics compiled by the department in charge of achievements of scientific research under the provincial Scientific and Technological Commission, the province issued awards for 279 items of outstanding scientific and technical results in the past 2 years. About 80 percent of them were achieved by the middle-aged scientific and technical workers who had graduated from universities or polytechnic schools after liberation.

However, for various reasons, there are now obstacles to giving further play to the role of middle-aged scientific and technical workers. The main obstacles are relatively low salaries, shortage of housing, hardship in livelihood and poor working and living conditions. The provincial statistics show that their present salary averages about 60 - 70 yuan per month. They have to feed their parents and children on this salary. Thus their economic difficulties can be seen by all. Many of them have to live with strict frugality. Day to day, their physiques will undoubtedly deteriorate. This will directly affect their work. It is thus clear that the difficulties facing middle-aged scientific and technical workers are so serious that we should not neglect them.

At present, the provincial CCP Committee and people's government as well as departments concerned are making efforts to carry out the instructions of the central authorities and are going to take positive measures in all possible ways to solve some practical difficulties for middle-aged intellectuals, including scientific and technical workers. We believe that so long as we continue to get rid of the leftist influences in treating intellectuals, earnestly treasure and show loving care for them and help them surmount misgivings and difficulties, the living and working conditions of middle-aged scientific and technical workers will improve step by step and their wisdom and abilities will surely be brought into full play.

HK020303 Haikou Hainan Island Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 1 Aug 82

[Summary] The Hainan Regional CCP Committee held an enlarged Standing Committee session from 23 to 30 July to sum up and exchange work experiences in the first half of the year and make arrangements for work in the second half. Luo Tian, first secretary of the regional CCP Committee, presided and delivered a summation.

The meeting held: The general situation in Hainan is good. All items of construction have forged ahead and bumper harvests have been reaped in agriculture. Industry has made good progress. A certain degree of success has been scored in the struggle against serious economic crime. The meeting demanded: "The party organizations at all levels must continue to implement the party's policies, mobilize all positive factors, and unite the forces of all sectors to work in concert to build the four modernizations. The implementation of the policies on cadres, intellectuals, overseas Chinese affairs, nationalities, religion and so on must be seriously checked. In economic policies, it is necessary at present to readjust well the relations between the state, the collective and the individuals.

There are no changes in the procurement policies on grain, oil and pigs. The policy on sugarcane is to be kept basically stable. Marginal land allocated to the peasants by the collective for reclamation and cultivation belongs to the collective, but the crops belong to whoever sows them. This will be unchanged for 30 years."

The meeting stressed: "In fulfilling this year's economic construction plan, the counties must, under the guidance of the state plans, readjust their production arrangements in agriculture, forestry, animal husbandry, sideline production and fisheries in light of local conditions, and further develop commodity production bases for grain, tropical industrial crops, animal husbandry, and fisheries so as to provide still more agricultural and sideline products to meet the needs of society. It is necessary to further perfect the production responsiblity systems and properly solve the remaining problems. We must provide guidance and support for the new economic combines appearing in the rural areas, pay attention to probing experiences in this respect, and promptly solve and discover existing problems." The work of popularizing agricultural science and technology must be grasped well.

The meeting held: The region should restructure its industry, improve management, promote technical reform and innovation, and improve economic returns. The work of supporting agriculture should be further promoted. The meeting demanded: "The party organizations at all levels must strengthen leadership, clear away interference, get a good grasp of handling major and important cases, and resolutely carry through to the end the struggle against serious economic crime. This struggle must be integrated with straightening out the organs and enterprises, and must stimulate work and production." The meeting held: "It is necessary to promptly rectify certain paralyzed and semiparalyzed party branches. The grassroots party branch secretaries should undergo rotational training by the end of August. The year's rotational training program for party members should be completed by mid-September.

HK050845 Haikou Hainan Island Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 4 Aug 82

[Summary] According to HAINAN RIBAO, Qionghai County Material Bureau seriously violated the financial management system and arbitrarily paid bonuses and distributed materials. Recently, it was severly punished by the county people's government.

Last year, Qionghai County Materials Bureau paid bonuses amounting to 20,509 yuan, averaging 457.2 yuan per person. A leading cadre was allotted 1,267.3 yuan. Each cadre of the bureau was allotted a rice cooker, a tea set and enough nylon fabric to make a suit of clothes. "In order to enforce financial discipline and eliminate the unhealthy practices in financial work, the Qionghai County People's Government has recently adopted the following decision to handle the matter: 1) The goods supply center run by the Material Bureau is incompatible with the policy governing goods supply centers and must be consolidated; 2) The remuneration and bonuses given to the staff members and workers of the goods supply center run by the Materials Bureau must be immediately returned and submitted to the county financial department in accordance with the regulations laid down in the relevant document issued by the provincial government; 3) The sum of 29,000 yuan which was obtained by selling a small car has not been accounted for. It should be submitted to the county financial department. The sum of 41,993 yuan which was overspent should be entered into the account of enterprise profits for 1982; 4) Of the bonuses issued in 1981, a sum of 3,266 yuan was paid in violation of regulations. Fifty percent of it, that is, 1,633 yuan, should be submitted to the county financial department; 5) The rice cookers and tea sets which have been distributed in violation of regulations should be paid for according to reasonable prices or submitted to the state; 6) The Sundry expenses should be checked item by item and the money which should not have been paid must be returned to the state." The Qionghai County financial department is now urging the Materials Bureau to carry out the county government's decision.

HENAN STEPS UP CONTROL OF EXTRABUDGETARY FUNDS

[Text] Zhengzhou, 25 Jul (XINHUA) -- Recently the Henan Provincial People's Government adopted five measures to strengthen management of extrabudgetary funds, enforce financial and economic discipline and increase returns from capital investments.

With the restructuring of state financial and economic systems and the expanded power of self-management of enterprises, the amount of extrabudgetary funds is becoming larger. According to statistics, extrabudgetary funds accounted for 32.4 percent of Henan Province's total revenue in 1978, 58 percent in 1980 and 59 percent in 1981. The proportion is even greater at the prefectural, municipal and county levels. The localities have used these extrabudgetary funds to tap potential capacities of enterprises, carry out innovations and reforms, maintain and build new public utilities, speed up urban construction, launch public welfare undertakings and improve the masses' material and cultural life, producing tremendous results. However, because these funds are not included in comprehensive financial plans, it has led some places and units to violate state plans. Some turned funds which should have been handed over to the state into extrabudgetary income, thus adversely affecting state revenue; some, without authorization, launched capital construction projects outside of plans, thus overextending the capital construction front, others ignored state regulations and indiscriminately issued various kinds of bonuses and subsidies, violating state policies and financial and economic discipline; still others adopted a laissez-faire attitude as regards management, failed to exercise effective supervision and opened the doors for others to engage in graft and criminal activities.

To manage and use extrabudgetary funds well, Henan Provincial People's Government recently drew up temporary measures for managing extrabudgetary funds, calling on the localities to pay attention to the following tasks:

1. It is necessary to repeatedly publicize the importance of strengthening management so that everyone will clearly understand that strengthening management does not mean changing policy, but helping the various units properly use extrabudgetary funds, increasing returns from capital investment and striking and overall balance in terms of financial, material and human resources.

2. It is necessary to conscientiously carry out a general survey and checkup. Extrabudgetary funds include many items. It is necessary to find out which are reasonable and which are now, how much is received and how much is spent each year; and what the funds are spent for. It is necessary to find out what is going on and create conditions for properly straightening out the handling of extrabudgetary funds and drawing up comprehensive financial plans.

3. It is necessary to strengthen planning and management. All localities must follow the principle of receiving and depositing first, and spending next, and keeping spending within the limits of income in handling extrabudgetary funds. All localities must prepare yearly and quarterly income and expenditure plans and final accounts at the end of each year.

4. It is necessary to give guidance as to where funds should be used and increase the results from the funds spent. All extrabudgetary fund items should have specific uses and spending limits. Planning and financial departments at various levels should give guidance as to where funds are to be used and bring into better play the role of money in accordance with relevant state regulations, principles and policies.

REDUCTION IN CRIME RATE IN BEIJING REPORTED

[Text] Beijing, July 28 (XINHUA) -- Crimes were reduced and public order steadily improved in the Chinese capital in the past year, an official for Beijing Public Security Bureau announced today. Statistics from the bureau showed that the number of criminal cases was 6 percent less in the fiirst six months of this year than that of the July-December six-month period of last year, which was itself 17.5 percent lower than the previous half year. Serious crimes such as murder or thefts of over 10,000 yuan declined by 59.6 percent in the first half of this year compared with the same period of 1981. In the past year, the official said, criminal rings were destroyed and active criminals who had jeopardized public security were punished quickly and strictly according to law. Residence registrations have been revoked for more than 320 criminals who had committeed new crimes after being released upon completion of sentences. They will never again be allowed to live in the city. At the same time, the official went on, police forces were redistributed to beef up law enforcement on 20 streets and in 10 urban areas with higher crime rates, and to further improve public order in peasant markets, scenic spots, buses, cinemas and theaters.

In order to rehabilitate juvenile offenders with minor crime records, special groups were formed by policemen, local neighborhood committee activists and parents of the young people to spread legal system among them and help them with their practical difficulties. The juveniles also are especially cared by neighborhoods and units where they live or work.

In the past year, 257 offenders gave themselves up to the police. A number of others quietly returned stolen money, radio recorders and other things at the gates of local police stations or owners, with notes or tags expressing their regret. All the serious cases which occurred in the past year have been cleared by police with the assistance of local people, and the rate of cases solved in the first six months of this year was 5.6 percent higher than in the same period of last year. Nearly one thousand criminals were seized and handed over to the public security authorities by citizens.

Meanwhile, order is better in "reformation-through-labor" correctional farms. Basically, few escapes have been reported in these establishments in the past year.

HEBEI HOLDS MEETINGS ON FOILING ECONOMIC CRIMES

HK050954 Shijiazhuang Hebei Provincial Service in Mandarin 0400 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] The Hebei Provincial CCP Committee successively held a standing committee meeting, a telephone meeting of secretaries of prefectural, municipal and county CCP committees and a meeting of secretaries of prefectural and municipal CCP committees from 14 to 19 July.

The meetings analyzed the situation and problems of the struggle to hit at serious economic crimes in the past 6 months. The meetings put forth suggestions and demands on strengthening leadership in further carrying out this struggle in a thorough way. The meetings stressed that in July and August, we must attain outstanding results in investigating and dealing with major and important cases. The meetings pointed out: Our province made initial achievements in the struggle to hit at serious economic crimes in the first half of this year. CCP committees at various levels have attached much importance to the current struggle and their understanding of it is increasing continuously. We have investigated and dealt with many cases and have punished many economic criminals according to law. Under the influence of the party's policy and terrified by the law, a number of economic criminals have surrendered themselves to the police. The cadres and the masses have drawn educational benefit from this struggle. Many localities and departments have adopted measures in light of the problems exposed to consolidate the leading groups, establish and improve rules and regulations, improve management and operation and promote production. The party's work style and the prevailing social mood have improved.

The meetings held that viewed from the province as a whole, the struggle is developing unevenly. Some urgent problems remain unsolved. First, some CCP committees still lack a clear understanding of the great significance of the current struggle and are not leading it effectively. Second, they are not giving special attention to key problems. Third, the progress in investigating (?and solving major) and important cases is slow.

The meetings demanded that CCP committees at all levels continuously study relevant instructions issued by the CCP Central Committee in light of the struggle and further increase the consciousness of doing a good job in leading the current struggle. We must keep a clear head and pay great attention to serious economic crimes. We must take a clear-cut and firm stand. No matter where interference and resistance occur, we must resolutely check and fight them. We must never turn a blind eye to them or treat them leisurely and hesitate in taking actions. We must change the situation of not making great efforts in grasping economic criminal cases, grasping only one or two major and important cases or making slow progress in investigating and dealing with major and important cases.

The meetings stressed: In order to carry out the current struggle under guidance, in a planned way and step by step, we must attain outstanding results in investigating and dealing with major and important cases in July and August. This is a campaign involving the question of leading the struggle to oppose bourgeois ideological influence and hit at economic crimes to develop in depth. We must select appropriate gaps to break through and concentrate our efforts and time to win victory in this campaign. In order to attain this goal, the number one men of CCP committees at all levels must personally grasp the struggle, and other leading members must also divide the cases among themselves and each must take his own responsibility. We must not consider things as they stand and should not be misled by things that appear to be legal. We must frequently analyze the situation of the struggle, details and progress of each case and the ways which cadres think in order to know how things stand and give correct directions. All departments concerned must closely cooperate and work together. We must closely integrate the struggle to hit at serious economic crimes with the work of rectifying the party's work style, reorganizing enterprises, purifying the ranks of cadres and improving our work. Through the struggle to hit at serious economic crimes, we must further increase the combat capacity of CCP organizations at all levels and bring about a fundamental change for the better in the party's work style and establish and improve various rules and regulations so that our economic work will gradually be brought into the orbit of scientific management. We must expose and hit at in good time, the three categories of people who have committed enconomic crimes and were discovered during the struggle, and remove them from leading groups. Various trades, professions and departments must sum up their experiences and draw lessons from cases exposed in order to promote the development of socialist construction.

NEI MONGGOL BANK PRESIDENT ON ECONOMIC SITUATION

SK231002 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Excerpt] (Wei Jing), vice president of the Nei Monggol branch of the Agricultural Bank of China, recently went deep into rural areas to conduct investigation and research. By familiarizing himself with the loan situation, cash balance and the specific operations of the various banks, he concluded that the economic situation of the vast rural areas is very good. With the rapid development of production, income in rural areas has increased markedly and the livelihood of the masses has improved noticeably. The improvement of the rural economy is reflected in the following areas:

1. Cash income in rural areas has increased. Currency put into rural areas through various channels has increased continuously in recent years -- 1.77 billion yuan in 1980 and 2 billion in 1981. Currency put into rural areas in the fist 5 months of 1982 registered an increase of 150 million yuan over the corresponding 1981 period. This fully reflects the flourishing development of the various undertakings in rural areas, the rapid rise of purchasing power and the marked increase in the cash income of the peasants and herdsmen.

2. Investment on production by commune members has increased year after year and fixed assets have increased. With the implementation of the various responsibility systems in rural areas, the amount of collective loans extended to communes and brigades has dwindled and loans granted to commune member households have increased. In the first 5 months of 1982, the region extended 280 million yuan in agricultural loans, more than 60 percent of which were granted to commune members, an increase of 163 percent over 1981. Loans granted to commune members are used primarily for purchasing means of production.

3. The consumption level of the peasants and herdsmen has increased continuously. Compared with the corresponding 1981 period, currency withdrawn from circulation through sales of commodities increased by more than 18 percent in the first 5 months of 1982. This means that per capita consumption increased 2.07 yuan.

4. The recovery rate of loans for agricultural and livestock production has increased and a credit balance has basically been achieved. With the rapid development of production and increase in income, the communes, brigades and commune members are more capable of repaying their debts to banks and credit cooperatives.

5. Savings deposits of commune members have increased by a wide margin. The balance of savings deposits of commune members stood at 270 million yuan at the end of May in spite of the fact that great amounts of money had been withdrawn for farm production.

During their visit, Chen Weida gave instructions on the future orientation of developing new products and current tasks in this regard."

"During his visit, Chen Weida heard the briefing given by responsible comrades of the municipal Economic Commission on the work done in developing new products. At the exhibition hall, he also sponsored a forum with directors of departments and commissions concerned and a number of industrial bureaus, as well as chiefs of scientific research sections."

"At the forum, Chen Weida emphatically pointed out: Special attention should be paid to developing new products which consume less energy and to conducting technical renovations for the primary purpose of saving energy." "All low-pressure boilers should be transformed into high-pressure ones. If boiler plants are lacking up-to-standard equipment and technology, it is necessary to organize all forces to tackle key problems." "In developing new products, stress should be laid on utilization of personnel. Our current problem constitutes insufficient designing capacity. It is necessary to bring into full play the role of scientific and technological personnel, organize all scientific and technological forces in the city and those forces we are dependent upon throughout the country. In addition, we may invite foreign experts to give lectures in this regard and buy foreign sample equipment in an effort to upgrade technical standards."

The forum noted: "In developing new products, industrial enterprises in the municipality have scored certain achievements this year. In the first half of 1982, the municipality trial-produced 501 new products; of these, 273 commodities were put into mass production. The municipality increased varieties of products by 10,589, of which 5,927 new varieties were put into production, a 23-percent increase over the corresponding 1981 period."

At the forum, "industrial leading departments of the municipality pledged to make efforts to overcome various problems in the latter half of this year to accelerate progress in developing new products which enjoy brisk sales in markets and to make further efforts to upgrade economic returns."

NINGXIA TRADE UNIONS HOLD POLITICAL WORK MEETING

HK280801 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 18 Jul 82 p 1

[Report by Huang Huaiyuan [7806 2037 6678]: "Regional Federation of Trade Unions Holds Symposium on Ideological and Political Work for Workers and on Learning From and Catching Up With the Progressives"]

[Text] From 6 to 10 July in Yinchuan, the regional federation of trade unions held a symposium to exchange experiences in ideological and political work for workers and learning from and catching up with the progressives. The theme of the symposium was to sum up and exchange experiences; to analyze the tasks, characteristics and methods of ideological and political work in the new situation; to devote major efforts to strengthening the ideological and political work for workers; to further launch widespread activities to learn from and catch up with the progressives; to train the workers to become people who have ideals and a good moral character and who are educated and observe discipline; and to promote the building of the "two civilizations."

Attending the symposium were responsible people from the prefectural, municipal and county federations of trade unions, trade unions of all industries (bureaus) and some grassroot trade unions of plants and mining enterprises, totalling 58 people. Regional CCP Committee Secretary Hei Boli and standing committee member Shi Yulin attended and spoke.

The participating comrades analyzed the ideological outlook of the staff members and workers of our region. They said: Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, under the leadership of the party, the regional trade unions at all levels have acted in close coordination with all departments concerned, strengthened ideological and political work and promoted the socialist spiritual civilizations. Thus, there has been a gratifying change in the mental attitude of the masses. Quite a number of trade union organizations, however, have not tackled the ideological and political work for staff members and workers, or perhaps they have not been good at carrying out ideological and political work. Therefore, we must study further the relevant documents of the CCP Central Committee and the regional CCP committee, enhance understanding on the importance of ideological and political work and practically tackle the ideological and political work for staff members and workers.

The participating comrades held that at present and in the coming period of time, in carrying out ideological and political work for staff members and workers, the trade unions must attach great importance to promoting education on communist ideas, enhancing the staff and workers' sense of being the masters of the country and their sense of responsibility, and making contributions to revitalize China and to build the "two civilizations." They must systematically sum up the experiences of ideological and political work, analyze the tasks, characteristics and methods of ideological and political work in the new situation. In this respect, the machine repairing plant of the third oil drilling department of the Changqing oilfield, the machine transportation team of the regional No 2 construction company, the steel rolling workshop of the Ningxia Shizuishan iron and steel plant and the Qingtongxia waterpipe plant have some good experiences. Their experiences are mainly in the following areas:

1. Performing in-depth investigations and studies, correctly analyzing the mental outlook of the staff members and workers and implementing education to remedy the ailment. After investigation, the trade union of the machine repairing plant of the third oil drilling department of the Changqing oilfield found that the majority of young workers conduct themselves well or relatively well, and only a small number of them have poor conduct. They adopt various methods to teach the young workers and have scored very good results.

2. Penetratingly launching "five stresses and four beauties" activities and educating staff members and workers with communist ideas and ethics. This is one of the party's methods for carrying out ideological and political work among the masses under the current specific conditions. It is a good method for teaching and training a generation of people of a new socialist type.

3. Firmly grasping elementary education. The trade union of the machine transportation team of the regional No 2 construction company started with studying the "three histories" (modern Chinese history, party history and the history of the founding of the PRC) and carried out in-depth "three love" education (love the party, the motherland and socialism) of staff members and workers. The results are relatively obvious.

4. Implementing the mass line, adopting the correct method to launch massive ideological and political education. The trade unions of the No 8 team of the second coalmine of the Shizuishan Mining Bureau and the third mine of the Shitanjing Mining Bureau adopted measures such as positive education, giving priority to praising models and key figures so as to provide help. As a result, youths who lag behind have changed in varying degrees.

5. Upholding home visits and having heart-to-heart talks with individual workers. This is one of the methods to help youths transform their minds.

6. Being concerned about the vital interests of staff members and workers, and integrating ideological education with help in solving practical problems.

7. Filling the cultural front with communist ideas and holding cultural and sports activities to educate the workers.

8. Implementing the "regulations for all staff members and workers of the country," and teaching staff members and workers that the working class is the master of the country.

The symposium pointed out: The composition of the 400,000 staff members and workers has been greatly changed. At present young workers generally constitute 50-80 percent of the total number of workers in the existing enterprises. In carrying out ideological and political work with staff members and workers, we must attach special attention to education of young staff members and workers. We must base this on the above-mentioned experiences, integrate it with the reality of the local units and districts, and adopt various effective means to further promote the ideological and political education of staff members and workers, in particular young staff members and workers.

The symposium emphatically pointed out: The CCP Central Committee has called on us to launch extensive activities to learn from and catch up with the progressives. This is the main theme of the building of material and spiritual civilizations. In learning from the progressives, we must learn the progressive thinking and work style of the progressive figures. The regional people's government has issued a circular and planned to convene a regional commendation rally for model laborers and advanced collectives at the beginning of next year. We must seize the opportunity to strengthen the ideological and political work of staff members and workers and start an upsurge of learning from and catching up with the progressives and score more outstanding achievements to welcome the commencement of the commendation rally.

NINGXIA ISSUES CIRCULAR ON PLANT DISEASES, PESTS

["Urgent Circular of Ningxia Regional People's Government on Taking Immediate Action To Prevent and Cure Rice Blast and Insect Pests in the Autumn Crops"]

[Text] Attention to all administrative offices, all municipal and county (including the suburbs) people's governments, and all regional departments:

Our region has reaped a bumper summer grain harvest this year in fields irrigated by water drawn from the Huang He and the situation of the growth of autumn grain is very promising. But the hilly areas have suffered from several natural disasters and agricultural production has been greatly affected. Thus, knowledgeable autumn grain production is the key to reaping a bumper agricultural harvest this year. The temperature in June and July this year was favorable to the growth of crops; however, due to the fact that paddy rice had been grown too closely so that no space was left between the rows and the humidity was high, rice blast came earlier than expected in many places. According to the investigation carried out in many places by the Agricultural Department, the average incidence of rice blast is about 10 percent and is about 33 percent in more severely affected fields. At the same time, since mid-June, corn, sorghum and cereals planted in the humid and semihumid areas in the hilly areas in the south and in irrigated fields and areas have been seriously destroyed by armyworms. Some of the corn leaves have been completely eaten by the armyworms; and in particular, the armyworms in wheat fields will continue to destroy autumn crops after the wheat harvest. In addition, pests such as grass borers and corn borers are found in certain areas. These pests have seriously threatened autumn grain production.

In order to reap a bumper agricultural harvest this year, it is demanded that all areas and all departments take immediate action and fully mobilize the masses. It is necessary to win a victory in preventing and curing plant diseases and insect pests.

First, while making continuous efforts in grasping the three summer work tasks, people's governments at all levels must attach great importance to and seriously deal with the plant disease and insect pest crisis. It is necessary to include prevention and curing of plant diseases and insect pests in the central task of autumn field management and to do a good job of it. It is necessary to organize strength from various aspects, go deep into the forefront and mobilize the masses to launch work in preventing and curing plant diseases and insect pests. Departments at all levels in charge of agricultural technology popularization must go all out: shift their principal strength into preventing and curing plant diseases and insect pests; do a good job of popularizing, investigating and taking precautions against plant diseases and insect pests; and practically organize and guide the masses to keep plant diseases and insect pests under control, as soon as possible.

Second, all departments concerned must coordinate and vigorously support this work. Financial, supply and marketing and commercial departments at all levels must give financial and material support and do a good job in supplying farm chemicals and farm machinery. Water conservation departments must guarantee adequate water supply from late July to early August, during the flowering and earing stage of paddy rice, take precautions against disasters brought about by cold spells and improve the rice plants' resistance against rice blast.

Third, grasp the right opportunity to resolutely get rid of breeding places of blast and the insect pests. The current riceleaf blast will develop into rice-ear blast and stem-knot blast. Thus, as soon as blast is detected, it is necessary to begin control by immediately spraying with farm chemicals. Particularly during the earing stage, it is necessary to spray the fields where blast has been detected twice in order to prevent rice-ear blast. Regarding the armyworms, it is necessary to immediately spray pesticide after harvesting wheat so as to avoid a catastrophe.

In order to prevent disasters and poisoning brought by farm chemicals, application of farm chemicals must be carried out in accordance with the operational regulations. The production teams and brigades should unite and organize work as single units. Simultaneously, the agricultural technology departments must adopt various forms to extensively propagate the prevention and curing methods, to correct dosage and application methods of farm chemicals so as to ensure safety.

SHAANXI'S MA WENRUI ON RESPONSIBILITY SYSTEM

HK271330 Xian Shaanxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 0500 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Ma Wenrui, Shaanxi Provincial CCP Committee first secretary, yesterday made a speech on problems existing in implementing the production responsibility system in the rural areas of central Shaanxi. Comrade Mao Wenrui said: Communes and brigades in the rural areas of central Shaanxi that have not implemented the responsibility system must act in accordance with the spirit of the summary of the national conference on rural areas transmitted by the CCP Central Committee, and try their best to promote the responsibility system. Production teams should carry out democratic discussions and establish the kind of responsibility system that suits their own teams in line with local conditions. Cadres should support and lead the production teams in so doing. Production teams that have not implemented the responsibility system, or those that declare to have implemented it while still "eating out of the same big pot," must try their best to promote the production responsibility system before autumn sowing. We must allow production teams that are weak in management and have a poor foundation to start with, and where the peasants have a strong desire to implement the responsibility system of fixing farm output quotas for each household and assigning full responsibility to each household, to implement the responsibility system. The responsibility system of fixing farm output quotas for each household and assigning full responsibility to each household is not only a form of agricultural production responsibility system, but it has been proved through experience that such a form of responsibility system is suitable for many localities. However, in the course of implementing the system, we must strengthen leadership and take precautions against damages to collective installations and privately dividing up the public accumulations. We must establish the responsibility system demanded by the masses and try to perfect the system before autumn sowing. If this is not carried out in time, production in the following year will be affected. Such a demand is absolutely correct. Since the responsibility system has been promoted for more than 2 years, we must not delay any further or invent excuses to evade establishing it.

Speaking on the question of how to promote the propaganda work of the responsibility system of fixing farm output quotas for each household and assigning full responsibility to each household, Comrade Ma Wenrui said: We must advocate the responsibility system of fixing farm output quotas for each household and assigning full responsibility to each household. People who are engaged in propaganda work must have a good understanding of the spirit of the CCP Central Committee's No 1 deocument and attach importance to propaganda work. They must always investigate new problems. In checking on the new problems, if they have made any mistakes, they should make a statement to correct them; the masses will understand their difficulties. They must be bold in carrying out their work and not evade problems. If they find new problems, they must promptly report them to the provincial CCP committee.

Reporter's Questions Answered

[Report: "Ma Wenrui Answers Reporter's Questions on Rural Responsibility Systems in the Province's Guanzhong Area"]

[Text] Yesterday, our reporter interviewed Comrade Ma Wenrui, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee, questioning him about several problems we have encountered while gathering news in rural areas. The following are our questions and his answers.

Question: At present, about 15 percent of the production teams in certain places with relatively favorable natural conditions in Guanzhong Prefecture have still not implemented the production responsibility system. Some of them are implementing the responsibility system of assigning contracts for small segments of work in name but in fact are still promoting the practice of "eating out of the same pot." Some cadres say we are now perfecting and consolidating the system; therefore, we can have no more change. The peasants are really discontented with this situation and are asking for improvement. What should we do?

Answer: All places where the responsibility system has not yet been implemented must implement the system according to the spirit of the minutes of the national meeting on rural work transmitted by the CCP Central Committee. Every production team must decide its own form of the responsibility system through democratic discussions and according to the local conditions. All cadres must support and give leadership to the implementation. It is not good to either refuse to further implement the responsibility system under the pretext of perfecting and consolidating the system, or to implement the system in name but in fact continue to promote the practice of "eating out of the same pot." The leading bodies of prefectures and counties must conscientiously carry out examination. We must conscientiously implement the production responsibility system in these production teams by the autumn sowing this year.

Question: In Guanzhong Prefecture, since some production teams have a low administrative level and a poor foundation to start with, commune members of these teams strongly ask for the implementation of the responsibility system of "fixing output quotas on a household basis and assigning the land to each household in exchange for specific levies." Can production teams like these implement the responsibility system of "fixing output quotas on a household basis and assigning the land to each household in exchange for specific levies?"

Answer: Such production teams must be allowed to implement the system, because the responsibility system of "fixing output quotas on a household basis and assigning the land to each household in exchange for specific levies" is not only a form of the agricultural production responsibility system, but also a form which experience has proved to be suitable for implementation in certain places. Nevertheless, in the course of implementation, we have to strengthen leadership, and avoid those phenomena such as destroying collective facilities, sharing out accumulation funds on one's own, and so on.

Question: The masses demand that the establishment of the responsibility system and the implementation of some work of perfecting be decided by the autumn sowing so that the production in the next year will not be affected. Is this an appropriate demand?

Answer: Yes, this demand is quite all right. All you have mentioned above must certainly be decided by the autumn sowing. We have already promoted the responsibility system for more than 2 years. It should not longer be delayed under any pretext.

Question: Some cadres have criticized our newspaper and said it has made a mess of things by propagandizing the responsibility system of "fixing output quotas on a household basis and assigning the land to each household in exchange for specific levies."

Answer: In carrying out propaganda, you should stick to the spirit of the central authorities' document No 1 and pay attention to the effect. Of course, you may propagandize the responsibility system of "fixing output quotas on a household basis and assigning the land to each household in exchange for specific levies." It is unfair to say that you have made a mess of things since you have been engaged in such propaganda.

Comrade Ma Wenrui told our reporter on leaving: "You journalists always report some new problems which have freshly emerged. It is difficult to guarantee that your views are always correct. If your reports are inaccurate or even wrong, you may just make a declaration or an amendment in the newspaper, and the readers will forgive you. You still should work boldly and should never evade problems. Always report in good time to the provincial CCP committee whenever you discover new problems.

U.S. REFUSAL TO RETURN PRC ATHLETE LAUDED

OW061405 Taipei CNA in English 1336 GMT 6 Aug 82

[Text] Taipei, Aug 6 (CNA) -- The TAIWAN DAILY NEWS in an editorial Friday praised the U.S. State Department for its firm rejection of Peking's blatant and unreasonable demand that the United States hand over Miss Hu Na -- the tennis star from mainland China currently seeking political asylum in America.

Recalling its editorial on August 1, the Chinese daily said it had anticipated that Peking would exert diplomatic pressure and use other bullying tactics to force the United States to turn down Miss Hu's application for asylum. Washington's refusal to knuckle under to Peking's intimidation is most encouraging news, the paper said. The Chinese daily went on to say that the United States is still widely regarded as the leader of the Free World and a land of promise for the millions of peoples trapped behind the communist barbed wire. America has been a haven for Europeans who escaped political persecutions in their own lands. Many American leaders who are in responsible positions today are descendants of European freedom-seekers who went to America to seek liberty and freedom. The United States is still regarded as a great nation for the simple fact that it has never wavered in defending the lofty principle of human rights and justice.

However, the paper opined that the Reagan administration should also be firm in rejecting Peking's unreasonable demand that Washington cut off arms sale to Taipei in the future. Such a firm stand should not soften in the wake of Peking's bitterness over Washington's handling of Miss Hu Na's application for asylum in America.

CHUNG KUO SHIH PAO ON PRC-USSR RAPPROCHEMENT

[Article by Chang Hsu-cheng: "Is the Chinese Communists' Rapprochement With Soviet Russia Possible?"]

[Text] Editor's note: Dr Chang Hsu-cheng just returned from a 2-week tour of Soviet Russia where he had broad discussions with Soviet officials and experts on Asian affairs on the relations between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia. This article, written by him on the basis of his findings there, presents an analysis of the relations between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia. Originally written in English, it is exclusively translated by this newspaper. [end editor's note]

When the relations between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia were obviously tense, Soviet Russia made a proposal to the Chinese Communists expressing its willingness to mend the rift between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia. In his rapprochement speech at Tashkent last March, Brezhnev, president of Soviet Russia, recognized the Chinese Communists as "basically" a socialist country, supported Peiping's claim over Taiwan and called for normalization of the relations between the two sides. Some articles later published in PRAVDA also called on Peiping to conciliate differences and improve its relations with Moscow. At the same time, Peiping was carefully sizing up Moscow's intention and detecting Soviet Russia's purpose. In May, the Chinese Communists' gymnastics team took part in an international contest in Moscow, and in June Soviet Russia's track and field team visited Peiping. These were the first sports team exchanges since the mid-1960's. In addition, the two sides have recently agreed to resume border trade along northeastern China's borders. This was an indication that Peiping, on its part, was also lessening its hostility toward Soviet Russia.

Do these indications signal a thaw of the heretofore freeze of the relations betwen the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia?

If they do, how soon will this rapprochement progress? How big will its scope be? Which side will make what sacrifices? What will this rapprochement mean to the United States and other countries? While in Moscow, I discussed these and other matters with government officials of Soviet Russia and experts of the Far East Institute, the United States Institute and other organizations related to foreign policy of Soviet Russia. What merits our attention is that although they told me about Moscow's willingness and their hope to improve the relations with the Chinese Communists, they held considerably different views as to what they can do and what they cannot do for the sake of rapprochement, the scope of rapprochement and the overall relations between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia.

Their views can be put into three categories:

1. The pessimists -- they predict that the relations between Moscow and Peiping can in no way be significantly improved in the near future. According to a ranking institute researcher, the Chinese Communists' diplomatic policy under the leadership of Deng Xiaoping is not much different from the policy pursued by the late Mao Zedong since "the Chinese Communists today still entertain the ambition of having all nations pay tribute to China and of being hegemonists." We are quite aware of their stance, that is, in spite of Moscow's rapprochement stance, the Chinese Communists are still unwilling to normalize the relations between the two countries. Preconditions demanded by the Chinese Communists for improvement of relations such as withdrawal of Soviet Russian from the Chinese (Communist) - Soviet borders, Outer Mongolia and Afghanistan are unacceptable to Soviet Russia and there is no room for negotiation. The Chinese Communists are taking and will continue to take a hostile attitude toward Soviet Russia as a means to obtain assistance from the West. Therefore, prospects for Chinese (Communists) -- Soviet rapprochement are dismal. Their most pessimistic prediction is for Chinese Communists' collusion with the United States, Japan and NATO to form a global anti-Soviet alliance. Their views can be viewed as "threat and blandishment," but basically a form of "threat," designed to prevent the Chinese Communist's expansionistic plan. Among the high-ranking leaders of Soviet Russia, the late ideologist Suslov was known for his support of a strong and uncompromising line against the Chinese Communists. Even after he died last year, his views still govern the formulation of major foreign policies by Soviet Russia's diplomatic authorities.

2. The optimists -- they hold that the prospects for Chinese (Communist)-Soviet rapprochement are good. They tend to exaggerate the importance of the increased contacts in the last few months and to overestimate the factors favorable to Chinese (Communist)-Soviet detente. Just as the "pessimists," they, too, are vigorously opposed to any yielding to the preconditions which the Chinese Communists have demanded for detente with Soviet Russia. However, they seem to hope that they can persuade the Chinese Communists to lay aside controversial matters and step by step improve the relations between the two sides.

According to a senior researcher of the United States Institute, this improvement can be started in the economic, scientific and cultural fields. His optimistic prediction is that the Chinese (Communist)-Soviet two-way trade volume, about $300 billion in 1981-82, will reach and even surpass $2 billion in 5 to 7 years, the highest mark recorded in 1958-59.

This optimism is based on the belief that more and more people will in time be disappointed at the United States and Japan, as they will understand that the norms of capitalist economic development do not suit "China" and that economic assistance from the West is a farce more harmful than beneficial. A Soviet diplomat said: If the gates of the capitalist forces on the Chinese mainland are opened, the Chinese Communist "leadership" may one day have to "suppress capitalism with tanks" and ask Soviet Russia and the socialist camp for help. These optimists also hold the view that although Deng Xiaoping is adopting an anti-Soviet policy, the "healthy forces" inside "China" will eventually advance their viewpoint once again.

To some Soviet experts, the next 5 to 7 years will be a very important period of change because Chinese Communist chieftains of a new generation will take over political power and among them many who studied in Soviet Russia will attach more importance to the strength and superiority of the socialist system and support the policy of cooperation with socialist countries. It may be wishful thinking on the part of these experts to hope that a change in the Chinese Communist "leadership" will bring about improvement in the relations between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia.

3. Between the optimists and pessimists there are a great number of "opportunists" or pragmatists who understand very well the limits and possibilities of detente between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia. A senior China hand of the Soviet Foreign Ministry stated clearly that Moscow considers it impossible to achieve a quick rapprochement and that such a rapprochement will never mean a return to the "honeymoon" status of the 1950's. However, when the opportunity arises, Moscow will promptly try rapprochement and will greatly delight in making use of the friction between the Chinese Communists and the United States as it is doing now. Obviously, Suslov's death has to a great extent freed the hands of those who sought a change in Moscow's stagnant policy toward the Chinese Communists.

Unlike the "optimists," who harbor unrealistic hopes, the "opportunists" do not expect any major improvement in relations with the Chinese Communists in the next few years, nor do they try to have the Chinese Communists return to the embrace of the socialist camp. A high-level official of the Soviet Foreign Ministry said that he would like to see a nonaligned Communist China which maintains equal distance to Moscow and Washington. Although this objective is more practical, Moscow's topmost concern is to forestall the formation of a tripartite anti-Soviet military alliance among the United States, the Chinese Communists and Japan and to avoid the risk of having to fight the enemy in Europe and Asia at the same time.

Concerning the recent development of the Chinese Communists' foreign relations, especially Peiping's stress on its being a member of the Third World, its attacks on U.S. foreign policy, its keeping a distance from the United States and its all-out anti-imperialist stand, many of the Soviet experts on China feel greatly encouraged. They believe that this tendency will become more forceful in the next few years because, in their view, it indicates that people on the Chinese mainland are feeling increasingly alienated by Deng Xiaoping's procapitalist and pro-Western measures and by the change in the balance at the leadership level, among the various Chinese Communist groups.

In order to bolster the pro-Soviet forces within the CCP and to influence the policy debates at the CCP's leadership level, Soviet Russia will put on a show of peaceful intentions and temporarily assume a friendly posture, as it did in the past. A senior official of the Soviet Foreign Ministry said that they were prepared to reach an agreement with the Chinese Communists to improve relations in any way.

None of the above-mentioned views is really in line with my own analysis of the relations between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia. However, if I have to make a choice among the three views, I regard the third view as the most objective ad the most realistic. The Chinese Communists need a peaceful international environment so that they can concentrate on economic construction. At the same time, the present CCP leadership has a pragmatic character. Moreover, Moscow is anxious to take advantage of the difficulties in the relationship between the United States and the Chinese Communists. Because of all this, it will not be surprising if Peiping and Moscow should embark on a road toward reconciliation.

Nor should Washington or Tokyo be alarmed by a limited reconciliation between "China" and Soviet Russia, because such reconciliation is more likely to help than undermine the stability of international relations in Asia. We can also rule out the possibility that "China" and Soviet Rdssia may again form an alliance as they did in the 1950's, because the hostility and the atmosphere of military confrontation between the United States and the Chinese Communists and things of the past, and Peiping does not need to and will not seek an alliance with Soviet Russia for the purpose of protection.

However, reconciliation between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia should not be taken as a matter of course, because cooling of relations between the United States and the Chinese Communists will not automatically turn into improvement of relations between Moscow and Peiping. In fact, there apparently are still insurmountable sharp conflicts on many issues (the central-south peninsula issue for example) between the Chinese Communists and Soviet Russia. Despite the differences on Taiwan and despite other issues between Washington and Peiping, the United States does not threaten the Chinese Communists' "national security." But Soviet Russia is a threat to the Chinese communists' security, and Soviet hegemonism continues to alarm Peiping. In their economic modernization drive, the Chinese Communists need massive assistance from the United States, Japan and Western Europe in the form of capital, loans, technology, equipment and markets. What the Western countries can do in these areas for the Chinese Communists can in no way be matched by Soviet Russia and other socialist countries, even if they want to. This explains why the Chinese Communists have sent nearly 8,000 students and researchers to the United States for advanced training, but not a single person to Soviet Russia. However, the most difficult obstacle to reconciliation and rapprochement between "China" and Soviet Russia is probably Moscow's lack of flexibility and its unwillingness to make the first move to break the deadlock. For many years Soviet Russia has been singing the same old tune -- that they are prepared, and that everything else depends on the Chinese Communists. If Moscow really wants rapprochement, why not withdraw some Soviet troops as suggested by Peiping to prove its sincerity? At least it can propose a mutual withdrawal of troops or a reduction of both Soviet and Chinese Communist forces, as a concrete demonstration of sincerity. Now that Suslov is dead, and that the end of Brezhnev's long-lasting conservative leading body is in sight, the new regime in Soviet Russia may be willing and may take the initiative to adopt such "trust-building measures" to break the deadlock.

As the Russian saying goes, "when two porcupines make love, they must do it slowly." By the same token, the two communist enemies, to renew cordial relations, also need time.

["Political Talk" column by Shih Chun-yu [2457 0689 3768]: "Sino-Japanese Relations Face a Grave Moment After 10 Years"]

[Text] China Sends Increasingly Higher Ranking Officials To Approach Japan About an Increasingly Wider Scope of Matters

China has sent higher-ranking officials to approach Japan about the textbook issue and this shows the serious attention the Chinese Government is paying to this issue.

Yesterday, Wu Xueqian, the Chinese vice minister of foreign affairs, interviewed the Japanese Ambassador to China Yasue Katori. When China approached Japan on 26 July, it sent Xiao Xiangqian; director of the First Department of Asian Affairs, to interview the Japanese envoy to China, Koji Watanabe.

In addition to the repetition of the demand for the correction, by the Japanese side, of the errors in the textbooks revised by the Japanese Education Ministry, two more matters were broached by China this time and are worth noting.

In the former interview, only the Japanese Education Ministry was denounced, but in the recent interview, it was further pointed out that some of the high-ranking officials in the Japanese Government had violated the Sino-Japanese joint statement and had even said things denouncing China for "interfering in Japan's internal affairs."

During the former interview, China only mentioned the distortion of the history of Japanese militarists' aggression against China, but during the recent interview, it hinted about the issue of the revival of militarism, but did not speak out explicitly.

A Message About the Revival of Militarism

There was a period of time between the initial exposure of this issue and the two countries taking up the matter, and at the beginning the response of the Chinese side was not so strong.

However, because, first, the Japanese Government has up to now failed to give a definite answer; second, the Japanese Education Minsitry has refused to correct its errors in revising the textbooks; and third, some of the Japanese Cabinet members have gone so far as to falsely accuse the Chinese side, the response of the Chinese Government and people has developed to such a vigorous extent as it has today.

Although Wu Xueqian only said: "Only by correctly educating our future generations can Sino-Japanese relations develop and expand in a continuous and sustained manner," what he did say in the interview implied that if, unfortunately, the relations between the two countries cannot develop or expand, the revival of Japanese militarism would be to blame. JIEFANGJUN BAO and BAN YUE TAN, which is published by XINHUA, have already formally put forth this analysis. They have pointed out that the present countercurrent against the friendly relationships between the Chinese and Japanese peoples is precisely a message of the revival of militarism by a small number of people.

Repeated Violation of the Joint Statement on the Establishment of Diplomatic Relations

Yesterday, while solution to the issue of distortion of history by the Japanese Education Ministry was pending, Beijing put forth the question of the visit to Taiwan by a delegation of the Japanese Liberal Democratic party [LDP] led by Masumi Esaki.

This XINHUA commentary only discussed the visit to Taiwan as it stood, but people can still see in the commentary the implication that it was not a casual arrangement that the LDP delegation's visit to Taiwan followed the Japanese Education Ministry's distortion of history, and that this showed that some people were publicly violating the basic principle of the restoration of diplomatic relations between China and Japan.

It was clearly written into the joint statement on the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Japan that the Japanese side should "be keenly aware of Japan's responsibility for the serious losses that it inflicted on the Chinese people during the past war and should show deep remorse." However, now Japan has shifted from being remorseful to distorting history.

The statement on establishing diplomatic relations also says that Japan recognizes the PRC Government as the only legitimate government of China. However, in the agreement that has been signed by the Japanese LDP delegation in Taiwan, there appear the words "the two countries," which means it is treating Taiwan as a "political entity."

Preventing the Retrogression of Sino-Japanese Relations

When Masumi Esaki visited Southeast Asia, he conducted the visit under the title of "special envoy of the LDP president," who is precisely Japanese Prime Minsiter Zenko Suzuki.

When Esaki visited Taiwan, he refrained from using the title of "special envoy of the LDP president," but his delegation still had strongly official characteristics and the delegation's actions even tended toward the resumption of the activities of creating "two Chinas."

Yesterday's XINHUA commentary says that these people's acts "are aimed at making Sino-Japanese relations retrogress and making history retrogress." These are the gravest words that China has uttered during the decade since the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Japan.

It was reported yesterday that the various friendly bodies in Japan and China demanded that the Japanese authorities pay close attention to the development of the situation and be aware ofthe serious nature of the issue. These bodies also urged Prime Minister Suzuki to personally solve this issue. Now people are waiting for Suzuki's personal decision.

HSIN WAN PAO Column

["New Talk" column: "We Should Remember the Names of Two Heroes in Taiwan's History of Antiagression"]

[Text] The fact that Japan tampered with the history of aggression has infuriated the public and various places in Asia have unanimously condemned Japan. Taiwan is no exception. In the last few days, newspapers on both sides of the Taiwan Strait have published pictures of the Japanese imperial troops who acted savagely in their aggression against China. This has enabled the Chinese nation to review their past sufferings resulting from the bullying of foreign aggressors.

Taiwan Province degenerated into a colony of Japan for half a century. Due to the fact that Japan occupied Taiwan longer than it occupied the Chinese mainland, the Taiwan people hate the Japanese aggressors more bitterly. The KMT, which is now in Taiwan, once cooperated with the CCP in fighting the war of resistance against Japan. Japan was compelled to surrender, withdraw from the mainland and return Taiwan to China. Like the government of the Chinese mainland, the Taiwan authorities of today are also heightening their vigilance against the revival of Japanese militarism.

Taiwan is a southeastern province of China. It is a powerful fort on the sea. Over several hundred years in the past, it had been split several times, but was eventually reunited with the mainland. Before the Japanese occupation, Taiwan had once been occupied by the Dutch and separated from the mainland. It was recovered by Zheng Chenggong. Taiwan people always highly respect this national hero who drove away those Western colonialists.

This year is the 320th anniversary of Zheng Chenggong's recovery of Taiwan. Beginning last February, memorial activities were carried out on the mainland one after another. The Taiwan compatriots' associations in Beijing and other cities held forums. Fujian, Zheng Chenggong's native province, invited scholars from various parts of the country to attend grand discussions. They commemorated the patriotic hero and encouraged national integrity. This was a matter of great significance.

Liu Danian, a Chinese historian, wrote a letter to a symposium held in Fujian, proposing that after this year's commemoration of the 320th anniversary of Zheng Chenggong's recovery of Taiwan, next year we should mark the 300th anniversary of Kang Xi's reunification of Taiwan.

Liu Danian maintains that Zheng Chenggong emancipated Taiwan from the control of foreigners but he only accomplished half of the task. Kang Xi reunited Taiwan with the mainland. Therefore, he accomplished the other half of the task. Despite their different positions, Zheng Chenggong and Kang Xi complemented each other and strived for the same goal by different routes. Both of them made contributions to China.

Zheng Chenggong established the Zheng regime on Taiwan, which opposed the mainland. Zheng Jing and Zheng Kezang were his descendants. This regime collapsed after a rule lasting for 22 years. Kang Xi succeeded in reunifying Taiwan with the mainland. Two steps were taken in the process of reunifying Taiwan with the mainland: first, opposing foreign aggressors and second, abolishing international opposition. The second step was of greater significance, because Taiwan is an isolated island on the sea. Only by taking the mainland as its backing, can it resist foreign aggressors and maintain its stability and development.

At present, the international situation is changing rapidly and foreign countries still covet Taiwan. In the face of foreign aggressors, Chiang Ching-kuo and other KMT members should shoulder the great historial task of reunification. While condemning aggression and paying respect to Zheng Chenggong, they should particularly remember the name of Kang Xi. Taiwan will eventually return to the embrace of the motherland. If Chiang Ching-kuo can respond to the CCP's call on the pace talks, he will promote national justice and render outstanding service to the reunification of the motherland.

WEN WEI PO Dispatch

[Dispatch from correspondent Cheng Hsiang [4453 5046] in Beijing: "Situation of Japanese Tampering With History Is Serious, May Affect Suzuki's Visit to China"]

[Text] The Chinese Ministry of Education's recent rejection of the Japanese education minister's visit to China has had a fairly shocking impact on the diplomatic circles in Beijing.

The Japanese personalities in Beijing have been upset by this incident. According to an authoritative Japanese personality here in Beijing, what he most urgently hopes is that this incident will not create any obstacles to Prime Minister Suzuki's visit to China and NPC Vice Chairman Liao Chengzhi's visit to Japan. He has expressed his hope that the textbook issue will be solved by September, otherwise, it will be very doubtful whether the highranking officials of the two countries will be able to conduct their visits on schedule.

Many Japanese journalists in Beijing are of the opinion that this action on the part of the Chinese side will make the Japanese Government more clearly aware of the serious nature of the problem. If Prime Minister Suzuki is not able to conduct his visit to China because of this problem, it will amount to a great setback in Japan's diplomatic undertaking. According to a Japanese trade agent in Beijing, this act by the Japanese Education Ministry has aroused new aversion to Japan by various Asian countries. The relevant officials in the Japanese Education Ministry should take the blame and resign.

The relevant departments in Beijing have stated that when China and Japan established diplomatic relations a decade ago, the Chinese Government announced that in order to facilitate the development of the friendship between the Chinese and the Japanese peoples, it gave up any demand for war reparations from Japan. At the same time, the Japanese side keenly felt remorseful for its responsiblity in inflicting tremendous losses and suffering on the Chinese people during the previous war and expressed its deep penitence.

This announcement showed the broad mindedness of the Chinese side and at the same time required that Japan sincerely mend its ways. It has been on this basis that the two countries have developed their bilateral relations. Now the Japanese Education Ministry's attempt to distort history has seriously hurt the Chinese people's feelings and at the same time has made people doubt the sincerity of the Japanese Government.

The relevant departments have expressed their hope that the Japanese Education Ministry will accept the demand of the people of the various Asian countries, give up its attempt to distort history and act in accordance with the words of Premier Zhou: "The past kept in mind is a guide for the future." Thus, Sino-Japanese relations will be able to develop normally.

The personalities of the educational circles in the Chinese capital have expressed their support for the Chinese Education Ministry's decision to call off Heiji Ogawa's visit to China. Dong Chuncai, president of the Chinese Education Society said that it is already a very serious error for the Japanese Education Ministry to have distorted the facts of the Japanese militarists' aggression against China in examining and revising the textbooks. However, it is an even more serious error to explain the error away. He called the attempt by the officials of the Japanese Education Ministry to shift the responsibility to certain of the Japanese people, an attempt aimed at hiding the error, but it has only resulted in making the error more conspicuous.

[Article by Kuan Chien-Tzu: "How Strange, So-Called 'Interference in Internal Affairs'"]

[Text] Japanese Education Minister Heiji Ogawa ordered authorities in charge to amend Japanese textbooks on the history of the Japanese invasion of China, changing the invasion of China by the Japanese Imperial Army to "advancing into China." Of course, the Japanese Army also just "advanced into" Hong Kong.

This "advancement" lasted for 8 years in China and 3 years and 8 months in Hong Kong. The Japanese Army killed and set fires, raped and robbed and spread evil wherever they went. According to the statement by the Japanese Ministry of Education, this cannot be called aggression. Anyone who asks Japan to change advance into aggression is interfering in Japanese internal affairs.

What a strong reproach is this! Who dares to interfere with the internal affairs of Japan today, an economically strong nation. But we cannot help asking: What does the Japanese Army's "advancing into" the territory of other countries mean? Is this one of Japan's internal affairs? Thus, does this mean that nobody can interfere with the "advancement" of the Japanese Army?

This is the stand and logic of the Japanese Ministry of Education. Thus, in accordance with their logic, the Japanese Army's "advancing into" Nanjing in 1937 and killing 200,000 people there was only a result of the Chinese Army and people's interference in Japanese internal affairs by "strongly resisting the Japanese Army." It was for this reason that the Japanese Imperial Army staged a big massacre there.

Viewed from this angle, if one day the "Self-Defence Force" of great Japan "advances into" China or Hong Kong again, Chinese people must not resist or else they will be interfering in Japanse internal affairs and will be killed without delay.

But we would like to ask: If people do not resist the "advancement" of the Japanese Army, does it mean that the Japanese Army will not kill? Will they just tour around after "advancing into" others' territories and then go back to the three islands of Japan?

This Japanese "internal affairs theory" is no different from the invasion logic of the American hegemonists. When our country protested against U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, an action by the United States which violates our country's sovereignty, we were accused by the United States of interfering in its internal affairs. What a strange coincidence this is, with the United States and Japan differing in approach but equally satisfactory in result!

The Japanese militarists still have not paid the bloody debts that they owe the Chinese people. Now that they have become economically stronger and are a Second World country, their old disease comes on again and they want to again bully the Chinese people, the Korean people and the Asian people.

The Chinese people and the Asian people are returning good for evil by excusing the past wrongdoings of the Japanese militarists and reconciling with them. But the Japanese militarists are returning evil for good by attempting to stage a comeback. However, this has greatly benefited the Chinese people and the Asian people because it reminds us that militarists have not died out and there are successors who will expand their hegemonism when they are economically strong enough to do so. When we make contact with them, we must always remember that they have a sabre hanging at their waist and they are very good at judo. In judo, it seems your precious body is always just being lightly touched or embraced, but then you are flung onto the ground before you have time to realize what is going on.

We are just talking about the Japanese militarists and aggressors here, and not the ordinary Japanese people. The Japanese people are always our friends. However, we must maintain sharp vigilance because the ordinary Japanese people are still in a powerless state now and the Japanese militarists are playing tricks with their power in the Japanese political arena. Is the action of the Japanese Ministry of Education today sufficient to show that the militarists are in power? For another example, note that many senior officials of the Japanese Cabinet support the Ministry of Education in this incident. Although some of them have made some humble remarks, they do not have the desire to criticize their "aggression." Does this not show that militarism is doing mischief in their minds?

In such a situation, the Chinese people and Asian people have no other alternative but to deal hard blows at the revival of Japanese militarism. Now, we must wait and see whether or not the Japanese Government will discard the thinking and policy of "advancing into" others' territories. If they persist in it and refuse to change, the Chinese people and Asian people will have no choice but to boycott the "advancement" of all Japanese officials.

BAN YUE TAN ON INTERNATIONAL COMMUNIST MOVEMENT

HK090319 Beijing BAN YUE TAN in Chinese No 14, 25 Jul 82 pp 50, 51

[Article by BAN YUE TAN international editorial office: "How To Interpret the Four Principles Governing Relations Between One Party and Another"]

[Text] Delegations of the Italian Communist Party [PCI], the Communist Party of Spain [PCE], the Communist Party of Greece [KKE], the French Communist Party [PCF] and the Communist Party of the Netherlands [CPN] from West Europe have visited China one after another since 1980. They have held talks with CPC leaders. Delegations of the CPC have paid return visits or attended their congresses. As a result of common efforts, our party has resumed suspended relations with some communist parties in West Europe and has also developed them under the new historical conditions. This is an important event in the international communist movement and it is an encouraging change for our party in its relations with West European communist parties.

Not long ago, in his interview with Henk Hoekstra, chairman of the CPN, Chairman Hu Yaobang reiterated that the CPC is willing to develop relations with other parties on the basis of the principles of independence, equality, mutual respect and noninterference in each other's internal affairs. It is precisely by adhering to the four principles set forth by Comrade Hu Yaobang that our party has resumed and developed the relations with some parties in West Europe.

How should we interpret the four principles governing relations between one party and another? We should say that these four principles are unified and inseparable. Our party always holds that in the international communist movement, the relations between one party and another should be based on equal and cooperative relations, not on patriarchal relations in which one party controls another and puts it in a subordinate position. The patriarchal party method will only bring great suffering to the international communist movement and do more harm than good. We, the CPC, have had intimate experience in the struggle against the baton of a patriarchal party. All nations and parties, large and small, are equal. Experience has proven that mutual trust can only be established on the basis of equal treatment.

Only by integrating Marxism-Leninism with the specific practice of a country can a communist party find a correct way. Only the Marxist-Leninists, communists and the people of a country can judge whether a country's road of revolution is correct or not. This is proved through their revolutionary practice. If a party and people of a country have made mistakes in revolution, they should correct them themselves, and other parties should not do that on their behalf. Take our party, for example. Having summed up the successful experiences and learned the unsuccessful lessons, it integrated Marxism-Leninism with the specific practice of the Chinese revolution, took the road of surrounding the cities with the rural areas and waged protracted armed struggle and, with the addition of close coordination of various forms of struggle in all aspects, finally gained victory in revolution throughout the country. China did not follow a foreign model to establish its proletarian regime. Speaking of the significance of this, we should not urge other countries to follow China's example to achieve victory in revolution.

Obviously, the key to success in a national revolution lies in the struggle of the party and people, as well as the correct party line of a country, not the line and policy of another party.

During his interview with a Greek reporter, Comrade Hu Yaobang pointed out: "The tendency to demand independence and equality in the international communist movement can be traced back to the 1940's.

A party interfering in the affairs of another party fundamentally violates the principle of the international communist movement. It is wrong for a party to proclaim itself to be correct and in the leading position. I thing this era has ended. It cannot stop the trend of consultation between parties based on independence and equality."

The conditions of all countries differ from each other. Even a small nation and party possess their own characteristics. Under different working conditions, it is impossible for all parties to hold an identical view on the international situation and other questions. However, this should not present an obstacle to exchanging experiences, mutually approaching a subject and marching forward together on the basis of Marxism through continuous practice and proof.

Some communist parties in West Europe have expressed their full support for the four principles of developing relations between communist parties put forward by our party. Just as Comrade Henk Hoekstra said: The four principles of relations between parties of all countries put forward by the CPC are correct. Whether it is a Communist party of a socialist country or a capitalist country, and whether it is a large or a small one, all are equal, fighting together for the cause of communism.

We believe that with the increase of mutual visits, the relations between the CPC and the communist parties in Western Europe will further develop. The international communist movement will certainly develop healthily whenever we adhere to the correct principle of relations between Communist parties.

Japanese Officials in Beijing

OW100037 Tokyo KYODO in English 0014 GMT 10 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing Aug 10 KYODO -- Two high-ranking Japanese officials who arrived in Beijing Sunday in an attempt to find a solution to the textbook controversy held their first meeting with Xiao Xiangqian, director of the Chinese Foreign Ministry's First Asian Affairs Department Monday afternoon.

The hour-long meeting held by Hiroshi Hashimoto, director general of the Japanese Foreign Ministry's Public Information and Cultural Affairs Bureau, and Hitoshi Osaki, director general of the Education Ministry's Science and International Affairs Bureau, with Xiao was described as an "informal contact."

Observers believe, however, that frank exchange of views was conducted on the revision of the Japanese school textbooks concerning Japanese military activities in China before and during World War II. After the meeting the two Japanese officials and Xiao as well as other officials of the Chinese Foreign and Education Ministries attended a dinner held at the Japanese Embassy. Embassy officials said a friendly atmosphere prevailed at the dinner. They believed that a formal meeting on the textbook issue will be held on Tuesday.

Hashimoto and Osaki are planning to leave Beijing for home on Wednesday.

[Text] Beijing, August 9 (XINHUA) -- Refuting the saying spread by certain Japanese circles that whether Japan committed aggression or not is for future generation to decide, Su Shoutong, a leading Chinese history textbook expert, today listed Japanese history books to show that such conclusion has already been drawn by many Japanese historians. He was referring to the Japanese Education Ministry's erroneous revision of "aggression" into "advance" in its history textbooks.

There is no need to wait for future generations, the deputy editor-in-chief of the People's Education Publishing House said.

Su Shoutong pointed out that all fair-minded Japanese people -- textbook specialists and historians included -- have never been reluctant to reveal the real facts of Japan's aggression against China. He cited a few examples:

-- The high school history textbook compiled by Nobunari Ukai and approved by the Japanese Education Ministry (1979 edition) says: "(In 1937) the Japanese-Chinese war started and, within half a year, Japanese troops occupied north China and captured Nanjing, killing many people in various parts of China and bringing tremendous losses to the Chinese people."

-- "A History of Japan" by Kiyotaka Kurohane and four others published by the Holp Educational Development Research Institute (Sixth edition, 1980) says: "The Japanese troops expanded aggression from Manchu to north China between 1934 and 1935."

-- "A Complete Guide to High School History Textbook" compiled by the Education Research Society says on page 528: "The savageries and massacres committed repeatedly by the Japanese troops after their invasion made the Chinese people's anti-Japanese feeling run higher and higher."

-- Noted historian Inoue Kiyoshi says in the preface of his "Contemporary History of Japan": "During the long period of 14 years between September 1931 and August 1945, Japan committed barbarities out of the Middle Ages utilizing all the means of modern civilization."

-- Kofu Izu says in "A Brief History of Japan": "The Japanese troops controlled north China, landed in Shanghai and captured Nanjing. They carried out an unprecedented massacre in Nanjing, giving rise to the indignation of the people all over the world."

-- Goro Mani says in "The People's History of Japan": "In invading Nanjing, the Japanese troops committed inhuman and violent crimes which can never be forgiven."

These books, Su Shoutong pointed out, were written by different authors in different periods, showing that the Japanese historians of the current generation have provided the definitive verdict on the nature of Japan's aggressive war.

Su Shoutong said that the Chinese compilers have always regarded textbooks as an important tool to educate the younger generation. "Only by being honest and correct can history textbooks achieve good educational effect," he said.

Japanese Teacher's Comments

OW091947 Beijing XINHUA in English 1513 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 9 (XINHUA) -- Atsuko Mihashi, director of health teacher department of the Japanese teacher's union, said here today that she disagrees with the Japanese Education Ministry's replacing the word "aggression" concerning Japanese militarism with "advance" in textbooks. "We will tell the truth of history to the younger generation," she said.

Atsuko Mihashi made the comment when a Japanese teacher's union delegation that she is leading visited the fifth middle school of Beijing this afternoon.

"The position of our union towards this problem is very clear and our watchword is not sending our students to war," she said. She recalled that 10 years ago, with the normalization of diplomatic relations between Japan and China, the two countries agreed that people of the two nations would unite and let the friendship last from generation to generation. She said the Japanese army massacred Chinese people in cold blood and committed many crimes in China. At the same time war also brought about great suffering to the Japanese people. "Therefore, the people of the two countries should join efforts to safeguard world peace," she said.

Yang Yumin, headmaster of the Beijing No. 5 Middle School, said that there was a period of unpleasant relations between China and Japan. However, with the normalization of China-Japan diplomatic relations, friendly exchanges between the people of China and Japan have steadily increased and friendship strengthened.

"We always educate our students to put the blame of this unpleasantness on the Japanese militarists but not on the Japanese people. We should adopt a forward-looking attitude and attach great importance to the Sino-Japanese friendship," he said. "It is much to be regretted," he said. "Few people in Japan should attempt to distort the history and revive Japanese militarism. But, I believe our future will be a bright one and the friendship between the people of China and Japan will become even deeper."

Later, the delegation exchanged experience in teaching with teachers and staff of the middle school. The 27-member delegation arrived in Beijing yesterday on a visit to China at the invitation of the educational workers trade union of China.

Heilongjiang Seminar

SK100232 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] The third seminar of the Northeast China Society for Research of the History of China-Japan Relations opened in Harbin today. More than 100 experts and scholars attending the seminar listed numerous crimes the Japanese militarists committed in Northeast China in their aggression against China in the 14 years after 18 September 1931. They also criticized the erroneous act of the Japanese Education Ministry in altering the history of Japan's aggression against China.

(Wen Ye), researcher of the Harbin Memorial Hall for Martyrs of Northeast China, enumerated the bloody crimes of plunder, killing and looting the Japanese aggressive army committed in Northeast China. He said: The site of the memorial hall was in those years a den of the Japanese aggressors for killing people. Countless numbers of our compatriots were killed in cold blood here. The Japanese aggressive army also made several pits in which to kill people in some mining areas of Northeast China. In Jixi coal mining areas alone, seven pits were made and more than 100,000 laborers were killed. In order to slaughter the Chinese people, the Japanese aggressive army set up a bacteria factory in the (Pingfang) District of Harbin Municipality to produce plague, cholera and typhoid bacteria, and conducted experiments with live people in a savage manner. From 1940 to 1945 some 3,000 Chinese people were killed in the experiments. On the eve of its surrender, the Japanese aggressive army blew up the factory in an effort to destroy the evidence of its crimes. As a result, the bacteria spread, again causing 23,000 armymen and civilians to die of the plague and cholera in Northeast China. Some of the bacteria bombs and experimental instruments of the killers' factory are kept in the memorial hall as irrefutable evidence of the Japanese militarists' crimes of aggression against China.

Prof (Zhu Youheng), president of Northeast China's Society for the research of the history of the relations between China and Japan, who is currently in Japan to give lectures, wrote a letter. He said: The recent crime of the Japanese authorities concerned of distorting the history of the Japanese militarists' aggression against other countries in an attempt to obliterate history has created a great wave in the Japanese historical circle. Some Japanese historians with a conscience are struggling against this crime, which we researchers of the history of the relations between China and Japan cannot treat lightly. Objective history cannot be altered and the numerous crimes the Japanese militarists committed in our country cannot be erased. Only a correct record of the history of the relations between China and Japan is conducive to the relations between the two countries and to the interests of the peoples of the two countries.

The seminar also adopted a resolution today strongly demanding the Japanese Government to correct the mistakes of the Education Ministry in order to reveal history in its true colors.

Liaoning Radio Letter

SK080614 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Text] A letter from (Lin Shiji), a famous person in our province, points out: From the distortion of the historical facts concerning the Japanese militarists' aggression against China by the Japanese Education Ministry, we can identify some signs of a revival of Japanese militarism. The letter says: It is known by people throughout the world that the Japanese militarists launched the 18 September and Marco Polo Bridge incidents. However, certain people in the Japanese Education Ministry, in censoring primary and middle school textbooks, referred to the aggression against China as an advance into China and shifted responsibility for the rape of Nanjing to the Chinese Army resisting aggression.

This is not only a vain attempt at covering up their crimes and absolving their guilt but, what is more important, this is the same old trick of militarism and a return to the path of militarism. The Chinese people will never tolerate this; nor will other peoples of Asia, including the Japanese.

The letter also says: The launching of a war of aggression against China by the Japanese militarists led to tremendous losses of lives and property of the Chinese people. It also brought extreme suffering to the Japanese people. Today we must tell the truth to our descendents so they can draw lessons from such painful history. Only then is it possible for the Chinese and Japanese people to maintain friendship generation after generation.

The Japanese Government should respect historical facts and correct the mistakes in the censored textbooks so that the peaceful and friendly relations between the two countries can be consolidated and developed.

Liaoning Official's Letter

SK100900 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] (Xiao Wen), director of the provincial education bureau, recently wrote a letter to our station strongly protesting the act of the Japanese Education Ministry in altering the history of Japan's aggression against China.

Comrade (Xiao Wen) said: In censoring primary and middle school textbooks, the Japanese Education Ministry has gone so far as to openly and boldly alter the history of Japan's aggression against China. As an educational worker, I express my great indignation against the base conduct of the Japanese Education Ministry in concealing these aggressive crimes. As everybody knows, the iron heels of the Japanese militarists treaded on the land of China on many occasions and created a bloody history of aggression against China by using firearms and bayonets. The hard facts of history should not be denied or distorted. It is fruitless for some Japanese people with ulterior motives to change the word "aggression" to "advance."

Comrade (Xiao Wen) noted: To successfully educate the new generation, we should first of all tell them the truth and not beat around the bush. By letting them bear in mind the historical lessons, we can attain our goal -- past experience, if not forgotten, is a guide to the future. I firmly believe that the Japanese people themselves will not agree to the fact of revising and distorting history with textbooks, much less tolerate the act of adhering to the spirit of Japanese militarism. We are willing to abide by the principle and guidelines of the Sino-Japan joint statement together with the Japanese people and to oppose the mean act of the Japanese Education Ministry in altering the history of Japan's aggression against China in order to resist the revival of Japanese militarism.

SINGAPORE'S DHANABALAN VIEWS SRV KAMPUCHEA STANCE

[Text] Bangkok, August 6 (XINHUA) -- Hanoi is not prepared to discuss a solution to the Kampuchean problem with the ASEAN countries, said Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan here this morning. He made these remarks at Don Muang Airport upon his arrival for a special meeting of ASEAN foreign ministers to be held tomorrow.

He said, Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach wanted to give the expression to the world that Vietnam was flexible and practical in negotiating with ASEAN countries. However, he added, judging from the words and deeds during his tour of the four Southeast Asian countries, no change in Vietnamese position has been seen.

"Of course," Dhanabalan said, "Thach's talk in Singapore is somehow different from that in Kuala Lumpur and Bangkok. But the substance of his words has no change." "Vietnam has not yet come to a point where it is prepared to negotiate a political settlement in Cambodia," he added.

He said that Thach had made it clear that there will be no withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in the near future. "Vietnam is prepared at a regional conference to discuss any other regional matters, but they will not talk about Cambodia," Dhanabalan said.

Dhanabalan reiterated the ASEAN stand that Vietnam must withdraw its troops from Kampuchea, and that the Kampuchean people must be allowed the right to choose their own government.

Asked about the meaning of "economic sanction" set forth by Singapore against Vietnam, Dhanabalan answered: "We would persuade our friends who are giving aid to Vietnam to change their policy and those who do not help Vietnam to continue their policy." "We will continue to call on countries in the U.N. to support Cambodia with humanitarian aid," he added.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Bin Shafie and Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja also arrived here today. Ghazali spoke to the press at the airport. "There has been no real change in the objective of Vietnam which is to continue to stay in Kampuchea. But it shifts its reasons for staying in Kampuchea."

Mokhtar stated: "Whatever solutions we seek have to be along with the lines of the basic principles announced in the resolutions of the U.N. and the international conference on Kampuchea. But the means to arrive at that goal are varied. The dialogue is one of the means to arrive at this goal."

ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS REAFFIRM KAMPUCHEA STAND

OW071646 Beijing XINHUA in English 1636 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Text] Bangkok, August 7 (XINHUA) -- ASEAN foreign ministers stressed here today that "the two key elements in the solution to the Kampuchean problem continue to be (a) the total withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea, and (b) the right to self-determination of the Kampuchean people." This stand was reaffirmed in a press statement issued here today at the end of a one-day informal meeting of the ASEAN foreign ministers, who were kept for hours behind closed doors with their senior aides.

The statement noted: "The resolution of the Kampuchean problem upon this basis would restore Kampuchea as a free, independent, sovereign and neutral country, and is vital to the establishment of the zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia."

The statement said: "The ministers discussed recent developments concerning the Kampuchean question. They noted that there has been no change in Vietnam's policy towards Kampuchea. They reaffirmed ASEAN's policy to make every effort and to continue with consultations to seek a comprehensive political solution within the framework and principles of the ICK (International Conference on Kampuchea) declaration and other relevant U.N. resolutions, which have been overwhelmingly endorsed by the international community."

"The ministers welcomed the Government of Democratic Kampuchea under the presidency of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as a positive step towards the comprehensive political solution. The ministers urged the international community to render full support to Prince Sihanouk's government," the statement said.

It said, the ministers discussed the situation in Lebanon. They expressed their grave concern over the prevailing situation and called for the immediate implementation of the relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions. It added "the ministers also called for the early launching of the global negotiations."

ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS HOLD PRESS CONFERENCE

OW071940 Beijing XINHUA in English 1911 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Text] Bangkok, August 7 (XINHUA) -- ASEAN foreign ministers viewed Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's visit to the four Southeast Asian countries as a failure in his goal to mobilize anti-China opinion and split the ASEAN countries. This was expressed at a joint press conference held here today at the conclusion of the day-long informal meeting of the ASEAN foreign ministers sponsored by Thailand.

Questioned about the aim of the Vietnamese "diplomatic offensives" this year, Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shaffie said that in its recent diplomatic offensive around the world including Southeast Asia, Vietnam had used different tactics.

When Nguyen Co Thach toured Europe, he talked a lot about the past "genocide" in Democratic Kampuchea in order to win the sympathy of the West European countries for Vietnam's occupation of Kampuchea. While in Southeast Asia he changed "genocide" into "Chinese threat" to justify the stay of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea. "So you can see that it is purely a diplomatic offensive," Ghazali added.

In addition, Nguyen Co Thach tried to split ASEAN. "But we are not split," Ghazali stressed. Philippine Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo backed Ghazali's view at the press conference.

Having analysed the votes for the legitimate seat of Democratic Kampuchea in the U.N. General Assembly in the past three years, Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila expressed optimism about the prospect of the D.K. seat in the U.N. "The ASEAN countries see the bright future of increasing support for the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea," he declared.

Dealing with the means to compel the Vietnamese troops to pull out of Kampuchea, Romulo said the basis of his hope lay in the defending of U.N. resolutions on Kampuchea by more and more countries and the pressure on Vietnam to carry them out.

However, the identical points of view of ASEAN on the Kampuchean problem after the visits of the Vietnamese foreign minister to the three ASEAN member states had been expounded in the press statement of the informal meeting of ASEAN foreign ministers, Sitthi, chairman of the Standing Committee of Asean, concluded.

After the press conference, high officials of Singpore and Thailand told XINHUA that ASEAN succeeded again in standing firm to defend the principles of U.N. resolutions on Kampuchea and in remaining united adamantly in the face of threats and cajolery by a certain party. Ghazali Shafie said: "It is impossible to hold a regional conference between ASEAN and Indochina."

SRV REPORTEDLY SENDS REINFORCEMENTS TO KAMPUCHEA

Special Task Groups

OW071639 Beijing XINHUA in English 1631 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Text] Bangkok, August 7 (XINHUA) -- "Special task groups" have been sent to Kampuchean villages by Vietnamese aggressors and the Heng Samrin puppet regime to force the people to obey their orders instead of responding to the calls of the newly-founded Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, according to press reports here today.

Afraid very much of the formation of the coalition government, the Vietnamese aggressors and the Heng Samrin regime are trying their utmost to restrict its influence. They warned that they would heavily punish or kill those persons who know but refuse to report the coming of officials of the coalition government or even dare to have contacts with them. A curfew from seven o'clock in the evening to six o'clock in the morning is imposed in the villages by the Vietnamese aggressor troops.

Vietnamese troops have also blockaded routes to the borders and established restricted areas in an attempt to prevent the people from getting relief from international humanitarian organizations. Those who dare to resist are to be severely punished.

The tyranny of Vietnamese troops has met strong opposition from the Kampucheans. On August 2 seven Vietnamese troops were shot to death by a group of soldiers in the Heng Samrin armed forces who were enraged by the aggressors atrocities of killing Kampuchean compatriots.

[Text] Beijing, August 10 (XINHUA) -- Vietnam has continued to send reinforcements to Kampuchea to strengthen its military campaign and prop its position there, according to Radio Democratic Kampuchea.

70 trucks of Vietnamese aggressor troops from Ho Chi Minh City entered Kampuchea on July 13 and proceeded to the north through Takev Province along Highway No 2. When the convoy took a rest in Ron Tah Hill, many Vietnamese soldiers deserted.

The Vietnamese authorities also sent reinforcements to Brasat Temple, Puok District, Siem Reap Province and Phnum Srok District, Battambang Province, on July 23 and 15.

The radio pointed out that these facts once again gave lie to Vietnam's profession of "partial troop withdrawal".

SINGAPORE PREMIER STRESSES ASEAN SOLIDARITY

OW100812 Beijing XINHUA in English 0701 GMT 10 Aug 82

[Text] Hong Kong, August 9 (XINHUA) -- Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew warned yesterday that without cooperation and solidarity among them, ASEAN countries could be subverted and manipulated one by one. Lee Kuan Yew made the warning in a National Day message to the nation on the occasion of the 17th anniversary of Singapore's independence.

"I know how important the security and stability of our ASEAN neighbours, particularly Thailand, would be to us. Today, it is Thailand that is threatened. Tomorrow, it can be anyone of us," he said.

Lee Kuan Yew said under a gloomy world economy, this year is a difficult year, and the growth rate of Singapore's economy will probably be only 5 to 7 percent. However, he said, "We can tide over rough times." "The way to overcome setbacks is not to rub hands while complaining of bad luck, but to work harder, improve our work style, and raise productivity." He pointed out that Singapore must make break-throughs by acquiring higher levels of science and technology and capability to master it. This would help his country stand firm in the mounting competition in the present world.

Lee Kuan Yew also called on youths to constantly practise their military skills, participate in military drills and be prepared fully to meet any emergencies.

SOUTH ASIAN MINISTERS CONFERENCE CONCLUDES

Endorses Cooperation Programs

OW091939 Beijing XINHUA in English 1526 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Islamabad, August 9 (XINHUA) -- The foreign secretaries of seven south Asian countries at a meeting ending here today endorsed a series of recommendations on regional cooperation and expressed the determination to "accelerate the pace" of it. A joint communique made public at the end of the third meeting of the foreign secretaries of Pakistan, India, Bangladesh, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Bhutan and the Maldives said that they reached unanimous agreement on all matters under consideration. The communique said that the foreign secretaries endorsed the programmes of cooperation recommended by the working groups on agriculture, rural development, telecommunication, meteorology and health and population activities. They called for implementation of the recommendations as expeditious as possible.

The foreign secretaries also endorsed the recommendations submitted by the study groups of transport, postal services and scientific and technological cooperation, and restructure these study groups into working groups. To widen the scope of cooperation, the meeting agreed to set up a study group of sports, arts and culture.

In addition, the joint communique said, the foreign secretaries decided to set up an across-the-board committee under the chairmanship of Sri Lanka to prepare an integrated programme of action in the agreed areas of cooperation and to recommend modalities and mechanisms for implementation.

The foreign secretaries agreed to hold their next meeting in Dacca in February or March 1983, and to recommend to their foreign ministers to convene a meeting at their level between May and September 1983. The Pakistan foreign minister was requested to undertake consultations with his counterparts with a view to fix the date and venue of the ministerial meeting.

XINHUA Analysis of Conference

[By Correspondent Chi Teliang]

[Text] Islamabad, August 9 (XINHUA) -- The three-day third meeting of foreign secretaries of the south Asian region attended by Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka was successfully concluded here today. The complete agreement on the scope and plan of activities for the future, including the convening of a ministerial level meeting of the seven countries at an early date for further consideration of the regional cooperation, constitutes an important step forward of the meeting.

During the meeting the foreign secretaries reaffirmed the commitment of their countries to promote and strengthen cooperation among themselves, and expressed their determination to accelerate the pace of regional cooperation. This shows that the governments and peoples of the south Asian countries are determined to help and cooperate with each other in building their respective countries.

The promotion of regional cooperation in south Asia is a befitting response to the challenges facing the region. The deteriorating world economic situation which has jeopardized the prospects for the improvement of the well-being of the people of developing countries lends added significance to such a regional cooperation. Despite concerted efforts by the developing countries in the international fora, the establishment of an equitable and just new international economic order through restructuring of the international economic relations, continues to elude the developing countries because of a lack of the necessary political will on the part of the industrialized countries.

This has made the developing countries understand in a better way that only through economic cooperation among themselves and collective self-reliance can they hope to achieve steadfast economic growth. It is also in this context that the regional cooperation of south Asian countries shows great importance.

The meeting indicates clearly that the regional cooperation in south Asia is beneficial and necessary. Such kind of regional cooperation is based on mutual trust, understanding, respect for the principles of sovereign equality, political independence and non-interference in the internal affairs of the others. At the very beginning the foreign secretaries had noted that the cooperation should proceed step by step. Due to the joint efforts of the seven countries, the achievements they have made in the short span of two years are quite satisfactory.

The south Asian countries share a common destiny and a desire to improve the living standard of their teeming millions. Despite their divergent geopolitical outlooks, the countries of this region have a long cherished desire to pool their efforts in those fields which are not marred by political friction. This approach is not only possible but also meets the needs of the people of these countries who want to substitute confrontation with mutual beneficial cooperation. The newly-concluded Islamabad meeting is a success of such a noble desire of the people of south Asia.

RENMIN RIBAO ANALYZES INDIAN-U.S. RELATIONS

["News Analysis" by Liu Zhengxue [0491 2973 1331]: "New Trends in Indian-U.S. Relations"]

[Text] Indian Premier Indira Gandhi concluded her visit to the United States on 4 August. Judging by the atmosphere at the talks between the two national leaders and the agreement reached on supplying India with nuclear fuel, a "new spirit of dialogue and cooperation" has apparently begun in Indian-U.S. relations, which had been tense for 10 years.

There was a long dispute between the two countries on the nuclear fuel issue. The Indian and U.S. Governments signed an agreement in 1963 stipulating that India would receive 19.8 tons of enriched uranium from the United States every year for its Tarapur nuclear power station. Built with U.S. help, the condition was that India could only use U.S. nuclear fuel and be subject to U.S. supervision; India could only handle its nuclear waste with U.S. agreement, and guarantee to strictly use it for peaceful purposes.

India exploded a nuclear device in 1974. The United States suspected that India had surreptitiously used the nuclear waste from the Tarapur power station to produce plutonium, which can be used to manufacture atomic bombs. In order to take sanctions against India, Congress passed in 1978 the "Nuclear Nonproliferation Act," by which the United States negated the legality of the Indian-U.S. agreement of 1963 and declared it would no longer supply India with enriched uranium. The Indians strongly contested this, holding that the 1963 agreement had the force of an international treaty and the United States had no right to break it unilaterally or to apply a domestic act passed in 1978 to negate it. The Indians also denied that they had treated the nuclear waste and reiterated that India had consistently stuck to using nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. When dealing with this issue, former President Carter adopted a relatively flexible policy. He cited "special circumstances" to advise Congress, saying that unless the United States supplied India with nuclear fuel that country would turn to the Soviet Union. Eventually Congress reluctantly agreed to supply India with the enriched uranium originally scheduled for delivery in 1978.

President Reagan adopted a relatively tough policy toward India after taking office. He held, since the beginning of the 1980's, India had shown clear pro-Soviet tendencies on a whole series of major foreign policies; economically the country was conservative and backward, and India could play no role on the international stage.

The U.S. Government therefore intended to limit political, economic and technical aid for India. When India pressed the United States for the enriched uranium scheduled for 1979 and 1980, the Reagan administration took out the "Nuclear Nonproliferation Act" and refused to supply India with nuclear fuel. The two countries therefore held talks in Washington and New Delhi in April and July last year. The first round of these talks was marked by fierce argument. The United States repeatedly asked India to clarify whether it had carried out processing of U.S. nuclear fuel, and the Indians urged the United States to observe the provisions of the 1963 agreement and continue supplying nuclear fuel to India. The meeting broke up without agreement. Although the atmosphere in the second round was "relatively friendly," it still failed to yield agreement. At the same time, Indian Government spokesmen repeatedly reiterated a statement of Premier Indira Gandhi: "Even if the United States stops supplying nuclear fuel, India can continue to operate the Tarapur plant." In other words, India could get nuclear fuel from the Soviet Union.

The problem dragged on for a whole year. On the eve of Premier Indira Gandhi's latest visit to America, international opinion universally held that the talks between the two sides on the nuclear fuel issue would be unable to make any headway. Even U.S. Ambassador to India Barnes advised people "not to hold out any hopes" on this knotty problem. However, as a result of concessions made by both sides, an agreement was reached in the talks between the two national leaders; and this cannot but be described as a new breakthrough in relations between the two countries. According to this new agreement, in the future India can obtain nuclear fuel from a third country, France. But it must abide by the provisions in the agreement signed with the United States in 1963 on guaranteeing that this fuel will not be used to manufacture nuclear weapons.

Analyzing this achievement, observers hold that from the American point of view, to have France, a Western power and member of Euratom, supply nuclear fuel is far better for U.S. interests than having the Soviet Union expanding its political influence and intervening. As for India, it has long been mentally prepared for turning immediately to the Soviet Union if the United States does not supply the urgently needed nuclear fuel.

International opinion holds that there was nothing accidental that India and the United States were able to reach this agreement during Indira Gandhi's visit to the United States. It is closely related to the current international situation and the strategic interests of both countries. Since the new U.S. ambassador to India took office and since the contact between President Reagan and Premier Indira Gandhi at the Cancun meeting last year, the Reagan administration has changed its views on India, holding that as the Soviet Army continues to occupy Afghanistan, India is a major power in stabilizing the situation in southern Asia; it still has some independence in foreign policy, and is also one of the major spokesmen of the developing countries in the Third World; in addition, India has done quite well in internal construction in recent years, and it practices a relatively open policy toward external investors, and so strengthening relations with India is both politically and economically advantageous for the United States. India too has recognized that maintaining good relations with the United States is not only beneficial for practicing a foreign policy of "equidistance" between the two superpowers -- the Soviet Union and the United States -- and improving and enhancing its image and position among the nonaligned countries; it can also get more capital and advanced technology and equipment from the United States for developing its own economy.

Indira Gandhi has repeatedly stated that this visit to America has only yielded "limited results". The improvement in relations between the two countries is only a start. At present, the governments and leaders of the two countries hold that there are still many differences between them on a number of major foreign policy and bilateral issues. Even the agreement on supplying nuclear fuel to India has a certain "tinge" to it, that is, the provisions regarding the nuclear fuel previously supplied by the United States which India has processed still require further negotiaion and solution. It seems that a very long and bumpy road will have to be traversed before a comprehensive improvement in Indian-U.S. relations can take place.

N.Y. TIMES QUESTIONS REAGAN'S MIDEAST MOVES

[text] Washington, August 8 (XINHUA) -- The New York TIMES in an editorial today threw doubt upon President Reagan's sincerity when he said that he was "especially frustrated" last week because Israel did not respond to his call not to shell the besieged Beirut. The paper said large scale Israeli attacks on west Beirut had stirred "vehement reactions" within the Reagan administration and the President was "extremely angry" when his repeated public and private effort failed to persuade Israel to limit its military moves.

"If President Reagan really wanted Israel to stop strangling west Beirut last week, how come he could not?" the paper asked. The paper said Israel is "wholly dependent" on American military and economic aid, which, according to State Department sources, totalled 9.8 billion dollars and 4.68 billion dollars respectively in the period from 1977 to 1982. In these circumstances, "when Ronald Reagan insists, why doesn't Menachem Begin listen?" the paper wanted to know.

The paper noted that even while threatening Israel, Reagan was reaffirming his demand that the P.L.O. leave Lebanon. "How can he make that happen except at the point of Israeli bayonets?" the paper said.

Former Under-Secretary of State George Ball today in an ABC interview also criticized the U.S. Middle East policy. He said Israel's "intransigent expansionist objective" is against American interests. He said that the U.S. has "enormous influence " on Israel. If Israel finally does take west Beirut "it will be doing so with a green light from the U.S.," he noted.

Ball believed that the U.S. should stop providing any military assistance to Israel. "To assume that our interests are being served by what's happening" would be a "ghastly mistake", he stressed.

PALESTINIANS RALLY AGAINST U.S. IN DAMASCUS

OW091812 Beijing XINHUA in English 1652 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Damascus, August 9 (XINHUA) -- Hundreds of Palestinian people in Damascus staged a demonstration today to express their anger at and condemnation of open U.S. complicity in the Zionist aggression against the Palestinian and Lebanese people. When the demonstrators reached the U.S. Embassy, a number of Palestinian youth climbed up the walls of the embassy premises and pulled down an American flag and burned it.

The demonstrators handed the U.S. ambassador a memorandum condemning the U.S. role in the Middle East, and asked him to forward it to U.S. President Ronald Reagan. The demonstrators also sent a cable of support to Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman 'Arafat, expressing complete support for the Palestinian and Lebanese fighters.

WASHINGTON RALLY PROTESTS ISRAELI ACTIONS

OW080214 Beijing XINHUA in English 0145 GMT 8 Aug 82

[Text] Washington, August 7 (XINHUA) -- In response to a call of the Palestine Congress of North America, hundreds of Americans and American Arabs held a rally in Lafayette Park opposite to the White House this afternoon to protest against Israeli invasion of Lebanon. The demonstrators marched to the park from Capitol Hill. Speakers at the rally denounced the Israeli slaughter of Palestine and Lebanese people.

They condemned the United States Government for its support to Israel. The demonstrators held placards which read "Protest Against Israeli Invasion of Lebanon", "Stop U.S. Aid to Israel" and "Palestine Blood's on American Hands".

The Washington area Jews who are opposed to the Israeli invasion of Lebanon issued the following statement at the rally: "As American Jews, we are deeply saddened by Israel's invasion of Lebanon." "We call on the Israeli Government to withdraw from Lebanon, to respect the territorial integrity of all her neighbors and to let the Lebanese decide the fate of their country."

BEGIN REPORTEDLY AGREES TO PEACE FORCE IN BEIRUT

OW100312 Beijing XINHUA in English 1235 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Beirut, August 8 (XINHUA) — Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin today agreed to U.S. special envoy Habib's compromise formula that a multi-national peace-keeping force will be stationed in west Beirut after a majority of the Palestinian armed forces are evacuated, reported the Israeli Radio.

Israel had insisted that a multi-national peace-keeping force could enter Beirut only after a complete withdrawal of the Palestinian armed forces.

Menahem Begin's new attitude was made known in a reply to a letter from U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz.

But Israel stressed that the United States and Lebanon must guarantee to help Israel expel the Palestinian armed forces from Lebanon if the Palestinian Liberation Organization takes the multi-national peace-keeping force as its "protective umbrella" and refuses to withdraw its last group of men from Lebanon. Israel also demanded the withdrawal of 1,000 to 1,500 Syrian troops from Beirut along with the Palestinian forces.

Mr. Begin received a letter today from U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, in which Shultz said that some progress has been made in the negotiations about the withdrawal of the Palestinian armed forces from Beirut.

Before the close of the Cabinet meeting, Israeli Defence Minister Ari'el Sharon hurried to Beirut to inform Philip Habib of the Israeli Cabinet decision. The two men then discussed the time and other specific arrangements for the deployment of the multi-national force.

The U.S. envoy this morning called on the military representatives of Lebanon, France and the United States. He also discussed details about the arrangements for the deployment of the international force with the ambassadors of France and Italy to Lebanon.

The negotiations on the evacuation of the Palestinian guerrillas from west Beirut has entered the final stage. The only problem that remains unsolved is where the Palestinian fighters could go after their withdrawal from Beirut.

The Jordanian prime minister formally announced today that his country was ready to accept those Palestinians with the Jordanian passports. Nevertheless, Egypt still refuses to accept the Palestinian guerrillas unless such acceptance is a part of an overall settlement of the Palestine issue. Syria so far has not changed its stand that the Palestinian guerrillas should continue to fight in Beirut.

While the political talks are going on apace, Israel still keeps on exerting military pressure on west Beirut. Israeli artillery shelled the Palestinian strongholds several times today and there was a brisk movement of Israeli tanks in east Beirut.

PALESTINIAN OFFICIAL INTERVIEWED IN CAIRO

OW090959 Beijing XINHUA in English 0809 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Cairo, August 8 (XINHUA) -- A Palestinian official in Cairo told XINHUA in a recent interview: "Without the support of the United States, Israel could not have launched such a war whose aim is to wipe out the Palestinian armed forces and the Palestinian revolution. But the cause of the Palestinian people is indestructible."

The official, Zuhdi al-Qadri, director of the Palestinian Office of Social Affairs and member of the PLO delegation in Cairo, condemned Israel's siege of Palestinian forces in west Beirut. He said that Israel, backed by the United States, is carrying out a policy of genocide in Lebanon, committing a monstrous crime against the Lebanese and Palestinian people.

Referring to the reported PLO agreement to withdraw from Beirut, he said that the PLO is prepared to withdraw from Beirut to save the people of tht city from bloodshed and destruction. But the final decision will have to be made by the supreme Palestinian leadership headed by Yasir 'Arafat in Beirut.

He praised Egypt's proposal for linking the withdrawal of the Palestinian resistance forces from Beirut with an over-all solution to the Palestinian problem. This Egyptian position will play a positive role, he pointed out.

PRC UN ENVOY SPEAKS IN ISRAEL ARMS BAN DEBATE

OW070751 Beijing XINHUA in English 0724 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Text] United Nations, August 6 (XINHUA) -- The United States vetoed today a draft resolution in the Security Council for a military aid ban to Israel by all the U.N. member states. The draft got 11 affirmative votes, from the Soviet Union, Poland, France, Ireland, Spain, Jordan, Uganda, China, Japan, Guyana and Panama. The United Kingdom, Togo and Zaire abstained.

The draft "strongly condemns" Israel's defiance of Security Council Resolutions 516 and 517 and demands all U.N. member states to "refrain from supplying Israel with any weapons and from providing it with any military aid until the full withdrawal of Israeli forces from all Lebanese territory".

Speaking before the voting, Chinese representative Ling Qing said, China strongly condemned the Israeli authorities for their open rejection of the Security Council resolutions. He called on the Security Council to impose sanctions against Israel, and urged the council to act decisively to have the relevant provisions of the U.N. Charter implemented.

Though China voted for the draft, Ling Qing said that demands contained in the draft were the minimum, insufficient and fell short of calling for an immediate ceasefire.

Representatives of Jordan, the PLO, France and Ireland expressed their indignation at Israel's contempt for the council resolutions and called on Israel to abide by the ceasefire and completely withdraw its forces from Lebanon. Explaining the veto, U.S. representative Charles Lichenstein said that the present draft was not balanced and would not contribute to attaining a peaceful solution.

PLO INTRODUCES NEW PROPOSAL ON BEIRUT CRISIS

OW061325 Beijing XINHUA in English 1242 GMT 6 Aug 82

[Text] Beirut, August 5 (XINHUA) -- The Palestine Liberation Organization has put forward a "more flexible" proposal that may lead to a break-trhough in negotiations on west Beirut crisis, reported Radio Beirut quoting a Lebanese Government source today.

The new proposal contains the PLO's concessions on the evacuation of its forces from Beirut:

1) The evacuation is to take place simultaneously with the deployment of the multinational buffer troops. Before this, the PLO all along insisted that the evacuation should take place after the stationing of the buffer force in Beirut and its surrounding area. Israel strongly rejects the PLO position.

2) The Palestine Liberation Organization agrees to move its men directly to the Syrian capital of Damascus by an international high-way instead of going to the Al-Biqa' Valley and north Beirut first.

Bassam Abu Sharif, a leader of the PLO, told reporters at a news conference today that the PLO was ever ready to leave Beirut. He explained that the negotiation on the evacuation was continuing and the PLO was ready to respond to any demand from the Lebanese Government.

Another PLO leader, Abu Iyad, stressed that the PLO is sincere in its resolve to withdraw from Lebanon. He said the PLO made the decision "not out of timidity and fear", but for respect for the aspiration of the Lebanese people.

The Israeli Radio confirmed that the Israeli Government had received the PLO's new proposal through U.S. envoy Philip Habib.

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq al-Wazzan today inspected west Beirut that was bombed by Israel Wednesday. Al-Wazzan said that military escalation was inexplainable while diplomatic negotiation was making headway. It is reported that 250 people were killed and about 670 others wounded on Wednesday.

AFP: ANGRY STUDENTS OCCUPY AFRICAN EMBASSY

OW091322 Hong Kong AFP in English 1301 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, Aug 9 (AFP) — Four students from the Central African Republic occupied their country's embassy here today and held the only official in the building hostage to protest against the non payment of their scholarship allowances. According to one of the students they intended to remain in the building until they received a positive reply from the government in Bangui.

The four students, Daniel Nambai, Jean-Maurice Bomayabu, Dieudonne Mgaba and Bernard Kondjili, said they arrived in China last September and had still not received the sum of 57,000 francs CFA (167 dollars) due to them from their government. They said they had hardly been able to make ends meet with just the 120 yuans (62 dollars) they had received from the Chinese Government during the past year.

The students said that after many requests to the embassy, they finally received a letter from the Central African education minister guaranteeing that the money would be paid. But it still had not arrived. The gates of the embassy have been closed and its Central African and Chinese administrative staff sent away.

The four students, having completed a one-year language course, have six or seven years' study in China ahead of them.

BAN YUE TAN ARTICLE ON BUILDING COMMUNISM

OW092125 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0710 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, 9 Aug (XINHUA) -- The 15th issue of the BAN YUE TAN magazine carries a commentator's article entitled "Do Away With the Theory That 'Communism Is Too Distant To Attain.'" The article reads in full as follows:

In conducting communist ideological education, there is an argument which maintains: Communism is a distant thing. Like the moon in the sky, it is within our sight but beyond our reach. It is unrealistic to propagandize communism today.

Marxists believe this argument does not stand theoretically; besides, it does not conform with the real situation.

As a social system, communism or communist society is the highest stage of development in the history of mankind. Its principal earmark is "from each according to his ability and to each according to his needs." In this sense, the realization of communism is not an undertaking that can be accomplished in one or several generations; it requires the painstaking efforts of many generations. In light of China's circumstances, it is only natural that the ideal of building a communist society can be realized only in the far-distant future.

However, communism, according to Marxist theory, refers not merely to a social system. It has another connotation: communism is a movement. And the communist movement provides the only path to the realization of communism. It is a movement guided by the communist ideological system. This movement has already started, beginning with the founding of the Communist League in 1847 and the promulgation of the Manifesto of the Communist Party in 1848. The development of our party from a small communist group to the ruling party with a membership of nearly 40 million in a country of 1 billion people is a great communist accomplishment.

Without the guidance of communist ideology, we could not have laid down the program and line of the new democratic revolution and successfully overthrown the three big mountains of imperialism, feudalism and bureaucratic capitalism, nor could we have founded a socialist system in China and won great achievements in socialist revolution and construction. The success of the Chinese revolution and every achievement in socialist construction are victories of the communist movement and ideology. As an ideology, conduct and movement, communism is alive everywhere. It is struggling and progressing. In this sense, communism is very realistic, not "within sight but beyond reach."

There are perhaps two reasons that lead some comrades to believe communism too distant to attain. One is that they believe communism is a society of highly-developed productive forces with great material abundance, whereas our country is still fairly poor today. Another is that they believe people in a communist society possess high standards of communist consciousness and morality, whereas some practice in our present-day society is not good and the consciousness of some people is rather low. These are all facts. We could even cite many more social phenomena that fall far short of the requirements of communism. But all these cannot constitute a reason for regarding communism as purely imaginary. This is because in China, communism is to be gradually realized precisely on such a social foundation. From the angle of social development, our present efforts to build a highly-developed socialist material and spiritual civilization aim precisely at realizing the goal of communism.

Socialism is a lower stage of communism. Communism will not come to us all of a sudden one morning. The transition from socialism to communism will be gradually achieved through the efforts of many generations. Along this journey stand many milestones. We draw ourselves closer to communism whenever we travel a distance and realize a concrete goal. The more successfully we carry out socialist construction, the sooner we shall attain communism. Thus, in a certain sense, the work we are doing in our respective posts is a component part of the communist undertaking.

People who want the communist life of "to each according to his need" but are unwilling to do their part and work, study and struggle for the realization of communism are like pleasure-seekers who want to enjoy the cool shade but are unwilling to plant trees. They will naturally have a feeling of uncertainty and will lose hope and become pessimistic.

If, departing from the historical materialist point of view, we regard the building of socialist material and spiritual civilization today as laying the foundation for the fine edifice of communism, we will feel that communism is not something distant, but realistic. Moreover, once we have lofty goals and a powerful ideological motive force, we will use our brains and hands to realize our magnificent goals.

In building socialism, it is necessary for people to foster communist ideology. The spirit to create, struggle and sacrifice reflected by our heroes, models and advanced elements on various fronts radiates the light of communist ideology. Our party will use communist ideology to educate the people and encourage them to approach study, work and life in the communist spirit, to resist the corrosive influence of capitalist ideology, to abandon the egotistical philosophy which maintains that "men die in pursuit of wealth and birds in pursuit of food," to gradually acquire a communist outlook on life and to consciously struggle for the most magnificent ideal of mankind.

Advocating the communist spirit does not mean asking all members of the society to do only voluntary labor without remuneration. "To each according to his work" is a socialist principle that must be seriously implemented. We must not repeat the mistake of blowing a "communist wind," such as "egalitarianism and indiscriminate requisitioning." We must not practice egalitarianism under the name of "communist style" either. On the other hand, in our socialist country, money should not be the criterion of everything. As the masters of our socialist country, we must unswervingly look forward to the magnificent goal of communism, do our little bit to help build the communist edifice and bring benefit to the broad people and our future generations. Only by so doing can we promote the triumphant advance of the four modernizations and attain communism at an earlier date.

There is a great word on our marching flag. It reads: "Communism!"

There is a beautiful song forever in our heart. Its words: "The Internationale shall be the human race!"

EDITORIAL ON LEARNING FROM MODEL CPC MEMBER

[Editorial: "Our Cause Needs Such Communist Party Members"]

[Text] How is a Communist Party member to live up to the expectations of the people and be worthy of the glorious name of a communist? The lifelong struggle of model Communist Party member Zhao Chune gives a loud and clear reply. After reading the report on her glorious deeds, who would not be deeply touched by such lofty communist thinking as hers and by her spirit of utter devotion to serving the people? She left behind precious spiritual wealth for the whole party and people throughout the country.

Comrade Zhao Chune was an ordinary worker. Throughout her life, she did not carry out any earthshaking heroic undertakings but showed a communist fighter's dazzlingly brilliant thinking, character, morality and sentiment at an obscure and ordinary post. "I will dedicate my life to the cause of communism" was not just a solemn pledge she made while joining the party but was also the great ambition she always cherished. "Be a communist worthy of the name" was not only a fine aspiration she cherished but was also the staff by which she measured her own words and deeds. She had her ideals and pursuits. Her ideals and pursuits were immensely loftier than the targets in the eyes of those people who give first place to their personal interests and vie with others for petty profits.

The ideal of communism occupied the supreme place in her thoughts. She completely immersed herself in this great cause and always showed the communist spirit of attaching primary importance to the revolution, work and other people. These are precisely the finest and indispensable qualities of every Communist Party member.

Comrade Zhao Chune's lofty aspiration for fighting all her life for the cause of communism was embodied through her concrete practice of serving the people. To serve the people wholeheartedly is the purpose of our party. With the exception of working in the interests of the working class and the great majority of the people, our party has no special interests of its own. A Communist Party member who deviates from this purpose is not qualified to be called a proletarian vanguard fighter -- a title of honor. The masses of people test our party and our party members through this point. Zhao Chune had many outstanding qualities that are worth studying, her most outstanding quality being her spirit of doing solid work. The life of a coalyard worker is hard and some people dislike and avoid such work. However, Zhao Chune treasured her post at the coalyard and regarded it as a post for serving the people. She always integrated her work with the socialist cause and with the needs of tens of thousands of households. She did not avoid dirty things and was not afraid of fatigue. Her only anxiety was that she had not done enough or that she could not meet the needs of the masses of people. Even at a time when she was suffering from a severe and lingering illness and nearing the end of her life, her only demand was still that the organization should "allow me to go to work." In her view, it is imperative to unreservedly and wholeheartedly carry out all tasks that are "done for the people." Being covered all over with coal dust and holding a key for the person on duty, she served the people to her last breath. Zhao Chune used her own activities to write vital teaching materials on proper ways to become a Communist Party member. The masses of people have achieved an understanding of our party through party members like Zhao Chune. Our party is proud to have had Zhao Chune who was such a loyal daughter! Those Communist Party members who pay lipservice to serving the people and do not hesitate to infringe upon the people's interests in seeking their personal interests are bogus communists and their activities can only bring shame on our party!

Over the past few years, we have realized the shift in the focus of our work, stressed distribution according to work, adopted an open-door economic policy to enliven the national economy, and advocated the policy of allowing people to become rich first. All these measures are correct and necessary and have achieved tangible results. However, we would like to point out that not all types of enthusiasm are revolutionary and socialist. At present, some people are calling for "proceeding in all cases from the monetary point of view." They are also currently propagating the point that "men die in pursuit of wealth and birds die in pursuit of food" and are going in for the so-called "work according to remuneration." We must support and protect the masses who become rich through labor and struggle against anyone's activities that harm others in order to benefit oneself and seek private gain at public expense. Comrade Zhao Chune's deeds show once again that every Communist Party member, every CYL member and every advanced model figure must not rest content with distribution according to work but must first adopt a communist attitude toward work, which means giving no thought to remuneration, working selflessly and dedicating oneself, heart and soul, to the promotion of the people's interests.

The party needs party members like Zhao Chune!
The people need party members like Zhao Chune!
The cause of socialism needs party members like Zhao Chune!

All Communist Party members should take Zhao Chune as a model. Moreover, people of all nationalities throughout the country should also take Zhao Chune as a model. Let us all learn from Comrade Zhao Chune. All party members and CYL members and particularly leading cadres at all levels must regard Zhao Chune as a mirror for looking at their own shortcomings so as to try to catch up. We can surely do a better job of building our socialist material civilization and spiritual civilization and can surely achieve the goal of building a socialist powerful country with a high level of civilization and a high degree of democracy as long as we have more and more progressives like Zhao Chune within our revolutionary ranks!

TRADE UNION CIRCULAR ON LEARNING FROM ADVANCED

OW100119 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0225 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, 7 Aug (XINHUA) -- The All-China Federation of Trade Unions issued a circular yesterday calling on staff members and workers throughout the country to launch an extensive campaign to learn from Zhao Chune's communist spirit in order to develop a good social habit of learning from, and supporting, the advanced and striving to become advanced, and to continually strengthen their ranks.

The circular says Zhao Chune, all-China special-grade commercial model worker, Henan's model worker, model Communist Party member and model coal miner at Luoyang Municipality's Laoji coal mine, did an extraordinarly good job at her normal work post. She was an outstanding representative of the working class and an example to staff members and workers of the whole country.

The circular emphatically points out that Comrade Zhao Chune's spirit embodies the spirit of our time -- the communist spirit. In learning from Comrade Zhao Chune, we must follow her example of integrating noble revolutionary ideals with industriousness, loving her job, not working for fame or personal gain, fearing neither fatigue nor dirtiness, not dividing between "my job" and "your job" and her communist work style of serving the people wholeheartedly. We should learn from her communist work style of showing more concern for other people than for herself, doing good things wherever she went, doing everything for the people and doing good things all her life. We should learn from her sense of duty as master of her own country in cherishing state property and placing state and collective interests above everything else, and her spirit of hard struggle and frugality. We should learn from her noble quality of training young workers by personally setting a good example, treating them warmly and sincerely, educating them and passing on the true color and glorious tradition of the working class to the younger generation. We should learn from her spirit of never ceasing to fight and make sacrifices as long as she lived.

The circular says, launching a campaign to learn from Comrade Zhao Chune is, in essence, an education on communist ideology. It will play a great role in resisting the corrosive influence of capitalist ideology and other nonproletarian ideologies, in preserving and carrying forward the true color and glorious tradition of the working class, in promoting the "five stresses and four beauties" campaign, in turning the ranks of staff members and workers into a working contingent with revolutionary ideals, morality and discipline, modern technological knowledge, with unity and cooperation and in ensuring the smooth progress in building a socialist material civilization.

The circular says launching a campaign to learn from Comrade Zhao Chune will more effectively boost the mass activities to learn from, and catch up with, the advanced being undertaken in various areas and trades.

The circular calls on trade union organizations at all levels to mobilize and organize, in light of actual conditions, the masses of staff members and workers to really learn from Comrade Zhao Chune. The campaign must be carried out in a down-to-earth way, not just nominally after making a fanfare about it.

ARTICLE STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF BOYS OVER GIRLS

HK091318 Beijing GONGREN RIBAO in Chinese 4 Aug 82 p 3

[Article by Jie Gang [6043 0474]: "'Giving More Importance to Boys Than to Girls' Is Above Reproach"]

[Text] Recently, some press articles have been criticizing the idea of "giving more importance to boys than to girls." This is merely making a fuss over a trifling matter and is unimaginable. GONGREN RIBAO on 11 June published an article entitled "What Crime Does Giving Birth to a Girl Constitute?" denouncing Ji Chuanfa's action of maltreating his wife and discriminating against girls. Certainly, morally speaking, such people as Ji Chuanfa should be punished. Why has the "stubborn" idea of "giving more importance to boys than to girls" been inherited from one generation to another despite severe criticism over the past hundreds of centuries?

History is like a vast sea and irrational things will be eliminated by the great waves of historical trends. However, the fact that the "stubborn" idea of "giving more importance to boys than to girls" at present is widespread shows that it is correct and has full vitality. It cannot be simply explained by the phrase: "Feudal remnants have not been eliminated."

Long ago, during the clan commune era, a "matrilineal" society existed but later changed to a "patrilineal" society. This change reflected progress and showed that women are no good and must yield to men. Human society must always develop toward a more progressive orientation. Throughout history, achievements by women have been found in each era. However, only a very small number of women have had far-reaching ideals and breadth of vision or have made contributions to mankind. Such women account for less than 2 percent.

Therefore, I think "giving more importance to boys than to girls" is above reproach. "Men are respectable while women are petty and low" is an eternal truth. Why is it that up to now, children still take the surname of their father? Now that married couples are encouraged to have only one child, naturally it is right for them to want a boy rather than a girl. Boys are more useful because they make contributions to future society and continue the family line.

Editor's note: The question of having boys or girls is a common social problem that presently faces most families. This article by Comrade Jie Gang obviously bears the idea that "men are respectable while women are petty and low." Is this idea correct? If not, why? Readers are welcome to give their opinion.

CYL CIRCULAR CALLS FOR PATRIOTIC YOUTH EDUCATION

[Text] Beijing, 7 Aug (XINHUA) -- To greet the convening of the 12th CPC National Congress, the CYL Central Committee has issued a circular calling for CYL organizations at all levels throughout the country to conduct educational activities for "studying history, loving the motherland, being the party's fine sons and daughters and being shock workers in making China strong and prosperous" among young people. The circular calls on CYL members and other young people on the country's various fronts to work hard to make outstanding achievements.

The circular issued by the CYL Central Committee to CYL organizations at all levels calls for carrying out educational activities for ardently loving the motherland, the party and the socialist system. It points out: Proceeding from the study of history is a good, effective way to conduct education on the "three ardent loves," which is readily acceptable to young people. History is a mirror from which young people can understand society. The modern history of China, which is full of momentous events, is a very good textbook for conducting "three ardent loves" education. By studying modern Chinese history, young people can really understand the truth that without the Communist Party there would have been no New China and that only socialism can save China. The CYL Central Committee calls for CYL organizations at all levels to combine historical education with education on current events on this basis, and to solve some practical problems for young people in real life in order to enable them to strengthen their revolutionary spirit and their confidence in undertaking the four modernizations.

The CYL Central Committee points out that in such educational activities, CYL organizations at all levels should do the following four things well:

1. Give lectures on modern and contemporary Chinese history and the history of the party. Such lectures should be suited to local conditions and the needs of the audience. Many and varied lively educational methods should be used. Young people may be organized to read such books as "From the Opium War to the May 4th Movement" (published by the People's Publishing House), "The Motherland" (published by the China Youth Publishing House) and "An Analysis of the Question of the Superiority of Socialism" (published by the Tianjin People's Publishing House). Exhibitions and speaking, storytelling and singing meetings on historical knowledge may be held to give vivid historical education.

Where conditions permit, municipal, county, district and grassroots CYL committees may organize lecture teams of revolutionary elders, patriotic personages, scholars and professors to give lectures in which they can cite their personal experiences to educate young people. CYL members and other young people may be aroused to educate themselves by studying history.

2. Pay attention to educating young people with local historical data and teaching materials reflecting local conditions and suited to local needs. Modern Chinese history shows that while invading our country, imperialist powers left criminal evidence in many parts of our country and that there are many historical materials on the heroic struggle of our people in many localities. CYL members and other young people may be organized to visit historical sites or relics, to do research on historical facts or to acquaint themselves with the history of their localities, factories or villages so that historical education will serve the present better.

3. Organize young people to make social investigations. This is a good way to educate young people by comparing the past with the present. By making social investigations, young people should be enabled to understand New China's progress and the tremendous political and economic changes brought about by the party's lines, principles and policies since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee. Thus, from what they see and hear and from their personal experiences, young people will be able to see that the motherland is beloved, the party is great and the socialist road is bright.

4. Educate young people to "add luster to the motherland" and to demonstrate their patriotic zeal in building a socialist material civilization and socialist ethics. What is important in studying history is to turn one's patriotic zeal into action in bringing benefits to the people and winning honor for the country. CYL members and other young people on all fronts should strive to make outstanding achievements to greet the convening of the 12th CPC National Congress and the 11th CYL National Congress.

In its circular calling for extensively conducting "three ardent loves" education, the CYL Central Committee says: It is necessary to conduct "three ardent loves" education, an important content of the current ideological and political education for young people, in order to promote the deepening of "five stresses and four beauties" activities. CYL organizations at all levels should attach great importance to such education and conduct it well with a positive attitude and by surmounting difficulties. The stress of such education should be placed on the grassroots level, and every CYL branch should carry out activities for studying modern Chinese history or the history of the party and organize an "understand the motherland" visit or a discussion of "how I understand the motherland." It should also carry out activities for "adding luster to the motherland." It is necessary to give full play to the organizing role of CYL branches and the exemplary role of CYL members.

WAN LI, HU QIAOMU MEET WITH RURAL TEACHERS

OW092149 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1652 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, 9 Aug (XINHUA) -- Comrades Wan Li and Hu Qiaomu today held a discussion meeting with a delegation of the country's outstanding rural teachers visiting Beijing and addressed the meeting held in the small auditorium of the Great Hall of the People.

At the discussion meeting, Comrades Wan Li and Hu Qiaomu, on behalf of the CPC Central Committee, the State Council and the people of the whole country, first expressed their welcome and thanks to the outstanding teachers of rural middle schools and primary schools.

Comrade Hu Qiaomu happily said: You have done a great deal of arduous and valuable work for the people and accumulated rich experience for developing people's education and rural education. Many comrades among you, defying various hardships and dangers, have for a long time made circuits of outlying mountain regions to give lessons. Many comrades travel alone through the mountains and risk the danger of wild animal attacks, but you always persistently stay at your sacred workposts. This is a communist spirit, a spirit of defying personal danger to serve the people.

Hu Qiaomu emphasized: You are doing a very hard job and a very glorious job. You deserve gratitude and respect from the people throughout the country. We call on all comrades doing rural educational work in China to learn from you so that rural education throughout the country can take a big step forward.

Hu Qiaomu pointed out: The party Central Committee and the State Council always uphold the plan for implementing universal education in rural areas throughout the country. The rural areas are a key to universal education. The experience of the national outstanding rural teachers delegation shows that making primary education universal throughout the country is entirely necessary and possible. We must strive to follow the decision adopted by the CPC Central Committee and the State Council in December 1980 to make primary education universal throughout the country before the end of 1990. We demand that all provinces, municipalities, autonomous regions, prefectures and counties in China strive to achieve this objective.

Hu Qiaomu said: This objective can be completely achieved and difficulties are surmountable if we have determination, if all educational workers in the country learn from you, and if the party and government organizations at all levels in the country resolutely and fully support your work. We hope that all comrades doing rural educational work will work hard together to achieve this objective.

Hu Qiaomu said: In order to develop rural education, it is not only necessary to make primary education universal, it is also necessary to develop agricultural middle schools. This is an indispensable condition for accomplishing the four modernizations in China's vast rural areas, fundamental work to establish a socialist material and spiritual civilization and a great contribution to the building of a socialist new countryside.

Hu Qiaomu also pointed out: Generally speaking, the situation of China's rural education is very good, but in some localities the rural educational work is suffering some unnecessary losses. For instance, the student turnover is increasing, the teachers' pay is not rationally guaranteed and school buildings are not properly maintained and improved. Such problems should be solved step by step and this is a bounden duty of our party and our government.

Wan Li pointed out in his speech: Since the implementation of the system of responsibility for production in the rural areas, the production there has been developing in breadth and depth. Therefore, there is a pressing need for science and culture. For this reason, the peasants are particularly concerned about their children's education. This situation has brought a glorious task for the educational front: rural educational work must be done well. There are a few comrades who overlook rural educational work. This is entirely shortsighted and must be resolutely corrected.

Those who spoke at the meeting included Zhou Yumei, a teacher of the Dongbaye primary school in Xianglong County, Hebei Province; Zhu Guoxiang, deputy headmaster of the Longshan agricultural school in Xuyi County, Jiangsu; Duan Huating, dean of studies of the Chenzhai middle school in Dangshan County, Anhui; Song Guojiang, dean of students of the Zhanggang middle school in Tianmen County, Hebei; Yang Taizhong, a teacher of the Heishanbei school of Shihemu Commune in Huguan County, Shanxi; and Huang Shengxiang, headmaster of the Chenkeng primary school in Taining County, Fujian. They reported to the central leading comrades the situation of rural education and relevant problems and made suggestions on how to improve rural education.

The visit of the national delegation of oustanding rural teachers is cosponsored by the Ministry of Education and the All-China Educational Workers Union. This is the first visit ever organized since the founding of the People's Republic of China. In the delegation are 88 teachers from 29 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions. They are of Han, Tibetan, Uygur, Kazak, Hui, Zhuang, Miao and Korean nationalities. From 27 July to 9 August, they listened to a report entitled: "Reform Rural Education To Serve the Socialist Construction in a Still Better Way" made by Zhang Changxian, secretary of the leading party group of the Ministry of Education; held a discussion meeting on rural education; summed up and exchanged their experiences in rural educational work; visited industrial, cultural and educational facilities and toured scenic spots in Beijing.

EDITORIAL ON IMPROVING INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS

HK100540 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 5 Aug 82 pp 1,4

[Editorial: "Major Emphasis Should Be Placed on Improving Quality and Increasing Variety of Industrial Products"]

[Text] In the first half of this year, industrial and communications production in our country steadily rose and the situation was favorable. With efforts made in the past few years, the work to revive the quality of products has basically been completed. The quality and variety of our country's industrial products have basically been restored to their original levels. In some aspects, they have exceeded products of the past. This has played an important role in improving the people's livelihood, improving the technical equipment of some sectors of the national economy, enlivening the market, increasing exports and increasing financial income. In the meantime, we should also be aware that phenomena such as not paying attention to the quality of products and the needs of the society, one-sidedly seeking output value and speed and not paying attention to social economic returns, are still common. Economic management departments and enterprise leaders must pay great attention to them.

Improving the quality and increasing the variety of products are in the basic interests of the four modernizations, the people's livelihood and the country's reputation. They are also important manifestations of socialist material and spiritual civilization. If the quality of products is poor and if the variety of products is not easily marketable, the interests of the masses will be impaired, social economic returns will not increase, a steady development speed cannot be acquired and there will not be much hope to vitalize industry and to build the four modernizations. Leading cadres at all levels and the broad masses of workers and staff members must have a clear understanding about this and must ideologically and in practice place primary importance on the work of improving the quality and increasing the variety of products.

The quality of existing products of our country's industry is not high and their variety is not complete. The development of new products is rather slow. This cannot meet the needs of the development of the socialist construction and the people's livelihood. Since last winter, the quality of many products has sometimes fluctuated and is not stable. The quality of some products tends to become poor. According to statistics, in checking the quality of 1,892 kinds of products of 28 provinces, municipalities and regions, products whose quality was stable or rose in the first quarter of this year accounted for 77 percent of the total when compared with the same period last year, and those that dropped accounted for 23 percent. In April and May, the quality of products of some provinces and regions continued to drop.

What is even more worthy of attention is that the quality of some famous brand products, products which were once of excellent quality and products of old factories with relatively good technical conditions has dropped, and on many occasions the products were returned and indemnity was claimed. Besides, up to now, no obvious change has been made in the situation of poor construction quality, parts missing in complete sets of equipment, poor transportation quality, great losses in handling and storing goods and poor service quality of post, telecommunications and commerce. It can thus be seen that improving quality and developing variety have indeed become a very urgent task of utmost importance in economic work at present.

The first thing necessary to bring about a remarkable change in poor quality and limited variety is to correct the guiding ideology. Bringing economic work into the orbit of increasing economic returns is a strategic turn in economic and construction work. Why is it that the idea of "paying attention to quantity and ignoring quality" has again appeared in many enterprises in a favorable situation where the production of heavy industry has begun to pick up and the production of light industry is developing at a relatively high speed? Why is it that the quality control systems which have already been established in some enterprises begin to slacken and service is no longer as enthusiastic as in the past? The basic reason is that the guiding ideology, with increasing economic returns as the center, has not yet been firmly fostered in the minds of all economic workers, in particular, in the minds of some leading cadres. Some comrades also talk about increasing economic returns and "putting quality first" while they are actually still one-sidedly seeking output value, speed and even bonuses. It should be pointed out that improving the quality of products and developing market-oriented products is the basis for increasing social economic returns without mentioning quality and variety is merely empty talk divorced from reality. We must correctly handle the relationship between quantity and quality and increase quantity on the basis of improving quality in order to increase the speed of development while meeting the needs of the society and the end-users. We must resolutely overcome muddled ideas such as "output value and output are rigid quotas and quality and varieties are flexible quotas" and "salable products are good products." We must take increasing social economic returns and meeting the needs of the country and the people as the starting point and end results in organizing production, persist in "putting quality first" and "putting variety first" and really "seek actual economic returns and satisfy the end-users."

To raise the quality of products is not just to guarantee meeting the original quality standard but to bring about continuing changes in products and raise their level. This is not an expendiency but an important long-term task. Our country now has more than 20,000 kinds of mechanical and electric products. Their performance is backward. Those that urgently require renewal and abolition represent about 60 percent. More than 70 percent of light industrial products are at the levels of the 1950's or 1960's. Twenty percent are still at the levels of the 1930's or 1940's. The existing quality standards are in many cases lower than international levels. Changing this situation calls for cherishing the spirit of the foolish old man who removed the mountains and for making assiduous efforts for a long time to come. We must analyze existing conditions about quality and variety in a serious and overall manner, find out the gap between social needs and the output of an area, department or enterprise concerned, and study and formulate plans for improving quality and developing variety. We must seriously put the program for "three generations of products" on a solid basis. This means that we must improve on the existing generation, study the production of a new generation and do research preparatory to a new generation. The aim is to bring about a relatively big change in the quality and variety of products in the not-too-distant future.

A 1,000-li journey begins with the first step. All areas, departments and enterprises must first of all carry out an overall inspection of product quality and quality control. Guided by state plans and consumer needs, they must find out: Is the quality of their products up to standard? Is the variety the very thing in demand?

As far as guiding ideas are concerned, they must check whether they have firmly acquired such ideas as "focusing on improving economic returns," "quality first," and "being responsible to the people." In regard to management, they must check whether regulations and systems are perfect and being strictly enforced. They must check whether they have really achieved the aim of not producing those materials unfit for use, not using those semifinished products unfit for use, of not letting substandard finished products leave the factory, and of not taking into account the output value of products that are not up to standard. They must be serious and strict in making inspections. They cannot act recklessly and they cannot do so just for appearances sake. In inspecting things, they must not only take the initiative to act but must also welcome others to make an inspection. They must make problems known to the public, report the results of an inspection and the relevant proposed reform program at workers' congresses, and organize the masses to examine them and to carry out supervision. Meanwhile, they must solicit and listen to consumers' opinions and give full play to the supervisory role of public opinion in improving the quality of products and developing their variety. For average products, brand name products, or products that have won prizes, any problem involving quality must be solved within a given period of time. Concerning those prize-winning products whose quality has seriously slipped and whose improvement has not been completed within a given time limit, we must resolutely relieve them of their awarded titles for fine quality.

To pursue output value and awards, a small number of enterprises stained with evil capitalist practices have shortchanged others in regard to workmanship and quality, used substandard goods to pass for top value, and even resorted to deceit, wangling citations for supposedly good quality. This cannot be allowed under our socialist system. If problems of this kind are discovered, we must not leave them unsolved. Instead, we must focus attention on them and mete out due punishment to the party concerned. Those offenders in less serious cases must be subjected to criticism and education. In serious cases, the leaders concerned must be held responsible. In no way can we be indulgent toward them or even shield them.

At present, chaos marks the mangement of many enterprises. Their regulations and systems are less than perfect and are not enforced with enough enthusiasm. Insufficient attention is paid to labor discipline and industrial discipline. Equipment is often left in a bad state of disrepair. Inspection of things is not serious enough and quality control not strict enough, so that the quality of products keeps deteriorating. All enterprises must take the actual conditions of their own enterprises into consideration, and combine enterprise consolidation with the adoption of effective measures in regard to management, technology, and organization. They must perform various basic tasks in a down-to-earth manner, strengthen the control of quality in an overall way, improve their service attitude, and work hard to improve scientific and technological work. They must strive to bring the quality and variety of products to a new level.

RENMIN RIBAO ON INTERREGIONAL COOPERATION

[Article by Hou Yunchun [0186 7189 2504]: "Improve Regional Economic Cooperation by Making the Best Use of Local Conditions and Retaining the Advantages While Eliminating the Disadvantages"]

[Text] Interregional economic cooperation refers to the economic relations between the regions in which the parties concerned fill each other's needs, render each other aid, cooperation, benefits, interests and support including the interflow, sale or acquisition and mutual aid of funds, material resources and technology and also including transregional economic cooperation in the fields of production, circulation, science and research.

Interregional cooperation did not start today but its large-scale development began only during the last few years. At first, interregional cooperation was confined mainly to the exchange of material resources.

Certain enterprises would make use of their rich raw materials, fuels, machinery, equipment and surplus products and exchange them for the materials they needed from other enterprises. At that time, the scope of economic cooperation was small and was relatively unimportant. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee and following a series of reforms which aroused enthusiasm for production development on the part of the localities and enterprises, interregional economic cooperation has speedily developed. The scope of cooperation has been enlarged from the simple exchange of material resources to interflow and cooperation in various forms in the fields of finance, labor, production technology, management and control. The scope of cooperation has been extended from circulation to production and to science and technology and the extent of cooperation has likewise been enlarged from a single and piecemeal type of cooperation to one of an overall and vastly extensive scale. According to estimates, in 1981, the total amount of material resources involved in cooperation in the country was 3.3 billion yuan. Yunnan Province, whose economy has not been well developed, signed, in 1981, 178 cooperation projects with other provinces. More recently, at an invitation meeting for the joint development of Yunnan's economic and technical cooperation, the province contracted 144 technical cooperation and economic combination agreements with other provinces. As for organizational and leadership work, in the past it was carried out spontaneously by the enterprises themselves. Now, the provinces, or municipalities or districts, have evolved to become units sponsoring such cooperation, in an organized and planned manner and providing the necessary guidance. Many localities have formed economic cooperation offices under the direct leadership of the provincial people's governments and in this way unified and organized economic cooperation of an entire province with other provinces. In the past, cooperation relations used to be of a bilateral character and seldom were third parties involved. Now they have developed to become many-sided. Very frequently, a single project is now participated in by several provinces, municipalities and districts and one or more departments of the central government. Moreover, while formerly the character of the cooperation relationships was temporary, or for one single occasion only and could break up at any time, now the relations tend to become longterm and secure in character. Certain provinces and municipalities have actually signed formal agreements in order to establish long-term and stable cooperation relationships. The various forms of cooperation include: jointly-financed projects, running plants on a joint basis, domestic "compensation trade," joint development, joint production, cooperation in making parts, technical aid, transfer or sale of technology, and so on. In short, this seedling of economic cooperation is steadily growing and, following the development of the economic construction in our country, is destined to achieve further development.

Interregional cooperation economic is a new type of socialist economic relationship. Its emergence adds new vitality to our country's economic development. It opens up a new and vast horizon and is playing an increasingly important role in enlivening the economy and fully displaying the enthusiasm of the localities and undertakings.

The development of interregional economic cooperation displays the superior points of the localities, plays up the advantages and avoids the disadvantages, and achieves joint development and common improvement. Our country has a vast territory but the technical level of the economy is extremely uneven between its constituent provinces and municipalities, while geographically the material resources are unevenly distributed. Due to certain historical and geographical causes, certain provinces and regions in the interior are rich in resources but backward economically and technologically, whereas certain provinces and municipalities along the coast are economically and technically advanced but are lacking in material resources. Generally speaking, the provinces and municipalities along the coast possess capital, technical knownhow and the processing capacity. They have rich experiences in management and operation. On the other hand, certain provinces and municipalities in the interior possess rich resources but, while much of their machinery and equipment is still not actually backward, they lack capital and technology. Thus, each and every locality has its own strong points and points of superiority but also has its own weak points and points of inferiority. The development of interregional cooperation enables the parties concerned to display their strong points and avoid their weak points.

Each thus offers what it has and displays its strong points; while those who have money offer money, those with goods offer goods, and those who have the technical knowhow offer their technical knowhow. In this way, all the parties concerned benefit and joint economic prosperity is fostered. For example, Guizhou Province is rich in phosphorous resources but lacks the funds to develop them. On the other hand, Hebei Province needs phosphorous rock badly but has no resources in the province. Consequently, the two provinces concluded an agreement for the joint mining of phosphorous resources according to which Hebei provided an investment of 5-10 million yuan while the other province undertook to supply 100,000 to 200,000 tons of phosphorous rock a year. In this way, the difficulties of both provinces were resolved.

Interregional economic cooperation is organized under the principle of equality, mutual benefit and voluntary combination. The measures adopted are principally economic ones. The parties in the cooperation have their own desires and reap what they need. Their economic responsibility and economic interests are directly linked together. The conditions for cooperation and the distribution of the benefits are in general relatively just and rational, and, while there may be some disparities, they have the consent of the parties concerned who have found them acceptable. This gives the parties a high sense of responsibility as well as a high degree of enthusiasm. In selecting the prospects for cooperation, they pay due attention to weighing the advantages and disadvantages, to studying the feasibility of each project, and to picking only the best. In the execution of the projects, the utmost efforts are usually exerted so that the benefits can be achieved swiftly. In 1980 the Echeng clock plant of Hubei Province concluded an agreement with the Shanghai clock and watch plant for jointly financing the manufacturing of "3-Circle" brand wooden clocks. The parties joined forces and devoted their utmost efforts to the project. The result was that in 1981 the profits increased by more than 500 percent over 1980 and the labor productivity rate was enhanced by nearly 200 percent.

Interregional cooperation strengthens the economic relations between the advanced regions and the backward ones, between the coastal areas and the interior, and between cities and towns which are the economic centers and their surrounding districts. It fosters the dissemination and transfer of advanced production technology and management experiences and helps to elevate the production technical level and the management level of the regions, thus fostering their economic development. The Anhui Bengbu citric acid plant received, on a "compensatory" basis, a new species of bacteria from the Shanghai industrial microbe research institute. This raised the acid-production rate of the plant by around 50 percent, and transformed the plant's deficit into a profit. Similarly, the Yichcang textile mill of Hubei Province engaged in economic and technical cooperation with the Shanghai textiles system. In a little over 2 years, it managed to increase the profits from each spindle from 1,915 yuan to 9,751 yuan, an increase of 400 percent. The first-grade products of Yichang textile mill increased from only 2 formerly to a total of 8. Its orginal backward appearance changed rapidly.

Interregional economic cooperation destroys the many horizontal and vertical regulations of old. It represents a challenge to the closed-door and self-formed management system of the departments of the various regions. It assists the regions and enterprises to overcome the natural economy ideology which strives for completeness in both big and small undertakings and disdains any aid from the outside. It leads them out of their small world, to make a penetrating study of the whole country, to spontaneously study the market and its demands, and thus to improve management and operations.

Although interregional cooperation has these many positive roles, it still meets with many problems in actual practice. Some of the cooperation projects competed with the state plan for resources, for transportation and for markets. Some of the units failed to exert any efforts to carry out the outward transfer of products set by the state. Some went so far as to retain and take hold of resources which were in short supply or intentionally lower the planned production base figure so that a margin was left for surplus production and thus for undertaking economic cooperation.

At the same time, most of the economic cooperation work in the past had resulted more or less spontaneously, and the parties concerned, afflicted by self-concern for their own interests and the position of their own regions, were frequently motivated by their own desires and neglected to take into consideration the overall balance of the country as a whole. In this way, there unavoidably appeared production and construction projects which looked workable from the local standpoint but unworkable when viewed from the country as a whole. By means of "cooperation," small undertakings, marked by a high consumption rate in production, low-quality products, poor economic effect and unmarketable goods that were in excessive supply, literally fought with big plants for "rice," for "firewood" or fuel and for markets. The small thus forced out the big while the inferior goods squeezed out the better ones. As a result, good steel could not be used to make the knife's edge and society's economic benefits were seriously damaged. Viewed from the country as a whole, the lack of planned guidance has aroused the quarters concerned to precipitate action. Production arrangements were made blindly as a result of which there were frequent incidents of overproduction of certain products. Moreover, at present a large amount of economic cooperation work is confined to the circulation sector and barter trade; that is to say, the exchange of goods for goods occupies a rather large proportion. The enterprises are forced to handle goods which they themselves really do not need in order to exchange them for goods which they need. This tends to aggravate an already tense situation in the supply of goods. Under the conditions of the state not yet having a relatively comprehensive policy and the caliber of general management work still failing to catch up with developments, improper practices, such as "going through the back door," giving parties and sending gifts, and collusion with official channels at various levels have occurred. Simultaneously, various kinds of economic criminal activities have become rampant; these include hording, speculation, cheating, price-raising and bribery in all its phases.

We must treat correctly the active role of interregional cooperation and the accompanying problems in its development. To ban it entirely, or not to engage in it at all, is not right. However, we cannot allow it to follow its own course of progress or to develop freely. The proper way is to make the best use of local conditions, retaining the advantages while eliminating the disadvantages. We must reinforce the planned guidance, management and control over it and study and try to solve its existing problems so that it can advance smoothly and in a healthy manner.

Indeed, we must reinforce planned guidance over interregional cooperation, but, while aiming at improvement, we must avoid the adoption of methods that may strangle it to death. The relatively more important projects should be incorporated into the state plan and the plans of the localities. An overall balance must be achieved in order to follow up closely with the various links of production, supply and marketing and to keep all the projects in step. As for the rather large number of small cooperation projects, the localities and the enterprises should be allowed to handle them themselves, subject to the provision that they do not violate the relevant legal statutes of the state. The state should provide reports and forecasts on market conditions and on the general situation of supply and demand. It should supply timely intelligence reports to enable people to grasp the overall situation. At the same time, it should resort to such economic levers as taxation, credit and loans and pricing to do the necessary regulatory and readjusting work. The dominant theme at the moment should be to guide and transfer the current interregional cooperation work from the circulation sector to the production and scientific research sectors, from blindly engaging in the production of goods which are highly profitable but involve heavy taxation to producing more of those goods that are marketable and conform to the needs of production and the people's lives, and from the establishment of new plants or engaging in new construction and a general dependence on expanding the production capacity by extension to doing a good job of renewing the equipment and the technical restructuring of the old plants and tapping the latent production potentials of the existing enterprises.

Those regions, departments and enterprises engaging in economic cooperation must establish the ideology of treating the whole country as one chessboard.

They must correctly handle the relationship between developing economic cooperation and the execution of the state plan, must firmly place the state plan in the first place, and ensure the overall fulfillment of the directions of the state concerning the volume of output, product specifications, product quality, consumption of materials and fuels, taxation, profits and outward transference of products. In the event of any contradiction between interregional cooperation and the national plan, the national plan should unconditionally take precedence. Indeed we must not put the cart before the horse or indulge in trifles and lose the big stakes. No unit should, under any pretext, refuse to carry out the state plan, far less convert state properties into its own. Viewed from the country's standpoint, the enterprises and localities should be allowed to share and to readjust among themselves their surpluses and shortages, these include products turned out in excess of the plan, savings in raw materials and fuels in the course of production, idle machinery and equipment, and materials and funds reserved for use or disposal by the enterprises according to regulations. Even in the case of materials which are sorely needed by the state but are in short supply, the enterprises and regions should be allowed to retain a definite percentage of their surplus production so that the enterprises and regions may make good use of them to promote economic cooperation.

We should formulate a set of policy regulations and economic statutes covering economic cooperation so that the units concerned may have some basis to work on. At the same time, the management, examination and supervision of economic cooperation work must be augmented. Proper economic cooperation must be protected and supported while all irregular practices in operation work must be rectified. Economic criminal activities really aiming at wreaking havoc, under the pretense of cooperation, should be sternly dealt with. Concerning the various aspects of cooperation, contracts signed should command high priority and respect, promised credit must be provided, and all obligations under the cooperation agreement must be rigidly carried out. The state should set up a relevant organ, or entrust some prestigious organization, to act as assessors or mediators, to help to solve problems and to regulate the economic benefits of the parties concerned.

The principle of equality and mutual benefit must be thoroughly implemented. On the one hand, we must oppose departmentalism and localism and break open the economic blockades and technical blockades. On the other hand, we must correctly handle the three-sided relationship of responsibility, authority and interests of the parties concerned under the cooperation agreement, so that each will take up its responsibility and share the benefits. Judging from the practical experience of the various localities, compensatory cooperation reaps more benefits than noncompensatory cooperation. Its superior points consist of strengthening the sense of economic responsibility on the part of the cooperative parties concerned. It promotes business accounting in the enterprises and effectively rectifies the evils of "eating from the same pot." At the same time, it has the advantages of less being spent, but faster and better economic benefits being reaped. Naturally, in fostering compensatory cooperation, we must pay due attention to displaying good work style and the spirit of mutual assistance and aid. Only in this way can economic cooperation follow the correct road to smooth and healthy development.

PEASANT INCOME INCREASES IN POOREST AREAS

OW091912 Beijing XINHUA in English 1602 GMT 9 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing, August 9 (XINHUA) -- The current policy of encouraging the rural population to achieve prosperity through collective and individual labor has resulted in income increases for peasants in 12 farming areas classified by the State Council as the poorest in the country, according to the State Statistical Bureau.

The bureau's figures, released to XINHUA, also indicate improvement in the living standards of peasants in these areas, covering a total of 241 counties, more than 10 percent of the counties in China.

Peasants in the 12 areas drew from their collectives an average income of 82.6 yuan last year, compared to 51.5 yuan in 1978 before the policy of encouraging rural prosperity became official. The State Statistical Bureau made a sample investigation of 949 families in 23 counties. The survey shows that in 1981 these families drew a net income of 177.87 yuan per capita from the agricultural sector of the collectives, rural sidelines and other sources. This figure registers an increase of 77.48 yuan over 1978.

The same investigation also shows that in 1981 each person in these families spent an average of 93.7 yuan on food, an increase of 30.6 percent over 1978. The percentage of food cost to the total personal expenditures dropped from 72.7 percent to 65.6 percent, indicating that people were spending more on clothing and manufactured goods.

In the Chinese countryside, households with an annual income of about 100 yuan per capita are considered well-to-do, since prices are low and stable for essentials and housing is tax free.

Disaster-stricken, the 12 areas with poor soil and lack of transport facilities were classified by the State Council as the poorest in China for their inability to produce enough food grain for their own population. Conditions of peasants in these areas went from bad to worse in the Cultural Revolution years when, under the ultra-left policies, any attempt to help peasants better themselves was condemned as encouraging a spontaneous drift towards capitalism.

The State Statistical Bureau attributes the changes that have taken place in these areas to the institution of the job responsibility system, under which production is undertaken on a household basis and payment is made according to output.

For the first time in many years, the bureau says, peasants are allowed to grow the kind of crops best suited to local conditions while taking the state planning as the guidance.

As a result better harvests have been reported in many of the 12 areas, the bureau says. In 1981, for example, the total output of grain in these areas was up 1.8 percent compared to 1978, even though the total area sown to grain crops dropped by 6.9 percent.

Cotton output in these regions increased four fold during the 1978-81 period, although the areas planted to cotton was expanded by only 46 percent. The increase for the output of oil-bearing crops was 120 percent, while the sown acreage was expanded by 36.4 percent, according to the bureau.

In 1981 the total expenditures of the basic accounting units of the people's communes in the 241 counties accounted for 25.5 percent of their total income, as against 34.1 percent in 1978. Meanwhile, turnovers rose from 193 yuan to 291.7 yuan for every 100 yuan invested.

The 12 areas are northwestern Shanxi, northwestern Shandong, eastern Henan, western Henan, western Hubei, northern Shaanxi, southern Shaanxi, central Gansu, the Xiji-Haiyuan-Guyuan area of the Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region and remote areas of Sichuan, Guizhou and Yunnan Provinces.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT REPORTED BETTER COORDINATED

[Text] Beijing, August 9 (XINHUA) -- Following over three years of economic readjustment, the principal sectors of China's economy -- agriculture, light industry and heavy industry -- now show better coordinated development.

Since the readjustment started in 1979, the central authorities adopted measures and policies to speed up the growth of agriculture and light industry and restrain the pace of some sectors of the heavy industry.

In the three years from 1979-1981, total agricultural output value showed an average annual growth rate of 5.6 percent. Light industry rose at an annual rate of 14 percent. Both showed the highest growth rate since 1952, at the end of the three-year rehabilitation of the national economy following China's liberation in 1949. Heavy industry increased at an average annual rate of 1.4 percent between 1979 and 1981.

Prior to this, the lopsided emphasis on heavy industry resulted in disproportionate development of the various sectors of the national economy and inadequate supply of some manufactured goods and meat, eggs and other non-staple food.

Agriculture and light industry last year rose to account for 63.5 percent of the gross agricultural and industrial output value as against 57.4 percent in 1978. The proportion taken up by heavy industry dropped from the 42.6 percent in 1978 to 36.5 percent.

The light and heavy industries turned out more products needed by the people and for socialist construction. Grain production has been rising steadily, with still bigger increases in cotton, oil-bearing crops, sugarbeet and sugarcane, cocoons, poultry, pork, beef and mutton. The percentage of forestry, animal husbandry, fishery and other sidelines in the gross agricultural output value rose to 35.9 percent in 1981 as compared with 32.2 percent in 1978.

The brickness [as received] of the home market is about the best in the last 30 years. Supply of foodstuffs and manufactured goods for daily use is ample. Rationing has been lifted on many goods that used to be available in limited quantities.

The growth of agriculture has provided more raw materials for light industry, which in turn, has turned out more profit for undertaking capital construction, according to the State Statistical Bureau. The growth of these two sectors of the national economy has provided a more solid base for heavy industrial growth. China's heavy industry, which dropped in 1981, rose by 9.7 percent in the first seven months of this year.

EAST CHINA SEA WELL YIELDS FIRST NATURAL GAS

OW051912 Beijing XINHUA in English 1525 GMT 5 Aug 82

[Text] Shanghai, August 5 (XINHUA) -- China has for the first time obtained natural gas flows from one of its exploration wells in the East China Sea Basin, which is part of its continental shelf.

Natural gas flows kept erupting from the Longjing No 2 well some 460 kilometers southeast of Shanghai from 1030 hours yesterday to 1700 hours today, when the well was put to an oil test. The well, 81.5 meters under water and 4,227.86 meters in depth, is the deepest well that China has sunk in the East China Sea Basin.

Three exploration wells have been sunk in the East China Sea Basin, which is regarded by experts as one of the most promising of China's six off-shore basins with oil and gas potential. The East China Sea Basin, with an area of 460,000 square kilometers, is also the largest of the six on China's continental shelf. Oil prospecting efforts began in 1974 in the East China Sea area, about 770,000 square kilometers in size.

HAN PEIXIN ATTENDS JIANGSU ANTIFLOOD MEETING

OW100825 Nanjing XINHUA RIBAO in Chinese 29 Jul 82 p 1

[Excerpts] The Jiangsu Provincial People's Government called a meeting on 25 July to analyze and sum up past experience in preventing and combating flood and waterlogging and lowering floodwaters and to make arrangements for future tasks. Acting Governor Han Peixin and Vice Governors Jin Xun and Li Zhizhong addressed the meeting.

The meeting pointed out that since 9 July a vast area in Jiangsu has been hit by torrential rains. Because of the hard efforts of the people of the whole province and the close coordination of all departments, we have scored initial victory in the struggle to combat the natural disaster. However, we cannot yet slacken our efforts, for some areas remain waterlogged and the danger still exists.

The meeting called especially on the broad masses of office cadres to enhance their revolutionary enthusiasm and sense of responsibility and to take the initiative by trying their best and preparing for the worst. It is necessary to conscientiously change the work style and raise efficiency. Leaders must go to the frontline so as to understand the situation and solve problems in good time.

It is necessary to make adequate arrangements for the production and livelihood of the people in the disaster-stricken areas. It is also necessary to use the limited funds where they are needed most and to prevent them from being distributed in an egalitarian manner, wasted and misappropriated.

BAI DONGCAI ON JIANGXI ECONOMIC CRIME CRACKDOWN

OW030536 Nanchang Jiangxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 2 Aug 82

[Excerpts] According to a JIANGXI RIBAO report, it is necessary to concentrate efforts, overcome all interference and achieve more in cracking down on major economic crimes in August to deepen the struggle against serious economic crimes. This was the demand set by the Jiangxi Provincial CPC Committee at a recent discussion meeting of secretaries of prefectural and municipal party committees. At the meeting, the participants studied the guidelines of relevant meetings held by the central authorities and listened to a report made by (Wang Jie), deputy secretary of the Discipline Inspection Commission under the Jiangxi provincial party committee, on the struggle against serious economic crimes in Jiangxi in the first half of 1982 and on the future work plan. Speeches were delivered at the meeting by Fang Zhichun, standing committee member of the Discipline Inspection Commission and chairman of the Jiangxi Provincial CPPCC Committee, and Di Sheng, deputy secretary of the provincial party committee. Bai Dongcai, permanent secretary of the provincial party committee, gave instructions on how to seriously study and implement the guidelines of the relevant meetings held by the central authorities, make efforts to crack down on serious economic crimes and further deepen the struggle.

The meeting held: Since the beginning of this year, the party committees at all levels in Jiangxi Province, seriously adhering to the directives and guidelines issued by the party Central Committee and the State Council, have waged the struggle against serious economic crimes in the province and have made great achievements. The struggle is being gradually deepened. However, the development of the struggle is uneven and the efforts to crack down on the crimes are not concentrated enough. The stress of the struggle is not duly placed, resulting in slow progress of the investigation and handling of major cases.

The meeting pointed out: The key to deepening the struggle is to concentrate efforts on cracking down on serious crimes. It is necessary to adhere to the principle of seeking truth from facts, conduct studies and investigations in a penetrating way and accurately know the party's policies. Criminal cases should be handled strictly according to law.

The meeting held: The struggle against serious economic crimes is one of the political guarantees for attaining the great goal of building a modern and powerful socialist country. The party committees at all levels and all party members and cadres should act with greater enthusiasm, enhance the achievements, find out shortcomings and make the proper emphasis. They should make persistent efforts to win new and greater victories on the basis of their accomplishments and carry the struggle between corruption and anti-corruption through to the end.

SHANDONG URGES BETTER ENTERPRISE IDEOLOGICAL WORK

SK290930 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] According to our sources, the Shandong provincial enterprise ideological and political work conference sponsored by the provincial CPC committee and the provincial people's government concluded on 28 July. The conference implemented a series of important instructions given by the CPC Central Committee and the State Council in regard to doing a good job in conducting ideological and political work and discussed tasks, targets and ways for making further efforts to strengthen ideological and political work among enterprises in the new historical period. The conference stressed that efforts should be made to adopt measures for simultaneously building the two civilizations -- while doing a good job in building a material civilization, earnest efforts should be made in successfully building a spiritual civilization.

Attending the conference opening on 23 July were responsible persons from party committees of various prefectures and municipalities and from various prefectural-level cities; responsible comrades from prefectural and municipal level commissions of economy, finance and construction, departments of organization and propaganda, trade union and CYL committees, as well as from these organizations in cities under the prefectural level; and responsible personnel from the Jinan municipal railway bureau, the Qilu petrochemical general company, the Shengli oilfields, the Laiwu iron and steel mill, the provincial-level departments concerned and from a number of major enterprises -- over 320 persons in all.

During the conference, Su Yiran, secretary of the provincial CPC committee and governor of the province, delivered a report in which he analyzed the situation prevailing in conducting ideological and political work among enterprises in the province and emphatically elucidated the importance and role of ideological and political work in the new historical period. He pointed out: Whether or not we strengthen ideological and political work among enterprises has a direct bearing on whether enterprises are able to uphold the four basic principles, to bring up a staff and worker contingent both expert and red and full of fighting will, to upgrade economic returns to a maximum and to build themselves as strongholds in creating material and spiritual civilizations. It is a basic and unshakable principle that political work is the lifeblood of all economic work and that the building of spiritual civilization is a fundamental guarantee for the building of material civilization, which we should always bear in mind at all times and under all circumstances.

In his report, Comrade Su Yiran noted: The fundamental task for enterprises in conducting ideological and political work is that, according to the instructions given by the CPC Central Committee, they should conduct education on patriotism, collectivism and communism among their staff and workers and train them to be individuals who are full of ideals, morality and cultural knowledge and well disciplined. This is a long-term and arduous task. Efforts should be made to constantly conduct this work by proceeding from the actual situation, integrating the work with tasks and demands set in different periods and focusing on one or two tasks set in a specific period.

Comrade Su Yiran pointed out: A decisive factor for success in conducting ideological and political work among enterprises is to do a good job in dealing with mental problems among leading cadres. The key to successfully enhancing ideological and political work among enterprises lies in success in consolidating party organizations at the grassroots level. He stressed: It is necessary to regard the task to conduct education among young staff and workers as the focal point of conducting ideological and political work among enterprises. In conducting ideological and political work among enterprises, it is imperative to uphold the mass line and correct guideline and method.

In concluding his report, Comrade Su Yiran stressed: It is necessary to strengthen the party's leadership over ideological and political work in enterprises. According to the fundamental principles of exercising party committees' collective leadership and enacting staff and worker democratic management and plant chiefs' administrative command, it is necessary to improve enterprise leading systems and successfully deal in a down-to-earth manner with the division of duties between the party committee and the people's government. Party organizations in enterprises should concentrate on party building, on implementation of the party's line, principles and policies, on endeavoring to conduct ideological and political work and on tasks of conduct education in bringing up a staff and worker contingent.

During the conference, participants earnestly discussed Comrade Su Yiran's report. Representatives from the eight industrial and communications enterprises and units, the five financial and trade enterprises, the two construction units, a trade union unit and a CYL committee unit introduced their experience gained in strengthening ideological and political work and in conducting mass and youth work.

CHEN GUODONG HANDLES PARTS SHORTAGE IN SHANGHAI

[Excerpts] On 21 July Chen Guodong, first secretary of the Shanghai Municipal CCP Committee, and Wang Daohan, mayor of Shanghai Municipality, separately issued written instructions on the problem of shortage of farm machinery parts, calling on the municipal agricultural commission, the municipal economic commission and the municipal farm machinery bureau to consult with each other and jointly work out solutions to this problem.

During this year's busy season of rush-planting, rush-harvesting and rush-field management, suburban areas of the municipality were short of some 113 farm machinery parts. Pesticides, which are in great demand during the busy season of rush-planting, rush-harvesting and rush-field management, are also seriously in short supply this year.

Since the leading comrades of the municipal party committee and the municipal government issued the written instructions, the departments concerned have concentrated efforts on working out solutions to this problem. However, it will still take some time before there will be sufficient supply to meet the demand. In this connection, various circles have been called on to render vigorous support and help in overcoming this problem.

WANG DAOHAN LEADS SHANGHAI BETTER-PRODUCT DRIVE

[Excerpts] On 10 and 22 July responsible comrades of Shanghai City's planning commission, economic commission, finance office and industry, commerce, finance, price and other bureaus, led by Mayor Wang Daohan and Vice Mayors Han Zheyi, Chen Jinhua and Pei Xianbai, visited the general merchandise and knit and cotton goods variety and quality comparison exhibition to hold discussions and solve problems on the spot.

In the past few years, there has been intense competition in the market. Some articles for everyday use manufactured in Shanghai are facing increasingly serious challenges. Many fraternal provinces and cities, like latecomers surpassing the oldtimers, are producing goods which are new, good looking, of solid quality and reasonably priced. In contrast, some Shanghai-produced goods have problems in both variety and quality and are not competitive. Some of the problems involve rather many departments, and some concern economic policies. Although industry and commerce departments have held numerous discussions, the problems stillhave not been properly solved. Recently the commercial departments sponsored the general merchandise and knit and cotton goods variety and quality comparison exhibition, comparing product samples to show the problems involved and providing detailed written explanations on why the problems could not be resolved in good time and so on. The exhibition caught the attention of the leadership of the municipal government. They led the responsible comrades of the commissions, offices and bureaus concerned to the exhibition, held on-the-spot meetings, listened to the opinions of all parties concerned about the problems, carried out concrete discussions and studies and solved some problems on the spot. The leading comrades of the municipal government emphatically pointed out: At present there is fierce competition in the market. This is a good thing. Some goods produced elsewhere have caught up or surpassed the goods made in Shanghai in quality, variety and [word indistinct], and this has given Shanghai a powerful push forward.

Although the two on-the-spot meetings solved some problems, the were just a beginning. It is hoped that the departments concerned will, on the basis of investigation and study, continue to "diagnose" the ills of the key troubled industries and products one by one and decide on relevant measures to deal with them.

SHANGHAI EFFORTS TO PROMOTE EXPORTS REPORTED

OW030057 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0110 GMT 2 Aug 82

[Excerpts] Shanghai, 2 Aug (XINHUA) -- While the international market is in a slump, the foreign trade department of Shanghai Municipality is making all efforts to improve service and be active in export trade this year. The amount of export trade handled by the Shanghai foreign trade department in the first half of this year was basically the same as the all-time-high amount of the first half of 1981, although some commodities were allocated to other provinces for export. In the first half of 1982, Shanghai procured 10.9 percent more commodities for export than in the first half of 1981. At present, Shanghai is exporting more than 1,000 kinds of commodities to more than 160 countries and regions. The foreign trade department's primary practices are:

-- To strive to conclude more deals involving major commodities through routine exchanges of letters and telegrams; give timely replies to customers' inquiries; make timely shipments of commodities after the conclusion of a deal; take the initiative to contact by telegram the customers in major countries and regions and send them samples to facilitate their selection and ordering.

-- To send trade groups abroad to hold business talks. Since the beginning of this year, Shanghai has sent more than 40 trade groups to promote sales of commodities in eight major categories, including silk, handicraft goods, animal husbandary products, chemical products and machinery, in more than 70 countries and regions.

-- To improve the reception of and service to foreign customers visiting Shanghai. Shanghai has expedited shipment of such commodities as handkerchiefs, some textile goods and some food. In the first 6 months of this year, some 53,000 tons of commodities were shipped out in containers, showing a 58-percent increase in container shipments as compared with the corresponding period of 1981 and shortening the transport time by nearly one-third.

-- To improve contract management and increase the rate of contract fulfillment.

Shanghai is also engaged in joint ventures with foreign businessmen, and has set up the "Shanghai Handicraft Goods Company, Ltd" in Geneva, Switzerland and opened a branch in Zurich. The stores sell more than 140 commodities in 30 major categories, such as pearl necklaces, porcelain, lacqerware, jade and rugs. In the first 6 months of this year, the sales of the commodities of those 30 categories at the overseas retail departments greatly increased as compared with last year and they earned three times as much profits as last year.

GUANGZHOU CPC COMMITTEE VIEWS PARTY BUILDING

HK051444 Guangzhou GUANGZHOU RIBAO in Chinese 29 Jul 82 pp 1, 3

[Report: "Guangzhou Municipal CPC Committee Holds Enlarged Standing Committee Meeting"]

[Text] The Guangzhou Municipal CPC Committee held an enlarged standing committee meeting on 26 and 27 July. The meeting discussed how to step up the undertaking of the three tasks for the present party building and made some relevant arrangements. It required the CPC committees and leading cadres at various levels to boost their spirit, work hard and make greater achievements in the building of material and spiritual civilizations so as to greet the successful opening of the party's 12th national congress.

Among the 267 participants were members of the Guangzhou Municipal CPC Committee Standing Committee and responsible comrades of various departments, committees, offices, districts, counties, bureaus and major factories. Liang Lingguang, first secretary of the municipal CPC committee, presided over the meeting.

The meeting conveyed and studied the instructions of the central leading comrades on party building, studied and discussed the circular of the CPC Central Committee Organization Department on the "summary of the forum on strengthening the organization work of the party organizations at primary levels" and discussed and studied such problems as how to do a good job in recommending and selecting cadres for the leading bodies, how to rectify the party's work style and how to strengthen and reorganize the party organizations at the primary levels.

The meeting was held that relatively greater achievements were scored in the first half of this year in our municipal work concerning party building. At present, the political and economic situation in this city is very good; social order is relatively good; ideological and political work has been enhanced; the party's work style, the social atmosphere and public order are continuously taking a turn for the better; and the national economy is steadily developing in an all-round way. All this is part of the achievements of strengthening party building. We must make the best use of the present time and do a good job in undertaking the following three tasks in a planned way and with prominence given to some problems: 1) Boldly recommend and select cadres who are capable of making a breakthrough to the leading bodies. 2) Starting with some prominent problems in this city, further rectify the party's work style. 3) Feasibly consolidate party organizations at the primary levels and enhance the fighting power of the party.

The meeting pointed out that boldly selecting and promoting cadres who are capable of making a breakthrough according to the requirements of being revolutionary, young, better educated and more professional so that they can shoulder heavy leadership tasks in various departments at various levels is a very important guiding ideology of the CPC Central Committee in streamlining administration and reorganizing leading bodies. It is also an important strategic measure to make the leading bodies suit the needs of the political tasks in the new historical period and to ensure that the construction of the socialist modernizations is realized smoothly.

The meeting stressed that in recommending and selecting outstanding young and middle-aged cadres, it is necessary to correctly grasp the criterion of having both ability and political integrity. Boldly selecting and promoting cadres who are capable of making a breakthrough so that they can shoulder the heavy tasks of leadership in various departments at various levels is greatly encouraged. The cadres who are capable of making a breakthrough mentioned here should not be those who do things rashly and blindly or those empty talkers who have accomplished nothing, but should be firm, sober-minded and capable Marxists. In order to fulfill this task, we must be resolute in following two aspects: One is to resolutely find and recommend those outstanding young and middle-aged cadres who meet the required standards and promote the cadres who have a high political sense and original views, and who are capable, hard-working and in the prime of life, to the leading posts.

The other is to resolutely prevent the sneaking into the leading bodies of a handful of smash-and-grabbers, those who made their fortunes through "rebellion" and those who have been seriously influenced by factionalism, as well as those who have seriously violated party discipline in a political sense or committed serious economic crimes in recent years. Those with such characteristics who are already in the leading posts must be discharged without hesitation.

The meeting held that some initial achievements have been scored over the past 6 months or so by various departments, committees and offices at the municipal level in the work of recommending and selecting outstanding young and middle-aged cadres to the leading bodies. Of the 22 municipal departments, committees and offices, 16 have done well in this work and more than 120 young and middle-aged cadres have been recommended. Through this activity the members in the leading bodies have been examined and given a relatively fair appraisal of their work. The ties between the leading members and the led have been strengthened and a number of outstanding and talented people have been discovered. This has provided an important basis for the readjustment of the leading bodies. However, this work has not been carried out in various districts, counties and most bureaus and companies. Compared with other fraternal cities and prefectures, our city is still behind. Therefore, in accordance with the demands of the provincial CPC committee, we must try to catch up with the advanced and strive to finish the work at the bureau, district and county levels by the end of the third quarter of the year and finish the work at the company level by the end of the fourth quarter. The readjustment of the leading bodies at the primary level can be carried out when the overall consolidation work is conducted. While doing a good job in selecting outstanding young and middle-aged cadres, it is also necessary to do a good job in making proper arrangements for the placement of veteran cadres and pay serious attention to giving play to their role.

The meeting held that since the beginning of this year, the party organizations at various levels in Guangzhou have done a lot of work to strive for an effective favorable turn in the party's work style. Judging from the overall situation in this city, the party's work style has actually been improving step by step. However, we must not fail to see that it has not taken a fundamental turn for the better. In order to further improve the party's work style in this city, it is not only necessary to firmly grasp the examination and handling of some major and serious cases in the present struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field, but it is also necessary to check the unhealthy tendencies which are comparatively more serious, have affected the relationship between the party and the people and are much cared about by the masses. We must make up our minds to thoroughly check these unhealthy tendencies. First, the party members who have seriously violated economic laws and discipline must be seriously dealt with and their cases must be handled carefully. Those who must be punished by law and those who must be expelled from the party should be punished and expelled from the party without leniency so that the party organizations can be purified. While hitting at serious criminal activities in the economic field, it is necessary to effectively rectify the unhealthy tendencies in the economic field. By taking advantage of their positions and powers, their working conditions and the goods grasped in their hands, which are in short supply, some units and individuals have taken bribes, bought less expensive goods or even conducted covert acts of extortion. Some other people have extorted sales commissions and sought private gain at public expense in distributing some products to other units or people for processing, or in handling contract capital construction projects. These are somewhat common, but are serious problems which people hate very much but dare not point out directly for fear of retaliation. These practices are "ugly when they are talked about, but seem to be beneficial when they are done." In the struggle against these unhealthy tendencies, it is necessary to handle the cases as soon as they are discovered and mobilize the masses both within and outside the party to supervise our work.

We should never allow anyone to have his way in conducting unhealthy practices. We must have public trials of some exemplary cases so that "a hundred can be warned when one is punished." Second, it is necessary to deal with the unhealthy tendencies in the distribution of residential flats. Housing problems concern the immediate interests of the masses, so this is one of the problems about which people have shown great concern. The municipal CPC committee and the municipal people's government have repeatedly emphasized that in distributing residential flats built with state-allocated funds, priority should be given to "four kinds of people." The purpose is to provide timely help for those who are urgently in need of houses, not to provide those who already have a place to live in with extra luxuries. However, some units have gone their own way despite all this and have thus damaged the relations between the party and the people. All units must make an examination of their work of distributing residential flats over the past year or so and check the unhealthy tendencies in this respect. Third, it is necessary to check the unhealthy tendencies of violating financial discipline, recklessly giving bonuses and violating price policies. For the interests of the collectives, some units have violated financial discipline and recklessly given bonuses under all sorts of pretexts at the expense of the interests of the state. For the same purpose, some other units have sold substandard products as regular goods or driven up prices by changing some fixed prices into negotiated prices so as to shift financial burdens onto the customers. Some of them have even infringed upon the interests of the state and the masses through reselling what they have bought. This is not allowed by party discipline and state laws. We must organize forces to examine and seriously deal with some serious and exemplary cases so that party discipline can be enhanced and the broad masses of party members, cadres and people can be educated.

Referring to the grassroots party organizations in this city, the meeting held that most of them are good or comparatively good and are able to give play to their role as a powerful fighting force. However, because of the influence of the "10 years of chaos," the impurities in ideology, organization and work style still seriously exist within the party. Some party organizations and members have become selfish and are intent on nothing but profit, regardless of party discipline and state laws. Some of them have even been involved in such criminal activities as smuggling and selling smuggled goods, graft and taking bribes, speculating and swindling and exploiting others through contract work. Since they have become caught up in decadent capitalist ideologies, they have become degenerated. Some of the party organizayions and members have become weak and lax and do not care about party affairs. Some of them have become paralyzed or semi-paralyzed. This shows that it is imperative to do a good job in consolidating and reorganizing the grassroots party organizations, especially in consolidating and reorganizing those which have serious problems.

The meeting pointed out that the consolidation of the grassroots party organizations must be combined with the present central work. In the industrial and communications, financial, capital construction, science and technological units, this work should be regarded as an important component part of the overall reorganization and should be carried out simultaneously. In rural areas, it must be related to the work of summing up and perfecting the agricultural production responsibility systems. At present, the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field and the struggle against the corruption by capitalist ideas are being carried out in depth. It is necessary to relate the consolidation of grassroots party organizations with these struggles so that the party organizations and members will be more capable of resisting corruption and degeneration.

The meeting held that it is necessary to proceed from reality and grasp the focal point of work in consolidating grassroots party organizations. At present, the main task is to do a good job in reorganizing and building the leading bodies of grassroots CPC committees, general branches and branches so that the problems of weakness and laxness as well as the problems of being paralyzed or semi-paralyzed can be solved.

It is necessary to mainly carry out ideological education and raise consciousness. However, in order to maintain purity of our party's ranks, disciplinary measures should be resolutely taken against those members and cadres who are organizationally impure and have committed serious mistakes. As for a small number of party organizations which have actually become rotten, the CPC committees at the higher levels must send out staunch cadres or work groups to announce reorganization or dismissal of these organizations after a thorough investigation is made and through certain procedures for approval by the CPC committees at the higher levels, and establish new party organizations to replace them.

HENAN ISSUES COMFORT LETTER TO FLOOD FIGHTERS

HK070519 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 6 Aug 82

["Text" of comfort letter from Henan Provincial CCP Committee and Government issued 6 August to the army and people fighting floods and to the masses in disaster areas]

[Excerpts] Armymen and people fighting floods and carrying out crash-rescue work, and peasants, workers and cadres in the disaster areas: There have been torrential and phenomenal rains in the southern, western and northern parts of Henan since 12 July. From 12 to 20 July the Huai He, Hong He and Ru He in Xinyand and Zhumadian Prefectures rose sharply. From the evening of 29 July to 3 August, torrential and phenomenal rain fell in western and northern Henan. The maximum flow at Longmen on the Yi He reached 6,600 cubic meters per second, and at Baimasi station on the Luo He it reached 4,100 cubic meters per second, greatly exceeding the maximum flood crest of 1958. On 2 August a flood crest of 4,000 cubic meters per second occurred at Dahongqiao Station at Wuzhi on the Qing He. Due to the simultaneous flood crests on the Yi He, Luo He and Qing He, the flood crest on the Huang He at Huayuankou station on 2 August reached 15,300 cubic meters per second, the highest in 24 years. There is a critical situation along the whole length of the Huang He in the province.

At the crucial moment, the party, government and army leading comrades at all levels have personally led a 1.5-million-strong flood-fighting and crash-rescue force to display the spirit of fearing neither hardship nor death, braving the wind and rain and battling day and night in ensuring the safety of the embankments along the main rivers and reservoirs. They have scored major victory in the struggle against floods on the Huai and especially on the Huang.

The facts have proven that our party organizations, army, people and cadres can withstand severe tests and possess fighting effectiveness. The provincial CPC committee and government therefore extend earnest comfort and a lofty salute to you.

At present the flood season is not yet over. The Huang He flood crest has not yet fallen to the safe level. The work of self-salvation through production is extremely urgent. The provincial CPC committee and government therefore hope that the party committees and government at all levels and the army and people will continue to heighten vigilance, sum up experiences, make still greater efforts, further step up river and reservoir defenses, and be ready for another possible flood crest. At the same time it is necessary to organize the masses to launch self-salvation through production, drain flooded land and save the crops, crash-plant late autumn drops, crash-save materials, repair projects and buildings damaged by floods, do a good job in medical and anti-epidemic work, make proper arrangements for the livelihood of people in disaster areas, and strive for victory in fighting flood.

[Station short commentary: "We All Should Concern Ourselves With Railway Security Work"]

[Text] The Hubei provincial conference to exchange experiences in straightening out railway security work has recommended a number of advanced units and individuals in defending railway security. We would like to warmly congratulate these progressives.

Although our province has scored great achievements in promoting railway security work over the past year, the work has developed unevenly. In some areas, the evil trends in looting and stealing goods and materials transported by trains have not been completely checked; and traveling by train without a train ticket, traveling by freight train, and attacking trains are phenomena which have occured now and then. The tasks of straightening out railway security are still very arduous. We must continue making great efforts and concern ourselves with further promoting railway security work. Railway transportation is the main artery and the vanguard of the national economy. Promoting railway security work and guaranteeing good and unimpeded railway transport are major issues which play an important part in the four modernizations. Therefore, every citizen is duty-bound to promote railway security and protect railway and state property. Judging from experiences gained in various areas, we can see that in areas where leaders attach importance to and fully mobilize and depend on the masses to promote railway security, railway security can be safeguarded and railway transport plans in such areas can be fulfilled prominently.

Xiangyang Prefecture has established more than 100 mass organizations for promoting the joint defense by railway units and communes and the joint defense by railway stations and districts, implemented the railway security responsibility system of dividing up the railway security work and assigning a part or a section of the railways to each individual or group, and created a fine social atmosphere in which everyone cares for railway security and loves and protects railways. As a result, fine order has been maintained along the unimpeded railway line in the prefecture. Organizing the joint defense by railway stations and districts, concluding rural agreements for protecting state property and safeguarding railway and public security, and making pledges to take good care of and protect railways are good forms and good methods which fully mobilize and depend on the masses to promote railway security work. Militiamen and security groups in quite a few units have established various security organizations such as teams for patrolling and guarding railways and bridges, and also security pickets and patrol parties. They have relied on the forces of the masses to promptly inform on and expose clues for solving cases that jeopardize railway security, and have seized criminals and handed them over to the public security authorities, thus playing a great role in promoting railway security work. We believe that with the development of the national economy and with the improvement in the party work style and the general mood of society, we can surely make absolute improvements in the railway security work as long as our leaders at all levels attach importance to railway security, continue to mobilize and depend on the masses and make unremitting efforts to grasp the railway security work.

HEBEI RIBAO STRESSES CHANGING HABITS, CUSTOMS

HK090958 Shijiazhuang HEBEI RIBAO in Chinese 29 Jul 82 p 2

[Commentator's article: "Mold People's Sentiments in the Drive To Change Habits and Customs"]

[Text] A youth service team of the 2d spinning group of the 3d cotton mill of Shijiazhuang Municipality has been named a "New Long March shock brigade of the whole country" by the Central Youth League.

There is a worker named Yang Jianzhong in this team. At one time, he was always late for work and would leave early, took baths and naps while on duty and even tried to create disturbances. Later, when his mother was ill and in the hospital, the comrades of this service team visited her seven times in the hospital and helped him to manage his household affairs. Yang Jianzhong was deeply moved and asked to join the service team. After joining the service team, he constantly raised his ideological consciousness through social welfare activities and joined the CYL in honor. The change in Yang Jianzhong makes us deeply ponder the problem of building socialist spiritual civilization.

For years, when people talked about the general mood of the party and the public, which was undermined by Lin Biao and the "gang of four," they were both indignant and worried. Sometimes, a matter could not be solved by normal procedures, so people had to try to develop relations and solicit support. As a result, unhealthy tendencies became more and more a part of these efforts in certain conditions. This kind of cyclical movement becomes a vicious circle. The change in Yang Jianzhong shows that when the advanced take the lead in the drive to change habits and customs with practical actions, the vicious cycle of the general mood in our society can be broken and a change can be achieved in the sentiments of the masses. At present, a number of young people with lofty ideals and high aspirations have taken action. Various kinds of social welfare organizations have been established one after another, such as the youth service teams, Lei Feng emulation teams, agricultural cultivation groups, and so on. All of these have influenced and led the people. So long as everyone learns from them and the mental outlook of the people is changed, we will have great hope in developing socialist new habits.

Marxism holds that people's consciousness is gradually formed and deepened through practice. The establishment of communist thinking and training in lofty moral sentiments should all proceed in social welfare activities. In his "Task of the Youth League," Lenin pointed out: "The task of the Youth League is to arrange its work to enable every youth to train himself and all others under his leadership to be communists in the course of study, organization, unity and struggle." This shows that, if we want to change the general mood of society and establish lofty moral sentiments among the masses, we must rely on social practice. The activities of the national civility and courtesy month carried out in March throughout the country were a great social practice that mobilized the people of the whole country in establishing socialist spiritual civilization. In this activity, the social strata of various levels took action in cleaning the environment, engaging in afforestation, making the country green by planting trees, beautifying and purifying the hearts and souls of the people, enabling them to be educated by practical communist ideas and nurtured with lofty moral sentiments to promote change in the general mood of society.

At present, the problem which people are most concerned about and which needs to be urgently solved is the establishment of regulations on relations between people, that is, social ethics and family and marital morality. In socialist society, everyone serves the people and also accepts other people's service. A man's attitude toward work is related to the whole of society. There must be professional morality in all trades and professions. If we start from the simplest and minimum moral demands, then we can attract the broad masses in their common activity to change habits and customs. Along with the deepening of this activity, we must constantly put forward comparatively high moral norms and mold the people's sentiments. Then, we can establish a fine communist morality and spirit. Some people say it is hypocritical courtesy to say "How do you do?" and "Thank you," and believe it to have no effect on the social mood. Actually, this is wrong. If a man gets some help from another and never says thank you in return, it is impossible for such a person to respect and show concern for others. Lofty moral spirit is always accumulated gradually through every little detail and particular, and formed into a habit after a considerable period of time. In the poem "Seasonable Rain on a Spring Night," Du Fu wrote: "Good rain knows the season. It starts raining in the spring, slipping into the night along with the wind, moistening all things on earth without any noise." Our practical activity in establishing spiritual civilization must also be like the fine rain slipping through the night, without any noise, moistening people's hearts.

In the activity of "people's railway serving the people," the Shijiazhuang railway station restored traditional service items, a move welcomed by all the passengers. When a train reaches the station, the workers enthusiastically serve the passengers with tea, using a cart or stretcher to serve those disabled passengers and quietly mending checked luggage that has been damaged on the journey. Having a grasp of their own jobs, starting from every minute detail, helps the broad masses of workers to set up fine professional morality gradually and also use their own deeds to influence the broad masses of passengers as well.

In order to carry forward and consolidate the lofty moral sentiments nurtured from the practice of changing habits and customs, we must adopt relevant measures. For example, we should draw up all kinds of rules, regulations and pledges, such as, "moral regulations," "rules for young workers," "moral pledges for workers" and "pledges and regulations for the countryside," and use them as a norm for one's words and deeds. In the course of remolding the objective world, people are changing the subjective world as well. At present, the people of our country are engaged in the construction of the four modernizations. In this great cause, it is imperative to thoroughly eliminate the mental rubbish handed down by the old society and restore the fine party and popular style that was destroyed in the 10 years' turbulence and create a fine and unprecedented social mood. At present, the vicious circle in the social mood has been smashed. There are many advanced persons and moving stories of people practicing ethics, courtesy, wholehearted devotion to public duty and helping others. Party organizations at all levels should grasp these examples well, publicize and cite them on a grand scale, and mobilize and organize the broad masses to participate in changing habits and customs, so that everyone becomes a citizen with morality, culture and discipline.

Reviewing the past and looking forward to the future, comrades attending the meeting were in high spirits and had firm confidence. They expressed their determination to greet the convocation of the party's 12th congress with concrete deeds, to unswervingly implement the central directives on work in Nei Monggol and to push this work forward with stress on economic construction.

During the forum, participants also conscientiously studied the 7th plenary session's letters of respect to Liu Bocheng and Cai Chang, revolutionaries of the older generation, and pledged to learn from their glorious examples to hand down the party's fine traditions and work style from generation to generation.

Some members of the regional people's congress standing committee and responsible persons of the regional people's government, the regional agricultural and construction committees, the financial office and the economic commission also spoke at the forum.

NEI MONGGOL RETIRED CADRES WRITE REMINISCENCES

SK300500 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Excerpts] The broad masses of retired cadres of the Nei Monggol Regional Military District have made new contributions to army building by vigorously writing reminiscences, conducting investigations and study at grassroots units and conscientiously passing on their experiences, giving help and setting themselves as examples. During the past few years, a great number of veteran comrades have retired. Among them were Red Army soldiers who had participated in the 25,000-li Long March, old heroes of the Daqingshan anti-Japanese guerrilla forces and heroes who had rendered meritorious service in the liberation war. In order to pass on to the younger generation the glorious traditions of our party and army and their rich fighting experiences and accelerate the revolutionization and modernization of our army, these veteran comrades, in response to the call of the party Central Committee, have enthusiastically written reminiscences. Although retired, Huang Hou, former commander of the regional military district, returned to the Daqingshan anti-Japanese base and, together with former members of the guerrilla forces, recalled how the army and the people fought against the Japanese in those years. He has written about 200,000 characters of reminiscences.

On the eve of Army Day, retired cadre Huang Hou went to PLA units to speak to commanders and fighters on the glorious traditions of our party and army and was welcomed. As a Red Army soldier, Comrade Huang Hou participated in the 25,000-li Long March. He made outstanding contributions to the Chinese people's liberation during the anti-Japanese war by leading the army and the people to fight a last-ditch battle against the Japanese enemies and the Kuomintang diehards at the famous Daqingshan anti-Japanese base. Comrade Huang Hou recalled the arduous course our army had traversed to become strong. He pointed out that without party leadership and the wholehearted assistance of the millions of people who supported the revolution, there would have been no victories and our army would not have become strong. Comrade Huang Hou encouraged the masses of commanders and fighters to value the good reputation of the People's Army, continue to display the army's glorious tradition in the new historical period, bear firmly in mind the purpose of serving the people wholeheartedly, conscientiously implement the party's line, principles and policies, support the government and cherish the people, render great support to local socialist construction, further strengthen army-government unity and army-people unity and make new contributions to develop the country and realize the four modernizations.

TIANJIN RIBAO URGES LEADERSHIP IN CRACKING CRIMES

SK260524 Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Excerpts of TIANJIN RIBAO commentator's article: "Strengthen Leadership and Concentrate Efforts on Investigating and Handling Big, Serious Cases" -- date not given]

[Excerpts] The TIANJIN RIBAO commentator's article states: Through extensive propaganda and education inside and outside the party and the concerted efforts of all party organizations, initial achievements were made in the struggle to crack down on law violations in the economic field in the first half of this year. A great number of economic crimes were exposed. Many of them have been investigated and handled or basically investigated. Some criminals guilty of serious economic offenses have been sternly handled. However, we have not done enough in many aspects, especially in achieving marked results in investigating and handling big, serious cases. In the crackdown of law violations in the economic field, we should pay attention to big and minor cases alike, but emphasis should still be placed on big, serious cases. Otherwise, we will not be able to achieve a major impact. It goes without saying that because big, serious cases involve comparatively more fields and often responsible persons, we are bound to face more and greater interference and difficulties in investigating and handling them. Failure to achieve major results in handling big, serious cases is tied to ineffective leadership. Some of the cases, although some clues concerning them had been obtained, dragged on and on without solution due to the misgivings of some leaders who dared not or were reluctant to investigate or handle them. As has been proved in practice, as long as our leaders, particularly top leaders, concern themselves with the problem, it is totally solvable. We should achieve marked results in investigating and handling big, serious cases in July and August in the course of the struggle to deal blows at law violations in the economic field. The key lies in enhancing the understanding of leaders and strengthening leadership.

The TIANJIN RIBAO commentator's article states: Party committees at all levels should conscientiously strengthen their leadership over the struggle, place it high on their agenda, assign persons to take charge of it and consistently supervise and promote it. They should resolutely and boldly carry out the struggle in their own areas and units and make a success of it. In response to the call of the central authorities, we should thoroughly investigate and handle a few big, serious cases as soon as possible, punishing the criminals according to law and make them known to the public. Responsible comrades of party committees should exert unending efforts to attend to key cases and sternly handle those who create obstacles until they achieve marked results in the investigation and handling of big, serious cases.

HEILONGJIANG RIBAO ON ENACTING PARTY POLICY

SK241020 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] HEILONGJIANG RIBAO on 24 July published on the front page three reports on the issue of rural policies in a special column entitled "The Key To Correctly Implementing Party Policies Is in Strengthening Leadership."

The first report concerns how the Muling County CPC Committee and the (Gonghe) Commune CPC Committee correctly help commune members become prosperous. The second report describes how the Mudanjiang Prefectural CPC Committee corrects deviations by the (Dongfeng) Commune CPC Committee in dealing blows at economic crimes. The third report descrives how the (Muxu) brigade in Longjiang County's (Hualing) Commune rents paddyfields and [words indistinct] in the course of implementing the responsibility system in agricultural production.

Focusing on these three reports on agricultural policies, HEILONGJIANG RIBAO issues a commentary: "We Should Interfere in a Correct Manner." The commentary notes: Because of varied levels of understanding and education among the masses and cadres, problems of one kind or another will frequently occur in implementing the party's policies. To counter this, we must discover and solve such problems in a timely and proper manner. We should interfere in a correct manner. Problems occurring in the course of implementing the party's policies must be corrected and never left alone. Meanwhile, we must intervene in these problems in a proper and correct manner so as not to make any deviations.

To this end, what should we do? First of all, we should pay attention to studying policies and clearly understanding which practices conform to the policy and which do not or even violate the policy to distinguish truth from falsehood with correct knowledge.

If we clearly understand the policy through study, our level of understanding of policies will be raised. With correct criterion in our minds, the problems of policy will be easy to solve. We should also make a concrete analysis of the nature and seriousness of such problems to acquire a proper understanding of them. In this regard, we must pay attention to the following issues:

1. Make a clear distinction between the practice of violating economic policies and the practice of becoming prosperous through hard work. Those who engage in legitimate businesses with hard work and special skill or knowledge should be supported and protected no matter how much they earn.

2. Make a clear distinction between criminal activities in the economic field and the policy violations. Some people in rural areas violate the policy because they have a one-sided view of the principle of enlivening the economy or because they seek personal gain. The nature of such practice is different from the criminal activity in the economic field and thus must be handled with different measures.

3. Draw distinctions between the problems in work and the defects and mistakes committed by a few persons. Many problems in work are caused by a poor management system and neglegence. Such problems will be easy to solve if the system has been improved and the work style strengthened.

We should also pay attention to the method of interference. Since problems cropping up in the course of implementing policy are many and varied, we should adopt many different measures to solve them in line with their nature and seriousness. No matter what measures we adopt -- strengthening the management of systems or adopting legal means -- ideological education should never be neglected. To this end, comrades in charge of rural work should pay attention to and improve ideological and political work. We should sum up past experiences and lessons in ideological and political work, master the skills of doing ideological and political work well in this new period and give play to the energetic power of ideological and political work.

Responsible comrades of leading organs at all levels should frequently go down to the grassroots units and the masses to conduct investigations to learn about the implementation of the policy. This is an important measure to ensure the implementation of the party policy and an important duty of leading organs at all levels. Only by strengthening investigations can we find out and solve problems in a timely manner.

HEILONGJIANG REPORT NOTES PROBLEMS IN AGRICULTURE

SK030804 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 2 Aug 82

[Text] HEILONGJIANG RIBAO today published on the front page an excerpt of a report to the provincial CPC committee on the development of the diversified economy. The report was written by Wang Caoli on his recent investigation in rural areas. The report put forward four noteworthy problems in rural work which should be conscientiously solved:

1. Diversified economic development has become more pressing because of the prominent problem of spare laborers.

2. We should educate cadres on large-scale agriculture because agriculture does not mean farming only.

3. We should emphasize raising hogs to collect manure and afforestation, because it is ineffective to engage in major types of production while these are not successfully developed.

4. What the peasants are worrying about is not the elimination of unhealthy practices in implementing policies, but the increase of products which leads to surpluses.

VETERAN CADRES IN GANSU CONTINUE AIDING STATE

SK021016 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 1 Aug 82

[Text] According to our sources, in the past few years, 21 part-time leading cadres of the provincial military district have left their posts for recuperation one after another. Having left their work posts, they have maintained and carried forward the fine tradition of our party and our army. Whenever the military district transmits relevant instructions and emergency documents of the party Central Committee and its Military Commission and of the higher authorities, these veteran comrades always return to their posts. Meanwhile, whenever they have time, they go to their offices to read documents, newspapers and magazines and write recollections. Having returned from their recuperation and from visits to their relatives, some comrades voluntarily report their ideological situation to their chiefs.

Xie Songbai was deputy commander of the provincial military district and now is the vice chairman of provincial CPPCC committee. Except for time spent in the hospital, he has led workers on many occasions to scale mountains and ford streams and inspect work in outlying districts. Last year he went down to seven counties in Dingxi, Pingliang and Qiangliang Prefectures and talked with some 500 cadres in some 100 days in order to learn about the opinions of various areas.

Veteran cadres who have left their posts for recuperation usually take into account the difficulties of the party and the state and refuse to take any payments. Some veteran comrades' houses are below standard, but they know that the state is unable to solve all problems at one time due to limited financial and material means. Therefore, they do not ask for any improvements. This year, these veteran comrades have subscribed for 2,800 yuan of treasury bonds.

HK090355 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 8 Aug 82

[Excerpts] On 7 August the Urumqi PLA units CPC Committee Standing Committee seriously studied the communique of the 7th plenary session of the 11th Central Committee, read the letters of respect from the session to Comrades Liu Bocheng and Cai Chang, and studied the JIEFANGJUN BAO editorial "Greet the 12th Party Congress With Practical Deeds." The participants expressed resolve to lead the units to do a good job in all work to greet the 12th party congress.

They said: Since the smashing of the Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary clique, and especially since the 3d plenary session of the 11th Central Committee, the Central Committee and its correct line, principles and policies have led the people of the whole country to bring order out of chaos and work hard to achieve today's excellent situation of political stability and unity and steady economic development. To convene the 12 party congress at this extremely important historical juncture, sum up experiences under the guidance of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, formulate the correct road, strategic measures and principles and policies for continuing to forge ahead, approve the new party constitution and elect a new Central Committee will certainly have a far-reaching effect on our efforts to build China into a powerful modern socialist state before the end of the century. We must work hard every moment to promote the revolutionization, modernization and regularization of the PLA units, do a good job in all work, guard the motherland's security and score new achievements to greet the 12th party congress.

Comrade Wang Fuzhi, who has returned from attending the seventh plenary session, took party in the forum.

XINJIANG'S WANG ENMAO ON UNITY OF NATIONALITIES

HK260346 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Excerpts] On 24 July the regional CPC committee held a cadre rally at which Yan Fei, composer of the Beijing film orchestra, and Halik Satar, director of the editorial department of the academic journal of Xinjiang University, made reports on the unity of nationalities. Wang Enmao, first secretary of the regional CPC committee, attended the rally and delivered a speech.

Comrade Wang Enmao said: China has always been a multinationality country. The history of the motherland's development and prosperity is a history of the people of all nationalities uniting to forge ahead. For more than 2,000 years, the minority-nationality people and the Han people in Xinjiang have cared for and helped each other over a long period of production, work, life and struggle. They have lived in inseparable harmony like a single family, and forged a fine tradition of intimate unity.

Profound changes have taken place in relations between nationalities in the 30 years since liberation, under the correct leadership of the Central Committee and the brilliant beacon of the party's nationalities policy. The unity of nationalities has been strengthened every day. The unity and friendship between nationalities forged by blood and sweat over a long period of opening up, building and defending the border region has withstood the severe rest of the 10 years of internal disorder and the malicious slandering and sowing of discord by enemies at home and abroad. This proves that this unity and friendship is as solid as a rock and extremely enduring, and cannot be wrecked by any enemies. This new-style socialist relationship and fraternal unity between people of all nationalities is a full expression of the superiority of China's socialist system. It is the fruit of victory of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the party's nationalities policy.

Comrade Wang Enmao said: We must always carry forward the fine tradition of unity of nationalities, and further consolidate and develop the rich fruits of this unity. Everyone must do good deeds in promoting relations between nationalities and strengthening the unity of nationalities. There has now been a very great improvement in relations between nationalities in Xingiang. The unity of nationalities has been greatly strengthened. The atmosphere of mutual trust, respect, support, care and emulation among the people of all nationalities is continually on the rise. It can be said that the present excellent situation of unity of nationalities is better than at any time since the Great Cultural Revolution.

Of course, we must also realize that our autonomous region also has some problems concerning unity of nationalities, and we still need to do much thorough and meticulous work. Comrade Wang Enmao made the following demands on the cadres of all nationalities:

1. We must clearly understand that in the past the laboring peoples of Uygur and Han nationalities and of all nationalities were as close as a single family and like brothers.

2. Now, they should be all the more like a single family and brothers.

3. In the future generations, they should be even more like a single family and brothers.

We must ceaselessly carry out for the people of all nationalities education in trengthening the nationalities policy and in the unity of nationalities. We must turn stress on unity of nationalities by everyone into a lofty socialist quality and the most important content of building socialist spiritual civilization. Good people and deeds in preserving the unity of nationalities should be respected and commended by the whole of society and the people of all nationalities. Bad people and deeds in sabotaging the unity of nationalities must be opposed by the people and condemned and hit by society. The cadres and masses of all nationalities must continually enhance their level of Marxist-Leninist theory on nationalities establish the Marxist-Leninist view of nationalities, resolutely oppose and correct erroneous tendencies and prejudices on the nationality issue, and enhance spontaneity to implement the party's nationalities policy and strengthen the unity of nationalities.

FURTHER ON LIAO CHENGZHI LETTER ON REUNIFICATION

State Counselors' Remarks

OW041011 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1403 GMT 3 Aug 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 3 Aug (XINHUA) -- The State Council's Counselors Office held a meeting on 3 August to discuss Liao Chengzhi's letter to Mr Chiang Ching-kuo. The counselors, who experienced cooperation between the Kuomintang and the CPC, spoke enthusiastically at the meeting, sincerely offering their advice to Mr Chiang Ching-kuo.

Yu Zhanbang, formerly secretary of the Kuomintang government's peace talks delegation, expressed in his speech the hope that Chiang Ching-kuo will not forget Dr Sun Yat-sen's teaching on "a public spirit under the sky -- a country not owned by a family" and will think about the country and the people. He urged Mr Chiang Ching-kuo to let bygones be bygones, act resolutely and make a positive response to Liao Chengzhi's letter.

Yang Yuqing, formerly Kuomintang legislator and political vice minister of the Ministry of Justice, said: Liao Chengzhi's letter to Chiang Ching-kuo represents the public opinion of the whole country, not just the personal feelings of one man. He said: Peaceful reunification is purely an internal affair. Relying on a foreign power to preserve oneself will not work. Foreigners have their own ambitions. He who relies on foreigners will pay a price 10 times, even 100 times, of what he gains. Foreigners are like tigers and wolves. Anyone who relies on tigers and wolves will eventually be devoured by them. We are all Chinese, and there is nothing that cannot be settled through discussion between us.

Wan Meizi, formerly director of the Kuomintang's Shanghai HEPING RIBAO [PEACE DAILY], said: Liao Chengzhi's letter expresses the aspirations of the 1 billion Chinese people including the Taiwan compatriots for realizing a third cooperation between the Kuomintang and the CPC and the peaceful reunification of the motherland.

Zhang Fengzhou, formerly secretary of the Kuomintang government's peace talks delegation, felt that Liao Chengzhi's letter is sincere and to the point, and that every Chinese should be touched by it. He said: The Kuomintang and the CPC could negotiate peace in the past, and why can't they now? I hope that the third cooperation between the two parties will come soon.

Liu Yi, director of the Counselors Office of the State Council, presided over the meeting. Counselors of the State Council Chen Xiaocen, Liu Chunfang, Li Yiping, Chen Xiuhe and Tan Tiwu, also spoke at the meeting. Counselors Li Qizhong and Zhang Zhixing made written statements at the meeting.

Overseas Chinese Comments

OW041425 Beijing in Mandarin to Taiwan 1500 GMT 2 Aug 82

[Text] Zhuang Xiquan, chairman of the All-China Federation of Returned Overseas Chinese, issued a written statement on Liao Chengzhi's letter to Mr Chiang Ching-kuo. He said: Comrade Liao Chengzhi's 24 July letter to Mr Chiang Ching-kuo expresses the earnest hope of the patriotic compatriots of the whole country, the peaceful reunification of the motherland while Chiang Ching-kuo is still presiding over the administration in Taiwan. He expressed the belief that patriotic compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Aomen as well as those residing abroad all feel that same way and hoped that Mr Chiang will not fail to live up to the patriotic compatriots' earnest expectations.

Zhuang Xiquan said: I joined the Tong Meng Hui and took part in revolution under the leadership of Dr Sun Yat-sen, and therefore share historical ties with the Kuomintang. I also witnessed the two periods of cooperation between the Communist Party and the Kuomintang and fully understand that on both occasions the two parties played a tremendous part at critical moments in history and brought great hopes to the country and the nation.

The first cooperation helped in bringing about the downfall of the northern warlords and the second one helped the people of the whole country in fighting the war of resistance against Japan. Now, at the age of 95, I fervently hope to see cooperation for a third time between these two parties for the accomplishment of the great cause of the motherland's reunification. It is my firm belief that Mr Chiang Ching-kuo will certainly have the admiration of the compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Aomen, of all overseas Chinese and of the people of the whole country if he determinedly accepts Comrade Liao Chengzhi's sincere and good advice to contribute to the country's peaceful reunification.

Zhuang Xiquan added: Taiwan is bound to return to the embrace of the motherland, and the motherland will certainly be reunified. This is the trend of the times and the wish of the people. It is an irresistible law of history. It cannot be suppressed by anybody's subjective wish. It is better to be reunified sooner than later and better peacefully than in any other way. I hope that Mr Chiang Ching-kuo will give top consideration to national righteousness and the interests of the country, go with the tide of historical development and resolutely come to the conference table so as to make an indelible contribution to the peaceful reunification of the country.

Taiwanese Rejection Viewed

HK080608 Beijing Zhongguo Xinwen She in Chinese 1000 GMT 7 Aug 82

[Short commentary: "The Taiwan Authorities' Purely Party View in Opposing the Communists and Rejecting Peace Is Improper"]

[Text] The Kuomintang authorities on Taiwan have again come out with purely party views. They have rejected the peace talks proposals contained in Liao Chengzhi's letter to Chiang Ching-kuo.

The letter of Liao Chengzhi to Chiang Ching-kuo was couched in fair and reasonable terms and has been extensively praised by Chinese people at home and abroad. Some have praised it for its sincere sentiments, some for its combined wisdom and boldness, and some even for the exemplary beauty of its literary style. However, for whatever merit it is praised, people in the final analysis praise the sincerity of the CPC in being willing to hold peace talks with the Kuomintang of Taiwan. The CPC's peace talks proposal has met with profound popular favor.

What do the Kuomintang authorities of Taiwan think of it then? They continue to push the "three no" mentality of "no contacts, no talks, no compromise." They have even rejected the Liao Chengzhi letter on the grounds that "the CPC has completely lost popular favor: Does it still want to organize a united front?" And have also babbled that "those who have popular favor prosper, those who have lost it perish." However, the great majority of Chinese people throughout the world have agreed with the CPC's proposals and hope for KMT-CPC peace talks. Does rejection of peace mean gaining or losing popular favor then? Will one in fact prosper or perish if one clings to the end to the stubborn attitude of rejecting peace? Do not the Taiwan authorities know how things stand?

The Taiwan authorities are secure in the knowledge that they have strong backing, but what is it they are relying on? Pierced through, they still keep their illusions regarding external forces. The Taiwan authorities greatly welcomed the recent talk of Reagan of the United States on implementing the "Taiwan Relations Act" and expressed "gratification." The Taiwan authorities were extremely happy when Esaki of Japan talked a lot during his visit to Taiwan about cooperation between Japan and Taiwan, and expressed "satisfaction." The Taiwan authorities actually feel it not a disgrace but an honor to be slavishly dependent on others in everything: They feel at ease and justified in being a little content to retain sovereignty over a part of the country, and so they dare to fly in the face of world opinion and reject peace talks.

Retaining sovereignty over a part of the country, how can they defend themselves, and how also can they "unify China with the three principles of the people?" Yet the Taiwan authorities insist on talking big, and even "authoritative figures" can only express "an appropriate degree of reaction" over the difficulties that they are reluctant to mention concerning the tampering with the history of aggression against China in Japanese school textbooks. They even babble, "the nation has national character, the individual has individual character," and say they want to accomplish "the general objective" of "unifying China with the three principles of the people." Is this not ridiculous?

Liao Chengzhi's letter was far-sighted and broadly conceived, since it was based on the supreme interests of the Chinese nation. However the Taiwan authorities oppose the communists and reject peace, declaring that "the Chinese Communists are sworn enemies" and that "there will never be any possibility of KMT-CPC peace talks." This is out-and-out pure party talk; it really sets an example that should not be followed.

People favor KMT-CPC peace talks. The Taiwan authorities recently closed down the magazine KUO SHIH PING LUN [NATIONAL AFFAIRS COMMENTARY] on the island, because it carried an article advocating KMT-CPC peace talks. The Taiwan Kuomintang authorities' blind rejection of peace is bound to arouse still greater opposition among the Taiwan compatriots.

TAIPEI COMMENTS ON JAPANESE TEXTBOOK REVISION

CHINA POST Editorial

OW090802 Taipei CHINA POST in English 5 Aug 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Japan's Revision of History Books"]

[Text] Japan's revision of history books to cover up the hideous crimes committed by its military in China and other Asian nations should be condemned.

The controversy rages over Japanese educational authorities' replacing the word for Japanese military invasion in China in the 1930's to "advancing into", deleting the Japanese atrocities in the 1937 Nanking massacre and describing Koreans forced into working or serving in the Japanese army as implementation of Japan's national mobilization, etc. The obvious attempt of the Japanese Government to hide its condemnable crimes perpetrated during the Sino-Japanese war and later the Second World War has aroused the consternation of all the Chinese people as well as the people of other Asian nations.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of China has already sent a stiff memorandum on July 31 calling attention to the Japanese Government through "proper channels" to express its concern on this case. Minister of Education Chu Hwei-sen told the press that his ministry is gathering more information on this object and will protest to Japan if necessary. The National Assembly has also been aroused and passed a resolution Saturday asking the government to take necessary and appropriate steps on this matter.

The motive of Japan's rewriting history of the Second World War and especially the Sino-Japanese war remains to be ascertained. But it may be a belated attempt for the Japanese Government to justify its militarists' mad adventure of aggression to prepare for Japan's rearmament.

But those nations which had suffered grievously from the Japanese militarists' atrocities during the Japanese aggression cannot lightly forget them. In Okinawa, in North and South Korea, there is mounting rage over Japan's attempt to rewrite history. Even the Peiping regime, which is notorious for rewriting history itself on the subject of the Second World War by claiming that it had won the war over Japan instead of giving the credit of winning the war to the late President Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist government, was so aroused by the Japanese attempt as to cancel an official visit by Japan's Education Minister Heiji Ogawa.

We hope that the people of the Republic of China will support the government action in bringing a strong protest to the Japanese Government on this vital issue of historical truth. They should expose all Japanese attempts since the Second World War to repay leniency and benevolent treatment of the Japanese Government and people with ingratitude, if not with vengeance. It is high time to set the record straight and inform the Japanese people of the tremendous sacrifices made by the people of the Republic of China in following such a policy.

[Radio commentary: "Do Not Forget History and National Hatred and Do Not Forget To Work Hard"]

[Excerpts] Listeners: The Japanese Government is revising history textbooks being used in Japanese schools and is fabricating lies to cover up the history of Japanese aggression in an attempt to deceive Japan's future generations. In its nature this is nothing but an absurd and ridiculous self-deceiving act, hateful and disgraceful because of its despicable motives. It has aroused strong condemnation by the whole world. We are particularly indignant over it because we are the ones who suffered most of the calamities of Japanese aggression.

In the past few days, world public opinion has unanimously condemned it. Nevertheless, the Japanese Government is indeed extremely cheap and its Ministry of Education goes so far as to leave the mistake uncorrected and make the best of it.

Japan is indeed an unfortunate country. In the past, there was a group of impenetrably thickheaded warlords who conducted atrocious military aggression. Now, there are those ignorant and self-deceiving politicians who indulge in the wildest fantasy of attempting to forever deceive the whole world. What the warlords brought about were two atomic bomb explosions and an anguished unconditional surrender. The politicians have aroused the condemnation of Japan and a contempt for its moral quality throughout the world. If Japan continues acting like this, and thus makes its people of future generations unable to distinguish between right and wrong and between honor and shame, it will surely suffer the tragic fate of another national subjugation.

The most important thing is that we should never forget the history of Japanese aggression and our national hatred. The atrocities of Japanese aggression against China, beginning with the Sino-Japanese war of 1894-95, are indeed incomparably bitter to us. What was Taiwan like in the 50 years it was under Japan's cruel rule? What was the China mainland like when various parts of it were under the heel of the Japanese bandits?

China today is still involved in a big calamity -- the communist bandits' seizure of the mainland and enslavement of our compatriots there -- a calamity caused precisely by the Japanese aggression. How could the communist bandits have become strong and seized the mainland if Japan had not invaded China? The Japanese understand this cause and effect very well. However, they first perfidiously scrapped the treaty with us and colluded with the Chinese Communist bandits. What do they want? They want to prolong China's calamity and prevent China from becoming free, rich and strong soon.

We should forever remember those facts, strive to unite ourselves and work hard for the prosperity of our country. Our country cannot become powerful if we are not united. It will inevitably be bullied by others if it is not powerful. In short, the Japanese tampering with history only shows the degradation of the moral quality of their country and people. Only if we Chinese people wipe out the humiliation and work hard for the prosperity of our country can we show our lofty aspirations.

RELATIONS BETWEEN TAIWAN, JAPAN EXAMINED

OW080745 Taipei PA SHIH NIEN TAI in Chinese 15 Jul pp 33-39

[Article by Su Tsung-i: "Having the Appearance of Intimate Connections But Being Estranged From Each Other -- On Foreign Relations Between Taiwan and Japan"]

[Excerpts] Editor's note: The development of foreign relations between Taiwan and Japan has made us sigh in despair. We are discussing the question of our relations with Japan here today with a very heavy heart and a helpless feeling.

In the minds of most Japanese people today, Taiwan is no longer a place with a special significance. With the exception of certain businessmen who are interested in gaining economic profit and some visitors who are interested in the sights and sounds in Peitou, Taiwan has gradually become an abstract name in their minds. This situation is of course a result of practical international politics, but the abnormal attitude of the Kuomintang-ruled government is also a contributing factor which must not be overlooked. One can understand the serious situation if one takes note of the fact that even ASAHI SHIMBUN and YOMIURI SHIMBUN, both of which have a very large circulation in the world, are not permitted to be sold in Taiwan. This article is to explore various questions based on a historical and practical viewpoint. We hope that the governments of both countries will pay attention to the appeal of this article for improving relations between Taiwan and Japan because the improvement is very beneficial to the national interests of both countries in the future. [end editor's note]

Since the inclusion of Ryukyu Islands and Taioyutai Islands into Japan's territories, Taiwan and Japan have become closer geographically. Looking at a map, one can see that Taiwan and Korea are Japan's closest neighbors. However, there is a great difference between Taiwan and Korea in their foreign relations with Japan, although the political situation in both countries is quite the same. Japan has formal diplomatic relations with Korea, but has no such relationship with Taiwan. The number of Korean residents in Japan is far greater than the number of Chinese residents from Taiwan in Japan. Both Taiwan and Korea were under Japan's rule for a long period and people in both countries have anti-Japanese feelings to a certain extent. However, the potential danger in the relations between Taiwan and Japan is much more serious than that between Korea and Japan.

In East Asia in recent years, Japan has become the third largest economic power in the world. People throughout the world have praised Japan's progress as a contemporary miracle and enthusiastically studied the factor of "Japan first" in order to learn from Japan. We, as Japan's neighbor, have a geographical advantage in doing so. However, we have been turning a blind eye to the pearl in front of us, instead holding an American leg on the other side of the Pacific Ocean in an attempt to pluck a star from the sky.

Since Reagan assumed office, the steps to reduce arms sales to us, the three letters and the rumored "Shanghai communique No 2" have thrown our authorities into great confusion. For more than 30 years, we have been following the American will in all international affairs. As a result, many people in the world have deemed Taiwan a province of the United States not on its continent.

Because we have been diplomatically overlooking Japan for a long time, we have paid a heavy price in the political, economic and diplomatic fields. We have also created a big gap in the cultural exchanges between Taiwan and Japan. We have seen frictions in this respect, such as Japan's negative attitude in the international women's softball championships. Japan even opposed the selling of weapons to Taiwan by the United States.

Ma Shu-li, our country's representative in Japan, has specifically pointed out the existing problems in our relations with Japan. They include:

1. The people in our country cannot handle our relations with Japan in a cool and reasonable manner because of our historical experience of being hurt and colonized.

2. For many years, we have only reported good things but not bad things in our dealings with foreign countries. However, in dealing with Japan, we have often reported bad things instead of good things.

3. Our country's unfavorable balance of trade with Japan is about the same as our country's unfavorable balance of trade with Saudi Arabia. However, our authorities took resolute steps against Japan without carefully studying the advantages and disadvantages of our trade with Japan. The Japanese businessmen are bewildered by our country's unstable policy.

4. In our cultural exchange with Japan today, we only send people and things to Japan but refuse to accept Japanese culture. We can exhibit our cultural activities in Japan, but Japan's cultural activities and films are not permitted to be exhibited in Taiwan.

Mr Ma Shu-li, our country's representative in Japan, told Legislator Lin Yu-hsiang: "In recent years, Chinese Communists have been doing their best in winning over Japan. However, we have been unwilling to do the same and have sometimes even damaged our relations with Japan either intentionally or unintentionally."

Many scholars who went from Taiwan to Japan to study or do research work and returned to teach in Taiwan are puzzled about the development of Sino-Japanese relations. Most of them are convinced that since we are limited "politically" in promoting our relations with Japan, we could start from nonpolitical fields in improving the bilateral relationship. In addition to properly using our existing economic relations with Japan in winning Japan's political support, what is more important is to promote a sound two-way cultural exchange system. If we properly promote extensive cultural relations, we can not only widen the vista of our countrymen, but also eliminate the remnant unhealthy Japanese culture from our people. In order to promote cultural exchange between Taiwan and Japan, the Kuomintang-ruled government must substantially correct its ideological attitude.

First, it is necessary to be unprejudiced toward Japan and enable specially trained scholars and experts to have sufficient reference materials so that they can study Japan's political affairs, economy, society and culture and understand Japan fundamentally.

Second, we should not look at Japanese people in academic, cultural and art fields through colored lenses.

Third, we should have faith in our own countrymen and must not think that the new generation in Taiwan, who are nurtured in China's traditional culture and also influenced by Western culture, will blindly follow Japanese culture.

Fourth, it is necessary to train a large number of research personnel.

Fifth, it is necessary to foster a correct concept in foreign affairs.

On the Japanese side, it has rapidly developed its economy in a peaceful atmosphere and become a first-rank economic power because the Chinese Government refrained from asking Japan to pay war reparations following the war, and also due to its low defense expenditures as a result of its being protected under the U.S. nuclear umbrella and shielded by Korea and Taiwan in the new situation of contention between democracy and totalitarianism.

However, Japan is most frequently criticized by other people for looking down on the Asian people after it became a developed country. In 1975, when the then Japanese prime minister attended the summit conference of the world's advanced countries for the first time, Japan fully exposed its attitude of not being content with being an Asian country. Japan always considers itself a European country on various occasions or a member of the European Common Market. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki himself has said so.

Although the present situation in relations between Taiwan and Japan is not very optimistic, we wish to sincerely point out that the situation, which is caused by the basic attitude of the Kuomintang-ruled government in domestic and foreign affairs and the erroneous intention of the Japanese Government toward Taiwan, is still a potential danger, like a volcano, to the young people in Taiwan. If the governments of both countries let the present situation continue to deteriorate and take no action to improve it, the feelings of humiliation of the people in Taiwan may gradually intensify to the point of explosion. To both China and Japan, neighbors with profound historical ties, this would be irreparable damage. Therefore, we urge the governments of both countries to pay close attention to the importance of the bilateral relations and quickly find ways and means for a long-range improvement in the relations between the two countries.
